The Editor's Views

LISTS of Best Pictures are in order. So we wrote Exhibitor I. M. Satisfied, of Three Forks, New Hampshire, for his personally selected list of the Ten Best. His reply is interesting:

"The ten best pictures I presented during the past year," he writes, "were the Hoot Gibsons I bought from Universal. I bought a few of those films your papers call specials, but the Hoot Gibsons are the ones my patrons are talking about yet. Tell DeMille, Griffith and those other big producers to turn out more for me next year."

The next reply to our questionnaire came from an exhibitor whose house can be found in the Loop, provided you have the assistance of two traffic cops and a good pair of eyes. He handled the questions with his customary calm, sober desire to be fair and authoritative.

"I can't attempt to list the ten best," was his reply. "But from an off-hand study of the bank book I can tell you a few of them. They were, 'Flaming Youth,' 'Missing Daughters,' 'Human Wreckage,' 'Three Weeks,' and 'The Bedroom Window.' (That last title fooled 'em but I never get the same people back twice so it didn't make any difference to me.)"

A downtown Pittsburgh exhibitor got this far with his list: "The Fire Patrol," "The Midnight Express," "The Spirit of the U. S. A.," "The Arizona Express," "Those Who Dance," and "Wolves of the North."

All of which is important, and should go in the records.

WE must not forget the fact that we received a list of ten selected pictures from Mr. Hy Brow, one of the most widely known of the daily critics. But when we pointed out to him that three of the pictures on his list had accidentally made money for both producer and exhibitor, in addition to an unconfirmed rumor that they had also pleased the patrons who paid cash to see them, Mr. Hy Brow frantically requested that we suppress his list. "That would never do," he wailed. "My reputation and standing in the Critic's League would be entirely ruined. And it goes without saying no organization would request me to lecture on the 'Why of the Motion Picture,' and no publisher would ever consent to put my name on a book concerning the screen. I'll try again next year and see if I can avoid such a horrible mistake."

THERE is food for very pleasant thought in the award of the Adolph Zukor prize to the author of the best story filmed during 1924. And these thoughts are entirely separate from the point that no one can seriously question the justice and correctness of the committee's decision.

In the first place it is encouraging to think of the unselfish method of formulating the conditions of the contest, an unselfishness completely proved by the final award. Your picture man is a cynic, and we doubt if the industry has given full credit to Mr. Zukor for his broad vision in outlining the original offer.

In the second place, some credit for placing aside petty considerations must be given the committee that made the selections. With such a distinguished personnel it might have been expected, but nevertheless, even the expected should not go without its word of commendation. There was something of spirit needed for a committee of American authors to award so important a prize to an English novelist. The action is a tribute to American letters.

"SCARAMOUCHE" well deserved the award. Few pictures of any year in the industry's history have so completely combined excellence in every factor that makes for motion picture art. We have had spectacles, extravaganzas, historical thrills, masterpieces of beauty, and simple productions that stood out because of the dramatic intensity of the story.

But "Scaramouche" comes so close to measuring one hundred per cent in every respect! Story—what a story!—action, size, color, everything is there.

So, finally, our compliments to the committee.

It's been a pretty strenuous week—hasn't it? And the bank account has been badly crippled by the onslaughts of the Christmas buying, hasn't it?

As usual—there were a lot of presents you wanted to buy and had to forego.

"Next year," you always say, "I won't be caught this way." But next year comes—and the same thing happens.

There is an easy way to add a lot of extra cheer to next year's Christmas.

There is still time to join Hamilton National's Christmas Club. Put from two to ten dollars a week aside—and be your own Santa Claus next year.

Don't postpone though—do it now!

It only needs the first easy step—and you are on the way to a Merrier Christmas than ever.

Is the Movie Editor of Your Paper a Necessary Evil or Inspiration?

Can't Exhibitors and Newspaper Men Co-operate to Better Advantage?

By MURRAY POWERS
Dramatic Editor the Dayton, Ohio, Evening Herald

THE average small town exhibitor —by that we mean the exhibitor in cities up to 200,000 population, perhaps larger— usually looks upon the dramatic and movie editor of his community's newspaper as a necessary evil, a pass hound, a perpetual worry and a fellow that can ruin his week's business in three inches of newspaper space.

But does the exhibitor ever stop to think that this same movie editor might be able to bolster up his business at times? Does he ever consider that by coming over and gossiping a bit about his attraction with the man handling the dramatic desk he might pick up ideas and suggestions that would mean better results from his newspaper publicity? In most cases the office boy is sent over with the readers and notices.

These dramatic and movie editors are often queer chaps—we will admit that—but they do read a lot and see a lot of pictures and absorb quite a few ideas. And they are often like the small time vaudeville actor; they look toward New York as the spot where the sun rises and sets and they read the theatre and picture news with glutton-like intensity, hoping that some day they too will be advising hundreds of thousands just which pictures and plays to see.

These editors keep fairly good tab on the openings and criticisms of pictures. They know whether or not a picture is good, average or a flop; whether or not a star is up to standard. They usually know all this before the picture reaches their own city. They know what would be the best angle to play up from a box office and publicity standpoint.

Motion picture news builds circulation for newspapers—this is being conceded daily by the big minds in both the picture business and the newspaper business. Such news is as important as real estate, court and police news. And, daily, more newspapers are finding it necessary to have some person on the staff with at least a little knowledge of the stage and screen.

This writer has been dabbling in small town theatre and picture news for several years, first in a town of 70,000 population where there was a legitimate, a vaudeville, a musical tabloid and four first-run picture houses and a vaudeville booking exchange; and later in a city with more than 175,000 population with a wider theatrical field. Papers in these cities and in dozens of other cities of similar size go in heavily for news of the film world. Exhibitors usually can "get away with murder."

In the smaller city, above referred to, a column or more a day was devoted to theatres, while on Sunday three pages were given to the same class of news. The papers in the larger city give a page a day to news and readers and usually four pages on Sunday.

Real stories and plenty of special art, punchy art, could be landed by the exhibitors if only they tried. In most of these papers pictures are reviewed, but very, very seldom panned if they are not above average. The advertising department usually sees to it that boundary lines are not overstepped by the paper's dramatic editor.

And yet you will find these same exhibitors failing to take advantage of the opportunities offered them.

The readers are the same dried-out affairs week in and week out. All pictures are wonderful, magnificent achievements of the cinema, the outstanding photoplays of the year and patrons must consider themselves extremely fortunate that Manager So-and-so is able to bring this picture to Goofsville.

This writer sees examples of dumb publicity every week. Undoubtedly other motion picture editors meet the same situations. Sometime ago the manager of a local house was to show Betty Compson in "The Female." What did his weekly publicity consist of? A story of a dress that Miss Compson was to wear in the picture. Not a line about the role of Betty Compson. Not a line about the other members of the cast. Not a line about the plot. Not a line about the author of the story from which the picture was taken. Just a stock story about Betty's dress and not an unusual dress was it, either.

A week later the same manager came along with the same cut and dried stuff for "Sandra"—gowns brought over from Paris for Barbara LaMarr. Nothing about the picture.

"Hot Water" came to town and another manager passed by a whole publicity book of fairly good yarns to send in a story that didn't add one iota to the value of the picture at the box office.

A theatre manager the other day sent us a picture of the leading woman in the road company of "Rain," which was coming to his theatre. When we opened the reader—lines to go with the art—that he had sent along, we found not a line about the star, not even her name, only a story of how much water was used in the three acts of the play.

Every week the paper carries a lead story on its movie page, giving in short paragraphs the coming attractions and describing the cast, story and authorship of each production. Knowing that the managers of the houses fail to bring or send in any enlightening information about the pictures, the editor clips the reviews from trade papers and New York pages and files them away. However, when a picture is brought in that is new and has not yet been shown in either New York or Los Angeles—as often happens—then he is "up a stump" and has no information on hand.

So why should the movie editor worry if the manager himself doesn't? As a result, it is the manager who suffers through his wasting of valuable space.

When he sees himself left out on Sunday or given only a few lines he usually comes around Monday morning to the advertising department and raises a howl, claiming that the other

Mr. Powers addresses exhibitors on a subject he knows a lot about. Not many exhibitors are getting the fullest value out of the space that newspapers fill with moving picture reading matter. The men at the desks where this valuable space is apportioned, are real fellows; if you don't understand them, don't get personally acquainted with them, don't co-operate with them in making their pages brighter, you can't expect them to do more than "shove your stuff through," when it could be made to add dollars to your box office receipts. But read and reap.

Stories of the Builders

A Courageous and Clear Sighted Organizer of Success, Free from Illusions and Sentiment

By W. STEPHEN BUSH

IN any story of the builders, William Fox will always furnish the rarest chapter, for none other has built like he has. His style has always been distinctive, a revelation of the Fox character, which is composed of independence and originality.

Fox is a born leader, disdaining the well-worn path, even when it seems to assure popular success. Courage, I think, is the other outstanding component in the make-up of William Fox—courage in the attack, and courage in meeting the slightest trespass on his rights.

The story of Fox, the builder, begins some years prior to his joining the ranks of the producer. The service that Fox rendered to the industry when he stood like a rock against the old trust, with all its power and all its ruthless despotisms, deserves an illuminated page in our history. Like a warrior who had stepped out of the pages of Homer he stood defying incredible odds, matching his wit and strength against the combined resources of a combination eager to destroy him and not too scrupulous about its means and methods. The bravery of the man called forth the unanimous but whispered admiration of every man outside the monopolistic circle. But even the most optimistic feared for the final fate of Fox.

They little knew the man. He had just begun to fight. He at once advanced to the counter attack and actually charged on the barbed wire entanglements of the enemy with nothing stronger than a brand new Federal statute which might be overturned by the very first judge to whom it might be referred for interpretation.

In the end he gained a complete victory. At all the hearings and all the sessions the Fox lawyers were right at the elbow of the government's officials! The first judgment ordered the defendants to pay damages to Fox in the hundreds of thousands of dollars. The terms on which the last private settlement was made are known only to the parties in the action.

There is a story, perhaps a bit legendary, but scarcely without some good foundation of fact, that the victor, somewhat in the style of Monte Cristo, staged a little meeting with the men who had tried to blot him from the map. Rumor has it that the enemies were summoned to assemble in a hotel not too far from Times Square. They obeyed the summons. They may not have been penitent, but they were careful; and it would have been madness to defy a judgment creditor whose claims against them ran into seven figures.

WILLIAM FOX

It is not difficult to guess the frame of mind in which the victor came to that memorable meeting. He was the owner of theatres all over the country and films were as necessary to him as his daily bread and butter. The men he was about to confront had denied him films because he had refused to bend the knee. Most reluctantly, and only for fear of the courts, they had given him a scanty supply. It had been forced from them by all kinds of judicial writs and proceedings.

All had anticipated final victory, and the cry, "Woe to the conquered," was on their tongues. Perhaps they expected to do a little penance. They were not disappointed. It is related that the victor castigated them severally and collectively. Each was called by name; a register of his sins duly recited, and the culprit excoriated in the vernacular. The spirit of Chesterfield did not hover over that meeting.

Starts Production

With the old enemy now a discarded relic, Fox started on his career as a producer.

His very first effort showed boldness and originality, and proved a great box-office attraction. It was based on a piece of light, but popular, fiction and bore the title, "Life's Shop Window." J. Gordon Edwards made his debut as a director in producing it. There had been a lot of talk (much of it proceeding from the ranks of self-constituted reformers) that the story was risque; that it dealt too lightly with serious things.

I found the story of the book had been handled with exceeding cleverness by the director. The sparkle and punch had been retained, but the insinuations of the book were not there.

And ever since that modest first venture the Fox producing activities have grown apace. No kind of pictures can always register one hundred per cent. perfection, but there is no denying that the Fox productions have shown an unusually wide range of appeal and that they seemed most of the time sure of a big public response. Of Fox's success as a producer no comment or summary is more eloquent than the phenomenal growth of his properties.

Fox owns almost the entire block where his New York offices are situated; he owns eighteen acres in California, half of it a wheat field when he bought it in 1916, and he owns the most beautiful film building in Europe, the Fox offices in London. He was one of the pioneers in the exploitation of the foreign markets, owning exchanges and theatres in many parts of Europe.

Mr. Fox Is Reticent

To make the story complete, I went in search of William Fox himself. I found him after some effort in his private office at 55th Street and Tenth Avenue, pretty well protected against peddlers, book agents, and interviewers. The dynamic energy of the man, evident in every move and utterance, was quite that of the early days. His reluctance to talk for publication, however, seemed to have grown with the years.

"You know," he began, "I don't want to talk for publication. It is against my judgment and my practise."

It was suggested that his plans of production were always interesting and of unquestionable news value.

"Perhaps so," Mr. Fox remarked, "but I am not going to speak of my plans of production; anyway, not now." Mr. Fox pondered a moment and then went on.

"Your readers are the theatre owners of the country and of course you want me to speak for their benefit. Well, frankly, I doubt whether they would be interested. They don't care anything about Fox except as he is able to provide them with pictures they can sell to their public with a profit. Fox himself or the Fox Company mean nothing to them."

It was observed that the theatre owners might have a larger interest in their profession than the mere material gain; a wider outlook and a keener appreciation of their duties and opportunities. For these reasons, it was insisted, a bit of a horoscope on the picture of the future from such a man as the founder and head of one of the biggest producing companies must carry a good deal of interest.

"I cannot see it that way," declared Mr. Fox, with unhesitating emphasis. Your exhibitors are hard-headed, cold-blooded business men, whose one and only concern is to get the largest possible return on their investment of brick and mortar. If Fox helps them to pay the interest on their mortgage, why, they will take his pictures, and if some one else in their judgment does better, they don't hesitate a moment to make the switch. No, there is positively no sentiment of any kind in this business."

The interviewer, completely driven off the track, ventured the assertion that exhibitors surely were interested in the pictures they wanted to book, and suggested to Mr. Fox that he say something about his plans on that score at least.

What the "Check-Up" Showed

There again the reaction of Mr. Fox was quite negative.

"The exhibitor interested in the pictures he wants to buy," he repeated. "Well I thought so, too. Everybody at our recent sales convention thought so and it was decided to give every exhibitor a chance to preview Fox pictures. What do you think was the result of our canvassing the exhibitors on the subject? We found that less than one-half of one per cent. were anxious for a preview of the picture."

A good deal more was said along these lines and on the "purely commercial view that dominates everyone in the industry," but it was all cumulative and therefore need not be repeated.

The moral of it all is that if the readers of the Moving Picture World are interested in the great variety of coming Fox pictures, they will be able to satisfy themselves very fully by watching the advertising columns of this publication more carefully than ever.

Branch Managers and Messenger Boys

DEAR Bob Welsh:

"Speaking freely" with you. You recently charged that the branch managers in the field weren't given the full confidence of their home offices; that they were "only allowed to act as messenger boys" between their offices and New York. Also that if home offices "haven't got men in whom they can put confidence, why don't they fire them and get the right men?"

That's peppy stuff, Bob. But wait a minute! Is it true talk?

I have just returned from a visit to the Southern branches of Vitagraph. Before making my trip I held conventions of our men in New York and Chicago. This is my third tour of contact with Vitagraph men.

What was my message? What is the policy of Vitagraph regarding its men in the field? I'll tell you what I told Vitagraph men:

"Do your job and do your job in your own way.

"We want bookings. We are giving the best pictures of Vitagraph's history (we celebrate our twenty-eighth anniversary in February and it's up to you to show the exhibitor that Vitagraph pictures are what his patrons want. But do it in your own way.

"You branch managers have been with Vitagraph from three to ten years, each of you. You know Vitagraph stands back of you. Your word is backed by the soundest and oldest motion picture concern in the world. If you have a problem to solve, go ahead and solve it; tell me the results. I want to know what was done; not how it was done. Just so long as Vitagraph's reputation for fair dealings is upheld."

I don't ask our men to "yes" me on how to sell Vitagraph pictures. I've been out in the field myself. I know what it is to set a price. I learned that from Albert E. Smith, the man who drafted Vitagraph policy and who has sat steadily on top of the heap seeing to it that Vitagraph policy continues. None of Vitagraph's field men have to say to an exhibitor: "Wait, now, I'll have to get in touch with the home office." He says "yes" or "no" then and there. If the job is good I congratulate him; if it isn't then that's something else again.

Put confidence in branch managers! Say, how do you imagine the loyalty of our men has been maintained during the long years that Vitagraph has served the exhibitor and the public.

"Speaking freely," Bob Welsh, the whole tendency of the industry is toward this same policy. Other companies are taking pages out of Vitagraph's book and studying them.

JOHN B. ROCK,
General Manager, Vitagraph.

Can You Add Time to a Run and Get Them in on Return Date? Schwalm Does!

Exploitation and Patron Confidence Should Do the Trick for You

By E. H. MAYER

FOUR years ago John A. Schwalm, president of the Jewel Photoplay Company, Hamilton, Ohio, opened the Rialto Theatre as the last house in the chain of theatres operated by that organization. The house was remodeled from an old hotel building which was in a decidedly dilapidated and run-down condition, but the location was an excellent one—in the very heart of the business section. The predetermined policy was two-day runs, which at that time was the maximum booking for practically all pictures.

Business flourished from the opening day, and Schwalm, who is a pioneer exhibitor and thoroughbred showman, was quick to conceive the idea of adding extra days to the run. This, however, was practically a new venture insofar as this city was concerned, and it therefore was attended with considerable apprehension on the part of the management, since the wise-acres among the patrons nodded their heads negatively and declared that it couldn't be done. However, despite the pessimism of the crepe-hangers, "Passion" was booked for a four-day run, with heavy exploitation through the daily papers, lithographs, one-sheets, heralds, trailers, etc. The first day's business broke the house record, the second day was excellent, the third good and the fourth fair, thus giving Schwalm about an even break on the run.

"I'm going to educate these birds to patronize longer runs, and what's more, I'm going to make 'em like it," was Schwalm's confident declaration after viewing the result of his initial experiment. "We've broken the ice and we're going through with the proposition."

True to his statement, other pictures were booked at various intervals for four days, with about the same result as before.

"All right," said Schwalm, "if they don't want 'em for four days, we'll compromise the situation and book 'em in for three days hereafter."

This was the beginning of the three-day runs in Hamilton and the nucleus of the extended run arrangement. Business on the three-day bookings was good on the average.

"All right," reasoned Schwalm,

JOHN A. SCHWALM

"we've got to crawl before we can walk, and now that we're all set on the three-day basis, we'll try and stretch the next run to a full week."

And so it came to pass that Norma Talmadge in "Smilin' Through" was run for a solid week, after being thoroughly exploited from every angle, and although business began to dwindle toward the end of the run, the result, taken as a whole, was satisfactory. This was subsequently followed by Harold Lloyd in "Dr. Jack," "Girl Shy," "Safety Last" and others for a week's run, and the word of mouth advertising which the pictures created kept business up very nicely, although there was a perceptible decrease near the last of the week.

"I would like," continued Schwalm, "to add extra days to the run at will whenever I find a picture going big, or doing sufficiently good business to justify an extension, but this is impossible. Competition in the nearby cities, in which are located some of the largest and best equipped houses in the country, compel us to publicly announce our bookings at least four weeks in advance, which is done through our monthly house organ and other similar media.

"This, of course, precludes any possibility of extending our runs for, if we were to do so under our present three-day booking arrangement, we would not only cause complications with the exchanges, but the public would lose confidence in our announcements and our policy, and I for one contend that an exhibitor should maintain a regular fixed policy and adhere to it rigidly, otherwise his prestige and the prestige of his houses are going to suffer pretty badly.

Commenting further on the situation, Schwalm continued, "I naturally want to book a promising picture for the longest possible run, but believe I have even a better plan, and that is to book for the regular fixed run, and if the picture draws unusually well bring it back for a return showing a little later on.

"This was recently tried out and proved successful with 'The Hunchback of Notre Dame,' which was roadshowed at our Jefferson Theatre at top prices and flopped miserably. I brought it back a short time ago, playing it at the Rialto at popular prices for three days, and broke the house record. I then booked it again a few weeks later for two days and did a comfortable business regardless of the fact that there was a constant downpour of rain. I candidly believe that if the weather had been favorable I would have duplicated the three-day record. 'The Sea Hawk,' which was recently shown for five days, did a phenomenal business and I intend to bring it back again soon, expecting to again clean up with it."

Schwalm, who is an executive of the M. P. T. O. A., and treasurer of the Ohio organization, is of a keenly analytical mind and has made an intensive study of audience psychology, having had ample opportunity to do so since he started the game in 1906, when he operated a "nickel show" in the Pittsburgh district.

"Feel the pulse of the public," he advises, "and give them what they want, but I am beginning to believe that the box office check-up will produce a broader smile if the public is served in broken doses, rather than giving it to 'em all at once. It gives them more time to think it over between showings."

"But, above all," he added, "have a fixed policy, and once you know that policy to be right, stick to it, and soon the people will learn that they can depend on what you say, which is really half the battle."

Ideas!

Gathered Along Broadway

By

W. Stephen Bush

THE Capitol program this week is full of material indicating a very high order of showmanship. The various units, of course, centre around the Christmas idea and are distinctly seasonal of course. The fine idea back of the show, however, is well worth recording, and it might pay to file it away until next Christmas, when it will be just as valuable, for Christmas ideas, like Christmas trees, are always welcome at Christmas time. I know that in the words of the poet one does not always learn weaving by watching the weavers. A little plus in the way of inborn showmanship is necessary, and as most of our exhibitors possess this valuable instinct, an analysis of the Capitol idea and a description of the details seem amply justified.

There are three distinct notes in the presentation of the Christmas introduction, which is flashed into the minds of the audience so intelligently and rapidly that the impression on each face was obvious. The notes were first the joyous note of glad tiding, then the solemn note of the birth of the Savior and the motherhood of Mary, and the merry note, the note that appeals most to the children.

Here is the masterly manner in which the three ideas were conveyed: The house was half lighted when immediately after the overture chimes were heard playing an appropriate Christmas melody. The air was picked up by the orchestra playing softly. Presently the entire house was darkened, only very faint lights in the two huge Christmas trees on each side of the stage remaining. The curtain then opened on a scene suggesting a purple dawn, with a star high in the centre. The dimness continued as "Holy Night" and "Adeste Fideles" were sung back of the purple screen. A spotlight, well handled, gradually showed a tableau, with Mary and the Divine Child close to the footlights, shepherds and wise men and other figures only dimly visible in the centre and background.

It was a marvelously well thought out production of a famous painting, presented, of course, by living people. The audience was deeply impressed when the curtain closed slowly and the third note of social gladness was sounded in having the conventional Santa Claus appear before the footlights, calling upon a fairy to make the children happy, and the whole atmosphere changed into just plain cheerfulness, the scene being continued with a resumption of music and a parting of the curtain showing living pictures and music from "Babes in Toyland." "The March of the Toys" fitted in a hundred per cent. and the effect of the whole was heightened by bringing the lights in the Christmas tree to their fullest capacity.

The finest possible Christmas atmosphere pervaded the house after that and every unit was received gratefully. There was a unit subdivided into five, all of them consisting of excerpts from well-known musical comedy successes. These selections cleverly concluded with "Kiss Me Again," from Victor Herbert's "Mlle. Modiste." I say cleverly because that well worn and popular air fitted in excellently with the early scenes of the feature, "So This Is Marriage," which followed.

Other excellent descriptive numbers for this feature which proved specially suitable and seemed to please the audience were: In the very beginning of the feature and after dwelling for a bit on the Victor Herbert number just mentioned, two numbers that hit off and emphasized the atmosphere of the feature were, "When a Maid Comes Knocking," from the "Firefly," and "Nights of Gladness," a waltz by Ancliffe, an English composer. The great opportunity which offered itself to the composer of the music score upon the change of the modern picture into biblical episode of King David was utilized to the fullest by Musical Director Mendoza. The transition from the modern to the biblical theme was signalized with "Oriental Chant," by M. Moussorgsky, while the great spectacular scene in the King David scene was well illustrated with a Bacchanale by Adolph Schmidt.

AT the Rivoli an old stage effect was cleverly adapted for use in connection with the Christmas greetings. As the same adaptation will serve many other occasions, especially for comedy effects, it seems deserving of special mention. The novelty of the thing is far as a picture house is concerned is technically known as the Kliegl stage snow effect, which is worked with a spotlight provided by a Kliegl lamp and a stereopticon.

Both the lamp and the stereopticon were placed in the extreme left of the booth, while an ordinary Simplex machine was placed in the extreme right corner. About two hundred feet of reindeer film were put in the motion picture machine, which was slowly turned on its own pedestal simultaneously with the workings of the snow effect. The result was a flash of reindeer in a perfect hurricane of a snow storm. Not only the stage but the entire foreground of the theatre was covered with most natural looking snow flakes, varying in size and getting or seeming to get larger as they were closer to the audience.

The falling of large flakes on the orchestra gave the whole thing a look of startling reality. The audience was both mystified and delighted by this novelty and there was a great deal of curious wonderment as to how it was done. At the end there was a lot of appreciative applause.

Credit for the conception and execution of the idea belongs to Harry Rubin, chief projectionist, and his assistants. The Rivoli was strong in the prologue to the feature, "Argentine Love," and the prologue was entirely original, though a theme cast in exactly the same atmosphere with the same star had been presented only a fortnight before at the Strand. It consisted of tango music and dancing most cleverly arranged, and won some applause.

The musical score showed the best Riesenfeld standard. Early descriptive numbers were from the "Suite of Serenades," then "Amerinda"—un soir de fete en Havana, "When the Shadows Fall," a waltz, "A Sunkist Cottage." Some of the descriptive numbers for the pathetic parts, where the wife was shown in her moods and paths of error, were excellent, among them an Agitato Minor in D and "Tragic Parting," "Fantastic Espagnole," "The Dream of an Exile" and "At the End of the Road."

AT the Piccadilly a striking and original feature found an immediate and responsive reception from the audience, particularly from the large feminine contingent. It was described on the program as No. 4 and No. 5, respectively. No. 4 showed the latest modes of the season in Prizma-colored films and was quite pretty but had been done frequently before. The surprise came with No. 5, described as "the second part," and it was found to consist of famous living models in the flesh, who wore all the pretty furs and dresses previously shown on the screen. As all the models had evidently been selected with a view to their beauty—Lee Ochs being a little Ziegfeld in his way—and as their furs and dresses were most becoming, the women in the audience gave way to loud expressions of delight, while the escorts smiled in discreet silence. After the exhibition on the stage, the models stepped down among the audience and slowly filed out through the big centre aisle, followed by appraising glances until they disappeared. A long burst of applause showed how well the audience liked this number.

Valentino Gold Medal to Best Performer

Rudolph Valentino announced this week that he would present each year a handsome gold medal to the motion picture actor or actress who gives the best performance for the year.

The decision will be made by the critics of the leading newspapers, fan magazines and trade papers. They will be asked to vote for the first three performances in order of preference. Every player will be eligible with the exception of Valentino.

"My purpose is to evoke more general interest in the art of screen acting and to bestow public honor on the actor or actress who has contributed the most notable characterization for the year," said Valentino.

Kansas and Missouri Start Membership Drive

At a meeting in the Hotel Muehlebach, Kansas City, of the organization committee of the M. P. T. O., Kansas and Missouri recently, C. E. Cook, business manager, was appointed to conduct the membership campaign in Missouri and Kansas, which will last about four months, going out into the territory and meeting all exhibitors personally. J. W. Watson, Kansas City; A. F. Baker, Kansas City, Kas., and L. M. Miller, chairman, Wichita, Kas., constituted the organization committee. The organization committee also approved the newly arranged schedule of dues of 1½ cents per capita for towns up to 50,000 and 1 per cent per capita for cities more than that. The assessments against each town will be divided equally among the number of member theatres. A $200 maximum has been fixed for a single exhibitor as an annual payment. About 850 theatres will be visited by Mr. Cook on his trip.

Over 200 in N. Y. Want to Be Critics

Over 200 persons in New York state, both men and women, have filed applications with the New York State Civil Service Commission for the examination which will be held for the position of motion picture reviewer. This examination was originally scheduled for December 13, but has now been postponed in order that a more practical test than the one first devised may be held in addition to the written one. Some method will be worked out to the end that applicants for the position may take the practical test in Albany, Buffalo and other places where the examination will be held. There will be about six appointments made for the position of reviewer by the State Motion Picture Commission.

Expect Big Attendance at Albany Zone Session on January 6

All arrangements have been completed with the possible exception of the speakers, for the meeting of the exhibitors of the Albany Zone at the Hotel Ten Eyck, Albany, on Tuesday afternoon, January 6, at 1:30 o'clock. Walter Hays, president of the State M. P. T. O. will be present. It is expected that Senator James J. Walker, and possibly Governor Alfred E. Smith, will be present and speak.

At this meeting, at which every exhibitor in the entire territory is expected to be present, the entire program to be followed by the Zone Committee will be explained. This committee will act through its secretary in Albany as the personal representative of every exhibitor, doing away with the necessity of exhibitors traveling to Albany on various matters, and likewise saving much wire expense. In fact the Zone committee will help in everything that the exhibitor is interested in.

The Zone Committee will occupy offices on the first floor of the Mark Strand building, together with the Albany Film Board and the State M. P. T. O., each having its separate office with a large additional room for meeting purposes. Theatres will be assessed in meeting the expense of the zone committee, according to the size of the place in which they are located, the assessment in each instance being but small. Exhibitors are expected to make the Zone Committee headquarters their meeting place in Albany while in town, and periodicals will be on hand for their enjoyment. Carolyn Goodman has been engaged as secretary of the Zone Committee.

Catholic Women's League Praises Ottawa Exhibitors

Exhibitors of Ottawa, Ontario, were agreeably surprised when Mrs. Harry Etches, convener of the Motion Picture Committee of the Local Council of Women, presented a report at a meeting of the Catholic Women's League at the Gloucester Street Convent, Ottawa, commending the local theatres for the class of moving pictures which were being presented in the local amusement houses. Mrs. Etches declared that the moving pictures "are worthy of the theatres in which they are shown."

Mrs. Etches told of the organization of the Motion Picture Committee in Ottawa two years ago with members from Daughters of the Empire, the Women's Canadian Club, the Catholic Women's League and the Ottawa Women's Club, the purpose being to encourage a higher type of moving pictures. From time to time the committee had made suggestions to theatre managers but it was now felt that "worthy pictures" were being presented.

NED NYE DIES

Ned Nye is dead in Los Angeles. The story writer and author of many screen plays with western atmosphere passed away last week after an illness of several days. Pneumonia was the cause of death. Nye was well known. His most recent screen plays were "Gold and Grit," which he wrote for Buddy Roosevelt and which Weiss Brothers have just released, and "Thundering Romance," for Buffalo Bill, Jr., a companion series.

Coming and Going

George Hackathorne arrived in New York this week for a brief vacation.

For the purpose of more thoroughly acquainting themselves with the motion picture industry in Cuba, and to decide on a new policy for the distribution of First National pictures in that territory, E. Bruce Johnson, manager of the foreign department of that organization, in company with Louis Brock, foreign sales manager, will leave New York for Havana late this month, arriving at their destination about January 5.

J. A. Koerpel will go to England for First National on January 3.

J. D. Williams and Hawley Turner of Ritz Pictures have returned to New York from the Coast.

Jane Murfin arrived in New York from the Coast this week.

Harry David, personal representative for Mack Sennett, is in New York over the holidays. He will leave thereafter for a sales trip through key cities of the South.

W. S. Butterfield and his wife expect to leave Detroit for a trip to Europe in the latter part of next month.

F. D. Hutter, president of the D'Alesandro Productions, is in New York from the Coast.

William M. Vogel returned to New York this week from a European tour.

Mark Kellogg of First National is now on the Coast.

Scott Sidney is expected to arrive in New York from the Coast during the first week in January.

Larry Semon arrived in New York this week from the Coast.

Warren Newcombe, art director for D. W. Griffith, is in Los Angeles from New York.

Hobart Henley returned to the Coast from New York this week.

Producer Lester F. Scott is in New York from the West.

Robert Schless, agent for First National Pictures in Paris, France, arrived this week on the S.S. Majestic.

Norma Talmadge, accompanied by her husband, Joseph M. Schenck, and Sidney Franklin, who has directed a number of Norma and Constance's productions, and Lola Bara, Theda's little sister, sailed on the Majestic this week for a four months' vacation abroad.

FRISCO FILM BOARD OF TRADE ELECTS OFFICERS

The annual meeting of the San Francisco Film Exchange Board of Trade was held at its headquarters at 100 Golden Gate avenue early in December and officers for the ensuing year were chosen, as follows: President, Morgan A. Walsh, of George A. Oppenheimer, Inc.; vice-president, W. W. Kofelft, manager of Pathe Exchange, Inc.; secretary, Howard J. Sheehan, manager for William Fox, and counsel, Milton A. Nathan. The organization has been functioning in splendid shape during the past year and the policy of working hand in hand with exhibitors will be continued.

Charge Combines Using "Blackjack" Tactics to Absorb Timid Exhibitor

Films Too Jazzy

If Dean McCready of Christ Church Cathedral, Louisville, Ky., is right, the young men of today ought to rise up in their wrath and smite the motion picture one plunk in the solar plexus. You see, the films display lavish living, and the girls have their heads turned, and the young men, in trying to increase earnings rapidly to make a hit with the girls, undertake questionable business methods.

These are the Dean's views as expressed before the Kiwanians. Motion pictures of fast steppers get the girls to thinking too much about the glitter and tinsel of life, and make them dissatisfied with ice cream sodas at the corner drug store, and lisle hosiery.

"There is no such wealth and luxury in America, that I know of, as they show us in the picture shows," declared the Dean.

HARRY RATHNER'S WIFE SERIOUSLY INJURED BY AUTO

Harry Rathner, special representative of Principal Pictures Corporation, was summoned this week to New York from Detroit to find that his wife had been seriously injured as the result of being struck by an automobile at 141st street and Amsterdam avenue. Mrs. Rathner was taken to the Knickerbocker Hospital where it was found that twelve ribs were fractured and a shoulder blade broken. The police made every effort to locate the driver of the auto, without success.

Abe Warner Says Warner Bros. Has Received Many Complaints and Letters That Unless Showmen "Stand Pat" Trusts Will Prevail

ABE WARNER, of Warner Brothers, issued this week the following highly interesting statement:

"For some time past numerous complaints have been received in our office from exhibitors finding fault with interests in almost every key city, who have been trying to frighten them, and others, into selling their houses or turning over their bookings under penalty of opening opposition theatres.

"For the most part, these combines claim to have big producer affiliations in addition to the product they are interested in, and use this as a club to bulldoze timid exhibitors, with a further threat that if they do not agree to the demands, their source of picture supply will be cut off.

"Whenever visiting exhibitors have dropped into our office to talk over business, this game of bulldoze, threat and bluff has been the main topic of conversation. We have also received numerous letters from various points expressing the fear that unless the exhibitors stand pat and refused to be intimidated, the next two or three years will find all the individual exhibitors gobbled up and the country split up into a series of combines which might eventually lead to the entire business being controlled by one or more big trusts.

"It is easy to see what would happen to the independent producer, as well as to the exhibitor, if this should take place—which is not at all unlikely unless something is done about it.

"One prominent exhibitor this week writes our firm as follows:

"'If every big producing or distributing company would issue a statement saying that exhibitors who have stood by them would be protected, it would put a little backbone into timid exhibitors, and prevent them from being bulldozed.'

"Speaking for our own company, I want it distinctly understood that Warner Bros. is the friend of every exhibitor who believes in the 'live-and-let-live' policy, and we are with them one hundred per cent.

"I am aware of the various tactics being employed by these combines. It is like a game of poker. When big interests go to smaller exhibitors for the purpose of either obtaining their houses or bookings, the theatre owner does not know whether it is a bluff or not. Sometimes he sits tight, only to wake up some morning to find that the other chap's threats have been carried out.

"Warner Bros. is not, nor do we intend to become, part of any such manipulation. I want to go on record that Warner Bros. does not intend to build or lease theatres in any territory or locality where the exhibitor is showing our product, and that same applies to our franchise holders, because there are plenty of places to build where the exhibitors have combined not to play our pictures.

"Furthermore, exhibitors throughout the United States can laugh at any person who comes along claiming to have affiliation with us, and using a threat to see that our product is discontinued, if certain demands are not complied with. We will stand by every exhibitor who stands by us until the last ditch, and we will not stand for any bulldozing tactics by anyone using our name.

"To show that we mean business, a short time ago one of our franchise holders became affiliated with a combine that tried to promote a theatre through certain real estate agents in a town in opposition to an exhibitor who had long been our friend. This man immediately wrote us of what had happened and asked if we were going to stand for such action, as he had been told the only way the combine would consider him at all was to lease his house and give him a percentage proposition. In lieu of that, they were determined to go ahead and build right near the exhibitor. We immediately wrote our franchise holder as follows:

"'If you are lined up with this combine in such a way that the affiliation will injure your business—which is a part of ours—you had better decide quickly as to whether you want to do business with these interests or with Warner Bros.'

"The result of this was that our franchise holder saw the light and brought influence to bear on the combine so that our exhibitor was left undisturbed in his territory.

"This is the kind of backing we are giving our exhibitor friends and intend to continue to do so. Our advice to any exhibitor using our product is not to be bluffed with a scarecrow proposition. We will see that you are protected, and no one can stop you from obtaining our product if you have been our friend."

OKLAHOMA EXHIBITORS NAME A CONGRESSIONAL COMMITTEE

The Oklahoma Theatre Owners and Managers Association last week appointed a Congressional Committee, one exhibitor from each senatorial district to look after the interest of the organization at the State Capitol while the Legislature is in session. The duty of the committee will also include the launching of a campaign to reopen Sunday motion pictures in towns where they are now barred.

Frisco Looks to 1925 for Its Record Theatre Building Boom

THE past year has been a very successful one for San Francisco theatre interests and the tremendous growth in population during this period has led to the planning of a number of fine houses for the downtown district, suggesting that 1925 will witness the greatest boom in theatre building in the history of the city. The Herbert L. Rothchild Entertainment, Inc., which operates the California, Granada and Imperial Theatres, has purchased property almost a block in extent further out Market street, and plans to erect one of the finest picture theatres in the world, with a seating capacity of 5,000.

The preliminary plans call for a house along Assyrian and Moresque lines, giving opportunities for the polychrome treatment of decorations. Elevators and escalators will carry patrons to the upper floors and the floor of the stage pit will be constructed on an elevator, permitting the raising of the orchestra to the stage level for concerts.

Ackerman & Harris purchased a large lot at Market and Twelfth streets some time ago and plan the erection of a theatre, but no definite time has been set for the commencement of work on this.

The management of the Orpheum Theatre is seeking a site for a larger house in the downtown district and the old site of the Tivoli Theatre at Eddy and Mason street is under consideration.

The lease of Alexander Pantages on the site occupied by Pantages Theatre will expire within a year and a new house is planned, owing to the high prices demanded for a renewal of the present lease.

The management of the Francesca Theatre is considering the erection of a theatre across the street, to be operated along the same lines as this house, and a small theatre is now in course of construction on Market street, near the Civic Center.

Of late, several downtown houses which have been dark for a long time have been re-opened. The old Tivoli Theatre, operated for years as a part of the Turner & Dahnken chain of houses, has been remodeled and redecorated at a cost of more than $100,000 and has been reopened as the Columbia Theatre.

The old Columbia Theatre on Geary street has passed into the possession of Thomas Wilkes and will be reopened on January 12 as the Wilkes Theatre.

The old Casino Theatre, which has had such a checkered career, is now in successful operation as Beatty's Casino, offering vaudeville and moving pictures.

The Capitol Theatre on Ellis street, which has also been dark for months, has been reopened by Frank Egan, of Los Angeles.

1st Nat.—Educational Big Deal In Canada Is Made Official

Official announcement has been made regarding the important change in Canada whereby the Associated First National has taken over the physical distribution throughout the Dominion of all releases handled by the Canadian Educational Films, Ltd. According to the new arrangement, the sales organization for Educational remains intact with O. R. Hanson, of Toronto, continuing as Canadian general manager for Educational. Associated First National will also take care of the physical handling of F. B. O. pictures, which was formerly done by Educational in the Dominion, but the F. B. O. sales force will carry on as before, according to a statement from P. C. Taylor, Canadian representative, Toronto.

This means that First National, in addition to handling its own pictures, will now carry out the physical distribution of Canadian Educational and F. B. O. releases—also handling the British Ideal reels, for which Educational is the distributor in Canada.

Several changes have taken place in the First National offices, however, according to an explanation issued by Louis Bache, Canadian District manager. The Toronto office of First National has been moved to 277 Victoria street with B. D. Murphy in charge as manager. The Vancouver, B. C., branch of First National is to be found in the Leigh-Spencer Building at 553 Granville street and the Vancouver office is under the direction of Manager W. H. Mitchell. In Calgary, Alberta, First National is taking the quarters occupied by the Educational exchange. Winnipeg, Montreal and St. John, N. B., offices are remaining as at present, although new offices are promised for St. John.

DUHEM COMPANY MOVES INTO NEW QUARTERS

The Duhem Motion Picture Manufacturing Company, which makes a specialty of making moving pictures to order, has moved into a new laboratory at 135 Hayes street, San Francisco, Cal. A projection room has been fitted up and a fireproof vault installed for the storage of film.

ANDREW J. COBE

Cobe Succumbs to Heart Attack at Home

Andrew J. Cobe, well-known theatrical real estate broker and managing director of Broadway successes, died at his home, 76 West 86th street, New York City, early Thursday morning, December 11, after a heart attack. He was 59 years of age.

Introduced Many Novelties

Mr. Cobe introduced many novelties to the theatrical field, and was a pioneer in the motion picture industry. Not only did Mr. Cobe have a fine understanding of what the public enjoyed in theatricals, but he had an unusual ability of presenting his entertainment. Mr. Cobe was one of the first showmen on Broadway to introduce into legitimate theatres prologues in premiere photo plays. He also gave special attention to the music scores in these presentations. Mr. Cobe had leased and managed many theatres on Broadway, including the Astor, the Central, the Cohan, and recently the Lyric. He had also been prominent in theatrical circles in New England.

Active in Real Estate

Through his real estate activities he completed a number of transactions for new theatres in New York City, among them the new theatre to be located at 46th street and Broadway, and only a few weeks ago negotiated a deal which will bring two new theatres to the White Light District, plots being sold for that purpose on 47th street. Among his early real estate enterprises was the development of Plandome Park, L. I. Mr. Cobe purchased the last Dykeman Mansion at 222nd street, Harlem Ship Canal, some 18 years ago, and occupied it as his residence for a few years.

Mr. Cobe was born in Boston, where he was educated in the public schools. He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Winifred Houghton Cobe, three children by a former marriage, Edith E. Cobe, Mrs. Madelon Kosch, and Harry Cobe.

Shipped Films; Jailed

Convicted of violating the federal law relating to the interstate shipment of prize-fight films, Allen Burke, Denver, Col., motion picture man, was fined $1,000 and sentenced to ninety days in the county jail recently. This marked the first jail sentence upon the charge ever meted out in the West.

Similar fines were given Eugene Gerbase, manager of the Universal exchange, and Max Schuback, secretary of the Midwest Theatre Company. The three men had pleaded guilty. They were charged with having shipped Dempsey-Firpo fight films from Denver to New Mexico and Utah. In addition to the fines and the one jail sentence, the defendants were ordered to pay court costs.

New Production Department Formed by William Fox

The announcement of the formation of a new production department, to be located in the New York offices of Fox Film Corporation, was made this week by William Fox. Maurice S. Revnes, for many years prominent in New York's theatrical circles, will be in charge.

The first move of this new department will be the establishment of a research bureau to do the preparatory work on all plays, novel and original stories which the company intends to turn into screen entertainment. Mr. Revnes also intends to enlarge the present staff of play and book reviewers who will scan every novel, short story and play possible. This department also will handle the engaging of scenario and continuity writers to prepare all stories purchased for screen presentation.

The engaging of directors, scenario writers, technical men, principal players, etc., will also come under this jurisdiction.

Investments During 1924 Are Estimated At $10,000,000 with New Seats Totaling Nearly 30,000—Latest Projects

WISCONSIN, closing the greatest theatre building year in its history, has two more show houses to add to its list as a result of plans just announced in Milwaukee. Thus far this year, theatres completed or announced for the near future total approximately a score and represent investments estimated at $10,000,000. A total of 25,000 or 30,000 seats will have been added with completion of the present building program.

The latest projects announced are a $350,000 house in Bay View, suburb of Milwaukee, and a $75,000 theatre on the city's south side.

The first of these is a two-story structure which will be erected at Kinnickinnic avenue and Homer street for a company, the identity of which has not been revealed. Frank Rigas, Milwaukee real estate man, is handling the deal. The theatre will occupy a site 180 by 160. Plans are in the hands of R. B. Williamson & Co. Besides housing the theatre, the building will also have bowling alleys and several stores. The exterior will be of Spanish design. It is expected that the seating capacity will be 2,000.

The $75,000 show house is to be built for E. Maxeimer and F. Trottman, who at present operate the Gem Theatre. An innovation in theatre competition is revealed by their plans, since the new house will be next door to the Gem, but will be operated entirely as a separate project.

The Gem, built fifteen years ago with a seating capacity of 600, long ago became too small for the patronage it received. Since Trottman and Maxeimer own the adjacent lot measuring 50 by 150, they decided, instead of building an addition to their present house, to erect a new theatre on the site, thus booming that corner.

Thus, both houses will be operated simultaneously by the same owners with competing programs each week and identical policies.

The new theatre, which will be known as the Grove, being named after the street on which it will stand, will have a seating capacity of 1,100. It will be one or two stories high and will have one store.

A feature of the house will be an organ, costing approximately $20,000. The Gem recently installed a $10,000 organ.

Of the houses completed during the year, Saxe's Wisconsin, at Sixth street and Grand avenue, Milwaukee is the largest and most expensive. It represents an expenditure of $2,000,000 and can accommodate 3,500 patrons, giving it the greatest seating capacity of any show house in the state.

Saxe during the year also completed the $1,000,000 Modjeska, on Milwaukee's south side, and the $1,000,000 Jeffris in Janesville. Plans for a $500,000 theatre on the northwest side of Milwaukee also have been announced by the company, but when work will start has not been decided.

Other projects completed during the year include George Fischer's Capitol, in West Allis and the Keystone Company's Hollywood, a $150,000 house on Milwaukee's extreme north side.

New Milwaukee projects on which building operations are expected to start shortly and details of which were revealed during the last year, include a $300,000 theatre in Shorewood, exclusive residential suburb of Milwaukee, to be erected by Henry and Joe Goldman, with a seating capacity of 1,500 and a $500,000 house at Twenty-seventh and Wells streets for the Mal Investment Company, seating 3,500.

In addition, rumors have had it that a $2,000,000 theatre will go up on Sixth street, between Wells and Grand, and that a theatre costing $125,000 will be erected on a site near the Mal Investment Company's house on Twenty-seventh and Wells streets. However, there is some doubt whether these projects will materialize.

Outside of Milwaukee, large houses are contemplated or in the process of construction in Eau Claire and Fond du Lac, while smaller houses are designed for Oxfordville, Burlington, Tomahawk and a number of other towns.

In Eau Claire, according to reports reaching Milwaukee in recent weeks, two show houses are to be built, one by the Finkelstein-Ruben interests of Minneapolis, and the other by the Eau Claire Theatre Co., which already operates a number of houses there.

Fond du Lac is to be the home of an elaborate motion picture palace controlled by the Schroeder real estate firm of Milwaukee.

A. J. Fuller will conduct the new Oxfordville house, seating 350. Kuehling and Foster, who operate the Princess, are planning the new Tomahawk Theatre, while W. L. Uglow, F. L. Oberg and John McCarthy are behind the Burlington project.

RICHARD ROWLAND AND COLLEEN MOORE ARE GODPARENTS

Richard Rowland, general manager, and Colleen Moore will act as godfather and godmother, respectively, at the christening of John Francis Dillon, Jr., whom the stork recently presented to Mr. and Mrs. John Francis Dillon. Mr. Dillon is now producing "One Way Street" at the Biograph Studios, New York City.

LOPEZ ORCHESTRA WILL PLAY AT T. O. C. C. BALL

That the Theatre Owners Chamber of Commerce intends to maintain the standard of its big yearly dinner and ball was indicated this week when the chairman of the committee, William Brandt, announced that he had signed Vincent Lopez and his Pennsylvania Orchestra for the big festivities which will take place in the Gold Room of the Astor Hotel on Saturday night, January 17, 1925. Not only will Mr. Lopez be present with his orchestra, but in addition his famous Club Orchestra of twenty noted soloists will render appropriate dance music. The popularity contest to elect this year's King and Queen of the movies will be started on New Year's Day in the New York Evening Journal. They will be crowned on the night of the ball.

Ohio Convention Talks Fight In Open Sunday Controversy

PREPARATIONS for a campaign against against threatened Sunday closing movements throughout the state were instituted at the convention of the Ohio M. P. T. O., in Columbus on December 16 and 17, which developed by far the greatest turnout of theatre men ever held in the state. Reformers are active in Ohio and the convention discussed ways and means of combatting their attacks on motion picture theatres.

Of especial interest in this connection was an address by Sydney S. Cohen, of New York, formerly president of the M. P. T. O. A., who spoke at the banquet on Tuesday evening. From him came valuable information about the New York method by which 85 per cent of the state's theatres have Sunday shows under the local option plan.

Other speakers were Vernon M. Riegel, director of education, whose department is responsible for the censoring of pictures; C. A. Dyer, of Columbus, overseer of the Ohio State Grange, and Miss Bertelle M. Lytell, representative of the Cinema Club of Cleveland.

The sessions of the convention were characterized by a spirit of harmonious cooperation and high hopes are entertained that Ohio showmen will succeed in their Sunday fight.

Martin G. Smith, retiring president, having declined re-election, was succeeded by William M. James, of Columbus, who has a circuit of picture and vaudeville theatres in that city. The choice was unanimous. Other officers are; J. J. Harwood, Cleveland, vice-president at large; H. T. Palmer, Fairport Harbor, first vice-president; J. A. Ackerman, Cincinnati, second vice-president; George R. Moore, Bucyrus, third vice-president; Martin G. Smith, Toledo, treasurer, and C. M. Taylor, Columbus, secretary.

The executive committee consists of H. V. Smooth, Mt. Vernon; Henry Bieberson, Jr., Delaware; B. J. Levine, Cleveland; A. G. Hettesheimer, Cincinnati; Caldwell H. Brown, Zanesville; A. C. Himmelein, Sandusky. Sam Bullock continues as field representative.

Moss' Colony, New York City, Opened Christmas Day; Cost Over $2,000,000

DOUGLAS FAIRBANKS' "The Thief of Bagdad" opened the B. S. Moss Colony Theatre, B. S. Moss' new $2,000,000 picture playhouse at Broadway and 53rd street, New York City, on Thursday afternoon, December 25, at popular prices.

Built mainly in the Italian Renaissance style with Tavernalle Fleuri marble predominating throughout, the Colony Theatre employs a color scheme that is harmoniously blended in gray, gold, bronze and cream white. The house has an overall frontage on Broadway of 100 feet, running back on 53rd street to a total approximating 145 feet. The seats number 2,500.

The building covers an area of 15,000 square feet and is strictly fireproof, steel, brick, and concrete having been utilized in its structure. The brick employed is of gray effect, lending a rather new charm to the exterior. There are eighteen exits of pleasing width all leading to the street, and the entire house may be emptied in less than three minutes.

Above the lobby entrance of the Colony Theatre, there is office space of 1,150 square feet which will be sub-divided into larger and smaller offices. Two stores face the Broadway side—one having 760 square feet and the other 200 square feet.

Although primarily a picture theatre, the Colony boasts a perfect stage, the proscenium opening of which is 45 feet wide, by 25 feet deep. This stage is fully equipped with dressing rooms, scenic arrangements, light effects and every other necessity essential to a complete theatrical production. Two organs have been installed, each being a separate unit. The larger has been placed at a cost of $75,000.

The two grand staircases leading from the orchestra to the mezzanine floor are constructed of marble buff, seven feet wide and carrying bronze balasters with marble inserts. Across the mezzanine floor the same balaster arrangement is carried out. The promenade on the mezzanine floor stretches across the entire house and has a massive Italian mantel with a novelty fireplace.

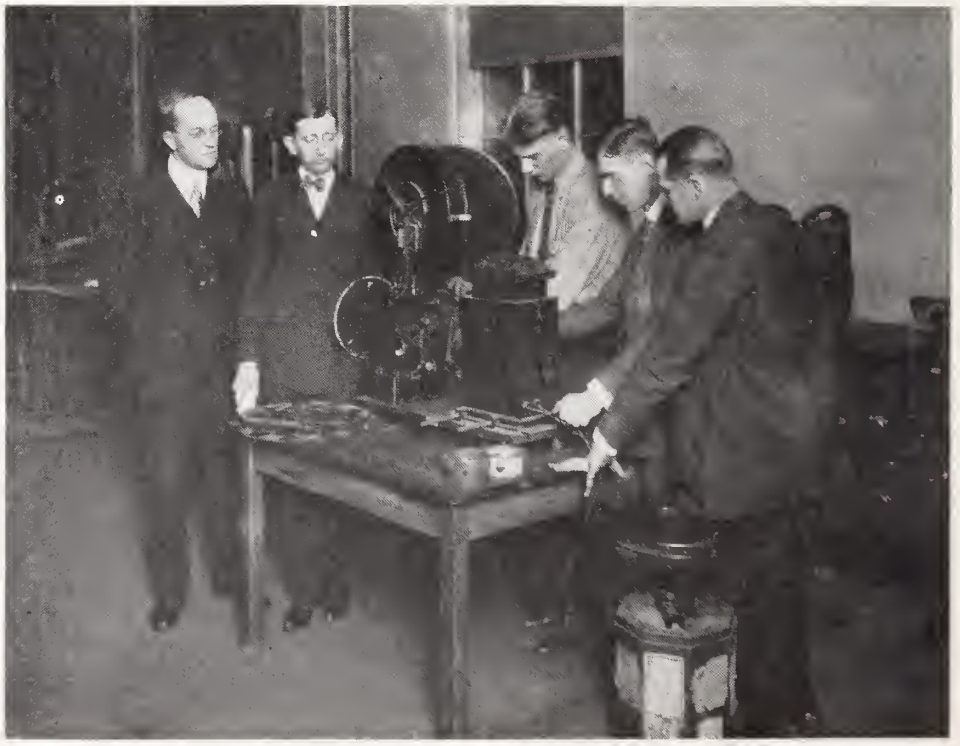
The walls of the auditorium and mezzanine promenade are beautifully treated in matched French and American walnut wainscoting, while the decorations throughout show individualism in execution. The lobby and vestible are guarded by an elaborately handchased bronze ticket booth, finished in various colored marbles. Huge French mirrors, encased in bronze frames, are in vogue throughout the house. Flanking these mirrors on either side of the lobby walls, chased solid silver frames will announce current and coming attractions.

From the lobby, bronze doors lead into the spacious foyer, then directly to the auditorium. The main floor of the Colony Theatre is wainscoted in American Walnut; master cabinet makers lending their art to the Gobelin tapestries, velvets and other materials of quiet sheen and attractiveness.

A massive central lighting fixture swings from the center of the great ceiling dome. This chandelier is a replica of the famous fixture hanging in the King's room of the Castle Versailles, Monte Carlo. The theatre has four Simplex projection machines.

VERMONT EXHIBITOR DROWNED IN CHAMPLAIN

Caught in one of the worst storms that has swept Lake Champlain in months, Bernard J. Whelan, associated with his father in handling the Strong Theatre in Burlington, Vt., was accidentally drowned with his three companions while on a duck hunting trip on Sunday, December 13. Whelan was about 31 years of age and was the business manager of the theatre. He was well known to many exhibitors in Northern New York and the northern portion of Vermont.



"Great Stuff!" was the comment of Will Hays as he visited the class in motion picture operating at the Institute for Crippled and Disabled Men, 245 East 23rd street, New York City. F. C. Munroe, president of Producers Distributing Corporation, is standing at Mr. Hays right.

Chicago's New Orpheum to Cost About $2,000,000; Now Leased

Orpheum Circuit Secures Potential House for 25 Years at Annual Rental of $200,000 Other Theatre News

THE new Orpheum Theatre to be erected on Randolph street, between La Salle and Wells streets, in the Eitel block, Chicago, will be one of the most elaborate vaudeville and moving picture theatres in the country. It will extend the film rialto two blocks west of its present bounds. The 2,750-seat house will cost $1,500,000 for the building alone, and the Orpheum is expected to spend at least $350,000 to $400,000 in decorations and furnishings.

The theatre will be of French renaissance design under plans by C. W. Rapp and G. L. Rapp, with a main floor, mezzanine and balcony. The stage will be 120 feet wide and 35 feet deep, equalling those in the Auditorium and Chicago theatres.

The lobby and foyer will be unusual in architectural treatment in bronze and marble and will have a width of 50 feet, running from Randolph street to the alley in the rear. There will be bronze columnades and marble columns three stories in height. Three large elevators will run to the balcony.

There will be a complete refrigerating and ventilating system.

The new theatre has been leased to the Orpheum circuit for 25 years at a term rental of $5,000,000 or $200,000 a year, through Ross & Co., and there is an option to extend the lease for an additional term.

The lease arrangements are so intricate that, it is said, they have taken two years to be worked out, and provide for undisturbed possession by the lessee. The Orpheum circuit has paid $800,000 cash as a security on the lease, which is to be paid back at the end of five years.

The 175x124-foot site of the Beacon Theatre, Chicago, on Cottage Grove avenue, 60 feet south of Seventy-sixth street east front, has been transferred from M. Hoffman to Leo M. Churan for an indicated $40,000 and retransferred to the Beacon Theatres Corporation for an indicated $175,365.

The Palace Theatre at Rockford, Iowa, has been taken over by the Iowa Theatres Company of Mason City. This will give the latter four houses in their circuit.

Stewart F. Reid has sold the Princess Theatre at Galva, Ill., to George Mitchell. He was formerly in business at Plano, Ill., and will make some improvements in the house.

John Lincoln has been granted a building permit to convert a storeroom at 557 Broadway, Gary, Ind., into a photoplay theatre at a cost of $6,000.

R. A. Healy and Sam Rabinovitz have sold the Garfield Theatre at 5531 South Halsted street, Chicago, to the Schoenstadt circuit of theatres, which controls several theatres in that part of the city. Rabinovitz will rest up for a few weeks at Hot Springs and Healy will devote his entire time to the management of the Home Theatre on the south side. He is using better pictures in the house and by bringing in the personal appearance of some of the stars of the local radio broadcasting stations he has increased business at the Home Theatre, he reports, despite the holiday season.

The Kozy Theatre at Chatsworth, Ill., under the Hueffner management, has been sold to other interests and it is planned to make some improvements in the house.

The Grand, Amusu and Palace theatres at Muscatine have been taken over by the Capital Enterprise circuit and it is planned to make some changes in the picture policies of the various houses, it is learned.

Lloyd Bassett has opened the Indiana Theatre at Ashley, Ill., and the Bassett Theatre at Wolcotville, Ill., and will show pictures exclusively.

The Gregory Theatres Corporation will open its new LaGrange Theatre on January 15 with first-run pictures and stage presentations. S. J. Gregory, president, and Ted Schlanger, booker, have returned from a four weeks' trip through the East, picking up new ideas for the LaGrange house. The Gregory company, upon completion of the LaGrange Theatre, will announce two more theatres of 2,500 seats each to be built in Illinois. The LaGrange house makes fifteen in the Gregory circuit.

Mrs. Dellora Angell Norris, who inherited the millions of John W. Gates, and her artist husband, Lester J. Norris, are building at St. Charles, Ill., a $150,000 theatre intended to be a show place for the city. It is to be in the nature of a community theatre, with provision made for musical and legitimate productions as well as motion pictures.

The new Mishawaka Theatre at Mishawaka, which is being erected by the Mishawaka Theatre Corporation, is scheduled to open in February. The house will have 1,500 seats, a full sized stage, an orchestra pit and organ. Officers of the Mishawaka Theatre Corporation are W. A. McInerny, president; O. J. Lambiotte, secretary and manager; Duncan J. Campbell, Henry Buckel and J. Walter McInerny, directors.

600 Projectionists Seek Pay Boost

Six hundred motion picture projectionists met this week in the Capitol Building on North State street, Chicago, and voted to demand a pay boost when their agreement expires with theatre owners on January 10, 1925. The wage scale committee will handle the negotiations. The operators now get from $55 a week to $87, and many of them receive as high as $125 a week. They work in shifts of four, five and six hours. The preliminary conference will be held on December 26.

Jewish Guild to Dine

The Jewish Theatrical Guild of America, comprising the leading members of the entertainment and kindred fields, of both sexes, will hold its first annual dinner at the Hotel Commodore, on Sunday evening, February 1. The organization was recently formed to do as much for members of its faith as the Catholic Actors Guild and Protestants do for theirs, but is non-sectarian in its charitable aims, having for its byword "We take from our own to serve Humanity." The officers of the Guild are William Morris, president; Eddie Cantor, first vice-president; Sam Bernard, second vice-president; Sime Silverman, third vice-president; Dr. Hugo Reisenfeld, treasurer; Harry Cooper, corresponding secretary; Fred Block, financial secretary, and Loney Haskell, recording secretary.

CHICAGO EXHIBITOR ASSOCIATION USING INDUSTRIAL SUBJECTS

The Exhibitors Association of Chicago is trying out a plan of exhibiting films on industrial and educational subjects that do not exceed one thousand feet in length. Jack Miller, president and manager of the organization, says that the charge to the exhibitor is $3.50 per day for such films. No straight advertising film can be shown. The films can be shown in about 160 theatres of the membership and the rental goes to the association for use by the organization in conducting its activities.

PARIS, KY., IS IN THROES OF "BLUES"

At Paris, Ky., a hot argument is on regarding Sunday picture shows, a large number of residents having argued for their opening, and the Opera House announced prior to December 14 that it would open on Sunday. However, there were some objections raised and the management called off the opening of Sunday shows. Those favoring the picture shows on Sunday are now claiming that they will enforce the blue laws to the closing of everything in town other than restaurants and hotels.

Ralph Obenchain, attorney and theatre owner, has taken over the Elite Theatre at South Whitely, Ind., from G. M. Rogers and will make some improvements in the house. Mr. Rogers has taken over the Lincoln Theatre at Ft. Wayne from Frank Anderson and will operate the house in the future.

Latest Reports on the Sunday Closing Situation

The fight for Sunday shows in Corning, Pa., may find its way to a referendum vote, according to recent reports, as a result of the action of Kelly & Haight, who run the picture show in the Opera House, and who disregarded the Sabbath closing rule a few weeks ago and ran their show on Sunday, just to see what would happen. It happened all right, when the "Blue Sunday" crowd began to get active and threatened arrest of the proprietors. Members of the city council have indicated their willingness to submit the whole proposition to a referendum.

Fred J. Jones, who operates the Rialto Theatre at Nelson, Neb., made a gallant fight against the "Blue Sunday" crowd in his town recently, and only lost at the election by about thirty votes, despite the fact that the local newspaper at Nelson joined with the Sunday closing crowd.

All of the theatres in Williams County, Ohio, closed recently of their own accord in conformity to the Sunday closing agitation. The Fayette Theatre at Bryan, Ohio, however, has resumed Sunday operation.

Government-F. P.-L. Case Is Closed; Decision, Next Move

OFFICIALLY the Federal Trade Commission investigation of Famous Players-Lasky affairs is at a close. The hearing terminated on December 23 with the assent of Bruce Bromley, counsel for Paramount, after he had received the permission of Examiner Alvord to include for purposes of the record anything of a technical nature which may come up within the next thirty days.

Nearly all key cities of the country were twice visited in the course of this investigation which extended over two years. The first of these continental tours was made in the interest of the plaintiff. The testimony obtained thereby for its case was fully recorded in New York about a year ago. Then the defendant in order to establish its defense found it necessary for a return to many of these territories.

The re-visitations wound up in the final hearing in New York, which has occupied the greater part of the past month. Should further matter be submitted by the defendant within the next thirty days it will take place in Washington, D. C.

In all, well over 16,000 pages of testimony have been transcribed. A good percentage of this testimony has to do with technical matters of little interest to the reading public and of a wholly routine nature.

On December 21 Examiner Alvord ruled that the hearing would come to an official close on December 23 regardless of the condition of the testimony at that time. But a half hour to go before that closing time Attorney Bromley endeavored to introduce into the minutes a tabulation prepared by Paul Raiborne showing the amount paid by exhibitors to all producers and distributors during 1916-19-20-21-22-23-24. The Examiner sustained the objection entered by the Government's attorney. This may be the matter which Paramount will attempt to record.

The highlights of testimony secured by the defendant during the closing week were by Sidney Kent, general manager of Famous Players-Lasky, and Nicholas Schenck of Loew's, Inc.

Schenck told how the Loew Circuit purchases its pictures. Asked what producing companies' pictures are comparable to Paramount product the witness replied, "First National, Metro-Goldwyn, United Artists, Warner Brothers and Universal."

Of the many questions put to Kent a resume of the Paramount executive's replies were that F. P.-L. product was not considered by him indispensable to the exhibitors; that there were thousands of showmen who do not use it. As to the companies which he thought turned out product, the quality of which was comparable to that of Paramount, Kent named, "First National, Metro-Goldwyn, Universal Jewels, Fox specials, some of Warner's, United Artists and occasionally independent pictures."

Regarding the question of price of pictures sold in block, the witness said that the price of each individual picture was maintained whether the exhibitor took a single film or the whole group, and that at no time was a single picture boosted above its original listed price, if the exhibitor selected it from the group. On the subject of screening before buying it was Kent's opinion that about ninety-five per cent of exhibitors didn't consider a screening indispensable to a purchase, since the basis of buying is mostly one of confidence in the firm releasing the product, and that in sixty per cent of the cases, exhibitors had precedents to guide them in the matter of pulling power, player value, etc. In the other forty per cent the risk was further minimized by the fact that many of the pictures were modeled after certain definitely proved box-office types and appealing stories.

The subject of splitting Famous product among two or more theaters located in nearby sections came up, which gave Kent a chance to refute previous testimony by Sidney S. Cohen as to the hardship to exhibitors engendered by block booking selling. In connection with this, Kent said:

"During the past four years Mr. Cohen has had occasion to phone about eight or nine times, on each occasion trying to get a bigger split of the Famous product than he was then getting. Judging by his requests, had we let him have more pictures than we did he would have thanked God for the opportunity."

Kent made the above statement on the stand on December 18. On the day following Sydney S. Cohen issued a lengthly statement in which he made a general denial.

North Carolina Showmen Finance Auditorium in Training School

THE M. P. T. O. of North Carolina will finance the building of an auditorium at the Stonewall Jackson Training School, Concord, N. C., to cost not less than $100,000. This proposal by R. D. Craver, of Charlotte, was voted upon favorably at the mid-winter meeting of the organization at the Selwyn Hotel, Charlotte, on December 9 and 10. Between sixty and sixty-five North Carolina theaters were represented at the sessions, and fifty persons attended the banquet on Tuesday night.

Mr. Craver's plan is the sale of interchangeable tickets to all theaters in North Carolina. He expressed the belief that the auditorium could be built within two years.

James A. Estridge, of Gastonia, suggested another charitable move. He would have all theaters give a part of one day's proceeds next year as a Thanksgiving offering to the orphanages of the state. No final decision has as yet been announced.

The theater owners passed a resolution commending the generosity of James B. Duke, who gave $40,000,000 as a foundation for educational, religious and charitable efforts. This was offered by the resolutions committee, composed of R. P. Wade, Moorehead City; Leonard Vyne, North Wilkesboro; M. S. Hill, Charlotte; Claude Lee, Hickory, and F. D. Clemmitt, Brevard. A copy of the resolution will be sent to Mr. Duke.

Upon the invitations of Charles W. Picquet, who operates a theater in Pinehurst, the association will hold its mid-winter meeting next December in Pinehurst. The association usually holds its mid-winter meetings in the western part of the state, and the summer meetings in the eastern half.

Several speeches were made at the banquet, chief among which was that by the president, H. B. Varner, of Lexington Another talk was heard from C. W. Tillet, Jr., of Charlotte, attorney for the Motion Picture Theatre Owners' association of North Carolina. Mr. Tillett spoke of the features of the arbitration clause of the uniform contract.

The association named J. J. Enloe, of Asheville, as full time secretary of the association. Mr. Enloe has had considerable experience in organization work and also in the show business. He will direct his attention to efforts to procure 100 per cent organization in North Carolina among theatre owners.

Membership fee in the state association was fixed at five cents per seat per annum. In lieu of this the theatre owner may attain membership by the use of trailer advertising.

No officers were chosen at the meeting yesterday, the tenure of the present staff continuing until the summer meeting, the officers are; H. B. Varner, Lexington, president A. F. Moses, Winston-Salem, first vice president; P. L. McCabe, Tarboro, second vice president; James A. Estridge, Gastronia, secretary and treasurer.

MUSKOGEE THEATRE IS ROBBED OF $1,000

Two masked men robbed the Broadway Theatre at Muskogee, Okla., Monday morning, December 15, of about $1,000 in cash and made their escape. Two negro porters who were in the theatre were locked in the vault. The robbery occurred about 7 a. m. and the combination to the vault was smashed with a hammer, as was also a small safe which contained the money.

Amusement Tax Reduction Sought by Quebec Branch of M. P. T. O. A.

A BIG turnout of exhibitors and exchange officials made the third general gathering of the Quebec Branch of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, Canadian Division, a distinct success, the meeting being held in the Windsor Hotel, Montreal, on December 18.

About 75 representative men of the theatres and exchanges took part in the important discussions, chief of which centred around a demand for a substantial reduction in the Provincial Amusement Tax which averages 10 per cent. on the face value of theatre tickets. There was also lengthy discussion on a proposal to request the Provincial Government to appoint an exhibitor to the Quebec Board of Moving Picture Censors and, in this connection, there was considerable criticism regarding the decisions of the censors in Quebec.

The report was made by a committee of the Quebec M. P. T. O. that a deputation had recently waited upon Premier Taschereau of the Provincial Government regarding the tax question and that the Premier had promised his support to the proposal to reduce the tax. It was pointed out that the revenue from the tax was turned over to the cities for local hospital and charity purposes.

An address by President J. C. Brady of the Ontario M. P. T. O. was warmly received. Mr. Brady, a Toronto man, is one of the outstanding independent exhibitors in all Canada and is the proprietor of the Madison Theatre, Toronto. Others who took part in the proceedings included President A. D. Denis of the Quebec M. P. T. O., a Montreal exhibitor; Treasurer A. Sperdakos of Montreal, Secretary Maurice West of Montreal and A. Patenaude. A prominent member of the Quebec Legislature, T. D. Bouchard, was present and entered into discussions on legislative matters.

Arrangements were made for an early meeting of the Quebec M. P. T. O. officers when a deputation will be organized to wait on the Provincial authorities at Quebec City in January when the Legislature will be in session. The requests of the M. P. T. O. will be placed before the Government on that occasion.

The all-day session concluded with the holding of a special banquet in the Windsor Hotel during the evening.

MILWAUKEE PREPARING TO RECEIVE M. P. T. O. A.

The opening drive to insure a record attendance at the national convention of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, which will be held in Milwaukee in May, was launched last week when Henry Staab, executive secretary of the Wisconsin unit, extended a personal invitation to members attending the Ohio state convention. Work in anticipation of the national convention is expected to begin in earnest in Milwaukee on Dec. 30, when the board of directors of the Wisconsin unit meets to name special committees and discuss preliminary steps towards welcoming the nation's exhibitors.

The Palace Theatre at Cromwell, Okla., together with other property valued at $200,000 was destroyed by fire Monday night, December 12. Cause of fire is unknown.

Film Thieves Are Now Prevalent in Albany

Theft of film is becoming altogether too common in the Capital District. At the Colonial Theatre in Albany, three reels including two from a feature and a news reel, were stolen during the past week, under rather unusual circumstances. The projection booth is located above the roof of the theatre and it is customary for the operator to lower the film on a rope to the roof. Someone must have become wise to the procedure and after having carefully concealed himself, quickly nabbed the film after it was lowered the other evening.

Louis Buettner, who runs the Opera House in Cohoes, lost an International News reel the other night.

The reel had been taken from the lobby of the theatre. Thinking that the film had been taken perhaps by children, Mr. Buettner, working through the superintendent of schools, offered a ten dollar reward for its return. Up to the present time, nothing has been seen of the reel.

Davison Censorship Bill Is Likely to Open Albany Meet

ACCORDING to information reaching Albany during the past week, the so-called Davison censorship bill will be introduced in the New York state legislature during the coming session.

This bill, while ostensibly one against motion picture censorship, is viewed by exhibitors with alarm and on account of penalties attached, is said to be a menace to the industry generally. The bill will be remembered by many exhibitors and others as the one introduced a year ago by Assemblyman F. Trubee Davison, and which came within an ace of passing during the final hours of the session.

Exhibitors in Albany and elsewhere, in town during the past week, were emphatic in declaring that they did not want any such bill passed, and that they far preferred censorship to the demands that would be exacted by the Davison bill as it was framed a year ago and as it is now understood it will be introduced in practically the same form this year.

This bill would work much hardship on the exhibitor whose place of business could be closed up on the complaint of a patron to the effect that a picture was immoral.

While it has been generally supposed that a bill identical with the one introduced last year by Senator James J. Walker, would be the only one to again be introduced this coming year, calling for the removal of censorship in New York state, it came to light last week that there has already been considerable activity over the state in an attempt to arouse support for the so-called Davison bill.

The New York state Legislature will meet for the first time on January 7, at which time it is expected that there will be the usual number of bills introduced and according to some, the number will include one calling for the repeal of motion picture censorship. The State Association will be behind a bill to be introduced and identical in its wording with the Walker measure of last year.

Balaban-Katz Plan $1,000,000 Theatre for Springfield, Ill.

FOLLOWING closely upon the heels of the announcement made recently that a group of Illinois exhibitors interested in the Balaban Katz Midwest Theatres, Inc., had started construction of a new de luxe theatre in Joliet, Ill., comes the news that this group has closed a deal for the erection of a $1,000,000 palace in Springfield. According to F. M. Brockell, ground for the new house will be broken within a few weeks.

Plans for the Springfield theatre call for an auditorium to seat more than 3,000 and a stage equipped to accommodate the most lavish of presentation features. The site selected is in the heart of the shopping district and is regarded as one of the most valuable parcels of property in the city of Springfield, Ill.

In divulging plans for the new theatre, Brockell points out that Springfield, with its 65,000 population, is one of the few progressive cities of its size unable to boast a modern de luxe theatre.

"The need for a high-class, up-to-date theatre in Springfield has been apparent for some time," said Brockell, "and with the opportune time arrived, an institution will be erected that will be a credit to both the industry and the community."

The Balaban Katz Midwest Theatres are now represented by more than fifty houses, including those in operation and in the course of construction.

Striking Campaign on "Greed"

One of the most striking advertising campaigns ever put over for a picture in New York is that executed by Howard Dietz for Von Stroheim's "Greed," the Metro-Goldwyn special now running at the Cosmopolitan. Next week's issue of Moving Picture World will carry a layout showing a few examples of the type of advertising used.

Adolph Zukor's $10,000 Prize Award Goes to Rafael Sabatini

Judges' Choice Is "Scaramouche," Produced by Rex Ingram, as Picture with Best Story—Many Worthy Competitors

THE Adolph Zukor $10,000 prize, offered by the president of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation to the writer whose story or play made the best motion picture produced in the year ended September 1 last, has been awarded by a distinguished body of judges to Rafael Sabatini for his novel, "Scaramouche," produced on the screen by Rex Ingram.

The judges were George Barr Baker, chairman of the First International Congress of Motion Picture Arts, at which the award was offered last year; Ellis Parker Butler, president of the Authors' League of America, Inc., through which the award was made; Edward Childs Carpenter, president of the American Dramatists; Allan Dwan, motion picture director; Charles Dana Gibson, the artist; Frederick Roy Martin, general manager of the Associated Press; Mary Roberts Rinehart, novelist; Elmer Rice, playwright and scenario writer, and Robert E. Sherwood, motion picture critic.

With the announcement of their decision the judges also made public a report in which they commented on "the surprisingly large number of worthy pictures that came under their consideration." The report also states: "Authors who ignore the motion picture have no real right to complain of its occasional stupidity and vulgarity, for they, by their indifference, are doing nothing to remedy a condition which, in view of the motion picture's universal popularity, is of vital importance. The possibilities of the screen as a field for the expression of intelligent ideas are markedly apparent in 'Scaramouche'; this shows what the motion picture can do with material supplied to it by a creative artist. That it does not do it more often is due rather to the artists' unsympathetic attitude than to any limitations of its own."

In a letter acknowledging receipt of the judges' decision, Mr. Zukor said:

"Allow me to congratulate the judges on the wisdom of their award. In deciding that 'Scaramouche' was the story which made the best motion picture, it seems to encourage authors to write for the screen and to stimulate them to a study and recognition of the motion picture's technique.

"Today there is no medium of expression more universal in scope than the motion picture. The picture that entertains on Broadway also is seen by crowds in Los Angeles, London, Paris and Tokio; the good motion picture has for its audience all mankind. What greater audience can a story-teller ask? What greater inspiration?

"But if the motion picture is to attain to its true heights of artistry, authors must not look upon it as a by-product. Today the motion picture stands on its own feet; it has its own technique, just as the novel and the stage have their own requirements and limitations. If authors hope to write successfully for the screen, they must study the screen and adopt it as their medium.

"If I may indulge in prophecy, I venture to say that the day is not at all distant when among the leading writers of the world will be numbered those who write their stories directly for the motion picture. You will have your Conrads and Hardys for the novel, you will have your Eugene O'Neills and Bernard Shaws for the stage, and you will also have an equally notable company of men and women whose stories will reach you through the shadows of the screen."

The report of the judges follows, in part:

"'Scaramouche' was, from all viewpoints, an exceptional motion picture. It possessed that fluidity of action which is essential to effectiveness on the screen; it reflected realistically a particularly dramatic period of history—the period of the French revolution; it possessed great pictorial beauty, in costumes, backgrounds and the composition of scenes; it was directed with skill and appreciation by Mr. Ingram, and played by a brilliant cast; above all, it was a good story—founded on the basic principles of drama and embellished with striking detail. The credit for this is Mr. Sabatini's. He wrote 'Scaramouche' with consistent attention to the continuity of his narrative and regard for the eloquence of dramatic incident. The strokes of his pen were broad—his mood heroic. For that reason, 'Scaramouche' provided ideal material for a motion picture. Mr. Goldbeck, the adapter, could mould it into the necessary scenario form without sacrificing the vigor, the flavor or the sense of the original.

"The final decision narrowed down to seventeen productions, as follows:

"'The Dramatic Life of Abraham Lincoln,' 'A Woman of Paris,' 'Scaramouche,' 'The Iron Horse,' 'The Marriage Circle,' 'The Sea Hawk,' 'The Ten Commandments,' 'The Thief of Bagdad,' 'America,' 'Anna Christie,' 'Beau Brummel,' 'Girl Shy,' 'The Humming Bird,' 'Merton of the Movies,' 'Monsieur Beaucaire,' 'Secrets,' 'The Enchanted Cottage.' This number was finally reduced to three—'Scaramouche,' 'The Thief of Bagdad' and 'A Woman of Paris.'

"In the case of 'The Thief of Bagdad,' the committee members were unanimous in praising its spectacular beauty, its fantastic charm and its remarkable entertainment value. Douglas Fairbanks and his associates deserve vast credit for their achievement in recreating the Arabian Nights as a photoplay that was both imaginative and ingenious.

Adolph Zukor and Rafael Sabatini

But this prize was offered primarily to a story teller, and the authorship of 'The Thief of Bagdad' is indisputably obscure.

"'A Woman of Paris' was notable, not because of its story but because of the genius with which Charles Chaplin directed its individual scenes. Mr. Chaplin displayed a directional technique which was radically new in motion pictures, and that he has exerted a profound influence on other directors is evidenced by the trend of subsequent productions toward simplicity and economy of expression.

"It is worthy to note that 'The Thief of Bagdad' and 'A Woman of Paris' were stories written directly for the screen—as were 'The Dramatic Life of Abraham Lincoln,' 'The Ten Commandments,' 'The Iron Horse,' 'America' and 'Girl Shy.' There is great significance in this, for it is in the original screen story written by one who actually thinks in terms of pictures that move, that the future hope of the cinema inevitably rests. Already a few distinguished authors, including Booth Tarkington, George Ade and Blasco Ibanez, have written directly for the screen, and it is to be hoped that others will follow their example. As yet, however, the technique of the motion picture is not understood by many people outside the studios, and the development of the screen story has been neglected. It is as though the writing of novels were left to compositors and printers, and the writing of plays to stagehands and ushers.

"These thoughts were uppermost in the mind of Adolph Zukor when he made this offer, and the judges believe that his confidence has been justified by the results of their deliberations. Mr. Zukor's prize has done much to enlist for the motion picture the interest and respect of intelligent people, without whose constructive support it can never be established as an art. Only by calling attention to that which is worthy on the screen can the undeniable worth of the motion picture itself be definitely established.

"The judges therefore conclude their report with an expression of the appreciation of Mr. Zukor's disinterested motive in offering this prize; he was actuated solely by a desire to promote the cause of creative artistry and intelligent thought in the production of motion pictures, and to gain for the cinema the serious recognition which it most emphatically deserves."

Betty Bronson, "Peter Pan" Star, Makes Triumphal Trip from Coast

By CHARLES S. SEWELL

DECEMBER 22, 1924, proved a red-letter day in the meteoric rise of Betty Bronson, the demure and decidedly winsome and attractive little girl who but a few months ago was practically unknown. A "dark horse" among the aspirants for the title role in "Peter Pan," her selection for this part by the author himself, Sir James Barrie, started this little lady on the road to fame.

Although December 22 marked the end of Miss Bronson's triumphal tour across the continent which began in Hollywood, of scarcely less importance is December 18. On the latter date came recognition of her success in a farewell luncheon given in her honor at the Lasky studios, attended by representatives of the daily press and national magazines. On that occasion Jesse L. Lasky, first vice-president in charge of production for Famous Players-Lasky, stated he felt that "Peter Pan" was the greatest picture that has ever been made and that Miss Bronson has the divine spark that will endear her to the world. He expressed the belief that she is destined to be a second Mary Pickford. At this luncheon Miss Bronson acted as Santa Claus, presenting each of the guests with a "Peter Pan" gift from a huge Christmas tree.

The following day marked her departure from the Coast to the tune of farewells from a huge crowd. Her progress across the continent was a continuation of triumphs. Thousands of young people met and entertained her in Kansas City and Chicago, including Girl and Boy Scouts, Junior League Girls, High School Girls and others.

But the crowning triumph was her New York reception. As the first section of the Twentieth Century pulled into the platform, in the blaze of a battery of sun-light arcs and a barrage of cameras, Miss Bronson was met by a score of more or less pretty little girls, some in "Peter Pan" costumes and others clad as fairies, while the enormous crowd that jammed the station included representatives of the press, Boy Scouts in uniform, and former schoolmates of the new star from the East Orange, N. J., high school.

The evening brought another triumph with a dinner-dance and Christmas party in her honor at the Hotel Plaza, attended by representatives of the press, during which handsome presents from a large Christmas tree were distributed to the guests with the assistance of Santa Claus and the "Peter Pan" girl and fairies. On all sides were heard nothing but praise and admiration for the new star.

Accompanying Miss Bronson on her trip across country was Jesse L. Lasky, Dorothy Richardson, the novelist; Miss Bronson's mother and her aunt, Mrs. Smith, of Brooklyn. Mr. Lasky announced that the world premiere on "Peter Pan" would occur on Friday, December 26, at Grauman's Million Dollar Theatre in Los Angeles. Sunday will mark the official opening at 250 first-run houses throughout the country, including simultaneous presentations at the Rivoli and Rialto theatres, New York, where Miss Bronson will appear in person at each performance.

Louis B. Mayer, vice-president of Metro-Goldwyn Distributing Corporation, and Harry Rapf, his associate studio executive, were tendered a dinner by executives of Loew's, Inc. and Metro-Goldwyn at Sherry's on Tuesday evening, December 16th. Mr. Mayer is at the left of Marcus Loew, president of Loew's, Inc. and of Metro-Goldwyn. Mr. Rapf is at Mr. Loew's right. At the opposite end of the table were J. Robert Rubin, and Miss Edith and Miss Irene Mayer.

Those seated on the left, reading from Mr. Mayer, are Mrs. Marcus Loew, David Warfield, Mrs. Harry Rapf, Dr. Gianinni, Mrs. Edward M. Bowes, Mrs. David Warfield, Col. Jasper Ewing Brady, Mrs. S. I. Trade Board Warns Exhibitors Against Over Buying

The Albany Film Board of Trade has come out emphatically against over buying on the part of exhibitors in this territory. In a recent conversation among several exhibitors and a number of the members of the Albany Film Board of Trade, the film exchange managers were asked what could be done towards eliminating some of the misunderstandings that now exist between the two. As a result of the conversation, and later action taken by the Albany Film Board of Trade, the following letter has been sent to many exhibitors in this part of the state by the Board:

"It behooves you, as an exhibitor, to think twice before affixing your signature to an application. Once you have signed the same and it has been approved you are legally responsible for full payment of the rental for each and every film listed in the contract.

"It is not the duty of the exchange to ascertain whether you already have more pictures under contract than you can play. That is your responsibility. You have only so many playing days in the year. Don't buy more pictures than you can use, that is unless you feel charitably inclined and want to pay for them whether you play them or not.

"The days of lax methods in our business are past. Contracts are no longer treated lightly as in days gone by. Branch managers are held responsible for the collection of money due the exchange. Arbitration boards throughout the entire United States are cooperating and seeing that agreements are lived up to:

"Don't make a mistake and buy more pictures than you can use. You should know how many play dates you have and how many subjects you should buy. Buy that number and no more.

"Play and pay for what you buy and one of the biggest evils in the industry will be eliminated."

SELLING the PICTURE to the PUBLIC

EDITED BY EPES WINTHROP SARGENT

Seel Plays Up the Local Production to Put Over All of His Weak Sisters

LATELY we found mention of the Heebejeebe in a story from Harry Seel, manager of Saenger's People's Theatre, Greenville, Miss. We wrote and asked what it was, and back he comes with "Always thought New York was a big town—and now you ask me what a Heebejeebe is!" And if we wanted to hand back the soft answer we might have replied that New York was too durned big to bother about these country styles. But we didn't.

Anyhow, if you don't know, either, the Heebejeebe is a contradance, but unlike the Virginia Reel or the Lanciers, each couple writes its own ticket without regard to what the others are doing. He writes that the dance is a part of every local program he puts on and the hit of the show each time.

Plays for Profit

That gets us to where we should have started. Mr. Seel has developed the local show to a point where he can turn them away from a 1,400 seat house in a town with about 5,000 white population, and do it on a second or even a third-class attraction. And he writes: "I have never heard a single patron kick on a 50 cent admission price whenever local talent has appeared on the bill. You are right; the appeal of the local boys and girls does pay in more than one respect."

But don't get the idea that Mr. Seel merely slaps on a show. He could not get his clean-ups with a scratch production. He has a line on every clever boy and girl in town. Every now and then he puts on an amateur night, to try them out. Not the usual get-the-hook style of show, but with carefully picked talent, and he has them all listed and gives them all a chance at these specials.

Headliners and Everything

There are perhaps half a dozen headliners in town. These are the exceptionally clever young people whose names have a local drawing power. All, or most of these, are to be found on all of his special offerings.

The others are booked with reasonable frequency, turn about, and he always is looking for more.

For example, he put on a Flapper Contest for The Perfect Flapper. Several of the merchants contributed prizes ranging from a $15 pearl necklace to hose and gloves. With ticket prizes added he could have pulled off a neat show without other cost.

But there was a revival in town and also a carnival—the two deadliest enemies to the local shows through the South. And he was also supplying his own opposition in The Thief of Bagdad, at the Grand, the sister house.

Added Some Cash

He added $40 in cash prizes and the result was a show that thoroughly pleased the customers. The value of the prize list brought out some new faces. Mr. Seel promptly added them to his list.

Not only does he offer a constant change of faces, but he dresses the show. He puts his orchestra on the stage, gets a garden party or cabaret effect and makes a real production instead of a cold blooded "trot on and trot off" affair.

As a result he often makes more money with an indifferent attraction than he gets from a first-class feature. You can't do more than a turnaway, and he can play to that every time he puts on a local affair—if he does not space them too close together.

Goes Out of Town

Greenville is a 5,000 town. There are also some 6,000 negroes, but in the South they do not count the black population.

To augment this clientele Mr. Seel has a carefully compiled list of 500 automobile owners in nearby towns. He had his throwaways printed by the local paper's job office. The basis of the throwaway is the regular newspaper advertisement, so that they do not charge him for composition on his job work. These throwaways are put through the town and a set are mailed to the out of town patrons. Generally the cost of this paper is laid off to some local concern, which gets about one-fifth of the space in return for paying the cost.

And Mr. Seel points out that in all instances the local show is always made subordinate to the picture. It may be the local show that gets them in, but he is running a picture theatre and he stresses the picture so that when he has only the picture they feel it is still worth while.

For years we have been advocating the local show. Mr. Seel will tell you that there is no better added attraction—if you do it right. You're reading this in your post-Christmas slump. Why not try it out? If you want, you can save it for the lenten season. It will help pay the rent.

The Bebe Prize

Charles Amos, of the Alhambra Theatre, Charlotte, N. C., got a three weeks window display for Bebe Daniels in Dangerous Money and then made all of the newspapers with the same stunt.

He had Dangerous Money the week the new auto speedway in Charlotte was opened. A jeweler made him a special price on a cup supposed to have been donated by the star as a special prize for the fastest qualifying lap.

As the whole town was talking automobile, it made a lot of talk and the stunt netted a very handsome profit. Old stuff, but still one of the best.

Boomed America

H. B. Clarke, of the Garing Theatre, Greenville, S. C., bought $300 for $35 when he played America. He hitched to the patriotic societies, tied in a boy scout parade, and a display of ancient and modern firearms in a store window and tied the rest of the shops to the "Made in America" slogan for window displays.

A Paramount Release

HOOKING THE LEGION TO EARLIER STORIES

The Blackstone Theatre, Pittsburgh, made a book for The Border Legion and set it atop two closed volumes bearing the titles of other Zane Grey stories made into pictures. This gives the picture the benefit of earlier hits.

Shirt Cooperation to Sell Manhattan

The hook up arranged by Leon Bamberger between Richard Dix in Manhattan and the makers of the shirts so branded has been giving good results everywhere, but no one seems to have gotten more out of it than Charlie Morrison, of the Imperial theatre, Jacksonville.

With the assistance of Eshenfelder, of the local Paramount exchange, he hooked five splendid windows, including one immense double front, and each of the five dealers used herald enclosures in all sales packages a week in advance.

It not only gave the theatre a fine boost, but it helped to get over the Manhattan shirt idea.

Had Two Galleys for His Sea Hawk Lobby

W. O. Williamson, of the Old Mill, Dallas, Texas, started active work on The Sea Hawk eighteen days in advance of the picture. He had been telling about the special for several weeks, but with the engagement two and a half weeks away he started out for real results, beginning with small art ads and running up to big displays.

A week ahead of the showing he pasted 1,500 special 14x40 inch special sheets with fifty 24-sheets, 100 sixes and 100 threes to follow. On the opening of the second week this was all overpasted with "Second triumphant week. Old Mill. Now Playing."

He used 25,000 rotos, some of which were given house distribution and others used as parcel inserts. A book store alone used 4,000 in this manner and others took smaller quantities. He also had 10,000 tag cards made up of the same size and color as the police cards, but not otherwise in imitation of a summons. It was just deceptive enough to justify the line: "You'll get a bigger thrill out of it that you got when you first saw this card."

A novelty was a book store painting, the size of which may be judged by the books. This was in black and silver, though we presume that some other pigment was used with the silver to get the tones. A backing was also painted for a beauty shop which displayed a ship model with this copy: "Beauty is woman's most priceless treasure Some wait for the treasure ship to come in. Others find it here."

Two large paintings were used, one either side of the lobby wall. In the photograph they seem to be on the flat, but in reality several planes were used, the backing, the ship and two ground rows of waves. Back of the front row and in front of the second, oars were fastened to a batten, being fastened to the portholes at the upper ends. Moving the batten back and forth gave the suggestion of the rhythmic rowing of the galley slaves. The same motor used to animate this also rocked the galley itself, the other ship being painted on the back drop.

In addition to these there were two cutouts from the 24-sheet mounted on the marquise.

Production Hints from Edward L. Hyman

Managing Director, Mark-Strand Theatre, Brooklyn

"CHRISTINE OF THE HUNGRY HEART" was booked in as the preholiday feature picture and this was surrounded by a program of musical incidents and the Topical Review which brought the show up to 2 hours and 5 minutes altogether. Of this time, "Christine of the Hungry Heart" required 1 hour and 24 minutes, the Topical Review took up 8 minutes and the musical features covered a period of 33 minutes.

The most elaborate of the stage numbers was programmed as "Songs of Long Ago," and included 5 old-time melodies that every one knows. The setting and costuming were high-lights of this incident, the groupings being very effective with 15 people on the stage. As a backround for these old songs, transparent leaded windows were used, extending from the floor to the flies. Behind these were open box lamps of magenta, light blue, light green and amber. The artists, including the Mark Strand Mixed Quartette and eight members of the ballet. The quartet was costumed in elaborate colonial dress. From the centre hung a colonial chandelier seven feet high and upon this were thrown baby spots from the sides, adding much brilliance to the set. The lighting was changed for each song number, predominating colors being white, straw, amber and pink. In the order of their presentation, the numbers were as follows: "Long, Long Ago," "Come Where My Love Lies Dreaming," "Sweet Genevieve," "Thine Alone," from "Eileen," and "Bells of St. Mary." The dancers served as atmosphere in various poses and groupings. Twelve minutes for this number.

The overture was Herold's "Zampa," lighted as follows: One amber and one lemon Mestrum flood of 160 amperes on the orchestra from the dome, these lights also covering the silver draw-curtains which were closed across the production stage; 2 light blue and 2 medium amber arch spots lighting the silver draw-curtains; blue borders and blue foots on large stage; amber coves subdued. Eight minutes for this overture.

Estelle Carey, soprano, sang on the apron of the orchestra stage, under a lemon spot from the booth. Her selection was Von Tilzer's "Wand'ring One." Two light blue and 2 medium amber arch spots picked out the pleats of the silver draw-curtains on the production stage as for the overture. Four minutes for this solo.

The dance number of the week was programmed as a Suite of Dances and included Tschaikowsky's "Waltz of the Flowers;" Brahms' "Bubble Dance;" and Liszt's "Second Hungarian Rhapsody." The setting was entirely mirror mosaic, consisting of 2 ten-foot vases, one at either side, upon each of which rested a huge globe. Centre stage back was a mirror mosaic panel 5 feel wide, extending from the floor to the flies. The various props about the stage were also mirror mosaic. This setting was picked out by baby spots of various colors from either side. The first dance was by 6 members of the ballet, wearing chiffon drapes of yellow, lavender and rose. The second dance was a solo by the premiere danseuse, who wore a white chiffon dress and the third dance used 8 of the ballet in Hungarian costumes.

"Just let them laugh at me for one more round"

Listen!

We want to tell you emphatically, that for intensity of emotion, suspense, thrill, action and acting "Battling Bunyan" is in a class by itself.

Barry plays the part of a youth who works in a garage, loves the pretty little cashier, and wants to get together $1,000.00 to buy a partnership in the garage. To make the money he lets himself be matched against the lightweight champion at $200.00 per round. Then he finds out that the champion is the chap who is trying to steal his girl from him!

If this splendid picture doesn't stir your crowd to enthusiasm, they're hopeless.

"The Greatest Love of All" is a sentimental tale of mother love that is obviously filled with first-class hokum. But it is the kind of hokum that we all like. George Beban is an artist when it comes to portraying these Italian roles, and no one will deny his Joe the Iceman is a classic.

I cannot think of any picture, or play, for that matter, that harries one's feelings as this Beban film. I felt when they sentenced Joe's mother to jail for the theft of a bracelet she did not steal I simply could not bear it. Joe's anguish is the sort that, while it is loud and theatrical, yet has so much the appearance of being the real thing that the whole Rivoli audience was on the verge of tears

"Greatest Love of All"
Has Strong Appeal

RIVOLI THEATRE—Overture: "Roses of Picardy," sung by Miriam Lax, soprano, and Adrian da Silva, tenor; Rivoli Pictorial; Rosa Polnarow, violinist; Claire Kaul, organ solo; "The Little Clock on the Mantel," by Harold Remabottom, and the feature photoplay, "The Greatest Love of All," with George Beban and company of twenty-four in person. Written and directed by Mr. Beban.

By ROSE PELSWICK.

He was a happy ice-man,
And she was poor and awed,
And by the stair, they'd both compare
New York with life abroad.
He acted in Italian,
And the atmosphere was thick.
And since his slice was selling ice,
He simply took his pick.

NEW YORK SUN
Nov. 11th

Now despite the fact that "The Greatest Love of All" is sugar coated hokum of the most ancient variety known to the movies, it does—like all hokum—exert a rather persistent sentimental appeal. And this appeal is mostly due to the exceptional acting of Mr. Beban as a sunny, smiling Italian. But Mr. Beban has been a sunny, smiling Italian so many times in the last decade that he ought to be something more than capable in the role

NEW YORK DAILY NEWS

Beban is neither beautiful nor dumb, so he makes the audience sit up and cheer for him in the court-room scene, where he yells to the jury that "his mamma is good. And if the whole dam' world say she is bad, then they are dam' liars."

Beban's Silent-Spoken Melodrama, "The Greatest Love of All," Worth While

There is nothing obscure, nothing symbolic and nothing dull about George Beban's silent-spoken melodrama which he is presenting this week at the Rivoli under the title "The Greatest Love of All."

"The Greatest Love of All" is novel and entertaining. Be sure to see it.

A Story of the Divinest Instinct of the Human Race—Mother Love

It will bring tears to your eyes. It will stir you, thrill you. It's clean and fine, a picture for the whole family. Do you remember "The Sign of the Rose?" Here's a picture that's like that, with Beban playing another lovable homely character.

The newspaper critics of New York went wild over the picture when it was at the Rivoli recently.

"Barriers Burned Away"

A STORY OF THE GREAT CHICAGO FIRE

From the Famous Novel by E.P. Roe

Spectacular and Exciting!

The great Chicago Fire of 1871 will never be forgotten.

Started by Mrs. Leary's cow, it nearly wiped out the city. It was a catastrophe. "Barriers Burned Away" is based upon that fire.

E. P. Roe's book has been read for fifty years. It is still a big seller, for it is the most dramatic of romances and the most romantic of dramas.

"Barriers Burned Away" is a really big picture. It has story, stars, cast, direction, production, and above all the most sensationally spectacular and realistic scenes of a big city in flames that have ever been staged.

The title and cast will get the people in; the picture will do the rest.

"The White Sheep"

with Glenn Tryon

Story Written & Directed by Hal Roach

Have you noticed the extraordinary success of the Hal Roach novelty features—"The Call of the Wild" and "King of Wild Horses?" "White Sheep" is another novelty, and just as good as the others.

Laughter, thrills, speed, drama, romance and pathos are combined in this story of Kansas in pioneer days.

That hard-boiled family, the Fighting Tylers, is going to become a household word. "White Sheep" beats a rodeo for thrills. It beats the stick-up of a train for surprises.

"Is Love Everything?"

with Alma Rubens, Frank Mayo H.B. Warner, Walter McGrail and Lilyan Tashman

It's the question in every woman's heart.

It affects every human enterprise.

It dominates mankind.

It started with Adam and Eve, influenced the caveman and woman, made and wrecked empires in ancient times, and still rules today.

Is Love everything? Can a woman love more than once? Can a woman be faithful to her husband and yet love another man? Is a man's love greater than that of a woman?

Some Sidelights on Yankee Exhibitors

By H. S. MARION

It was a real pleasure to meet William De Wolf, manager of the Quincy Theatre, Quincy, Mass. He is one of the oldtimers, having been connected with old Hoyt shows such as "A Temperance Town" at the Madison Square Theatre, New York City, where one man owned the site of the theatre and another the site of the lobby. There were two stages, one being lowered while an act was in progress on the other. That was in the days of Percy Gaunt, when the old song, "The Bowery" first came out. Picture a smiling man dressed in the old style high, white-wing collar to match the shirt, stiff cuffs and patent leather shoes, and you see De Wolf as he used to be. Some picture theatre owners today believe that oldtime theatrical men don't make good in the picture business, but De Wolf and many others I know are putting over their theatres in great shape. De Wolf used to dislike the small towns, but now he says there is no place like Quincy.

Jake Alpert, owner-manager of the Comique Theatre, Salem, Mass., is one of the first exhibitors in the city and probably the most uniformly successful. He has a small theatre but a very regular patronage. Other local showmen may worry but Jake never. I believe that three or four other theatres could be built in Salem and that Jake would still keep merrily on making money with his. Jake has a great sense of humor and people can't help but like him.

E. H. Gerstl manages the Strand Theatre, Holyoke, Mass. He was a Marcus Loew manager for many years and for five years conducted Loew's Theatre at Toledo, Ohio. In his present position he is one of the Goldstein Brothers managers.

Mrs. Ivy Hunt was cashier of the Gordon Olympia Theatre, Lynn, Mass., and so efficient a person was she that a chance soon developed for her to manage the Capitol Theatre in Lynn. Since her acceptance there has been a welcome difference in receipts of 40 per cent. She is a chic little lady and very wideawake. Mr. Hunt is projectionist at the Capitol.

Three years ago Joseph Bernard Hurl became manager of the Opera House, Milford, Mass. At that time the house was what is popularly known as a lemon; now it is thriving, and Joe feels a justifiable pride in having put it across. He is exceptionally well liked by the patrons for his warm personality, and appreciated for the way he runs his shows without a hitch. Patrons can set their watches by the time of the various elements of the program. Joe's success as a manager dates back to the days when he entered the theatrical business as a boy, for it is experience that counts and Joe has had it. He was one of the best stock leading men in Massachusetts before the films became popular, and played everything from a stage cop to Uncle Tom. At one time he had a repertoire of thirty plays at his finger tips. He knows what people like and gives it to them.

Dan Finn has been connected with the Olympia, Lynn, for six years and under his able management it is doing the biggest theatre business in the city, playing first-runs and high-class vaudeville. Dan says that no other company looks as good to him as Gordon's.

The Waldron Casino, Boston, enjoys the distinction of being one of the few burlesque theatres that run motion pictures. Manager L. De Kane has managed the house for thirty years. Despite his long connection with the theatre, he is fully as interested in its welfare, and as full of pep, as the day he took charge. He is in the office at 9:30 a. m. and does not leave until 11::30 p. m. We blush but must quote him as saying that he gets more real value out of Moving Picture World than any other picture trade magazine.

Thomas H. Cuddy, who for many years managed Cohen & Harris traveling shows and other big productions, is manager of the Woburn Theatre, Woburn, Mass. Tom has seen the world and finds Woburn an ideal place to make his home. He is putting over the theatre in fine shape, and like the old song, "He never cares to wander from his own fireside."

Manager Max Melincoff of the Rialto Theatre, Lowell, Mass., is still at the old stand and reports business as great. E. M. Loew, owner of the house, has just bought the New Jewel Tneatre in Lowell and Mr. Melincoff will manage both houses. Though one of the youngest of the E. M. Loew managers, he is one of the originals.

Sidney Le Bow has recently taken charge of the Colonial Theatre, Lowell, Mass. It had been closed for some time. He will present the best obtainable pictures and vaudeville acts.

Frank P. Miller, owner-manager of the Lafayette, Haverhill, Mass., is a former New Yorker who finds Haverhill very much to his liking. He once owned the Rose Theatre, 102nd Street and Amsterdam avenue, New York City. Mr. Miller was a prime factor in the local strike of projectionists, and beat them by becoming projectionist while his brother aids in managing the Lafayette.

William Murphy of Gordon's Colonial Theatre, Haverhill, Mass., not only is manager but orator as well. He gained considerable of a reputation when he took over the house by putting a stop to riotous amateur nights. Gangs made a practice of calling with cabbages and eggs. Bill took the stage and lectured them on sportsmanship until there were apologies galore. The boys kept on visiting the theatre but left their missiles at home. Now Bill runs the most successful amateur nights in this section of the state. He has a wonderful personality and is a real orator.

J. M. Cohen of Boston has taken over the Hartnet Square Theatre, East Dedham, Mass., and reports very satisfactory business.

William Cotter, for several years manager of Poli's Theatre, Meriden, Conn., is managing the State Theatre, Pawtucket, R. I.

More of the Same

Here are some more sidelights on New England exhibitors, this time about Massachusetts men. They were garnered by H. S. Marion, traveling representative of Moving Picture World, whose long connection with the various branches of the theatrical business has acquainted him with thousands of exhibitors and many thousands of stage folk.

We would like to repeat what we said last week—that this department at all times welcomes and eagerly desires theatre news direct from the exhibitor. It is impossible for our correspondent to know all that's going on, and so when you plan a new theatre, or improvements to the present one, or some change in policy, send the details to the writer.

Furthermore, the writer will be only too glad to be of service. When an occasion arises, just drop him a line and the reply will be prompt.—S. S.

Detroit

The Detroit film industry, exchanges and exhibitors are uniting to celebrate New Year's Eve together. Arrangements are being completed by David Palfreyman, manager of the Film Board of Trade, and H. M. Richey, manager of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Michigan, for a giant celebration under the same hotel roof. Music will be furnished by the Broadway Strand orchestra.

Jacob Schreiber of the Blackstone Theatre has returned from a buffalo hunting trip in South Dakota. Schreiber shot a buffalo while riding horseback, which is the old-fashioned and difficult way to hunt them. The buffalo was mounted on a wagon and displayed in front of the Detroit Film Building for several days.

Babcock Theatre, Bath, N. Y. Is Opened Christmas Night

Christmas night was a memorable occasion this year in Bath, N. Y., for on that evening the new Babcock Theatre was opened with impressive ceremonies and a fine program. The house was built by William W. Babcock, but it has been leased by the J. Meyer Schine Theatrical Corporation. One of the most attractive for its size in Western New York, it seats 850. It is fireproof throughout, beautifully decorated inside and out, and equipped with every modern convenience. Senator Ernest E. Cole formally presented the theatre to the town in the name of Mr. Babcoc'k and Mayor Willson R. Campbell delivered the speech of acceptance. Robert C. Turnbull, president of the Rotary Club, and William D. Garrison, head of the Bath Chamber of Commerce, also spoke.

A village ordinance permitting the exhibition of pictures on Sunday has been unanimously adopted by the village board of trustees in Seneca Falls. The ordinance, which becomes effective on January 1, will permit shows between the hours of 2 and 11 p. m. only, not allowing presentations in the morning. The village recently voted in favor of Sunday picture exhibitions.

The New Ariel Theatre on High street, near Jefferson avenue, Buffalo, has been leased from George Welte by Dewey Michaels, who also operates the Plaza and Avon, two East Side community houses. Mr. Michaels has appointed Billy West manager of the Ariel. Mr. West has been at the Avon. Mrs West will manage the Avon. Looks like Dewey is out to follow in the footsteps of J. Meyer Schine.

Manager E. O. Weinberg put on an industrial review of the city of Lockport, N. Y., last week at the new Rialto Theatre in that town, and attracted capacity business.

Manager Vincent R. McFaul announces that Julian Eltinge is coming in person with his female impersonation act to Shea's Hippodrome the week of January 4, when "Classmates" will be the film attraction. The Hipp was beautifully decorated the past week with Christmas greens, and there were two brilliantly illuminated Christmas trees, one on the stage and one in the lobby. A Yuletide prologue, "The Night Before Christmas," was staged.

Fay's Theatre in Rochester gave citizens a rare bargain opportunity the other day when Manager Arch McCallum advertised his annual Christmas book sale. The books contains tickets, and folks who bought them got two dollars' worth for one bone.

Cracksmen forced their way into Shea's Theatre in Jamestown, N. Y., one night last week, and after moving a 600-pound safe from the ticket office down an aisle in the auditorium to the orchestra circle, blew it open and got $98 in silver.. They overlooked a bag filled with pennies. Manager Robert C. Horning had deposited a large sum at the bank the day before, which accounted for the small haul.

Rumors that the Keith interests had purchased the Gordon Theatre property in Rochester have been denied by J. J. Murdock, general manager of the Keith company. Mr. Murdock says the Keith interests have no intention of building in Rochester for several years, their present theatre being adequate for all present needs.

Jake Siegel has been appointed exploitation manager at the Lumberg Theatre in Niagara Falls, N. Y. Jake is a brother of Otto Siegel, Metro-Goldwyn salesman in Buffalo.

James Wallingford, general chairman, is in negotiation with screen stars for their appearance at the Movie Ball to be staged on Thursday evening, January 29, in Elmwood Music hall under the auspices of Buffalo Zone, M. P. T. O. of N. Y.

Walter Dion, who is on a tour of inspection of film booths for the Film Board of Trade of Buffalo in their campaign against film mutilation, says he has found conditions very bad in many booths, which accounts for much damage done to film. But exhibitors are co-operating heartily and have promised to make changes where suggested by Mr. Dion.

Albert D. Quinn has sold a picture theatre at 100 Park street to Rose Moro and Fortunati Fuda in Syracuse. The new owners, who have bought the property for an investment, will open the theatre at once.

Pittsburgh, Pa.

Frank W. Rodgers, for six years owner of the Arcade Theatre, Morgantown, W. Va., has been having some trouble lately, it is said, with his landlord and accordingly Rodgers found it necessary to go out and get a court injunction so that nobody could interfere with his theatre or try to close him until April 1, 1925, at least, for that is the date his lease expires. In spite of rumors to the contrary, Rodgers says he is still running the house day in and day out, and he expects to do so for some time to come. He also stated to a World correspondent that his rent at the theatre has increased from $100 to $1,000 a month in six years. That certainly is going some.

Warren B. Dygert, for a year and a half editor of Rowland and Clark's "Film Forecast," resigned his position on December 20 to become managing director of Mark Browar's recently enlarged Kenyon Theatre on the North Side, Pittsburgh.

J. B. Cox, owner of Cox's Theatre, Mt. Pleasant, is confined to the South Side Hospital, Pittsburgh, with an illness that necessitated an operation several days ago. At last reports he was progressing nicely, and stated that he would be glad to have any of his exhibitor and exchangemen friends to visit him and help him pass the lonely hours.

Floyd Morrow, one of the best known theatre managers in the local territory, on December 22 assumed the management of Rowland and Clark's State Theatre in downtown Pittsburgh, succeeding H. B. Dygert, who has gone to Loew's Aldine as publicity director.

Markley Brothers, Julius, Maurice and Harry, owners of the Strand and Grand theatres, New Castle, have purchased Dave Baltimore's newly built State Theatre in that town. The new owners took charge on December 12 and now have three picture theatres to their credit in New Castle.

On December 8, Manager H. L. Bennett, of the Victoria Theatre, Rapsons, W. Va., entertained the children of the city with a free show, candy n'everything. It was Mr. Bennett's 46th birthday and he invited the little ones in to help him celebrate.

Schenectady Exhibitor Keeps Faith by Newspaper Apology

William Shirley, managing director of the State, Albany and Strand houses in Schenectady, came out with an apology in the newspapers of that city one night last week in connection with a previous advertisement. The first "ad," announcing a feature picture at the State, carried the information that it was a story of flappers and jazz. Later on, Mr. Shirley apologized by saying that he had not seen the picture screened and had depended on the advertising sent him by the producer. It was only a few months ago that Mr. Shirley, in a newspaper advertisement, asked the people of Schenectady if they wanted better pictures and if they would support the same.

Lew Fisher of Ticonderoga was in town during the week on his way to Chatham. William Smalley of Cooperstown also was in town. Mr. Smalley calls in all his managers every week, talks over business and incidentally asks each one for an idea along exploitation lines. These meetings are working out well and Smalley houses are now becoming extremely well known throughout the state.

"My brother is single and I am married," remarked John Mattice, of the Novelty Theatre in Middleburg, the other day while in town, explaining just how it happened that his brother was sporting a brand new sedan.

Although Betty Feuer is not yet 20 years of age, she is handling the Crescent Theatre in Schenectady like a veteran. The house is owned by her parents. The young woman does all her buying and booking, and judging by the crowds the house is most successful these days.

It looks as though Ben Apple, of the American and King theatres in Troy, and one of the star bowlers of the city, will be out of the game for some time to come. While rolling on one of the local alleys the other night Mr. Apple strained his knee so badly that he was forced to remain in bed for several days under a doctor's care.

How would you like to have a business partner by the name of Henry Windekenecht? Jimmy Rose has one bearing such a name and the two have adopted "Rosewind Theatre Enterprise" as the name of the company operating the Bijou and Troy. Incidentally, Mr. Windekenecht is postmaster in Rensselaer and a life-long friend of Jimmy's. What's more, the two are making a decided success of things. Just at the present time the house is undergoing a thorough redecorating.

Sol Manheimer and Dr. J. Victor Wilson, of the Robbins theatres in Watertown, are certainly in strong these days with both the parents and the boys of the northern city. On Tuesday evening the Kiwanis Club of that city entertained many boys at a big Christmas dinner with a tree and all the fixin's. After the dinner was over Messrs. Manheimer and Wilson stepped up and did their part by entertaining the boys at the Olympic.

Jake Rosenthal, who has been spending about eighteen hours a day at his theatre in Troy, actually took a couple of evenings off during the past week. Everyone around the house commented upon the fact and at least half of those leaving the theatre inquired what had become of Jake. According to all reports, Mr. Rosenthal's radio set is entirely responsible.

J. C. Eisenberg, owner of the Woodlawn and Rialto theatres in Schenectady, has closed the former house for the time being, but plans to keep the Rialto open on a 10 and 15 cent basis throughout the winter.

Having worked day and night, George Dwore, manager of the Capitol and Cameo theatres in Schenectady, had the satisfaction during the past few days of being admitted to the bar and likewise of being awarded an honor key. The young man will be associated with Judge Alexander, one of the leading jurists of his home city, but will continue to assist his father in handling the two theatres. The Capitol seats 850 and the Cameo 575.

Sporting a southern tan, Dr. J. Victor Wilson, manager of the Olympic Theatre in Watertown, is back home from Key West and shivering a bit in the northern city. As might be expected, Doctor Wilson went fishing and, what is more important, he landed a 40-pound kingfish. He says so himself. Doctor Wilson had a most enjoyable trip, spending a portion of the time with his brother, who is a pilot at the Key West harbor.

Morris Silverman, owner of the Happy Hour and Pearl theatres in Schenectady, with the reputation of being able to successfully resist film salesmen better than any man in the territory, fell last week to the wiles of an automobile salesman. Mr. Silverman purchased a splendid sedan, but according to all accounts doesn't dare to appear along Film Row in Albany, after having recited for months just how bad business was in the Electric City.

The Star in Corinth encountered a rather tough break last week with "The Covered Wagon." An epidemic broke out of what appeared to be scarlet fever, with the result that no children were allowed in the theatre and many older persons remained at home. The picture will be brought back at a later date.

Junior Movies, which have been most successful in Albany during the past three or four winters and are going over big in Troy this season, are now being extended into Cohoes, Green Island, Waterford and Watervliet with the Troy Theatre showing the pictures. "Peter Pan" will be featured on December 27 for the children of Troy and on December 30 for the children of Cohoes, Green Island, Waterford and Watervliet. On Saturday morning, January 3, the picture will be shown to the children of Albany at the Mark Strand Theatre in that city. Walter Roberts, manager of the Troy Theatre, realizing the importance of these movies, was devoting considerable of his time last week visiting every school in the city and co-operating with the Parent-Teachers' Association.

The Cameo Theatre in Schenectady will observe its first birthday during the week of December 29. An exceptionally fine program is being arranged.

Walter and Noma Suckno, operating the Albany and Regent theatres in Albany, following the recent death of their father, Samuel Suckno, emphatically denied a rumor to the effect that the Albany Theatre was to be taken over by C. H. Buckley and Jacob Tarsches, who already own and operate the Leland and Clinton Square theatres in that city.

BARBARA LA MARR

Star of "Sandra," (First National) and also "Hail and Farewell," a forthcoming First National release from Sawyer and Lubin.

Steps were taken the past week which will probably result in Ernest J. Wolfe, owner of the Bijou Theatre in Lowville, taking over the Lowville Opera House. The Opera House is owned by the village and taxpayers will necessarily have to vote on the proposition. Should Mr. Wolfe secure the property, he plans to turn it into a picture theatre, converting the Bijou into a community hall. The Opera House seats about 1,000. It is estimated that necessary repairs to the building will total approximately $15,000.

Fifteen residents of Troy enjoyed their turkey on Christmas Day at the expense of Jacob Rosenthal of the Rose Theatre. Five turkeys a night were given away. Mr. Rosenthal attracted lots of attention one day last week with a constantly ringing bell advertising the showing of "The Telephone Girl."

After running one's own theatre for a dozen years or more, it's pretty tough to be forced to stand up for an hour or so, unable to get a seat at a nearby house. Yet this is just what happened to Fred Elliott, former owner of the Clinton Square in Albany, the other night when he dropped in at the Mark Strand to see "The Wife of a Centaur."

Henry Seguine, with his whole family, is spending the holidays with friends in Columbus, Ohio. Mr. Seguine, who runs the New Liberty Theatre in Rouse's Point, passed through Albany the other day on his

Toronto Exhibitor Re-elected Alderman; Also M. P. T. O. Head

Alderman W. A. Summerville, owner of the new Prince of Wales Theatre, Danforth avenue, Toronto, was re-elected alderman for Ward Eight in the Toronto City Council by acclamation at the Toronto civic nominations, which were held December 19. Ald. Sommerville was recently elected vice-president of the Ontario branch of the M. P. T. O., Canadian Division. He is enthusiastic in his support of the M. P. T. O. activities. His theatre is one of the finest in Toronto. It was opened last summer.

The Capitol Theatre at London, Ontario, a Famous Players house which was formerly an Allen theatre, has made considerable progress recently with music. A fine new pipe organ has been installed and it is being played by Theodore Gray. A large new orchestra has also been organized under the direction of Arthur S. Gesensway. The manager of the London Capitol is Thomas Logan, who has been a London exhibitor for years.

A new film exchange company has been organized with headquarters at Montreal, Quebec, under a Provincial company charter. The new company is Independent Films, Inc., and the incorporators are J. E. Currie, Jr., and C. R. Behan. The company proposes to deal in independent releases for which the Canadian rights are being secured.

In line with the development in Western Canada for the changing of opening dates from Mondays to Saturdays in the large picture houses, Manager W. P. Wilson of the Capitol Theatre, Edmonton, Alberta, has announced that new programs will start at the Capitol on Saturdays in future.

Manager M. O. Allen of the Monarch Theatre, Edmonton, Alberta, pulled off some old-time stunts with new vigor. As a diversion from current film programs, he conducted a cream puff eating contest on Monday evening, December 15, and several nights later there was a pie-eating competition.

B. F. Keith's Theatre, Ottawa, was the scene of a small fire early on the afternoon of December 20 but nothing of a serious nature resulted. The auditorium became filled with smoke and the fire department was called by Manager J. M. Franklin. It was discovered that the motor of the pipe organ was burning. The patrons did not leave the theatre even when the firemen appeared. The organ was out of commission for a couple of days.

Mike Ventura, a well-known picture operator of Ottawa, Ontario, has organized a partnership with his brother in a store business, attractive premises being opened on Bank street, near Flora street, for the sale of novelties, stationery, magazines, confectionery and other lines.

P. J. Nolan, owner of the Rex Theatre, Ottawa, was unsuccessful in his bid for a seat on the Ottawa Board of Control in the civic elections for 1925, being defeated by a comparatively few votes in the hot race among 10 candidates for the four places on the Board.

R. T. Stevens of Sudbury, Ontario, has opened a palatial picture theatre, the Regent, at Sudbury, Ontario, the operating company being the Stevens Theatres, Ltd. The new house is regarded as the finest equipped theatre north of Toronto. The house was formally opened by the Hon. Charles McRae, Minister of Mines in the Ontario Government, the opening attraction being First National's "The Silent Watcher."

way to Ohio. The only thing that is worrying him is whether or not he will find the roads open when he starts back east.

George Roberts is doing the booking and buying for O. S. Hathaway of the Kingston Opera House.

Al Bothner, of the Capitol in Troy, is slated to become manager of the Strand in Mohawk, recently taken over by William Smalley, and making the thirteenth theatre in his chain. There will be extensive alterations made in the house immediately after New Year.

Abe Dwore of Schenectady, better known along Film Row as "Honest Abe," is looking for Santa Claus this year to bring him a brand new automobile. In days past Mr. Dwore was a wholesale shoe manufacturer. He started in as an exhibitor with the Grand in Scotia.

Tony Veiller, of the Lincoln Theatre in Troy, overheard a good one this past week in connection with a showing of "Little Robinson Crusoe" at his house. A couple of youngsters were standing in front. One inquired of the other if the picture was any good. "Why Jackie Coogan has Valentino beat a mile," was the reply.

Meyer Friedman, assistant manager of Farash Theatres, Inc., of Schenectady, is once more up and around after having been confined to his apartment by illness.

William Smalley gives away turkeys at Thanksgiving, geese at Christmas time and ducks on New Years. Mr. Smalley always makes a great hit at Christmas time, contributing his various theatres to the use of local lodges of Elks in their entertainment of the children of their respective places. When Mr. Smalley gives his support to any movement, he goes the limit, with the result that his Christmas festivities become a feature of the various communities in which his houses are located.

Nate Robbins of Utica, operating the Olympic in Watertown, played the part of host to members of the Wasoc Club of Watertown one night last week. The club, numbering 103 strong, marched from the Congregational Church to the theatre and occupied a section of seats in the center. There is no question as to just how well Mr. Robbins stands in Watertown these days.

With Miss Renee Craven as bridesmaid, Miss Marie Wheeler of Albany, known to hundreds of exhibitors throughout New York State because of her activities along Film Row with various exchanges, became the wife of Attorney Frederick Garfield of Jamestown at a wedding solemnized in Albany last Saturday night. The best wishes of exhibitor friends are extended through these columns to the young couple.

Many Ohio Picture Theatres Go Under New Managements

Recent changes in this region include the sale of the Pendiola Theatre at Lockland, Ohio, and the Emery at Reading, Ohio, to Elmer Shard and John Weining, both houses having been the property of A. J. Holt. At Ironton, Ohio, Bob Woods has taken over the Marlow Theatre, which has been under control of Nick McMahon. Charles Palmer, Lebanon, Ohio, also reports sale of his Grand Theatre at that place, Palmer having joined the sales organization of the Standard Film Co. to cover West Virginia territory. Mrs. B. Fierstone has acquired possession of the Park Theatre, South Lorain, Ohio, from George Schenker, and has given it the name of the Paris. Marion, Ohio, reports that Edward F. Reynard has taken over the Grand Theatre and will inaugurate a policy of pictures and vaudeville. At Zanesville, Ohio, the Zane Theatre, which has been dark for several months, has reopened under management of Vitus Mulvey and Miss Lulu Marshall. Elmer G. Sell has come into possession of the Broadway Theatre, Youngstown, having made the purchase from Thomas Burlingham. Sell, who also operates the Nixon at Youngstown, has christened his new property Wilsonian.

Cincinnati exhibitors are proud of the fact that two of their members have received recognition at the annual meeting of the M. P. T. O. of Ohio, held at Columbus recently, J. A. Ackerman, of the Glenway Theatre, having been elected vice-presiden and Andrew G. Hettesheimer, owner of the Orpheum Theatre, having been chosen as a member of the executive committee.

As a result of court action testing the legality of the lease held by the La Belle Amusement Co., Wheeling, W. Va., on the old city building property, Steubenville, Ohio, which lease was obtained some time ago by George Shafer, said lease has become null and void and the leasing problem again reverts to the Steubenville city council for further action. Shafter had planned to erect a large picture house on the site.

Announcement comes from Huntington, W. Va., that plans are being formulated for the erection of a 2,500-seat house in that city to play Keith vaudeville and pictures.

After having been closed for approximately two years, the Roma Theatre, Bellaire, Ohio, is again in operation but under the name of the Strand.

The Liberty Theatre, Covington, Ky., managed by L. B. Wilson, has added a vaudeville program to the regular showing of pictures.

I. Libson, who controls all of the first-run houses in the downtown section in Cincinnati, collaborated with the Times-Star, a leading daily, to give a private showing of "Peter Pan" at all the orphanages of Cincinnati during the week prior to the time the picture opened at his Capitol Theatre on December 28. Portable projectors, furnished through the courtesy of Clarence Runey, local Paramount cameraman, were used, and an exhibition given daily at one of the various local institutions. At Hamilton, Ohio, Managing Director Fred S. Meyer gave a morning matinee for the kiddies on the day before "Peter Pan" opened at his house, no admission being charged, the expense being assumed by a local clothing store.

Damage to the extent of $30,000, according to estimate, was sustained in a fire at the Forest Theatre, Portsmouth, Ohio. Two projecting machines and two reels of film were destroyed, and the front of the house very badly damaged. Cause of the fire has not been determined.

Chris. Phister, who holds down the managerial chair at the Jewel Theatre, Troy, Ohio, is spending an enforced vacation at Grand Rapids, Mich., whither he went for the removal of his tonsils. Phister reports that even though the picture game has its ups and downs, he prefers it any time to confinement in a hospital.

John A. Schwalm of the Rialto Theatre, Hamilton, Ohio, was "all set" to attend the Columbus meeting of the M. P. T. O. of Ohio when his physician advised against it, owing to trouble which Schwalm has been having with one of his ears. He states, however, that although his ear causes considerable pain, there are some certain things that he can hear perfectly well.

Louisville, Ky.

The Louisville Herald has just made a survey and claims that there are now 313,188 people in Louisville, a gain of 79,297 over the 1920 census. Part of this gain was through annexation of several square miles of suburban property by the city and the fact that Louisville is prosperous and growing fast. Bank clearings here have shown a big gain over the past six months and are well ahead of 1923, while building operations for eleven months were over $21,000,000, as against a previous record of $18,000,000 in 1923 for twelve months. Labor is well employed and spending freely, suburban houses doing especially well.

The Strand Theatre at Frankfort has been remodeled and redecorated during the last two weeks. The lobby and exterior have been repainted in green and gold and the interior decorations have been worked out in panel effect in tapestry with green trimmings.

Announcement was made this week by Ross Garver, general manager of the Wabash Theatres Corporation, operating the Liberty, Indiana and Hippodrome theatres in Terre Haute, that J. C. Wodetsky of Chicago has been chosen to manage the Liberty. Ray Frisz, present manager, has not announced plans for the future. Mr. and Mrs. Wodetsky will move to Terre Haute the first of the new year.

Harry A. Perfect of Ft. Wayne and T. Guy Perfect of Huntington have filed suit in a court at Huntington asking for possession of the Jefferson and Apollo theatres from Harry M. Strader and Edward Lippols. The complaint alleges the two men owe $199 rental and thus are illegally in possession of the two theatres. These were leased on September 8, 1921, to the Jefferson Amusement Company. Under the lease the men were to pay $1,000 down and $33,000 in sixty monthly installments.

Ace Berry, manager of the Circle Theatre, Indianapolis, staged a Christmas party this week for the employes of the theatre. A playlet was put on for members of the staff, the board of directors and a few invited guests. There were refreshments, amusements and a huge Christmas tree with something for the stockings of each employe.

Kansas

Several important matters, including legislative problems, are expected to be discussed at the next regula meeting of the board of directors of the M. P. T. O. of Kansas and Missouri at Kansas City on January 19. Statements on dues are now being mailed out by the "wholesale" at the organization's headquarters, and according to C. E. Cook, business manager, results are coming fast.

Seneca, Mo., a hamlet of only 900 progressive souls, now can boast of a picture theatre equal to that of any town of five times the population. The Colonial Theatre, which was opened last week, constructed at a cost of $10,000, stands as a tribute to the aggressiveness of its owner, C. L. Higginbotham. Occupying a frontage of forty feet, the house is a model in architectural standards. Seating capacity only 350, the theatre played to 429 paid admissions the opening night, "Wanderer of the Wasteland" being the initial feature. It was necessary to borrow chairs from a nearby church to seat the overflow. The house is beautifully decorated and has a brilliantly lighted marquee and gallery. A large stage was built in to accommodate any amateur theatricals.

Among out-of-town exhibitors in the Kansas City market last week were: William Thimming, Strand, Salina, Kans.; Stanley Chambers, Miller Theatre, Wichita, Kans.; M. L. Guyer, Auditorium, Slater, Mo.; Charles Bull, Holland Theatre, Wichita, Kans.; L. A. Wagner, Princess, Eureka, Kans.; S. E. Wilhoit, Jefferson, Springfield, Mo.

Nebraska

Perhaps the most spectacular exploitation stunt ever pulled off in Omaha was that used recently by Goldberg Bros., proprietors of the Sun Theatre, in exploiting "Captain Blood," before and while it was showing at their theatre. They employed artists to build a huge float on a flat car of the Omaha and Council Bluffs Streets Railway Co., that represented the Artella, and arranged to have the car run over the entire system of car lines once a day. Buccaneers resembling Captain Blood and his companions were seen on deck of the ship, while the mast heads and other parts of the ship were studded with jewels in the form of colored electric lights. Thousands who saw this "ship" floating through the streets, said it was a work of art and would have done credit to the floats of the celebrated Mardi Gras of New Orleans or Ak-Sar-Ben of Omaha.

P. E. Doe, exhibitor at Arcadia, Neb., who operates his show in the Odd Fellows Hall, was questioned recently whether he would be able to renew a satisfactory lease of that building and stated that he might build a new theatre building at Arcadia, providing a satisfactory agreement could not be reached with the Odd Fellows.

A. W. Parker has sold the Princess Theatre at Sanborn, Ia., to W. P. Green. Mr. Green came there from Tyndall, S. D., where he previously owned the Cozy Theatre, which he sold to R. C. Metzger.

J. W. Alstoot sold the Lyric Theatre at Fort Dodge, Ia., to E. F. Forke.

C. H. Moller has sold his Princess Theatre at Montezuma, Ia.

O. W. Larson has sold the Princess Theatre at Odebolt, Ia., to Wilcox & Miller, who also own the Lakeview Theatre at Lakeview, Ia.

Fire in the projection room of the Palace Theatre at Exira, Ia., one evening recently, destroyed ten reels of prints and some other equipment, but was confined to the projection room. Ray Jones is proprietor of the place.

The Virginia Theatre at Boone, Ia., has been closed temporarily.

The Star Theatre at Knoxville, Ia., has been temporarily closed.

Randall & Son have purchased the Dreamland Theatre at Gibbon, Neb.

Among those exhibitors who visited Omaha recently were: L. Swidelson, Star Theatre, Sioux City, Ia.; O. Van Housen, Favorite Theatre, Schuyler, Neb.; R. W. Steen, Atlantic Theatre, Atlantic, Ia.; F. N. Houston, Lyric Theatre, Tekamah, Neb.; H. G. Simpson, Garden Theatre, Sogourney, Ia.; Blaine Cook, Beatrice, Neb.; Morris Smith, Hipp Theatre, Sioux City, Ia.; J. F. Van Tassell, Clarinda, Ia.

Blizzard Makes Big Hole in St. Louis Theatre Patronage

Motion picture exhibitors of St. Louis and vicinity were hit hard by the severe blizzard that swept down on the district on the night of December 18, the cold snap continuing over Sunday. Prior to the freeze twenty-four hours of a cold, driving rain dampened the ardor of motion picture fans, and as a result box office receipts suffered.

In the pre-Christmas lull the exhibitors in large numbers had set in attractive shows in order to hold business up to a standard, making the slump in business all the harder to take. The storm was the worst in thirty-six years, according to St. Louis Weather Bureau officials. So under the circumstances the theatre men were entitled to sing the blues.

The City Commissioners of Springfield, Mo., on December 16 decided to hold a special city-wide election on January 6 to give the residents of the community an opportunity of determining whether the town should have Sunday motion picture shows. Springfield has been without Sunday amusements since 1921. A petition was circulated recently asking for the commissioners to call an election on the subject.

Crossed electric light wires under the stage of the Palace Theatre, 1310-12 Franklin avenue, St. Louis, Mo., started a fire at 4:50 a. m. Tuesday, December 16. The building, a two-story brick affair, was damaged approximately $4,000. Jesse Horwitz, 5044 Vernon avenue, owner of the theatre, estimated the damage to the theatre equipment, etc., at $500. D. Reichman, 1115 Franklin avenue, owns the building.

John H. Havlin, 77 years old, of Cincinnati, who died in Miami, Fla., on December 17, was well known to the amusement seekers of St. Louis. His famed Havlin Theatre, Sixth and Walnut streets, for many years was the home of blood and thunder melodramas of the most approved type. State melodrama declined with the advent of the movies and Havlin's theatre here was forced to close about twelve years ago. It was recently torn down to make way for a modern commercial parking garage.

Hundreds of movie fans gathered in the lobby of the Grand-Florissant Theatre, St. Louis, at 9:40 p. m. December 17, were thrown into a turmoil by a shooting affray in the lobby.

The Orpheum faudeville Circuit has purchased ground at Fifth street and Washington avenue in Springfield, Ill., for a 2,000-seat combination vaudeville and picture house. It is expected that the house will cost upwards of $500,000.

Baby Peggy, juvenile star, came all the way from Hollywood to make a personal appearance at the West End Lyric, St. Louis, in conjunction with the showing of her latest feature production, "Captain January." She is a big favorite with the children in St. Louis.

Howard Brown, owner of the Opera House, Portageville, Mo., died recently. News of his death caused regret in St. Louis movie circles.

The Pastime Theatre, Cardwell, Mo., in the future will be known as the Marydale Theatre.

The Rex Theatre, Okawville, Ill., has been converted into a vaudeville house.

The Rex, Virden, Ill., is playing but half time. Poor business caused the curtailment.

J. S. Roady's theatre in West Plains, Mo., was damaged by fire recently.

Among the theatres closed in this district are: Nox, Carrier Mills, Ill.; Motion Picture Theatre, Essex, Mo.; J. & J., Hume, Ill.; Auditorium, Humboldt, Tenn.; Princess Theatre, Knox City, Mo.; Majestic, Mammoth Springs, Ark.; S. & B., Martinsville, Ill.; Whiteway, Peach Orchard, Ark.; Turk Hall, Williamsville, Mo.; Star, Holly Hook, Tenn.; Kozy, Pocahontas, Ark., and Opera House, Coffeen, Ill.

Hundreds of houses in Missouri and Illinois were forced to close Thursday, Friday and Saturday of the past week because the Blizzard made it absolutely impossible to give them any film service. Trains couldn't even get out of the Terminal yards. One crack train that made the trip from St. Louis to Chicago in six and a half hours, and even better at times, took six hours to get across the Mississippi River to Granite City, Ill. Old Jack Frost doesn't do his stuff often, but when he does—Oh, my!

Chicago

J. L. McCurdy, managing director of the Randolph Theatre, Chicago, announces that the policy of the house will be extended runs on feature pictures that have pulling power to hold over for more than one week. The house had a tie-up on "Emblems of Love," sponsored by the Moose Lodge, and 28,000 people passed the turnstiles during the week. Jane Jennings, the star, made a personal appearance which helped to put the show over in a big way for the week.

The Colonial Theatre at Quincy, Ill., was robbed last week. The thieves got away with Monday night receipts.

The Fitzpatrick and McElroy Caldwell Theatre at St. Joseph, Mo., had a fire last week which was caused by cross wires. The damage was quickly repaired and the house program not interferred with.

The Beacon Theatres Corporation, Chicago, which is building a new house on the South Side, has increased the board of directors from three to five members. The work will be rapidly pushed to completion.

S. Barret McCormick, formerly manager of the McVickers Theatre, Chicago, and the Circle Theatre, Indianapolis, is here in advance of "Barriers Burned Away" and his many friends in this city are glad to meet him again.

Leo Brunhild, general manager of the Brunhild circuit, leaves for California this week to be gone some time. He will be accompanied by his sister.

Improvements have been completed at Goodman & Harrison's Elite Theatre at Waukegan. Edward Scarpinski, formerly manager at the Douglas, one of their Chicago houses, has been appointed in a similar capacity at the Elite.

American Theatre in Spokane Opens with Flawless Program

Mike Newman opened his new American Theatre, Spokane, to a flying start on Saturday evening, December 13. Over 500 were turned away on the opening night. Special programs were issued and the opening program was Betty Compson in "Ramshackle House," augmented by five special acts. Mr. Newman has transformed the old American in record time. He signed the lease on November 25 but was not able to start work on the alterations until two weeks before his opening date. The boys who went over for the opening commented upon the smoothness and flawlessness of the initial performance, which bore none of the earmarks of a "first night."

On December 12, one day before his Spokane opening, the Newman Theatres, Inc., announced the leasing of the Grand Theatre, Bellingham, Wash., from J. B. Wahl, the owner, for ten years. Extensive remodeling will be done, including the installation of a pipe organ. As with the Spokane house, Junior Orpheum road shows and feature pictures will be presented. Mr. Newman takes possession March 1.

Christmas Week also is Fourth Anniversary Week at John Hamrick's Seattle Blue Mouse Theatre. The de luxe bill was a knockout for the regular admission price. "The Narrow Street" was the feature picture, augmented by special music and a big program. Holiday decorations throughout the house are extremely attractive.

R. E. Connell opened his new Connell's Theatre, Aberdeen, Wash., on December 19 to a packed house. "Captain Blood" was the opener. A goodly bunch from Seattle went down to extend their personal congratulations.

Walter Graham of Shelton, Wash., is making progress on his new theatre, which will open early in March.

G. W. Armour has retired from the Armour Circuit, sold all his holdings and is reported contemplating an early departure for California. W. G. Armour, his son, has taken for his partner in the business J. L. Kycek. The company's offices will be removed from Elma to Montesano. The Armour Circuit comprises theatres in Elma, McCleary and Montesano. The house in McCleary is new. Young Mr. Armour is an excellent business man and it is probable will build up a strong circuit.

The North Star Theatre, Old Town, Tacoma, has been opened again under the management of F. S. Elsberry.

E. M. Warner has purchased the Rose Theatre, Sumas, Wash., from Alfred P. Shrock.

A. K. Boussad, who recently purchased the Mission Theatre, Tacoma, has changed the name to the Victory. He is running seven changes a week.

Harry Carey, former owner of the Good Luck Theatre, Seattle, has purchased the Proctor Street Blue Mouse, Tacoma, Wash., from Mrs. Grace Sandstrom, who has other business interests in the Proctor street district. Mr. Carey is acquiring a beautiful house, just about two years old.

M. H. Newman, within a week of invading Spokane, had affiliated with the Chamber of Commerce and arranged a dinner at the Davenport, followed by a show at the American, for a bunch of orphan kiddies.

Art. Hile of the new Capitol Theatre, Seattle, has had a special pocket edition of Dickens' "Christmas Carol" prepared for free distribution to women and children at all performances during Holiday Week. The souvenir plan will be well advertised.

Manager C. W. McKee of the Heilig has planned his Christmas Week celebration to cater particularly to the children, by featuring Baby Peggy in "Captain January." He is getting behind it strong with contests at which dolls will be given little girls as prizes in contests.

Huge success greeted Manager Johnson's careful planning for a "Weekly Song Contest" at the initial Sunday concert last week. Oliver G. Wallace, organist, opened the program to a packed house. Manager LeRoy Johnson then introduced Paul Noble, manager of the Liberty Theatre, Portland, who explained to the audience how a long series of similar guest concerts had been held at his house with great success, and then remained to act as guest conductor. The five songs to be given were announced several days in advance and were all well known favorites. Upon call, volunteers arose from the audience and sang the chorus. Cash prizes were awarded by the amount of applause given each contestant from the audience. The contest lasted for an hour and a quarter and was so well received that it will be repeated indefinitely at 12:30 o'clock on Sundays. The stunt is a novel one in Seattle.

John Danz has renamed his Oak Theatre, First and Madison, the State. Management and policy remain unchanged.

Califonia

George F. Sharp, manager of the Liberty and Strand theatres, Fresno, Cal., was a visitor at San Francisco just before Christmas and reported that conditions in the San Joaquin Valley had shown a decided improvement since the breaking of the long dry spell. Mr. Sharp expects to be a candidate for mayor at the spring election.

Max Weiss, of the Lyric Theatre, Sacramento, Cal., paid San Francisco's Film Row a visit recently and advised that he would shortly have a second house in that city. The new theatre will be known as the Silver Palace.

R. F. Owen has re-opened the Empress Theatre, San Francisco, which was closed for some time.

The new Strand Theatre at Merced, Cal., has been opened under the management of J. A. Harvey, formerly of Winters, Dixon and Vacaville. The new house seats 400.

A fire in the dressing room beneath the stage of the M. & M. Theatre at Sacramento, Cal., caused damage estimated at $10,000 on December 16.

Associated Exhibitors

(Includes Selznick)

GRUBSTAKE. (8 reels). Star, Nell Shipman. A picture good enough to feature. A good story. Good acting and wild animal scenery is great. The print was a little old. Our only objection, we bought it right but bad weather made it lose money. Tone good. Sunday, yes. Audience appeal one hundred per cent. Farmers and townspeople, town of 800. Admission 10-25. Firkins and Laws, Crystal Theatre (200 seats), Moravia, Iowa.

LONE WOLF. (6 reels). Star, Jack Holt. This is a wonderful crook story. Holt does some good work. If your patrons like these kind this is a good one. Tone good. Sunday, no. Fair audience appeal. All classes, town of 6,000. Admission 10-25. R. L. Cochran, Judia Theatre (402 seats), Cisco, Texas.

OUTLAWS OF THE SEA. (7 reels). Star cast. One of the pictures which the exhibitor who lets Selznick keep will be ahead. It was very common, no interest, poor photography, fair story. Good tone, suitable for Sunday where they stay dark. Audience appeal twenty-five per cent. Farmers and townspeople, town of 800. Admission 10-25. Firkins and Laws, Crystal Theatre (200 seats), Moravia, Iowa.

THREE MILES OUT. (5,700 feet). Star, Madge Kennedy. Quite good. Enough adventure and plot to entertain and Madge Kennedy adds her pleasing personality. Tone good. Sunday, yes. Good audience appeal. Town of 7,364. Arthur B. Smith, Fenwick Theatre, Salem, New Jersey.

F. B. O.

AFTER THE BALL. (6,500 feet). Star cast. This is a wonderful picture. Buy it and go the limit on advertising. Tone good. Sunday, yes. Audience appeal ninety-eight per cent. Small town class, town of 300. Admission 10-25. Roy E. Cline, Osage Theatre (200 seats), Osage, Oklahoma.

AMERICAN MANNERS. (5,200 feet). Star, Richard Talmadge. At last they have given this star a good story and he sure does work in it. If you have not booked this star, go to it; he is a winner. Tone, no. Sunday, yes. Audience appeal ninety-five per cent. All classes in big city. Admission ten cents. Stephen G. Brenner, Eagle Theatre (298 seats), Baltimore, Maryland.

DANGER LINE. (5,800 feet). Star, Sessue Hayakawa. Fairly good, especially so where Hayakawa has a following. Tone good. Fair audience appeal. Town of 7,364. Arthur B. Smith, Fenwick Theatre, Salem, New Jersey.

GIRL OF THE LIMBERLOST. (6,500 feet). Star cast. A splendid picture and corresponds with the book so nicely. Splendid entertainment. Tone good. Sunday, yes. Good audience appeal. Town and country class, town of 1,800. Admission 10-25. Herbert Tapp, Hippodrome Theatre (460 seats), Sheridan, Indiana.

JUDGMENT OF THE STORM. (6,392 feet). Star cast. This is an excellent picture. If you don't book this one you are cheating your patrons out of an evening's real entertainment. F. B. O. should be complimented on this one. Tone excellent. Sunday, yes. Good audience appeal. Country and town class, town of 455. Admission 10-25-30. A. F. Schriever, Onida Theatre (225 seats), Onida, South Dakota.

MASK OF LOPEZ. (4,900 feet). Star, Fred Thomson. Here is another western of Thomson which pleased ninety per cent. Silver King, the horse, is certainly a wonderful actor and worth seeing anywhere. Tone good. Sunday, yes. Good audience appeal. All classes, town of 1,000. Admission 10-20. A. E. Rogers, Temple Theatre (250 seats), Dexter, New York.

SPIRIT OF THE U. S. A. (8,312 feet). Star, Johnny Walker. A dandy even if it is largely hokum. Part of the tale includes some World War action. Producers claim that six hundred feet of government War film has been worked into this part. We took especial pains to follow music cue and got the most cheering that I've heard on any picture for some time. Tone okay. Sunday, yes. Audience appeal okay. Rural and small town class, town of 400. Admission thirty cents. E. L. Partridge, Pyam Theatre (250 seats), Kinsman, Ohio.

VANITY'S PRICE. (6,124 feet). Star, Anna Q. Nilsson. Enchantingly beautiful, Anna Q. Nilsson in a picture quivering with drama, alive with romance, throbbing with suspense. You'll love every second of it. All the charm of beautiful women, all the adventure and dark passions of virile men, all the majesty of luxurious homes, all the unconventionality of life on the stage. A powerful, brilliantly enacted story of a woman who, through modern science, regains her youth and desire for admiration and love. The brilliant cast includes Wyndham Standing, Lucille Rickson, Stuart Holmes and Arthur Rankin. William Noble, Empress Theatre, Oklahoma City, Oklahoma.

First National

CIRCUS DAYS. (6,000 feet). Star, Jackie Coogan. Entertainment for the children but little drawing power otherwise. Tone fine. Sunday, yes. Audience appeal good. Town and country class, town of 1,800. Admission 10-25. Herbert Tapp, Hippodrome Theatre (460 seats), Sheridan, Indiana.

CLASSMATES. (6,983 feet). Star, Richard Barthelmess. Very good; in fact, the best thing that Dick has done since "Tol'able David." Should please where high class audiences demand a forceful drama such as this. Tone good. Sunday, yes. Good audience appeal. Suburban class, town of 2,000. Admission 10-30. H. Warren Rible, Mayfield Theatre (210 seats), Mayfield, California.

CLASSMATES. (6,983 feet). Star, Richard Barthelmess. Our Dick as a West Point cadet. The dream of every boy, the hope of every girl. He is shown in the biggest part he ever had. A big drama, rich in romance, thrill and action. See this visualization of your dream of the world's finest military academy. This production, practically in its entirety, was actually filmed at West Point with the full co-operation and assistance of the United States military authorities. William Noble, Empress Theatre, Oklahoma City, Oklahoma.

DANGEROUS MAID. (7,337 feet). Star, Constance Talmadge. Awfully poor costume picture, with Conny showing at a disadvantage. One of the kind of pictures that is pulling down First National standard and hurting the star. General class, city of 15,000. Ben L. Morris, Temple and Elk Grand theatres, Bellaire, Ohio.

ENCHANTED COTTAGE. (7,120 feet). Star, Richard Barthelmess. One of the very worst pictures this great star ever appeared in, although he did the most wonderful acting we have ever seen him do. It was not an audience picture and did not please thirty per cent of the people. Barthelmess has always been our very best male star. He is some actor. Tone doubtful. Hardly suitable for Sunday. Light audience appeal. City of 10,000. Admission 10-20. Ned Pedigo, Pollard Theatre (800 seats), Guthrie, Oklahoma.

GOLD FISH. (7,145 feet). Star, Constance Talmadge. This one is so bad that First National took it off the franchise list and made it open market, selling it for about a fourth of the franchise rate. It was hardly worth that as it is simply "fillum." General class, city of 15,000. Ben L. Morris, Temple and Elk Grand theatres, Bellaire, Ohio.

GOLD FISH. (7,145 feet). Star cast. One of the brightest, snappiest stars appearing in pictures placed in this conglomeration of nothing. It is a shame to let any boob ruin the career of Constance in this way. No drawing power. No story. Just a hashed up mess of nothing. People walked out until I pulled the picture off. Rotten would not half express the general opinion everyone had for this. Take a tumble to yourself, Constance, and keep out of this kind of stuff else you may be soon going around saying, "Where am I?" Ned Pedigo, Pollard Theatre, Guthrie, Oklahoma.

HUSBANDS AND LOVERS. (7,883 feet). Star, Lewis Stone. One of the outstanding pictures of the year with us, from box office angle and expressions from our audience. Sunday, yes. Big audience appeal. General class, city of 65,000. Admission thirty-five cents. Silverman Brothers, Strand Theatre (1,500 seats), Altoona, Pennsylvania.

IN EVERY WOMAN'S LIFE. (6,258 feet). Star cast. Just fair. Tone good. Sunday, yes. Fair audience appeal. Medium class, city of 16,000. Admission 10-30. S. A. Hayman, Lyda Theatre (360 seats), Grand Island, Nebraska.

IN EVERY WOMAN'S LIFE. (4,258 feet). Star, Virginia Valli. Something quite out of the ordinary run of pictures. Played to average business and everyone satisfied. Tone okay. Sunday, yes. Better class, city of 40,000. Admission 25-30. F. O. Slenker, Spencer Theatre (875 seats), Rock Island, Illinois.

IN HOLLYWOOD WITH POTASH AND PERLMUTTER. (6,700 feet). Star cast. Good. Tone good. Sunday, yes. Audience appeal for the highbrows. Medium class, city of 16,000. Admission 10-30. S. A. Hayman, Lyda Theatre (360 seats), Grand Island, Nebraska.

KID. Star, Charles Chaplin. This picture was played as a repeater and it did very good business. A picture like this is a classic of the screen and it will stand a repetition. Tone Good. Sunday, yes. Working class, city of 100,000. Admission 10-15-20. W. C. Budge, Comedy Theatre (275 seats), Jamaica, New York.

MADONNA OF THE STREETS. (7,507 feet). Star, Milton Sills. A picture that appealed to patrons. Good box office attraction. Tone good. Sunday, yes. General class, city of 65,000. Admission thirty-five cents. Silverman Brothers, Strand Theatre (1,500 seats), Altoona, Pennsylvania.

MADONNA OF THE STREETS. (7,507 feet). Star, Nazimova. Quite the best dramatic production played for some time. Nazimova quite like her old self. Patrons apparently much pleased with picture, if comments are to be considered. Tone good. Sunday, ideal. Good audience appeal. Better class, city of 40,000. Admission 25-30. F. O. Slenker, Spencer Theatre (875 seats), Rock Island, Illinois.

MADONNA OF THE STREETS. (7,507 feet). Star, Nazimova. For the first time in years Mlle. Nazimova makes return to the screen along with Milton Sills. This is a fairly good drama, but do not expect too much from it. Tone okay. Sunday, yes. Fair audience appeal. Suburban class, town of 2,000. Admission 10-30. H. Warren Rible, Mayfield Theatre (210 seats), Mayfield, California.

NOMADS OF THE NORTH. (6 reels). Star cast. Old but had a new print and it drew extra good business and pleased ninety per cent. Good audience appeal. Small town class, town of 1,474. Admission 10-25. T. W. Cannon, Majestic Theatre (315 seats), Greenfield, Tennessee.

Straight From the Shoulder, I hope it brings you all prosperity greater than any you may have enjoyed before.

I'd like the privilege of contributing a "tip" to these dependable pages.

It's this:

Pick your pictures the way a host of exhibitors do it—guiding your choice by the reports your brothers send in.

That'll go a long way toward boosting you along the road to the prosperous year which I have already wished for you.

Lots of luck—and all of it GOOD luck!

VAN.

ONLY WOMAN. (6,700 feet). Star, Norma Talmadge. Thrillingly different. Beautifully romantic. A vivid sea wreck. Norma as a fighting beauty battling to save a man she married to shield her father from disgrace. Norma's biggest and best performance. Both Norma and Eugene O'Brien endured unusual hardships in the filming of this production, battling mountainous waves which washed over, knocking them off their feet, and clinging desperately to the rail of the tossing ship. Their acting is remarkable, and the picture is well worth seeing. William Noble, Empress Theatre, Oklahoma City, Oklahoma.

RIVER'S END. (5,750 feet). Star, Lewis Stone. An old one. A reissue that drew well for me in spite of the fact that it was run here several years ago. One of the very few pictures I have run second run. Tone good. Good audience appeal. Town and rural class, town of 2,500. Admission 10-25. S. H. Rich, Rich Theatre (450 seats), Montpelier, Idaho.

SECRETS. (8,345 feet). Star, Norma Talmadge. It is true that producers should stop over-rating the pictures; while it pleased a certain class, not over eighty per cent, and the price paid was two hundred per cent. Tone okay. Sunday, yes. Audience appeal fair to good. Mixed class, town of 3,000. Admission 10-20-30. Charles Martin, Family Theatre (300 seats), Mt. Morris, New York.

SEVENTH DAY. (5,325 feet). Star, Richard Barthelmess. A good program picture that will please most all people. Not much comedy in this one. More on the serious order. Some action, however. Tone fair. Sunday, no. Fair audience appeal. Country and town class. Admission 10-20. W. F. Denny, Electric Theatre (250 seats), Lowry City, Missouri.

SILENT WATCHER. (7,576 feet). Star, Glenn Hunter. Really great picture. Patrons much pleased. Failed to draw heavily due to what we considered poor title. Will satisfy one hundred per cent if you can get them in. Tone good. Sunday, yes. Fine audience appeal. Better class, city of 40,000. Admission 25-30. F. O. Slenker, Spencer Theatre (875 seats), Rock Island, Illinois.

SILENT WATCHER. (7,576 feet). Star, Glenn Hunter. Another good one from Frank Lloyd. This is a real drama that carries a good punch throughout and never tires. Glenn Hunter does some fine work. Tone good. Sunday, yes. Good audience appeal. Suburban class, town of 2,000. Admission 10-30. H. Warren Rible, Mayfield Theatre (210 seats), Mayfield, California.

SUNDOWN. (9,000 feet). Star cast. One of the big flivvers. Too much cattle. Was put over as other productions in advertising campaign. People did not care for it. General class, city of 65,000. Admission thirty-five cents. Silverman Brothers, Strand Theatre (1,500 seats), Altoona, Pennsylvania.

SUNDOWN. (9,000 feet). Star cast. Boys, if you want your patrons mad at you just run this at advance prices as I did and you'll surely get in dutch. The cattle scenes last so long that they get you dizzy. What a shame that some directors are so dumb in this industry. Tone okay. Sunday, yes. Bad audience appeal. Mixed class, town of 3,000. Admission 10-20-30. Charles Martin, Family Theatre (300 seats), Mt. Morris, New York.

Fox

ARABIA. (4,995 feet). Star, Tom Mix. Tom does his stuff in this one. Book it and boost it, but don't pay too much. Pleased one hundred per cent of those who saw it. Good Saturday picture. Title only holds back. Tone good. Sunday, yes. Good attendance. Admission 10-20. R. P. Higginbotham, Pastime Theatre, Leeds, Alabama.

ARIZONA EXPRESS. (6,516 feet). Star cast. A melodrama full of excitement and thrills, but received a bad print and they yelled their heads off about it. Would like to have seen new print. Tone, none. Sunday, no. Fair audience appeal. All classes in big city. Admission ten cents. Stephen G. Brenner, Eagle Theatre (298 seats), Baltimore, Maryland.

CIRCUS COWBOY. (6,400 feet). Star, Buck Jones. Best he ever made. Since Charles is gone and Buck here it is all right. Tone good. Sunday, yes. Admission 15-25. E. E. Bays, Globe Theatre (250 seats), Buena Vista, Virginia.

EYES OF THE FOREST. (5 reels). Star, Tom Mix. A good Mix picture with lots of action, thrills and sprinkled with comedy. We had very bad weather for this one, so could not give accurate report on drawing power. Tone fair. Sunday, no. Very good audience appeal. Town and rural class, town of 1,028. Admission 10-25. W. C. Geer, Princess Theatre (175 seats), Vermont, Illinois.

EXILES. (5 reels). Star, John Gilbert. Very good picture. Print is in very bad shape. Tone okay. Sunday, yes. Appeals to small town and rural class. Town and rural class, town of 800. Admission 15-30. C. O. Christ, Opera House (350 seats), Elgin, Iowa.

LOVE LETTERS. (4,749 feet). Star, Shirley Mason. This picture was nothing to rave over; about fifty-fifty. Tone okay. Sunday, yes. Audience appeal, small town and rural class. Town and rural class, town of 800. Admission 15-30. C. O. Christ, Opera House (350 seats), Elgin, Iowa.

MILE A MINUTE ROMEO. (4,800 feet). Star, Tom Mix. Good Mix picture. Mix is holding up fine here and pleases the regular fellows and most of the highbrows. Town and rural class, town of 2,500. Admission 10-25. S. H. Rich, Rich Theatre (450 seats), Montpelier, Idaho.

MILE A MINUTE ROMEO. (4,800 feet). Star, Tom Mix. A fast- action romance that our patrons liked very much. Tone good.

Friend Pedigo Corrects a Mistake

"Dear Van and 'Gang':—Got myself in a pickle over the 'Sea Hawk.'

"You know the place we sign the reports is at the bottom of list after writing several reviews on pictures: I did not mean to misrepresent the thing in any way but I put the prices (at bottom of slip) ten and twenty cents when, as a matter of fact, on that picture, I charged fifty cents for the 'Sea Hawk' but omitted to state that I did so on that picture.

"The general admission price to my show IS only ten and twenty cents. But make it plain, old man, that I did not mean that I charged only those figures for 'The Hawk (Sea Hawk).' I want to be fair. State that it was an error and caused by the report slip being signed only once.

"The same thing happened on 'The Covered Wagon.' I reported ten and twenty cents on that, not because those were the prices I charged, for they were not. I charged fifty and seventy-five for 'The Covered Wagon' and in the World, by this same error it came out I charged only ten and twenty.

"It hurt the exchanges when I did not mean to do so.

"Fix it up, please." Ned Pedigo, Pollard Theatre, Guthrie, Oklahoma.

NED PEDIGO IS A FAIR AND JUST MAN. HE HAS FRANKLY MADE MATTERS CLEAR. BOYS, PLEASE NOTE THE CORRECTED PRICES ON THESE PICTURES. THIS WILL REMOVE ANY HARDSHIP FROM THE EXCHANGES. VAN.

Audience appeal ninety per cent. Town and rural class, town of 1,028. Admission 10-25. W. C. Geer, Princess Theatre (175 seats), Vermont, Illinois.

ST. ELMO. Star, John Gilbert. A fairly good program picture, but too many church scenes in the last reel. It drew some to see it who had read the book but the majority of them came to see the "Our Gang" comedy we played with it. Tone good. Sunday, yes. Fair audience appeal. Farmers and miners, town of 600. Admission 10-25, 15-30 for specials. John Russell, Russell Theatre (250 seats), Matherville, Illinois.

SILENT COMMAND. Star, Edmund Lowe. A story of the U. S. Navy and very interesting for those who like a good melodrama. This one went over very good for us but only drew fair business. Tone good. Sunday, yes. Good audience appeal. Farmers and miners, town of 600. Admission 10-25, 15-30 for specials. John Russell, Russell Theatre (250 seats), Matherville, Illinois.

SOUTH SEA LOVE. (4,168 feet). Star, Shirley Mason. Some brothers have panned this one, but it got the business for me and patrons seemed satisfied. Of course it is only a program picture. Tone fair. Audience appeal fair. Town and rural class, town of 1,028. Admission 10-25. W. C. Geer, Princess Theatre (175 seats), Vermont, Illinois.

TEN NIGHTS IN A BARROOM. Star cast. Good. Tone good. Sunday, yes. Good audience appeal. S. H. Borisky, American Theatre, Chattanooga, Tennessee.

TROUBLE SHOOTER. (5,702 feet). Star, Tom Mix. Not as good as rest of his but will do. Admission 15-25. E. C. Bays, Globe Theatre (250 seats), Buena Vista, Virginia.

Metro-Goldwyn

ALONG CAME RUTH. (5,000 feet). Star, Viola Dana. A nice little picture with a wonderful cast, but Viola has had much better vehicles. She is a wonderful little star here, drawing second to Colleen Moore, our very best bet. But Colleen has had real stories and directing. That helps. Give them to Viola and see where she goes. Tone good. Sunday, yes. Good audience appeal. Society class, city of 10,000. Admission 10-20. Ned Pedigo, Pollard Theatre (800 seats), Guthrie, Oklahoma.

ALONG CAME RUTH. (5,000 feet). Star, Viola Dana. An excellent picture and should please one hundred per cent of the patrons. William Noble, Capitol Theatre, Oklahoma City, Oklahoma.

ARAB. (6,710 feet). Star cast. Boys, here's a picture that whether you keep the house dark or open you will be just as much ahead when this picture gets in your town. Drew enough to pay express charges, advertising and organist, and that's all. Tone fair. Sunday, no. Audience appeal fair to poor. Mixed class, town of 3,000. Admission 10-20-30. Charles Martin, Family Theatre (300 seats), Mt. Morris, New York.

BANDOLERO. (7,000 feet). Star, Renee Adoree. Here's a picture of "Dear Old Sunny Spain" with all the trimmings and a bull fight that's real. Pleased audience immensely, and that's what we want. Good Saturday picture. Admission 10-20. R. A. Preuss, Arvada Theatre, Arvada, Colorado.

BOY OF FLANDERS. (7,018 feet). Star, Jackie Coogan. While this picture has a foreign situation, it is at all times interesting. Jackie has enough chances to keep the audience thrilled and plenty of laughs. Tone good. Sunday, yes. Strong audience appeal. Working class, city of 100,000. Admission 10-15-20. W. C. Budge, Comedy Theatre (275 seats), Jamaica, New York.

BROKEN BARRIERS. (5,717 feet). Star cast. My people enjoyed this one. Tone fair. Sunday, no. Good audience appeal. Medium class, city of 16,000. Admission 10-30. S. A. Hayman, Lyda Theatre (360 seats), Grand Island, Nebraska.

DAY OF FAITH. (6,577 feet). Star cast. The picture isn't bad but it was oversold and title drew only people who didn't know what was on. It also made me lose my faith the two days I ran it. Tone okay. Sunday, yes. Fair audience appeal. Mixed class, town of 3,000. Admission 10-20-30. Charles Martin, Family Theatre (300 seats), Mt. Morris, New York.

DESIRE. (6,500 feet). Star cast. Some liked it but most of them did not. Can't say much for this picture myself. Tone good. Sunday, yes. Audience appeal not so good. Small town and rural class, town of 800. Admission 15-30. C. O. Christ, Opera House (350 seats), Elgin, Iowa.

LITTLE ROBINSON CRUSOE. (6,216 feet). Star, Jackie Coogan. This is a real picture and pleased all who saw it. Did fair business. Should have different paper. Tone good. Sunday, yes. Audience appeal one hundred per cent. All classes, town of 806. Admission 10-20. W. C. Herndon, Liberty Theatre (250 seats), Valliant, Oklahoma.

LITTLE ROBINSON CRUSOE. (6,216 feet). Star, Jackie Coogan. Jackie is great in this picture. Pleased nearly one hundred per cent on this one. Kids went wild with joy. Pleased grown-ups, too. Tone good. Suitable for Sunday. All classes of white only. Admission 10-20-30. W. H. Odom, Pastime Theatre (250 seats), Sandersville, Georgia.

NAME THE MAN. (8 reels). Star cast. Fine picture. Pleased all. Good acting by a fine cast. Played two days at advanced prices. All classes, town of 1,800. Admission 15-20, 15-25. Neal Lanigan, Colonial Theatre (450 seats), Moulton, Iowa.

REJECTED WOMAN. (7,761 feet). Star cast. We usually play Metro-Goldwyn productions two days. Sorry we could not arrange to do so with this one. Pleased all. Attendance poor on account of night after "Covered Wagon." All classes, town of 1,800. Admission 15-20, 15-25. J. Neal Lanigan, Colonial Theatre (450 seats), Moulton, Iowa.

SHERLOCK JR. (4,605 feet). Star, Buster Keaton. Good. Failed to draw for us. Tone good. Sunday, yes. Fair audience appeal. Business and farming class, town of 2,200. Admission 10-25. A. F. Jenkins, Community Theatre, David City, Nebraska.

SIX DAYS. (8,010 feet). Star, Frank Mayo. Our first Elinor Glyn, but it pleased all, and we have more to follow. I do not consider it "shocking." Audience appeal, thinking people. All classes, town of 1,800. Admission 15-20, 15-25. Neal Lanigan, Colonial Theatre (450 seats), Moulton, Iowa.

TRAILING AFRICAN WILD ANIMALS. Very good; in fact, the best of its kind we have ever played. This class of pictures usually does not satisfy your patrons. Sunday, yes. All classes, town of 1,800. Admission 15-20, 15-25. Neal Lanigan, Colonial Theatre (450 seats), Moulton, Iowa.

WHERE THE PAVEMENT ENDS. (7,706 feet). Star cast. The poorest Metro we have had in a long time. This is one of the ones you have to play once in a while. Good attendance. All classes, town of 1,800. Admission 15-20, 15-25. J. Neal Lanigan, Colonial Theatre (450 seats), Moulton, Iowa.

WHITE SISTER. (10,400 feet). Star, Lillian Gish. Spectacular drama with a sad ending that did not draw me an average Sunday crowd. Tone okay. Sunday, yes. Audience appeal questionable. Small town class, town of 1,369. Admission 10-15-20-25-25. S. G. Harsh, Princess Theatre (249 seats), Mapleton, Iowa.

BACK HOME AND BROKE. (7,814 feet). Star, Thomas Meighan. A great picture from all angles. Bought right for two nights. Pleased them all and made some money. The right kind of pictures draw any time. When we small towns can buy them right we can make money. Tone good. Sunday, yes. General audience appeal. Town and country class, town of 700. Admission 10-25, 15-35. J. B. Carter, Electric Theatre (250 seats), Browning, Missouri.

BEDROOM WINDOW. (4,550 feet). Star cast. This is a strong story, with action and suspense, and a real all-star cast that would make a much less interesting play. A good evening's entertainment. May McAvoy and the rest are finished artists, but Ethel Wales carries off the honors. William DeMille demonstrates that he is one of our best directors. Clara Beranger is the scenarist. A good box office bet. City and country class, town of 3,000. Admission 10-30. George Walther, Dixie Theatre, Kerrville, Texas.

BEDROOM WINDOW. (4,500 feet). Star, Ricardo Cortez. Just a good picture. Sunday, yes. Admission 15-25. E. C. Bays, Globe Theatre (250 seats), Buena Vista, Virginia.

BIG BROTHER. (7,080 feet). Star cast. Splendid attraction. Pleased all. Delivers a fine sermon. Tone fine. Sunday, yes. Strong audience appeal. Rural class, town of 250. San Andreas Theatre, San Andreas, California.

BORDER LEGION. (7,908 feet). Star, Antonio Moreno. One of the best Zane Grey's Paramount has ever made according to my idea and I have run them all. However, if your patrons abhor bloodshed and action lay off it as it is full of this from start to finish; even so it is worse in that respect than "To the Last Man." Tone questionable. Sunday, no. Fine audience appeal. Oil and farm class, town of 1,000. Admission 10-25. H. E. Schlichter, Liggett Theatre (600 seats), Madison, Kansas.

CALL OF THE CANYON. (6,982 feet). Star cast. One of Zane Grey's best stories. The picture pleased eighty per cent of my audience. Tone good. Sunday, yes. Fine audience appeal. Town and country class, town of 1,800. Admission 10-25. Herbert Tapp, Hippodrome Theatre (460 seats), Sheridan, Indiana.

CHILDREN OF JAZZ. (6,080 feet). Star cast. I was a little afraid of this one, but to my surprise it is a good picture in spite of what some of the boys say. Town and rural class, town of 2,500. Admission 10-25. S. H. Rich, Rich Theatre (450 seats), Montpelier, Idaho.

CITY THAT NEVER SLEEPS. (6,007 feet). Star, Louise Dresser. "The City That Never Sleeps," a James Cruze Paramount production. The same combination that produced "The Covered Wagon" and "The Yellow Sex." You can always be sure of an evening's entertainment when you see the trademark, and can bank on full box office receipts when booking "The City That Never Sleeps." William Noble, Capitol Theatre, Oklahoma City, Oklahoma.

CLARENCE. Star, Wallace Reid. This is somewhat different than Reid's usual pctures, but in our ten years this print was in the poorest condition of any we ever had. Tone good. Sunday, yes. Appeals to all classes. All classes, town of 1,800. Admission 15-20, 15-25. Neal Lanigan, Colonial Theatre (450 seats), Moulton, Iowa.

CODE OF THE SEA. (6,038 feet). Star cast. Fine sea story. Will satisfy the thrill hunters. Tone Good. Sunday, yes. Fair audience appeal. Rural class, town of 250. San Andreas Theatre, San Andreas, California.

CONFIDENCE MAN. (6,500 feet). Star, Thomas Meighan. Another good Meighan picture but is too long and not as logical as it should be. People would like it better if they let the hero take the money away from the dirty crook, and most of them are disappointed at the pepless, goody goody ending. Tone fine. Sunday, yes. Town of 3,200. Admission 10-20-30. Charles L. Hyde, Grand Theatre (500 seats), Pierre, South Dakota.

COVERED WAGON. Star cast. Great. A picture that should be seen by everybody. Had schools close for special matinee. Tone good. Sunday, yes. Strong audience appeal. Rural class, town of 250. San Andreas Theatre, San Andreas, California.

COVERED WAGON. Star cast. An excellent production that more than doubled all previous attendance records. Showed this picture to one thousand paid admissions in spite of snow and cold weather. For a thinly settled county this is a record, I claim. Tone excellent. Sunday, yes. Audience appeal very good. Country and town class, town of 455. Admission 10-25-30. A. F. Schriever, Onida Theatre (225 seats), Onida, South Dakota.

COVERED WAGON. Star cast. This is as good a picture as the name. Did good business two days. Tone good. Sunday, yes. Audience appeal one hundred per cent. All classes, town of 806. Admission 25-50. W. C. Herndon, Liberty Theatre (250 seats), Valliant, Oklahoma.

COVERED WAGON. Star cast. A great picture, already sold to your patrons. It's a great picture, being historical and educational, and with plenty of action from start to finish to please anyone. Good audience appeal. Patrons all said that it was well worth the money and time spent in seeing it. Even with a third return date, the picture went over well. William Noble, Capitol Theatre, Oklahoma City, Oklahoma.

COVERED WAGON. Star cast. I had an awful lot of luck on this picture. One reel was short through mistake, which caused us big loss, but when we did get the film complete we broke all records. Boys, it's a hummer. Town and rural class, town of 2,500. Admission 10-25. S. H. Rich, Rich Theatre (450 seats), Montpelier, Idaho.

COVERED WAGON. Star, J. Warren Kerrigan. This is a great picture and everybody knows it now. We did well in spite of bad weather every night. Believe that every exhibitor ought to play it. After the show you can look your patrons in the face, perfectly assured that they got their fifty cents' worth. Tone good. Audience appeal one hundred per cent. Agricultural class, town of 1,255. Admission 10-20. Cannon & Trescott, Orpheum Theatre (300 seats), Elsberry, Missouri.

COVERED WAGON. (6 reels). Star cast. This went over fine for us. If anyone did not like it they did not tell us about it. Put this on with an orchestra and everyone was more than pleased, but the exchange got most of the money. Tone fine. Sunday, yes. Audience appeal one hundred per cent. Farmers and miners, town of 600. Admission 10-25, 15-30 for specials. John Russell, Russell Theatre (250 seats), Matherville, Illinois.

COVERED WAGON. Star cast. Played to big business, but we made no money. Film company got it. Fine picture, but not the best ever. Tone good. Sunday, yes. Big attendance. All classes, town of 1,800. Admission 15-20, 15-25. J. Neal Lanigan, Colonial Theatre (450 seats), Moulton, Iowa.

COVERED WAGON. Star cast. Played this early in November and we've had gravy on our potatoes three times a day every day since. Tone okay. Sunday, yes. Great audience appeal. Rural and small town class, town of 400. Admission thirty cents. E. L. Partridge, Pyam Theatre (250 seats), Kinsman, Ohio.

COVERED WAGON. Star, J. Warren Kerrigan. One wonderful production, but it did not do the business it should have. I think the price helped to kill it here. I ran it on percentage and the admission was fifty cents straight. Too much for this town. Tone okay. Sunday, yes. Audience appeal one hundred per cent. Mixed class, town of 3,000. Admission 20-25. T. L. Barnett, Finn's Theatre (600 seats), Jewett City, Connecticut.

COWBOY AND THE LADY. Star, Mary Miles Minter. Not much to this one. Would not advise booking. No tone. Sunday, no. No audience appeal. Family class, city of 65,000. Admission fifteen cents. R. K. Covington, Bijou Theatre (500 seats), Fresno, California.

DANGEROUS MONEY. (6,864 feet). Star cast. Program picture. Tone good. Sunday, yes. Audience appeal: gets by. Medium class, city of 16,000. Admission 10-30. S. A. Hayman, Lyda Theatre (360 seats), Grand Island, Nebraska.

DANGEROUS MONEY. (6,864 feet). Star, Bebe Daniels. A fairly good picture that neither was given knocks nor boosts. Tone okay. Sunday, okay. Fair audience appeal. Howard Theatre, Alexandria, Minnesota.

DANGEROUS MONEY. (6,864 feet). Star, Bebe Daniels. Not up to expectations but fair picture. Pleased greater part of audience, however. Sunday, yes. Better class, city of 40,000. Admission 25-30. F. O. Slenker, Spencer Theatre (875 seats), Rock Island, Illinois.

EBB TIDE. Star cast. Another one with a lot of action. Ladies did not care for this one. However, nothing to offend. Good attendance. All classes, town of 1,800. Admission 15-20, 15-25. J. Neal Lanigan, Colonial Theatre (450 seats), Moulton, Iowa.

EBB TIDE. Star cast. Fair sea picture, with pretty island scenery. Too much drinking and drunken actions for an all-round audience picture. Tone fair. Sunday, no. Fair audience appeal. Small town class and farmers, town of 600. Admission 10-20, 10-30. H. W. Batchelder, Galt Theatre (175 seats), Galt, California.

FAIR WEEK. (5 reels). Star, Walter Heirs. A nice little picture that most people will enjoy. It is not sold as a big special nor will it stand advanced admission, but the people who come in to see it will not leave before it is over, nor will they object to a thing in it. Safe, sane and satisfactory. Town of 3,200. Admission 10-20-30. Charles L. Hyde, Grand Theatre (500 seats), Pierre, South Dakota.

FAST SET. (6,965 feet). Star, Betty Compson. Good program picture that seemed to please. Adolphe Menjou steals the acting honors. Business average. Good audience appeal. Better class, city of 40,000. Admission 25-30. F. O. Slenker, Spencer Theatre (875 seats), Rock Island, Illinois.

FAST SET. (6,965 feet). Star, Betty Compson. A very satisfactory picture. The moral tone is all right and story is entertaining, being "Spring Cleaning." Town of 3,200. Admission 10-20-30. Charles Lee Hyde, Grand Theatre, Pierre, South Dakota.

FOOTLIGHTS. (7,978 feet). Star, Elsie Ferguson. Good light story, well liked by all who saw it. Tone good. Sunday, yes. Fair audience appeal. Farmers, town of 800. Admission 10-25. Helen Drexler, Star Theatre (200 seats), Crofton, Nebraska.

HER LOVE STORY. (6,736 feet). Star, Gloria Swanson. A very good production for this star but not up to her standard set by "The Humming Bird." Full of prince and princess hokum. Tone fair. Sunday, no. Fair audience appeal. Oil and farm class, town of 1,000. Admission 10-25. H. E. Schlichter, Liggett Theatre (600 seats), Madison, Kansas.

HOLLYWOOD. (8,100 feet). Star cast. This one is interesting in spots, but take it all in all, don't think the small town audience will care for it. Some said it was the worst I ever ran. Tone good. Sunday, yes. Audience appeal perhaps thirty-five per cent. Small town class and farmers, town of 600. Admission 10-20, 10-30. H. W. Batchelder, Galt Theatre (175 seats), Galt, California.

ICEBOUND. (6,471 feet). Star cast. Very good production but is too sombre to appeal to the average amusement seeker. Goes fine with a church or women's club tie-up. Tone fine. Sunday, yes. Town of 3,200. Admission 10-20-30. Charles L. Hyde, Grand Theatre (500 seats), Pierre, South Dakota.

MANHATTAN. (6 reels). Star, Richard Dix. A good picture, with comedy and action prevailing. It pleased all in attendance. Tone good. Sunday, good. Good audience appeal. Howard Theatre, Alexandria, Minnesota.

MAN WHO FIGHTS ALONE. (6,337 feet). Star, William Farnum. Personally I think this a good picture. My patrons were divided. The title indicated a real old-time Farnum picture, but such is not the case. We have no way of knowing how this would pull as we ran it on Thanksgiving and did a good business. Tone good. Sunday, yes. Good audience appeal. Town and rural class, town of 2,500. Admission 10-25. S. H. Rich, Rich Theatre (450 seats), Montpelier, Idaho.

MARRIED FLIRTS. Star, Pauline Fredericks. This is not a sex picture, but it is a truthful story of every-day folks and their every-day lives. A magnificent production, faithfully depicting the lives of four people and "Mrs. Paramour," the best seller, which was written by that master story teller, Louis Joseph Vance. Co-stars are Mae Busch and Huntly Gordon. William Noble, Criterion Theatre, Oklahoma City, Oklahoma.

MERTON OF THE MOVIES. (7,655 feet). Star, Glenn Hunter. A fairly good picture in every way. Some might call it silly, but you can't expect to please one hundred per cent with anything nowadays. Tone okay. Sunday, yes. Audience appeal fair to good. Mixed class, town of 3,000. Admission 10-20-30. Charles Martin, Family Theatre (300 seats), Mt. Morris, New York.

MERTON OF THE MOVIES. (7,655 feet). Star, Glenn Hunter. Pleased only a small portion of the patrons. Not a bad picture, however. Glenn Hunter is not known here and never will be. If he can act, why don't he do it on the stage and keep out of the movies? Any live wire could have eaten his part up. He got nothing out of it. Viola Dana put it over, not Hunter. City of 10,000. Admission 10-20. Ned Pedigo, Pollard Theatre (800 seats), Guthrie, Oklahoma.

MONSIEUR BEAUCAIRE. (9,932 feet). Star, Rudolph Valentino. A very fine picture that will please some greatly and others will be disappointed. Lovers of the book will not care for it, but the ladies will enthuse over Valentino, as ever. It is censor-proof. Tone good. Sunday, yes. Town of 3,200. Admission 10-20-30. Charles L. Hyde, Grand Theatre (500 seats), Pierre, South Dakota.

MONSIEUR BEAUCAIRE. (9,932 feet). Star, Rudolph Valentino. Must have been a good picture, so many other reports have so said, but it was a rare puzzle for me. None of my bunch had the least idea of what it was all about. It might have been good, we don't know, but we do know we have taken it off after the first day. Tone, haven't the least idea. Possibly suitable for Sunday. No audience appeal for us. Society class city of 10,000. Admission 10-20. Ned Pedigo, Pollard Theatre (800 seats), Guthrie, Oklahoma.

MY AMERICAN WIFE. (6,061 feet). Star, Gloria Swanson. This picture is quite old but lots better than some of this new stuff. Print in good shape. Tone O. K. Sunday yes. Audience appeal 70 per cent. Town and rural class town of 800. Admission 15-30. C. O. Christ, Opera House (350 seats), Elgin, Iowa.

NORTH OF 36. (7,908 feet). Star cast. Very good but not equal to the "Covered Wagon." City of 10,000. H. V. Smoots, Vine Theatre (600 seats), Mt. Vernon, Ohio.

NORTH OF 36. (7,908 feet). Star, Jack Holt. Without question as great as "The Covered Wagon" in every respect. The work of Ernest Torrence is even better than any preceding role which he has portrayed. The entire cast is superb including Jack Holt, Noah Beery, and Lois Wilson. The direction on the part of Irving S. Willat is equal to that of Cruze in "Covered Wagon." Every exhibitor who played "The Wagon" to a success should have even better success with "North of 36." This picture is worthy of a rise in admission. Tone, okay. Sunday, yes. Audience appeal, one hundred percent, excellent. Suburban class town of 2,000. Admission 10-30. H. Warren Rible, Mayfield Theatre (210 seats), Mayfield, California.

NORTH OF 36. (7,908 feet). Star, Lois Wilson. Blazing a trail of thrills, building the romantic history of Oklahoma and Texas. Here they come forty-five hundred cows, if ye don't mind calling 'em that, sixteen more or less human cow hands, nineteen kinds of rifles and six-shooters, a hundred and fifteen saddle ponies and the only red headed boss in Texas, which was a girl, and they are going to Abilene. And they are all north of 36. It is with this desperate adventure that "North of 36" deals. And through this great panorama one sees the group of ragged sinewy men, the glorious girl at their head, the oxcarts and sea of long horn cattle, accomplishing one of the greatest deeds of pioneer bravery and daring. Jack Holt and Noah Beery are in the cast. This picture is the biggest kind of a box office attraction and coin-of-the-realm getter, and exhibitors booking this truly great picture will make no mistake in doing so. Take our word for it. William Noble, Criterion Theatre, Oklahoma City, Oklahoma.

PIED PIPER MALONE. (7,264 feet). Star, Thomas Meighan. Nothing to rave over but as there are a lot of Meighan fans here I had a better crowd than usual and that is what we are after. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Fair audience appeal. Small town class and farmers town of 600. Admission 10-20, 10-30. H. W. Batchelder, Galt Theatre (175 seats), Galt, California.

SAINTED DEVIL. (8,633 feet). Star, Rudolph Valentino. Big business first day. No business balance of engagement. City of 10,000. H. V. Smoots, Vine Theatre (600 seats), Mt. Vernon, Ohio.

SAINTED DEVIL. (8,633 feet). Star, Rudolph Valentino. A South American story with Valentino doing Swanson clothes horse part. He gets rough in a part of it but never spoils his appearance. The story could be better, the acting is excellent and it drew big business at increased admissions with few kicks. General class city of 15,000. Ben L. Morris, Temple and Elk Grand Theatres, Bellaire, Ohio.

SHADOWS OF PARIS. (6,549 feet). Star, Pola Negri. A very good picture which played to a very poor house. For some unknown reason Pola is rather a poor bet for us these days. Personally, I think she is a fine actress. Tone, okay. Sunday, yes. Good audience appeal. Mixed class town of 3,000. Admission 20-25. T. L. Barnett, Finn's Theatre (600 seats), Jewett City, Connecticut.

SIDE SHOW OF LIFE. (6,511 feet). Star, Ernest Torrence. Fair picture, but didn't draw. Poor attendance. Torrence is a wonderful actor but a very poor clown. Pleased fifty per cent. Sunday, no. Frank H. Wotton, Park Theatre (600 seats), Lebanon, New Hampshire.

SIDE SHOW OF LIFE. (7,511 feet). Star, Ernest Torrence. Picture pleased majority. Thought it was a little long and drawn out. Tone good. Sunday, yes. Mixed class, town of 1,800. Admission twenty-five cents. Fred S. Widenor, Opera House Theatre (492 seats), Belvidere, New Jersey.

SIXTY CENTS AN HOUR. (5,632 feet). Star, Walter Hiers. Good reports from my patrons on this one. Pleased majority. Poor business. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Fair audience appeal. General class town of 1,300. Admission 10-25. L. G. Tewksbury, Tewks Theatre (250 seats), Stonington, Maine.

TO HAVE AND TO HOLD. (8 reels). Star, Betty Compson. Old but good. Did not do much on this one. Tone okay. Sunday, yes. Audience appeal fair. Mixed class, town of 2,714. Admission 10-25-40. L. S. Goolsby, Rex Theatre (460 seats), Brinkley, Arkansas.

TRIUMPH. (8,297 feet). Star, Leatrice Joy. I, like the rest, can't say too much for this, although it pleased fairly well, but it isn't nearly up to Cecil B. DeMille's previous productions. Tone okay. Sunday, yes. Audience appeal fair. Town and country class, town of 1,200. Admission 10-25. C. R. Seff, New Radio Theatre (240 seats), Correctionville, Iowa.

TRIUMPH. (8,297 feet). Star, Leatrice Joy. Wonderful cast with an impossible story. Not a special in any sense. DeMille sure is slipping if this is a typical DeMille. Tone, okay. Sunday, yes. Audience appeal, seventy-five per cent. Small town class town of 1,369. Admission 10-20-25-30-35. S. G. Harsh, Princess Theatre (249 seats), Mapleton, Iowa.

WANDERER OF THE WASTELAND. (6,700 feet). Star, Jack Holt. Good picture in colors. My print was damaged but the picture pleased. Was well acted. Would have been better had the clothes of the women been of modern times. Don't like the bustles and ruffles. Best class city of 10,000. Admission 10-20. Ned Pedigo, Pollard Theatre, Guthrie, Oklahoma.

CHRONICLES OF AMERICA. (Pathe). Dandy educational as well as entertaining. Put on by our high school. Try them. Farmers, town of 800. Admission 10-25. Helen Drexler, Star Theatre (200 seats), Crofton, Nebraska.

DR. JACK. (4,700 feet). Star, Harold Lloyd. Great entertainment. Tone good. Sunday, yes. Audience appeal one hundred per cent. Town and rural class, town of 1,028 Admission 10-25 W. C. Geer, Princess Theatre (175 seats), Vermont, Illinois.

KING OF WILD HORSES. (5 reels). Star, Rex. This is one of the best pictures for small town you can buy. Everybody pleased, including box office, and you can buy it right. Tone fine. Sunday, yes. Good audience appeal. Farming class, town of 360. Admission 10-25. E. L. Delano, Electric Theatre (225 seats), Agra, Kansas.

SAFETY LAST. (6,400 feet). Star, Harold Lloyd. A thriller that got the business and gave satisfaction. Tone good. Sunday, yes. Audience appeal ninety-five per cent. Town and rural class, town of 1,028. Admission 10-25. W. C. Geer, Princess Theatre (175 seats), Vermont, Illinois.

VINCENNES. (Pathe Chronicle Series). I am sorry to say I can't speak very highly of this picture as there is not much to it except some posing before the camera and a few long fadeouts and fadeins. Heaven help the fellow who depends on these for a feature. Tone good. Sunday, yes. Very poor audience appeal. Family and student class, city of 80,000. Admission 10-20. George W. Pettingill, Jr., Mirror Lake Theatre (1,000 seats), St. Petersburg, Florida.

FRANCES HOWARD

Who is playing the leading role opposite Richard Dix in "Too Many Kisses," a Paramount Picture, has her snow shoes even if there is no snow, except the artificial kind that is found around the Paramount Long Island Studio.

WHY WORRY? (6 reels). Star, Harold Lloyd. Audience very enthusiastic, but some said "Dr. Jack" was better. Tone good. Sunday, yes. Audience appeal ninety-six per cent. Town and rural class, town of 1,028. Admission 10-25. W. C. Geer, Princess Theatre (175 seats), Vermont, Illinois.

Preferred

BREATH OF SCANDAL. (6,940 feet). Star cast. A brilliantly staged society drama that will prove attractive where this class of pictures are popular as they are in our Grand. It did well at the box office and pleased nearly all. Tone okay. Sunday, yes. Good audience appeal. Better class, city of 14,000. Admission 10-35. E. W. Collins, Grand Theatre (700 seats), Jonesboro, Arkansas.

Producers' Dist. Corp.

ANOTHER SCANDAL. (8 reels). Star cast. Everybody pleased. Good picture. W. L. Muhlenbeck, Majestic Theatre, West Frankfort, Illinois.

HOOSIER SCHOOLMASTER. (5,536 feet). Star cast. A western classic dating back to the early days of the midwest. Has plenty of action as well as some tense moments during the court room scene; also has plenty of comedy to relieve some of the heavy moments. Tone, good. Good audience appeal. General class town of 1,200. Admission 15-25. E. N. Prescott, Prescott Circuit Theatre (250-700 seats), Union, Maine.

LIGHTNING RIDER. (6 reels). Star, Harry Carey. It will hold an audience mystified to the end. It is full of action. It has some tense situations. A very strong climax. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Good audience appeal. Working class city of 100,000. Admission 10-15-20. W. C. Budge, Comedy Theatre (275 seats), Jamaica, New York.

LOVE'S WHIRLPOOL. (6,028 feet). Star, James Kirkwood. This is one picture they raved about. I did not see it myself, so therefore cannot pass an opinion. Audience appeal, eighty per cent. All classes in big city. Admission ten cents. Stephen G. Brenner, Eagle Theatre (298 seats), Baltimore, Maryland.

MIAMI. (6,317 feet). Star cast. Very good picture, full of action. W. L. Muhlenbeck, Majestic Theatre, West Frankfort, Illinois.

NIGHT HAWK. (5,115 feet). Star cast. Real box office picture. Pleased one hundred per cent. Don't miss the new Harry Carey's. Hy Barnes, Lyric Theatre, Coulterville, Illinois.

ROARING RAILS. (5,753 feet). Star, Harry Carey. This fourth Carey for Producers is a genuine thriller. The more he makes for this company the better they get. R. M. Kennedy, Capitol Theatre, Birmingham, Alabama.

ROARING RAILS. (5,753 feet). Star, Harry Carey. Very good. Drew well Saturday business. George E. Scott, Palace Theatre, Trinidad, Colorado.

WANDERING HUSBANDS. (6 reels). Star cast. This is a picture that should please any audience, that will take society drama at all. It went over big in all our houses. Thomas E. Orr, Marshall County Enterprises, Inc., Albertville, Alabama.

WANDERING HUSBANDS. (6 reels). Star cast. Very good picture. Sunday, yes. Print and tone, okay. Kleeman and Roben, K-R Theatre, Ashton, Iowa.

WHAT SHALL I DO? Star cast. Excellent picture. Get behind it and boost it big. M. Slotkin, Olympic Theatre, Erie, Pennsylvania.

YOUTHFUL CHEATERS. (5,700 feet). Star, Glen Hunter. Could not see anything in this one. Film very dark except in spots. Would not advise for small town shows. Tone, fair. Sunday, no. No audience appeal. Small town and farmer class town of 600. Admission 10-20, 10-30. H. W. Batchelder, Galt Theatre (175 seats), Galt, California.

MARK OF ZORO. Star, Douglas Fairbanks. New print. Fine entertainment. Tone good. Sunday, yes. Audience appeal ninety-eight per cent. Town and rural class, town of 1,028. Admission 10-25. W. C. Geer, Princess Theatre (175 seats), Vermont, Illinois.

ORPHANS OF THE STORM. (12,400 feet). Star, Lillian Gish. We put this on with an orchestra and charged extra admission for it but it did not draw as well as we expected. Some people told us it was the best picture we had ever shown and others did not like it at all; but it is a wonderful picture and should please the majority. Tone fine. Sunday, yes. Good audience appeal. Farmers and miners, town of 600. Admission 10-25, 15-30 for specials. John Russell, Russell Theatre (250 seats), Matherville, Illinois.

SHRIEK OF ARABY. Star, Ben Turpin. A five-reel comedy that would be better in two reels. It got by for us but that was all. Pleased the kids and some of the boys. Tone good. Sunday, yes. Fair audience appeal. Farmers and miners, town of 600. Admission 10-25, 15-30 for specials. John Russell, Russell Theatre (250 seats), Matherville, Illinois.

Universal

BROADWAY OR BUST. (5,272 feet). Star, Hoot Gibson. Gibson's pictures all do well for me but this one was exceptional. Did extra business and everyone went out smiling. Tone okay. Sunday, yes. Fine audience appeal. Farming class, town of 360. Admission 10-25. E. L. Delano, Electric Theatre (225 seats), Agra, Kansas.

FAST WORKER. (6,500 feet). Star, Reginald Denny. One hundred per cent entertainment. Patrons happy and smiling, but that is nothing unusual for Denny and Laura. This is as good and perhaps better than "Sporting Youth" and "Reckless Age." Frank Vesley, National Theatre, Stockton, California.

FAST WORKER. (6,500 feet). Star, Laura LaPlante. Denny is the ace of hearts. The man girls don't forget. The reason they leave home. A lesson in speed for bashful lovers. Don't miss this one. Book it and make money. William Noble, Liberty Theatre, Oklahoma City, Oklahoma.

FLIRT. (8 reels). Star cast. An old one but will always be a good entertainment. Drew well and satisfied the audience. Tone good. Sunday, yes. Good audience appeal. Town and rural class, town of 1,028. Admission 10-25. W. C. Geer, Princess Theatre (175 seats), Vermont, Illinois.

HIS MYSTERY GIRL. (4,487 feet). Star, Herbert Rawlinson. A good program picture that will please as this has quite a lot of comedy and action in it. Tone, fair. Sunday, no. Good audience appeal. Country and town class. Admission 10-20. W. F. Denny, Electric Theatre (250 seats), Lowry City, Missouri.

HIT AND RUN. (5,508 feet). Star, Hoot Gibson. One hundred per cent. better than "Broadway or Bust," or "Forty Horse Hawkins." A real show. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Audience appeal, eighty-five per cent. R. M. Kennedy, Capitol Theatre, Birmingham, Alabama.

HOOK AND LADDER. (6 reels). Star, Hoot Gibson. Another fire picture that went over well, but some said they would prefer Hoot in western roles. Tone okay. Sunday, yes. Audience appeal eighty-five per cent. Town and rural class, town of 1,028. Admission 10-25. W. C. Geer, Princess Theatre (175 seats), Vermont, Illinois.

HOOK AND LADDER. (6 reels). Star, Hoot Gibson. Good lively melodrama that disappoints the star's friends who expect to see him in westerns. Tone, okay. Sunday, yes. Good audience appeal. All classes city of 14,000. Admission 10-35, 10-25. E. W. Collins, Grand and Liberty Theatres (500-700 seats), Jonesboro, Arkansas.

JACK OF CLUBS. (4,717 feet). Star, Herbert Rawlinson. A No. 1 picture. Very very good. Admission 15-25. E. E. Bays, Globe Theatre (250 seats), Buena Vista, Virginia.

LADY OF QUALITY. (8,640 feet). Star, Virginia Valli. Nothing to it. Costume picture with no story. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. No audience appeal. All classes town of 6,000. Admission 10-25. R. L. Cochran, Judia Theatre (402 seats), Cisco, Texas.

LOVE AND GLORY. Star, Madge Bellamy. A drama for the entire family and also the entire human race. The cast includes Charles DeRoche, Wallace McDonald, Ford Sterling and Gibson Cowling. William Noble, Liberty Theatre, Oklahoma City, Oklahoma.

SPORTING YOUTH. (6,712 feet). Star, Reginald Denny. A dandy production, with Denny at his best. We played this only one day to very good house. Patrons said "great." Tone good. Sunday, yes. Strong audience appeal. Town and rural class, town of 1,028. Admission 10-25. W. C. Geer, Princess Theatre (175 seats), Vermont, Illinois.

THRILL CHASER. (5,196 feet). Star, Hoot Gibson. Not the type of picture my people like Hoot best in, but nevertheless they came out strong to see it. Tone okay. Sunday, yes. Fair audience appeal. Town and rural class, town of 1,028. Admission 10-25. W. C. Geer, Princess Theatre (175 seats), Vermont, Illinois.

BELLE BENNETT
One of the Ince stars in First National's "Playing With Souls."

THUNDERING DAWN. (6,600 feet). Star, J. Warren Kerrigan. Here is a jewel that we think should be sold as a program picture. Story weak. Has drawing power and we made a good profit but it did not satisfy our patrons. Tone ordinary. Sunday, no. Audience appeal very poor. Town and rural class, town of 1,028. Admission 10-25. W. C. Geer, Princess Theatre (175 seats), Vermont, Illinois.

TIMES HAVE CHANGED. (5,082 feet). Star, William Russell. A peppy comedy drama that gave very good satisfaction. Tone okay. Good audience appeal. Town and rural class, town of 1,028. Admission 10-25. W. C. Geer, Princess Theatre (175 seats), Vermont, Illinois.

WHERE IS THIS WEST? (4,532 feet). Star, Jack Hoxie. A fair western picture that did not draw for us. Hoxie unknown here. Tone okay. Audience appeal eighty-five per cent. Town and rural class, town of 1,028. Admission 10-25. W. C. Geer, Princess Theatre (175 seats), Vermont, Illinois.

WILD PARTY. (5,034 feet). Star, Gladys Walton. This is a good drama. Everyone pleased that saw it. Tone good. Sunday, yes. Audience appeal ninety per cent. All classes, town of 806. Admission 10-20. W. C. Herndon, Liberty Theatre (250 seats), Valliant, Oklahoma.

Vitagraph

BETWEEN FRIENDS. (6,900 feet). Star, Lou Tellegen. A very interesting problem picture that has players in it who know how to put over their parts. The theme may be classed as a sex one but it in no way offends and everything that is done is logical. General class city of 15,000. Ben. L. Morris, Temple and Elk Grand Theatres, Bellaire, Ohio.

CAPTAIN BLOOD. (10,680 feet). Star, J. Warren Kerrigan. Wonderful picture but failed to draw. Had to advance prices on account of high rental. Wouldn't pay too much. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Audience appeal, good. All classes town of 6,000. Admission 10-25. R. L. Cochran, Judia Theatre (402 seats), Cisco, Texas.

CODE OF THE WILDERNESS. (7,000 feet). Star cast. This one is bunk. Lay off. Did not draw for me. Pleased about forty per cent of those who saw it. Too much killing. Print good when shown here. Tone, fair. Sunday, no. Fair attendance. Admission 10-20. R. P. Higginbotham, Pastime Theatre, Leeds, Alabama.

LEAVENWORTH CASE. (5,400 feet). Star cast. Nothing big but still good. Better than program for me. Tone, okay. Sunday, yes. Good audience appeal. Small town class town of 1,474. Admission 10-25. T. W. Cannon, Majestic Theatre (315 seats), Greenfield, Tennessee.

LOVE BANDIT. (6 reels). Star, Cullen Landis. A very fair Wood's production but don't pay too much. No tone. Not suitable for Sunday. Fair audience appeal. Family class city of 65,000. Admission fifteen cents. R. K. Covington, Bijou Theatre (500 seats), Fresno, California.

MASTERS OF MEN. (6,800 feet). Star, Cullen Landis. Too bad the title is misleading and the picture hard to exploit. However, this ranks among the very best pictures of the day. An excellent Fourth of July or Memorial Day program. Tone, very good. Sunday, yes. Audience appeal, not so good. Country and town class town of 455. Admission 10-25-30. A. F. Schriever, Onida Theatre (225 seats), Onida, South Dakota.

ON THE BANKS OF THE WABASH. (7,156 feet). Star cast. Gave general satisfaction. Call it a good picture. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Good audience appeal. All classes city of 14,000. Admisison 10-35, 10-25. E. W. Collins, Grand and Liberty Theatres (500-700 seats), Jonesboro, Arkansas.

ON THE BANKS OF THE WABASH. (7,156 feet). Star cast. Another very good picture and one that will please nearly one hundred per cent. You can buy it right, and every exhibitor owes it to his patrons to run this very fine picture. Tone, excellent. Sunday, yes. Audience appeal, very good. Country and rural class town of 455. Admission 10-25-30. A. F. Schriever, Onida Theatre (225 seats), Onida, South Dakota.

ON THE BANKS OF THE WABASH (7,156 feet). Star cast. Heart interest picture of everyday small town people with some real players. Good audience appeal. Small town class town of 1,474. Admission 10-25. T. W. Cannon, Majestic Theatre (315 seats), Greenfield, Tennessee.

CONDUCTOR 1492. (6,500 feet). Star, Johnny Hines. This picture is the cat's meow. Pleased one hundred per cent. Makes a good program for Saturdays. Mixed class, city of 10,000. Admission 10-30. N. Russell, Russell Theatre (500 seats), Barnesboro, Pennsylvania.

DADDIES. (6,800 feet). Star cast. Absolutely a fine picture, with only slight box office value, but, man, how it does please them. It is simply a good picture. Tone fine. Sunday, yes. Audience appeal very high. Better class, city of 14,000. Admission 10-35. E. W. Collins, Grand Theatre (700 seats), Jonesboro, Arkansas.

HOW TO EDUCATE A WIFE. (6 reels). Star, Marie Prevost. Very good production. Should make good anywhere. Patrons very well pleased. Plenty of good comedy situations. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Good audience appeal. Farmers and merchants town of 1,650. Mrs. J. B. Travelle, Elite Theatre, Placerville, California.

THREE WOMEN. (8,000 feet). Star cast. Very good picture. Acting and everything good but flopped at box office. Tone, fair. Sunday, no. Farmers and business class town of 2,200. Admission 10-25. A. F. Jenkins, Commuuity Theatre, David City, Nebraska.

Comedies

EDUCATIONAL COMEDIES. I think that these comedies as a group, are as good as any group on the market today. The Vernons, Conleys, Hamiltons and Neal Burns, are all fine. Mixed class town of 3,000. Admission 20-25. T. L. Barnett, Finn's Theatre (600 seats), Jewett City, Conn.

FIRE FIGHTERS. (Pathe). "Our Gang." One of the old "Our Gang" comedies not nearly as good as the latest ones and the print I got was a disgrace to the country. I spent an hour and fifteen minutes inspecting and repairing it. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Fair audience appeal. Family and student class city of 80,000. Admission 10-20. George W. Pettingill Jr., Mirror Lake Theatre (1,000 seats), St. Petersburg, Florida.

EVERY MAN FOR HIMSELF. (Pathe). "Our Gang." Always good. Pleased them all. Business and farming class town of 2,200. Admission 10-25. A. F. Jenkins, Community Theatre, David City, Nebraska.

FLICKERING YOUTH. (Pathe). Star, Harry Langdon. This brought the laughs pretty well. A few elaborate, Mack Sennett slapstick stunts are employed, but Langdon's mug and posture are chiefly relied upon. Tone, okay. Sunday, okay. Audience appeal, okay. Rural and small town class town of 400. Admission thirty cents. E. L. Partridge, Pyam Theatre (250 seats), Kinsman, Ohio.

INBAD THE SAILOR. (Sennett). A very good comedy. All laughs and no dull moments like some two reel comedies have. The laugh starts at the beginning of first reel and ends at the last of the second reel. Sunday, yes. Audience appeal, one hundred per cent. Factory class town of 2,800. Admission 15-25. D. W. JACK FROST. (Pathe). Star, Snub Pollard. They meant well, when they made this one, but it did not go over very good, only a few laughs. Sunday, yes. Factory class town of 2,800. Admission 15-25. D. W. Strayer, Mt. Joy Theatre (250 seats), Mt. Joy, Pennsylvania.

JUST PASSIN' THRU. (Pathe). Star, Will Rogers. I felt like "passin' out" the back door very quietly when I saw this one. These Rogers pictures may be comedy for some folks but they are tragedy for me. I am going to cut them out forever as soon as my present contract expires. George W. Pettingill, Jr., Mirror Lake Theatre (1,000 seats), St. Petersburg, Florida.

NIP AND TUCK. (Pathe). A good comic. Lots of laughs, will help bolster up a fair show. Sunday, yes. Factory class town of 2,800. Admission 15-25. D. W. Strayer, Mt. Joy Theatre (250 seats), Mt. Joy, Pennsylvania.

ONE TERRIBLE DAY. (Pathe). "Our Gang." One of the first Gang comedies. While it is not as good as some of the new ones it is a good comedy and sure pulled the laughs. This is a 1922 release but I got a print that was in good condition. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Fine audience appeal. Family and student class city of 80,000. Admission 10-20. George W. Pettingill Jr., Mirror Lake Theatre (1,000 seats), St. Petersburg, Florida.

WET AND WEARY. (Fox). Star, Clyde Cook. Very good slap stick. Cook can't claim all the honor, however, as considerable of the strength of the comedy is due to mechanical stunts such as we have come to expect from Semon, Keaton, etc. Tone, okay. Sunday, yes. Audience appeal, slapstick. Rural and small town class town of 400. Admission thirty cents. E. L. Partridge, Pyam Theatre (250 seats), Kinsman, Ohio.

Serials

IRON MAN. NO. 15. (Universal). A lot of studio stuff. If you are going to buy this serial series better look at entire fifteen episodes. Thank the Lord, I am through with it. Sunday, no. Audience appeal, thirty per cent. All classes in big city. Admission ten cents. Stephen G. Brenner, Eagle Theatre (298 seats), Baltimore, Maryland.

Short Subjects

FIGHTING BLOOD. (F. B. O.) Fine shorts. Makes them all laugh and yell. Tone, good. Sunday, no. Fine audience appeal. Farmers town of 800. Admission 10-25. Helen Drexler, Star Theatre (200 seats), Crofton, Nebraska.

FIGHTING BLOOD. (F. B. O.) Star, George O'Hara. These "Fighting Blood" pictures are the medicine for dull nights. Book them on your dullest nights. Sunday, no. Mixed class of 10,000. Admission 10-30. P. Russell, Russell Theatre (500 seats), Barnesboro, Pennsylvania.

FROGLAND. (Fox). They soaked me an awful price for this piece of cheese. If they want to sell it to you offer them the butt of your best cigar. Print punk. Sunday, no. No audience appeal. All classes in big city. Admission ten cents. Stephen G. Brenner, Eagle Theatre (298 seats), Baltimore, Maryland.

GO GETTERS NO. 1. (F. B. O.) This is my first of this series and it is very good and if the balance of this series are as good I am due for some real mony. Stars can't be beat for comedy. Sunday, yes. Audience appeal, ninety per cent. All classes in big city. Admission ten cents. Stephen G. Brenner, Eagle Theatre (298 seats), Baltimore, Maryland.

RECRUITING FILM. (United States Film). We ran two reels of film government stuff, in interest of Navy for recruiting officers. ROWLAND AND CLARK PERSONALLY ENDORSE CHALK MARKS

That panel in front of the box office at the State Theatre, Pittsburgh, is a signed statement as to the value of Chalk Marks. This is an unusual tribute to a play for Rowland and Clark seldom given personal endorsement.

Made a Setting

A miniature of the Mayflower was the closest James S. Helsdon could come to the galleons of The Sea Hawk, but he made that do when he exploited the picture at the Arcade Theatre, Ann Arbor.

He set the model inside a gilt frame, with cloth backing and waves, two shades of blue being used to suggest sky and water. This was lighted from behind and entirely masked in with heavy drapes in a store window.

Flapper Fashions

A sort of flapper fashion show was staged at the Pavilion Theatre, Cardiff, when The Perfect Flapper came to that Welsh house. It was offered in the form of a skit in which the perfect flapper and a more or less masculine trailer were shown awaiting the coming of a party.

Eight other girls formed the remainder of the cast, each wearing a gown supplied from the stock of a local merchant, who also contributed £25 to the cost of the production in return for the advertising he received.

Backed by such minor stunts as the distribution of 60,000 throwaways, Colleen Moore did considerable business in Wales.

Statistical

If all of the life savers given out to advertise Buster Keaton in The Navigator were placed end to end, they would completely encircle the globe and have enough left over to reach from St. Paul to Minneapolis.

Returns Free

Because W. H. Youngblood, assistant manager of the Majestic Theatre, Johnson City, Tenn., stood well with the townfolks, he got a special wire for the election returns, and it did not cost the theatre a penny. It pays to be friendly.

Here's a Niftie

Credit D. Roscoe Faunce, of the Strand Theatre, Birmingham, Ala., for a better than usual stunt. He made up an open book cut-out and on this he neatly lettered the synopsis of Her Love Story. This was good, but it was just the starter. He illustrated the story with the stills—ten of them, and got something that suggested class in every inch. The book stands about five feet high which gives plenty or room for the story.

The Real Thing

Most theatres have used cutout semaphores for The Signal Tower, but in Lynn, Mass., Roy Frazer, aided by Phil Kahn, Universal exploiteer, got the loan of an actual railroad semaphore and set it up in the town square, with a locomotive bell to get additional attention to the fact that the play was showing at the Strand.

Indian Chiefs Help Tell of North of 36

Putting over North of 36 at McVickers Theatre, Chicago, Ed Olmstead loafed like the busy little bee.

The best bet was importing a number of Indians to work in a prologue: four chiefs, two squaws and a papoose. The visitors all wore their regalia and went down to the theatre three or four times a day "for rehearsal," stopping traffic every trip. They visited a different restaurant each meal time and were "guests" at various stores. They also visited the radio show and broadcasted a war dance. Olmstead and Russell Moore, Paramounteers, spelled each other with the Indians and kept the Braves on the jump. When the picture opened they took part in a prologue, which was the ostensible reason for their presence and removed them from the taint of the ballyhoo.

Olmstead also arranged with the Evening American for a number of stunts, including a Thanksgiving showing to the 2,000 inmates of the Cook County Infirmary. The paper broadcasted the music for the production and the showing of the film at the institution was synchronized with that at McVickers, giving the full musical program with no cost for an orchestra. Arrangements were made with the morning edition, the Herald and Examiner, for a newsboys' treat, and that got a lot more talk, while there was a heavy play-up in the store windows for the photoplay edition of the book.

As a result of all this publicity, North of 36 was given the support so fine a picture deserved in spite of the fact that Chicago has been overfed with frontier pictures lately.

Big Cities Helped

Using only straight lithos and newspaper advertising, the Dreamland Theatre, Lorrain, Ohio, put over The Sea Hawk to the largest business in its history.

No special advertising was required, for the Hawk was running in Cleveland the same week and the Cleveland newspapers did most of the selling for Lorrain.

Marion, Sandusky, Findlay, Fostoria and other northern Ohio towns all ran on the advertising done in Cleveland and Toledo.

TWO IDEAS FROM THE NATIONAL THEATRE, AKRON

One is the repetition of the large cutout in a smaller size over the banner. The other is the clock face with a card stating that "The voice of Big Ben is the voice of Thundering Dawn."

Marines Once More Rally for Torment

There were only a few members of the Recruiting Service of the U. S. Marines in Nashville, Tenn., but they were willing to do all they could to help put over Torment, at the Strand Theatre, because the Marines figure prominently in the big scenes. They donated their A boards for a 50-50 split.

Then W. R. Arnold, a First National exploiteer, scouted around and through Col. George H. Morgan, of the R. O. T. C., arranged for the boys' band of the Hume-Fogg high school. With a lot of small boys carrying banners and one sheets and innumerable other small boys who just went along to march to the music, they engineered a very respectable parade.

Arnold also arranged a souvenir matinee at which the gifts were donated by local merchants, balloons, rulers, matches, chewing gum and other trifles, and most of the donors threw in a window display to advertise the picture and the matinee.

The marquise display was a cutout from the 24-sheet with red tissue and flashers to make the volcano erupt.

A First National Release

THERE WERE NOT MANY MARINES BUT PLENTY OF BAND

The band belongs to a high school in Nashville, Tenn., and volunteered through Col. Morgan, of the R. C. T. C., to help the Marines tell about Torment at the Strand Theatre and Marines the world over. Small boys augmented the turnout into a real parade.

Cloth Signs

It cost George Brown $11 to have printed up banners for autos to advertise The Border Legion, but he shot the receipts away up. There was to be a four day automobile meet in Charlotte, N. C., and he printed his signs "Take this car to speedway. Then see Zane Grey's The Border Legion, Imperial, Thursday."

He might have saved money by putting the signs on cards, but he used cloth and they lasted all four days. He figured that in the hustle the card signs might be torn off.

They were supplied all public vehicles.

Worked Two Ways

Raymond B. Jones, of the Old Mill Theatre, Dallas, Texas, not only arranged for 25,000 heralds on Bread to be put into the Saturday baking of a large concern, but they gave him 15,000 miniature loaves to be handed to patrons during the run.

Girls Are Best

Out in Des Moines they are using girls to pass heralds at the football games because Charles Simpson, the Metro-Goldwyn exploiteer, has been experimenting and finds that people are far more apt to read a herald handed out by a girl than by a man.

He used girls for Little Robinson Crusoe with a kid matinee the Saturday before the picture formally opened. Four cops were required to handle the crowd of youngsters.

An old clothes matinee was worked the other end of the week, so most of the kids saw the picture at least twice. The clothing was distributed locally.

Shipped a Lobby

For the run of The Sea Hawk the Orpheum Theatre, Allentown, Pa., transformed the lobby into the suggestion of the deck of a ship, with the box office transformed into a cabin.

If you have seen Pinafore you can get an idea as to how this was staged.

HOW SCARAMOUCHE TRAVELS ON THE SMALL TIME

They did not have any French rigs in Kirksville, Mo., so they sent him around town in the best they could get, and it made as much of a stir as the Princess Theatre could ask for. It had the same relative value.

A Two-piece Stunt for K, the Unknown

Two-piece advertisements are useful only where both come into the same hands, but out in Kansas City Bob Gary, Universal exploiteer, made certain that his first shot would create a demand for the second.

He planned the distribution of a four page newspaper-style herald, and a couple of days before these were put out he issued a circular signed by "K, the Unknown," and asking if Kansas City wanted a scandalmonging yellow sheet. He added that such a one was announced for first publication of Saturday and hinted that it might be a K. K. K. organ.

The result was that when his Liberty News came out with a screamer headline, "Wanted for Murder," the issue was snapped up, especially as it was offered without cost.

As luck would have it the Fall Clinical Conference was to sit the week of the showing, so Gary won medical interest by printing in the sheet the program of the conference.

The circular greatly increased the value of the herald, since it had people already sold on the idea of looking for it. We think, however, that the signature was a tactical error. K already had been widely advertised, and the use of this signature suggested a stinger where some other form would have made for even greater interest in the new issue.

A Record

The largest single distribution of an advertising accessory was made in New York recently when half a million—more or less—Buster Keaton hats were folded into copies of the New York Mirror during the run of The Navigator at the Loew Theatres.

A NEW STYLE OF LOG CABIN FOR THE SPOILERS

This was built by the Marion Theatre, Marion, Ind., and appears to have been made from slabs. Overhead a cutaway 24-sheet supplements the appeal. Most of the cabins merely fill in the opening. This has a roof.

Two Capital Ideas from Tod Browning

Here are the newest from Tod Browning, of the Olympia Theatre, New Haven, Conn.

The first is the printing of a cross word puzzle on his weekly program. He puts the puzzle on the front cover and the key inside, and you have to read around the key as you consult it. Cross words have been used in many forms since they became a craze, but we believe that Mr. Browning is the first to make them a permanent feature of his program. Ten tickets are offered for the best solutions. Apparently he also uses them for a regular throwaway. This is a single sheet, and he writes that the trade advertisements on the back more than pay the cost of the printing and the small sum charged by the syndicate supplying the puzzle mat. This is even more practical than the use of the puzzle in the regular house organ. He gets sixteen ads and still has room for his own announcement on the back, with more room on the front.

The other idea is in connection with the numbered coupon in the regular house organ. The number is increased each week and any five consecutive numbers are good for a free admission.

That part of it is old stuff. The kicker is that Tod uses a coupon about the same style as his trade ads, and you have to look over the ads until you hit the coupon. Merchants feel that this gives their announcements a better chance of being read, and so they are more willing to advertise.

Dogging It

After he slammed a wrecked Ford car up against the front of his Mission Theatre late at night, L. D. Bowden, of Abilene, Texas, telephoned the newspaper that a car had been wrecked.

A reporter was hustled around and was terribly interested until he happened to notice that the next day's show was The Reckless Age.

Rebuses

The rebus is the latest life saver for the co-operative page. Bill Mendelssohn, Paramounteer, did it for the Valentino Theatre, Canton. Most everything else has been used, so Bill picked on this to be different.

The play was The Forbidden Paradise, and the pictures were a golfer yelling "fore," an auctioneer asking for a bid, a college student in his den, a pear, a teacher pointing to an "A" on the blackboard and a pair of African gold balls. Fore-bid-den-Pear-A-dice. Deep stuff. Anyhow it landed the page and an offer of $5 in gold and fifty doubles landed the contestants while the pleased Daily News handed out a lot of extra space free. To make it interesting, the pictures were not in proper order.

Two Examples of Hook-up Styles

A tie-up used to be a stunt intimately connecting a play with some article of merchandise suggested by the play plot or title. Now it's anything that will win free advertising. Dewey Mousson, of the Knickerbocker Theatre, Nashville, and W. R. Arnold, a First National exploiteer, very inappropriately tied up Potash and Perlmutter to a brand of butterscotch.

Probably this was because taffy is one of the ingredients in the sales armament of cloak and suit firms. At any rate a local factory bannered its delivery wagons with the statement that their brand was a favorite with American women, "Buy her a package and then take her to see In Hollywood with Potash and Perlmutter." Two girls in tartans went on the wagon to sample the crowds with butterscotch kisses.

Very much better was the work of Arnold on A Son of the Sahara at the Fifth Avenue Theatre in the same city. The paper carries the line, "Thousands of Arabs, horses, camels," and a sheet showing the sale of the white girl, with this copy was put into the window of a cigar store. It was framed in packages of Camel cigarettes with a foreground showing the brand name spelled out in packages and similarly framed. A specially painted card stated that 8,000 camels were used in the production without stating how many were smoked and how many posed. It made a splendid flash and it was a real tie-up. A lot of people went to see the camels rather than the reality they were merely sold on the camels. play. They thought it was the play, but in

A Special Bus

Masking in an automobile with a reproduction of an omnibus was the perambulator idea of the Howard Theatre, Atlanta, for Merton of the Movies. The bus was the double deck affair such as is used in New York, and was new to Atlanta. A conductor rode on the rear platform and handed out film test questionnaires.

A CONSISTENTLY GOOD COSTUMING FOR THE ARAB

All of the employees of the Liberty Theatre, Kansas City, were costumed for the picture, even the orchestra wearing the burnous. Two fancy pillars at the curb line helped get attention for the banner over the entrance.

Helping the Chest Brought Goodwill

Acting on a similar stunt done the year before by McVickers Theatre, Chicago, John J. Friedl, of the Palace Theatre, Dallas, Texas, hooked in on the local drive for the Community Chest.

The drive was announced for a certain day and figuring that the day began one second after midnight of the previous day, Friedl announced a midnight matinee, the receipts to be given to the Chest.

Obtaining the co-operation of other Southern Enterprises theatres in town, he got an orchestra of fifty pieces, with several headliners from the Melba, the vaudeville house, and some other special attractions.

In the absence of the Mayor, due to illness, the drive was opened by A. C. Bigger, President of the movement who was followed by one other speaker and the entertainment.

The stunt brought columns of free newspaper display, and the good will of all loyal citizens, not to mention a considerable sum for the chest itself.

The local unions having jurisdiction over the musicians and stage hands waived their rules to permit the men to donate their services, and all of the performers were volunteers, so the entire proceeds went into the chest, the house donating the lights, heat and films.

THIS IS A 24-SHEET, A ONE AND SOME HOME WORK

The figures are all cutouts, but the lettering is home made in this display from the Garing Theatre, Greenville, S. C. H. B. Clarke reports that the play did well above the average and pleased all the patrons.

On the Job

Chu Chin Chow had its premiere in Washington, D. C., at the Columbia Theatre, and one of the stunts used to put it over was a Chinese Fashion Show worked in the window of a local store dealing in oriental goods. A single model wore the various robes and when she was not working in the window she was riding around town carried in a palanquin by a couple of husky crap shooters.

H. S. Ansley, Metro-Goldwyn exploiteer, framed the stunt. A girl in the window seems to be his trade mark, but it always gets over.

Now It's Comedy

Ever since Max Doolittle originated the Great Moments idea, the stunt has been tied to innumerable pictures, but always in a serious vein. E. B. Roberts, of the Majestic Theatre, Austin, Texas, is the first to hook it to a comedy. Two doubles were awarded daily to 100 word stories of "How I Got into Hot Water" in connection with a showing of the Lloyd picture. The paper published the two stories and gave ample space to the announcements.

Mr. Roberts could not get hold of a press book, so he wrote his own stunts, and one of the best was a hook up to hot water heaters in the window of the electric light company.

It was a more original campaign than he might have put out had he been able to follow a plan book.

Phonetic Letters Help to Sundown

Looking for something new for a hook-up page, Cliff Lewis, of the Strand Theatre, Syracuse, got the idea of scattering the words "ess," "you," "enn," "dea," "oh," and "dubayu," through the spaces on a double page and giving prizes for their arrangement into the title of the play.

The Post-Standard sold the space and the advertising manager reported that the idea enabled him to sell to many who had stayed out of recent cooperative pages. To make it a little more difficult, each letter was repeated several times.

For a prologue there was used a western campfire scene with a tenor sitting over on the right and three others around the campfire on the left. The tenor sang the verse of "Land of My Sunset Dreams" and then walked over to the others to harmonize the chorus. Night illumination and campfire lighting enhanced the pictorial value.

A DISPLAY OF LINCOLN RELICS IN THE LIBERTY, PITTSBURGH

Milt Crandall arranged for loan of a really interesting collection of old photographs, newspaper and magazine cuttings and similar items, and made the lobby of the Rowland and Clark house into a Lincoln museum during the run of the film.

Secret Ballots

Of course it is too late now to be other than suggestive of other stunts, but because he had Norma Talmadge in Secrets just before election, H. Hadfield, of the Strand Theatre, Green Bay, Wis., got out an effective distributed piece.

This was a "Secret ballot" and in the voting spaces were phrases descriptive of the play, the star, the house and the date.

Floury Letters

A. C Morrison, of the Majestic Theatre, Hartford, Conn., pulls the latest wrinkle on Bread. He did not give out sample loaves or full sized loaves or anything like that. He spelled out the title in letters formed of wrapped bread. Then he hung a lot more, pendant-wise, from the ceiling, and then he sat down and started in to count money.

Keaton Comedy Has Big Chicago Space

Celebrating their twentieth anniversary, Jones, Linick & Schaefer took 150 lines by 4 for McVicker's Theatre, to put over Buster Keaton in The Navigator. Not very much is said about the play. The figure that Keaton's name plus the absurd cut with the trade mark hat atop the diver's helmet will draw. This cut seems to have caught on, for it has been largely used in the displays all over the country. Six hundred lines at around 75 cents a line is pretty fancy, but this is Buster's best picture and he probably paid for the extra advertising and a great deal more. We particularly like this space for its simplicity. There is much they could have told in the large space, but they did not try to put over an itemized statement. They figured that Buster would be his own guarantee, so they put the star and title in large, legible letters and held the rest to three lines of eight point in one of the panels. It's so easy to buy a large space and then kill it off with too much talk that this big one is noteworthy.

A Metro-Goldwyn Release

Large Display Is Mostly Criticism

Using a seven twelves for the big splash on The Sea Hawk, the Orpheum Theatre, Easton, Pa., used a capital cut and then let the critics of the big city papers write the selling talk. This is all right where the public accepts criticism at face value, but in most places the New York notices do not carry the weight they once did when it was worth while to take a loss on the New York run for the sake of the comment. The same space with a twelve point personal guarantee by the manager would have carried greater weight, and The Sea Hawk is a play that no manager would hesitate to get behind. The chief sales value of this space is its size and the vigor of the cut. The latter sells you the idea of an action play, in case you have not read the novel, and that means more than press comment to the average ticket buyer. The entire layout suggests a play of distinction, for it is not cluttered up with a lot of heavy face lines that seem to be put in just to fill up. The white space is well handled, and gives full suggestion of the merit of the production. We think more might have been made of the reservation of seats, though probably this was looked after in the earlier announcements.

Single Column Is Large Enough

This is the size of the daily display of the Cameo Theatre, Pittsburgh, on Reckless Age. It is a two-inch single and yet it manages to

Cut Doesn't Show Christine Hungry

This three tens is from Tod Browning, of the Olympia Theatre, New Haven. It is largely a plan book cut on Christina of the Hungry Heart. Christine does not look very hungry with three men at her feet, but that's a detail. The central figure suggests the well-dressed play, and that always sells tickets. And the cut is true to the play in this regard, for Miss Vidor wears elaborate costumes in addition to doing some mighty good acting. We do not like the vertical

He follows with the dates, the first day being that following the game. This is on white in red and blue, with "Yale" in blue and "Harvard" in the red. He goes rather light on the red ink and so he gets more out of it than if he used the red and blue in equal measure. A two-color job always looks better if the brighter color is used to point up the other, but generally the temptation is to use the brighter color to excess, which means a loss in value.

Classmates Gives The Cadet Appeal

There is a glamor to the prospective shavetails of the United States Military Academy at West Point that even the Annapolis middies lack, and the First National drawings for Barthelmess in Classmates capitalizes the cadet idea to the full. This example comes from the Rivoli Theatre, Baltimore, and makes very good use of the supplied cut. There is a local angle in the fact that Baltimore landed the Army and Navy football contest, which explains the top lines. They had the picture booked, and would have used it anyway, but this appeal to local pride gives added interest to the picture, even though Baltimore is more favorably inclined toward the Naval Academy. There is a rather awkward line which states that the picture has been made "with the full co-operation of the United States Military." It would be better to say the War Department or the military authorities. It's a small matter, at best, but it can be corrected. The cut very nicely fills a three elevens, and gives room for the added attractions in the notch. The uniform is going to sell the picture.

makes it serve a two fives, and gets a really nice display. Keeping everything else down, this title dominates the space and gives as strong an effect as most managers could get out of a much larger drawing. Most of the effect comes from the strips of rule on either side. They seem unimportant, but if you can visualize this same space set out to the edges, you will realize that those strips of rule do as much as the cut to put over the general impression of something big. Rule and all the space taken is only half an inch on either side, and yet that margin almost doubles the display value of the space. This is an exceptionally nice piece of work.

This illustration from the New Theatre, Baltimore, on The Fast Set would be better were it in line instead of halftone. use of all capitals is seldom good and where single words are used the effect is worse than when the full name appears on a single line. Kadow's Guests

Francis M. Kadow, of the Mikadow Theatre, Manitowoc, Wis., gets out a six-page railroad style program, large enough to permit him to make a real display of his wares. To make certain it is read, he lists the names of five persons who are invited to be his guests each day. And he cuts out identifications. In the language of the program, you "just underline your name and had the program to the cashier. No questions asked." Now and then he finds two or three extra programs, btu he figures that this is better than fighting the real owners of the names in the matter of identification.

"So This Is Marriage"

Metro-Goldwyn Comedy-Drama of Newly Married Life Provides Thoroughly Enjoyable Entertainment

Reviewed by C. S. Sewell

Hobart Henley's newest production for Metro-Goldwyn "So This is Marriage" based on a story by Carey Wilson and featuring Eleanor Boardman and Conrad Nagel, is a bright comedy-drama of newly married life into which has been interpolated an effective and spectacular biblical sequence filmed in natural colors by the Technicolor process.

From the opening scene until the final subtitle, this picture is clever and amusing and we believe it will provide thoroughly enjoyable entertainment for the big majority of patrons and appeal especially to the married ones or those contemplating matrimony. Starting out with the courtship of the young couple there follows a series of true-to-life scenes leading up to marriage that are decidedly entertaining. Among these are the picturization of the extravagant dreams of the fellow and girl regarding their future, just after their engagement is announced. He dreams of wealth and power, private cars and a big family of boys, while she dreams of clothes.

The extravagance of the young wife and her desire for a good time, and the efforts of the husband to reason with her without avail furnish the backbone of the theme. It is all treated in a good natured light comedy vein that will get a lot of smiles and chuckles for the situations are unusually realistic and are made decidedly human by the naturalness of Eleanor Boardman and Conrad Nagel. Of course, the tiffs between husband and wife lead to complications, a philanderer endeavors to win the wife, this precipitates a real row and she leaves him, going to the other fellow, but he is not such a bad sort after all and tells her the story of David and Bath-Sheba and she goes back to her husband.

Possibly the action of the wife in going to the other man is not entirely consistent, but she is absolutely innocent, and his treatment of her is a refreshing innovation to heavy villainy, especially since Lew Cody has the role of the other man and is seldom called upon for this kind of a portrayal.

The biblical sequence is not just dragged in, but made vital to the story. It is lavish, spectacular, and beautiful in natural color and well handled. The subtitles are clever and amusing as for example when the villain says his specialty is understanding misunderstood women, and the final remark of the maid after the reconciliation, "Everything will be all right now until the first of the month." While Director Henley has shown subtlety in handling some of the situations and the treatment of the theme is somewhat sophisticated, it is all in a good-humored vein and there is nothing that the average patron will not understand and appreciate, and in addition it is clean all through.

This picture was very favorably received at the Capitol Theatre, New York, getting many laughs and some applause. We believe it will provide enjoyable entertainment for the majority and prove a good box office attraction.

Story

Peter Marsh marries Beth and then their troubles begin, for Beth is so extravagant that Peter becomes irritated and they have frequent rows. Peter prospers in business but has a hard time meeting his bills. Rankin, a connoisseur of women sees Beth and frames-up an accident to her car so that he can come to her assistance. Finally he invites her to a dance and Peter who has chided her for this acquaintance orders her not to go. She goes and they have a terrible row. Beth leaves and goes to Rankin who finding that she still loves her husband tells her the story of the woe that befell David and Beth-Sheba because of their forbidden love. Beth sees the point and goes back to Peter and their baby and Rankin prepares for other conquests.

"Argentine Love"

Paramount Offers Bebe Daniels and Ricardo Cortez in Ibanez's Story Written for the Screen

Reviewed by C. S. Sewell

Due to the success of a number of his stories, both as novels and motion pictures, especial interest attaches to the Paramount production, "Argentine Love," which is an original story written directly for the screen by the celebrated Spanish novelist, Vicente Blasco Ibanez.

Characteristic of his works, this story, with all of the scenes laid in the Argentine, has a Spanish background and all of the characters are Spanish with the exception of the hero, an American. Mr. Ibanez is on familiar ground, but it cannot be said that "Argentine Love" reaches the height of "The Four Horsemen," "Blood and Sand" or "Enemies of Women." Noticeably absent is the powerful underlying note which dominated the theme of these stories, and as an Ibanez creation this picture is a distinct disappointment.

In endeavoring to write directly for the motion picture public he has fashioned a story that, while containing moments of good drama, as is to be expected from a man of his ability, and some excellent characterization, with interesting twists to the story, the picture in the main is a conventional story of the troublesome love affairs of an Argentine girl who loves an American and refuses to be stampeded into a marriage with one of her countrymen arranged by her guardians in accordance with custom.

Director Alan Dwan has given this story a colorful production, with a lot of excellent atmospheric touches, and Bebe Daniels as well as many of the supporting cast give effective performances, but the story is slow in getting under way and developing real interest and the actions of the players seem to have been moulded more for dramatic effect than to be due to the logical outcome of character and situations. With a melodramatic climax in which, without reason, the girl is blamed for causing the death of an admirer and bound to a cart and beaten, the arrival of the hero at the psychological moment to rescue her, her readiness to deny her love and even marry her compatriot to save his life without giving him the opportunity to defend himself, the hero's willingness to face death masquerading as the villain, and the abrupt change of heart of the villain who unflinchingly goes to his death to prove that an Argentino is not to be outdone in honor and gallantry by a Yankee, the action does not carry conviction.

Bebe Daniels is a good type for the role and handled her scenes with undoubted ability. Ricardo Cortez, suited for his part by race and personality, gives a good performance as the Argentino, and in the colorful costume makes a handsome picture, even though he does not always register the desired emotions by facial expression. As the hero, James Rennie has a role that has been distinctly subordinated to that of Cortez and he does not suggest the vigorous Yankee that one would expect under the circumstances.

"Argentine Love," in our opinion, will probably prove only fairly satisfying to the majority of theatregoers.

Story

During a two years' absence in the United States Consuelo Garcia's guardians arrange her betrothal to Juan Martin, who lives in the same town in the Argentine, but Consuelo is in love with an American, Philip Sears, who is coming to her country to complete a bridge, and she turns Juan down. Juan is furious and vows to kill anyone who comes between them, and does kill Rafael, the son of a Senator, who tries to flirt with her. Juan sends a warning to Philip, who comes immediately. In the meantime the populace vent their spite on Consuelo and start to beat her while tied to the end of a cart. Philip rescues her. To save his life she pretends love for Juan and Philip puts on Juan's cloak and hat to aid them to escape. Consuelo tells Juan she will marry him but does not love him. Juan returns to the house and, saying an Argentino is not to be outdone in gallantry by an American, starts to give himself up and is shot by the murdered boy's father. Philip and Consuelo then find their path to happiness unobstructed.

"The Tomboy"

Dorothy Devore and Herbert Rawlinson in Chadwick Melodrama-Comedy With Bootlegging Theme

Reviewed by C. S. Sewell

Chadwick Pictures Corporation's newest picture, "The Tomboy," which is being distributed on the independent market, is really a comedy-melodrama in which the dramatic interest centers in the romance of a revenue agent with a country girl as a means to round up a gang of bootleggers.

The story interest is slight and it seems as if the director and scenario writer have introduced just about every device they could think of to build up audience interest and provide amusement and dramatic punch. Starting out with the heroine in a comic tomboy situation, this is soon dropped and she appears as a girl thirsting for romance. As the keeper of a boarding house, the girl is shown as using several labor-saving devices which are more ingenious than convincing. An allegorical sequence has been introduced in which the hero and heroine mount "sky horses" and in their imagination travel over news reel scenes representing some of the world's biggest cities. There is also a dream sequence that provides a thrill but is not followed up, and also a mystery angle, first in the person of the hero and then in throwing suspicion upon the heroine's father as being a bootlegger. Many spectators, however, will probably guess the real identity of these players.

While these situations will register in varying degrees with different spectators, they give to the picture an air of artificiality and striving for effect that weaken the force of the story, which has some conventionally effective comedy and melodramatic punch situations. As a whole the picture will probably be ranked as fairly entertaining by the bulk of patrons of the average house.

Dorothy Devore is vivacious and attractive and not only effectively handles the comedy angle of her role but introduces considerable heart interest and gets your sympathy. Herbert Rawlinson's performance as the hero will please his followers. Lee Moran introduces comedy as a rube sheriff.

Length, six reels.

Story

Tommy Smith, the village tomboy, runs a boarding house as her mother is dead and her father is lazy. A stranger appears and begins making love to Tommy. Coincident with her discovery of liquor in the barn, and the fact that the stranger, Farwell, is a revenue agent, she is led to believe that her father is a bootlegger. The Sheriff is killed and her father is accused of the murder. Bootleggers make way with a truck and Farwell and Tommy join in the chase. When captured it develops that Blood, posing as an invalid is the leader and has been disguising as Tommy's father, and that her father has been working on the case with Farwell. Tommy discovers that Farwell's love for her is real.

"The Hurricane Kid"

Hoot Gibson Stars in Vigorous Universal Western Production

Reviewed by Sumner Smith.

"The Hurricane Kid," a Universal production starring Hoot Gibson, is a western built along conventional lines and possessing entertainment values for the type of audiences to which it caters. It may be said that romance, hard riding and fist fights feature this subject. With Marian Nixon in the chief feminine role, the romance end develops to a satisfactory climax. She is dainty and appealing at all times.

Hard riding is furnished by several expert horsemen, notably the star. The highlight in this respect is a race between Gibson and William Steele that is about as well done as any we have ever seen in a western. The fist fighters also are Gibson and Steele, and their set-tos are vigorous and realistic. Harry Todd and Arthur Mackley offer mild characterizations as ranch owners and Violet La Plante has a bit as one of the girls with whom the hero so readily falls in love.

This Universal feature does not always manage to move smoothly and thus realism suffers, but the story though conventional, is logical and dramatic and ought to hold the attention of fans liking westerns. The acting is satisfactory and featured by Gibson's naivete as an impressionable cowboy.

Story

The Hurricane Kid falls in love with one girl after another. One day he breaks his arm and Joan Langdon takes him to her father's ranch. Lafe Baxter, the foreman, is jealous. The Kid whips him for insulting Joan. Col. Langdon and Hezekiah Potts, ranchmen, stage a horse race and bet their ranches. The Kid recovers a wild horse of great speed which Col. Langdon had captured and he had turned loose, and wins the race for Longdon. The girl, who has mocked him because of his playing the gallant, relents.

"In Love With Love"

Bright Lines and Cleverly Devised Situations Make Fox Adaptation of Stage Play Pleasing

Reviewed by C. S. Sewell

A stage play of the same title by Vincent Lawrence furnishes the basis for the William Fox production, "In Love With Love," in which Marguerite De La Motte and Allan Forrest have the leading roles.

This picture is described as a comedy drama adapted from a stage fantasy, and while for the greater part of the footage it follows straight comedy lines, considerable farce has been introduced in a fight scene and the actions of the characters have been developed more with the idea of furnishing entertainment than to make them plausible, although each type in a milder form is met in everyday life.

The story centers in a girl who is very flirtatiously inclined and continually becomes engaged because she is in love with love, as is epitomized in a subtitle when the father, congratulating a new prospective son-in-law, remarks it is about the thirteenth time he has done the same thing. The action deals mostly with two suitors, one egotistical and blustering and the other spineless. A rank outsider who fights against her wiles but finally succumbs is the winner.

Marguerite De La Motte is satisfying as the girl, bringing a lot of pep to this role. Harold Goodwin is well cast as the backward suitor and Allan Sears is excellent as the officious one, with Allan Forrest capable as the "dark horse." Will Walling gives a good portrayal of the girl's father.

A number of the lines and situations are clever and amusing even though they are not entirely convincing, and the farce comedy fight will get some laughs. While there is nothing really striking about this picture, it will probably afford a pleasing hour's entertainment, especially for the better class of patrons.

"Silk Stocking Sal"

Good Handling Develops Fine Suspense and Punch in F. B. O. Crook Story
Starring Evelyn Brent
Reviewed by C. S. Sewell

As suggested by the title, "Silk Stocking Sal," which serves as a vehicle for the newest F. B. O. star, Evelyn Brent, is a story of crooks and the underworld, of a girl who decided to go straight and indirectly came very near causing disaster to the man who helped her.

While the dramatic punch grows out of a murder, the identity of the murderer is a mystery only to the players. No attempt is made to keep the spectators in doubt, the force of the drama being concentrated on the efforts of the heroine to secure a confession from the guilty party in time to save the hero.

Starting off with quite a lot of crook stuff that follows along familiar lines, including the heroine being caught robbing a safe and accusing the owner of being a crook, there is developed a dramatic scene in which the gang leader tries to prevent her from reforming and endeavors to secure the jewels. There is good suspense in this scene.

Naturally, the big climax is built on the confession episode, and there is not only considerable action but real hair-trigger suspense developed because of the good work of the players, excellent direction and the clever manner in which the heroine uses all of her feminine wiles to taunt the crook into making the desired confession. Although you are sure of the denouement your interest is nevertheless held tensely, and an interesting angle with probably more punch than plausibility is the fact that you even see the switch that controls the electric chair closed before the confession arrives. A short circuit caused by an attempted escape prevents the current from doing its work.

Evelyn Brent is attractive and earnest and entirely satisfactory as the heroine, Robert Ellis is a capable hero and Earle Metcalfe is exceedingly forceful as the crook. John Gough and Alice Browning are effective in character roles as two of the gang.

"Silk Stocking Sal" should provide good entertainment for patrons who like plenty of punch and suspense.

Cast

Story

Sal, while robbing a house, is surprised by the owner, Bob Cooper, who falls for her story and gives her money with which to go straight. She laughs at him, but his mother's sympathy makes an impression on her and she accepts a job in Bob's office. Bob's partner is murdered and Bob convicted and sentenced to death on circumstantial evidence. Sal is so sure Reagan, the leader of the gang, is guilty that she again joins the gang, and at the last minute she taunts a confession out of him. Bob is saved and finds happiness with Sal.

"Step Lightly"

(Educational—Comedy—Two Reels)

Lige Conley is featured in this two reel Mermaid Comedy directed by Norman Tuarog and distributed by Educational. The action concerns the kidnapping of a pretty country girl by a cafe owner who forces her to dance for his patrons. Her sweetheart, an amateur correspondence school detective trails her, gets into several mix-ups with the hangers on of the place, but of course in the end rescues the damsel. The theme it will be seen is a familiar slapstick comedy type, but Taurog has shown considerable ingenuity in devising the gags and amusing situations. Not much of the material is new, but it is the kind that usually proves sure-fire with the slap-stick patrons and "Step Lightly" should prove of average entertainment value with patrons to whom comedies of this class appeal.—C. S. S.

"The Sea Squawk"

(Pathe—Comedy—Two Reels)

"The Sea Squawk" is a Mack Sennett comedy, the title of which burlesques that of a well known production. The action, however, follows the outline of a comedy-mystery story. Harry Langdon has a good supporting cast composed of Euginia Gilbert, Christian Frank, Charlotte Mineau, Bud Rose and Leo Sulky. As a comedy "The Sea Squawk" should go over big in the average theatre. It is one of the funiest of its kind that Langdon has ever made for Sennett. The action is all on board ship, with Langdon being forced to swallow an alleged ruby in order that the real culprit may be saved from curious detectives. It turns out that the "stone" is only paste and that the girl with whom Langdon has immediately fallen in love has the real stone.—T. W.

"West of Hot Dog"

(F. B. O.—Comedy—Two Reels)

This Joe Rock Production featuring Stan Laurel and directed by Percy Pembroke depicts the adventures of a tenderfoot in the West. The hero is introduced as one of the victims of a stage coach holdup. Next he appears as joint heir to a saloon with the same holdup men. Their attempts to get rid of him are futile. When they start shooting they only succeed in killing each other off. The hero thus gets credit for bravery, the town believing he killed them all in fair fight, and he becomes the sole heir to the saloon and wins the sheriff's daughter. The subject has fair entertainment value. Slapstick fans should like it.—S. S.

"On the Ice"

(Pathe—Cartoon—One Reel)

The zoo on skates and sleighs is the first class entertainment provided in Cartoonist Paul Terry's latest pen endeavor for Pathe. Shoes and bath tubs are used by the mice for their conveyances over the ice and snow. —T. W.

"Alice Cans the Cannibals"

(Winkler—Cartoon—One Reel)

Each one of these Walt Disney cartoons which are being distributed on the independent market by M. J. Winkler appears to be more imaginative and clever than the preceding, and this one is a corker. A real little girl portrays Alice, and she is pictured in various experiences with cartoon characters. This combination of photography and cartoon work is exceedingly well done. In this number, Alice and her pal the cat land on a cannibal isle and finally through the ingenuity of the cat they finally succeed in killing off all of the tribe of cannibals who attack them.—C. S. S.

"The Red Age"

(Universal—Drama—Two Reels)

This film features Billy Sullivan and tells the dramatic story of a youth who could not control his hot temper. His sweetheart is wearing valuable pearls at a party and is lured by a crook to his apartment. A friend intervenes and is locked in another room with the girl. Billy shows up and is told that the girl is untrue to him. He opens the door and shoots his best friend while in a rage. Repentence comes immediately afterward and Billy leaves for foreign parts to learn self-control, with the knowledge that the girl will be awaiting his return. This subject has a good theme and is fairly well acted. In its present form, however, it is a little too long and should be condensed. There are rough spots in the continuity, but Universal probably will smooth them over before the picture is released, as they are very apparent.—S. S.

"Hi-Fliers"

(Educational—Hodge-Podge—One Reel)

A high-flying bird of the cormorant family, native of Peru, furnishes the title for this Lyman H. Howe Hodge-Podge distributed through Educational, and there are interesting scenes showing what appears to be millions of them on a rocky island off the coast. Other Peruvian "hi-fliers," aviators, are shown flying over the principal city, Lima. Then follows several other interesting items and some clever and amusing cartoon work.—C. S. S.

"Roaring Lions at Home"

(Fox—Comedy—Two Reels)

The lions which have appeared in a number of Fox Sunshine comedies are again used to furnish the fun and excitement in this two-reeler. The action hinges on a visit to the circus by a little girl who loses her dog and in error brings back a little lion cub. The mother lioness, missing her young, trails it and comes to the childs home. During its wanderings all over the place it manages to create all sorts of confusion and to badly scare the negro coachman and his pal the negro butler. There is a lot of chasing from one room to the other in the efforts of this pair to capture or elude the lion. The action is exciting and amusing and it should prove a good attraction.—C. S. S.

"Galloping Hoofs"

Pathe's Newest George Seitz Serial, a Story of the Race Tracks, Looks Like A Real Winner

Reviewed by C. S. Sewell

Pathe's newest serial, "Galloping Hoofs," is a story of the race tracks in ten episodes, and judging by the first three which were screened for review it certainly should prove a winner with devotees of chapter-plays.

"Galloping Hoofs" follows the general outline of serial construction, with plenty of action, villainy, melodrama, heroism and a big climax in each episode, with the suspense being carried over to the next. But the story seems not only entirely possible but a lot more plausible than is often the case.

The action hinges on the possession of a treasure box which is to be opened at a certain time. The heroine is the rightful owner and two crooks are continually endeavoring to get possession of it. Through the efforts of the hero, however, she continues to outwit them. This girl has inherited a stock farm and race horses, but her father's death left financial affairs in bad shape.

In the first episode the climax is a horse-race in which if the heroine's horse, Gold Blaze, wins she can satisfy an attachment on the horse. There are also several good fights and no dearth of thrills and action.

The second episode concerns further attempts of the crooks to secure the box, which has been hidden in a sack of oats that is taken away to the race track. The heroine is kidnapped and imprisoned in a moonshiner's shack which is set on fire.

With the beginning of the third episode things certainly begin to hum, with three lines of action and suspense being worked up at once. The hero and villains are struggling for possession of the box, the estate is being sold at auction and Gold Blaze is in a race as the chapter ends.

This serial has been exceptionally well directed, and in addition to the familiar serial thrills and punch there is the lure of the race track. The race scenes are unusually well handled.

Allene Ray and Johnny Walker capably portray the leading roles, with Armand Cortez and William Nally as the villains and J. Barney Sherry as a mysterious financier whose relations with the plot has not been disclosed.

"Galloping Hoofs" stands well up in the front as a serial attraction.

"Uncommon Clay"

The making of artistic vases at the Rookwood pottery furnishes the material for this Fox Educational Entertainment. The entire process from the mixing of the clay, including moulding into shape, painting of designs by artists, glazing and finally the crucial process, firing for several days, are pictured in detail. This number is interesting and instructive and will prove enlightening to those who admire beautiful pottery.—C. S. S.

One of the funniest depictations of what the "four-wheel-Betty" can do is unfolded in "The Wages of Tin," in which Glenn Tryon is featured. "Up on the Farm"

(Fox—Comedy—Two Reels)

There is an unusually clever idea back of this Fox comedy in which Lee Moran has the principal role. Lee is a city chap who loves to go the pace and is chagrined when an uncle leaves him his money provided he engages in farming. He has an inspiration and starts a farm on the roof of his apartment house, with a barn, farm vehicles, a donkey, a goat and a lot of chickens. Not only does this give good opportunities for situations that get laughs, but allows for novel handling of thrill stuff at the edge of the roof, as, for instance, where Lee starts to use a mowing machine and the mule "advances backward" until Lee is hanging out over the roof. In endeavoring to get back the machine teeters up and down, with the mule being lifted off his feet. The plotting of the villain, who enlists the aid of an aviator to help do away with the hero, also complicates the situation.—C. S. S.

"Ponce De Leon"

(Universal—Comedy—One Reel)

Ponce De Leon's search for the Fountain of Youth is amusingly burlesqued in this number of Universal's Hysterical History series. The old chap is shown as a ladies' man who realizes the approach of age when he is laughted at in a jazz contest. He sets out in a rowboat for Florida and tackles an Indian who refers him to his grandfather. This Indian in turn refers him to his grandfather, and so on, and finally he finds the fountain. The characters, after bathing, renew their youth, but when Ponce is held under the water too long he comes out as a monkey.—C. S. S.

"Prehistoric Man"

(Universal—Comedy—One Reel)

This Hysterical History comedy opens with scenes of a primitive barber shop and shows Fearnot Flinthatchet carrying off Cutie Cuticle to his cave. Faintheart Lovejoy, who loves her, appeals to Ala Gazem, a magician, who, looking into the future, sees how Faintheart, in civilized society, could battle for the girl and win. Faintheart then tries tapping Fearnot on the head with a club, but fails to make an impression. Fearnot keels Faintheart over with one nonchalant blow. Caveman stuff wins. The sets in this subject are extremely well done and asa whole it is amusing.—S. S.

Vitagraph's "Captain Blood" Bookings Cover the Country Like a Blanket

EVERY section of the United States, Canada and England is represented in the bookings of Rafael Sabatini's "Captain Blood," the big David Smith production, according to information obtained from the Vitagraph general offices in Brooklyn this week.

An extraordinary number of exhibitors retained this special for longer runs than were scheduled originally, so popular an attraction did it prove, and the Vitagraph branch offices in all parts of the country are now being besieged with demands for return engagements. In England also, starting with a London premiere which was a veritable triumph, the picture is proving a great hit, while it was booked from coast to coast in Canada through Famous Players' Canadian Corporation, Ltd.

Big City Runs

On Broadway "Captain Blood" appeared first at the Astor Theatre, where the run was so successful as to demand an extension beyond the time limit first set. There followed soon after runs of a week each at the Rivoli and the Rialto, both Famous Players-Lasky houses, after which it was booked for the entire Loew circuit in Greater New York and the Meyer & Schneider circuit of theatres.

Chicagoans saw "Captain Blood" at Jones, Linick & Schaefer's Orpheum, where it remained four weeks, and then at the houses of the Lubliner & Trinz, Ascher Bros. and Schoenstadt circuits. Besides the Orpheum, the Randolph Theatre, also in the loop district, ran the picture, and Balaban & Katz procured it for their circuit in Illinois and Indiana.

In Philadelphia, "Captain Blood" played the Globe Theatre and throughout the Stanley-Mastbaum circuit. In Boston it had runs at Gordon's Olympia and the Scollay Square. Among the myriad of other early booking were:

Grauman's Rialto, Los Angeles; New Grand Central and other Skouras Bros.' houses, St. Louis; Alamo, Louisville; Strand, Cincinnati; Loew's Stillman and the entire Loew circuit, Cleveland; Capitol, Dallas; Colorado, Denver; Broadway Strand, Detroit; Mainstreet, Kansas City; New Garrick, St. Paul; Liberty, New Orleans; Central, State and Tivoli, Jersey City; State, Pittsburgh; American, Salt Lake City; California, San Francisco; Rivoli, Portland, Ore.; and Liberty, Seattle, both Jenson & Von Herberg theatres; Loew's Palace, Washington; Shea's Hippodrome, Buffalo; Metropolitan, Baltimore; Royal, Wilmington, N. C.; Rialto, Tacoma; Garrick, Minneapolis; Columbia, Dayton; Metropolitan, Atlanta; Plaza, San Diego, Sun, Omaha.

Among the Massachusetts houses to arrange runs were the Empire, New Bedford; Olympia, Lynn; Olympia, Worcester; Capitol, Springfield; Strond, Haverhill, all in Massachusetts; Lyric, Bridgeport; Palace and Regent, Norwich; Capitol, Danbury; Majestic, Hartford; Strand, Stamford, and Lyceum, Ne wBritain, Strand, Stamford, and Lyceum, New Britain, Providence, R. I.

Just a few of a host of New York State bookings were those of the Mark Strand, Albany; Eastman, Rochester; Lemberg, Niagara Falls; Eckle, Syracuse; Playhouse, Mount Vernon; Rialto, Jamaica; Hamilton, Yonkers. Illinois bookings included, among many others, Fischer, Danville; Apollo, Peoria; Palm, Rockford; Princess, Joliet; Crocker, Elgin; Fox, Aurora; Irwin, Bloomington; Lincoln Square, Decatur; Colonial, Galesburg; Majestic, Kankakee; Orpheum, Quincy; Rialto, Jacksonville; Hippodrome, Alton.

Bill Cody's "Lightnin' "

Jesse J. Goldburg Presents His Star With A Skilfully Trained Horse

The naming of a new horse, presented to Bill Cody, independent star, by Jesse J. Goldburg, producer, was the occasion of a party on the Cody lot. When the producer announced that he was getting Cody his own horse, the members of the staff and the cast decided that it was only proper that there should be a christening. Cody and his wife had just completed a new little home for themselves and his associates felt that this, too, should be celebrated. So work was called off early in the afternoon and a gay party gathered for the naming of the horse. J. P. McGowan, director, was master of ceremonies and it was decided that instead of breaking a bottle of wine over the animal's head it might perhaps be more prudent to break an empty bottle over the back of a dummy and give the horse an extra bag of oats.

Thus, the new horse, trained by Jack Haus, one of the greatest trainers of horses in the West, had the name of "Lightnin' " wished on him.

"School for Wives"

Conway Tearle Has Leading Role in Halperin-Vitagraph Special

Conway Tearle has the leading role in "Schools for Wives," the picturization of Leonard Merrick's popular novel, "The House of Lynch," which Victor Hugo Halperin is now making for Vitagraph. Production is well under way in studios in New York and locations near the city.

Mr. Halperin selected an unusual cast for this special production. Sigrid Holmquist has the principal feminine characterization, and the other layers are Arthur Donaldson, Peggy Kelly, Orlando Daly, Allen Simpson, Brian Dunlevy, Jill Lynn, Gerald Oliver Smith, Dorothy Allen, Dick Lee and Buddy Harris.

"School for Wives" is the second picture in Mr. Halperin's series for Vitagraph. Besides directing the new production, Mr. Halperin prepared the scenario and did all the sub-titling.

Associated Exhibitors in Line For Greatest Season

"ASSOCIATED EXHIBITORS will start the new year with a second group of five pictures of the season's program of thirty-two. There is every assurance that the year will be a banner one in the history of this organization," said J. S. Woody, general manager of Associated Ehibitors, in a statement to Moving Picture World, this week.

"The second group of five productions will be of the big feature variety. Leading the list is Wesley Barry's first production for the Associated Exhibitors. This picture is an adaptation of the Saturday Evening Post story, "Battling Bunyan," by Raymond Leslie Goldman. The production was made by Crown Productions, of which W. D. Russell is active head. The story is a combination of pathos and comedy and is based on the story of a young fellow who allows himself to be beaten to success. The direction was handled by Paul Hurst with a strong cast of supporting players, consisting of Landers Stevens, Pat Kemp, Molly Malone, Johnny Ralasco, Harry Mann, Frank Campeau and Frankie Fields.

"The great Chicago fire of 1871 is the dramatic basis on which 'Barriers Burned Away," second of Associated's group of five, is laid. The story is an adaptation of the famous novel by the same title written by E. P. Roe.

"The story and scenario were written by Leah Baird and made under the direction of W. S. Van Dyke. Frank Mayo, Mabel Ballin, Harry T. Morey, Wanda Hawley, Thomas Santschi, Arline Pretty, Lawson Butt and William V. Mong head an excellent lineup of players.

"A Hal Roach feature-length comedy drama, featuring Glenn Tryon under the title of 'The White Sheep,' is the third of the group. This production was personally written and directed by Hal Roach and covers one of the most laughable situations ever put on the screen. A boy, in order to save his father, moves a court room across the State line while court is in session. A typical Hal Roach cast headed by Blanche Mehaffey is seen in support of Glenn Tryon in this picture.

"The fourth picture is 'The Greatest Love of All," starring George Beban, one of the most notable character actors on the screen today. Mr. Beban declares that this is the greatest picture of his screen career, even outstripping his famous production, 'The Sign on the Rose.' 'The Greatest Love of All had its premier showing at the Rivoli Theatre in New York recently and without exception the New York critics acclaimed it one of the outstanding pictures of the year.

"Alma Rubens. Frank Mayo and H. B. Warner are the featured players in 'Is Love Everything?' the fifth release. In addition to the above named artists, Walter McGrail and Lilyan Tashman head an ideal supporting cast. This is a Murray W. Garsson production and deals with a question uppermost in the public mind today.

"Of the thirty-two pictures scheduled for release for the 1924-25 season, five have already been released and are achieving a marked success wherever shown. The first of these was 'Never Say Die,' starring Douglas MacLean. 'The Price of a Party,' 'Battling Orioles', 'East of Broadway' and 'Dynamite Smith' have followed in the order mentioned."

Priscilla Bonner Cast

Priscilla Bonner has been engaged by Ludwig Erb to play Sally May in "Drusilla With a Million," second Associated Arts production now being produced for Film Booking Offices at the F. B. O. studios in Hollywood.

Richard Barthelmess in First National's "Classmates."

Milton Sills in "As Man Desires," a First National release.

Fox Productions Released to Date, Please Showmen

THE number of Fox Film Corporation releases for the current season to prove veritable bonanzas to the exhibitors of the country is greater than ever before in the history of the organization, according to the columns of the various trade papers of the industry where the exhibitors air their opinions for the benefit of fellow showmen.

These columns show that without exception the twenty-five Fox dramatic productions for the current season, released to date, are money makers with the Tom Mix productions, "The Last Man on Earth," "Dante's Inferno," "The Painted Lady," "Hearts of Oak," "Gerald Cranston's Lady," "The Cyclone Rider," "The Roughneck," and "The Man Who Came Back," irresistible box office magnets.

This program includes fifty-one dramatic productions, four of which are giant specials, twenty-six specials, and twenty-one star series productions; seventeen Imperial Comedies, twenty Sunshine comedies, seven Monkey comedies, seven Van Bibber comedies, twenty-six Educational one-reelers, and one hundred and four issues of Fox News reel.

The dramatic and comedy productions include adaptations from the best product of the stage and the world of literature. The Educational short subjects are now one reel gems gathered here and there, from the far corners of the earth and under our noses. Fox News represents a world-wide organization working to picturize contemporary history in a new and entertaining manner.

The contribution of the stage to the Fox 1924-25 product includes such outstanding triumphs as "The Man Who Came Back" Jules Eckert Goodman's noted success; "Hearts of Oak," James A. Herne's celebrated melodrama of New England and the Frozen North; "The Warrens of Virginia," a David Belasco triumph; "Gold Heels" an adaptation from Henry M. Blossom, Jr.'s, play of the race track, "Checkers"; "In Love With Love," New York stage success by Vincent Lawrence, and "The Dancers," stage hit of London, New York and Paris, by Gerald Du Maurier and Viola Tree.

From the world of letters came "Dante's Inferno," that sensational box office record-breaker, which is an adaptation of the renowned Italian's classic of the ages, with a modern story interwoven. Zane Grey, popular writer of western tales is responsible for three of the Tom Mix productions, "The Last of the Duanes," "Riders of the Purple Sage," and its sequence "The Rainbow Trail."

Larry Evans, Saturday Evening Post writer, is the author of "The Painted Lady"; Gilbert Frankau, England's most popular novelist, wrote "Gerald Cranston's Lady"; "The Last Man on Earth," is a fantastic conception of a manless world by John D. Swain, which appeared in Munsey's Magazine; "The Roughneck," is by Robert W. Service, Canadian poet and author of those two popular books of verse "The Spell of the Yukon" and "Rhymes of a Red Cross Man"; "Flames of Desire," is an adaptation of Ouida's novel of diplomatic intrigue "Strathmore"; "The Deadwood Coach," is the screen version of Clarence E. Mulford's tale of the west, "The Orphan"; "The Hunted Woman," comes from the pen of James Oliver Curwood.

Thomas Burke, whose "Limehouse Night" are considered English short story classics, is the author of "Curlytop," a Shirley Mason starring vehicle. The best scenarist and authors are among the contributors to the other star series productions.

The series of Van Bibber comedies that Fox is releasing this year are adaptations from the stories of the same name by Richard Harding Davis, the most romantic figure in American literature.

Patheserial "Idaho"

Pathe announces this week that the new serial now in the course of production on the West Coast under the tentative title of "The Girl Vigilante" has been permanently titled "Idaho."

Scenes from "A Thief in Paradise," a First National picture.

Vivid moments in Vitagraph's "The Redeeming Sin" with Nazimova.

Fox's January Releases Include Giant Specials

FOX FILM CORPORATION releases for January include two giant special productions, two of the most important and ambitious specials of the 1924-25 program, two star series pictures, two Educational one-reelers, William Farnum re-issue and the usual semi-weekly issues of Fox News.

The giant specials are "The Dancers" and "Hunting Wild Animals in Hollywood." The specials are "Dick Turpin" and "The Hunted Woman." Buck Jones and Edmund Lowe will each contribute one picture to the star series releases. The Jones picture is titled "The Arizona Romeo" and the Lowe film "Ports of Call." The Educational subjects are "Hell Roaring Range" and "Corsica, the Beautiful." The William Farnum re-issue is "Rough and Ready."

"The Dancers" attained the rank of giant special in the course of production. "The Hunted Woman" is an adaption from James Oliver Curwood's novel of the same name. "Dick Turpin" is Tom Mix' first appearance in a costume picture.

The first print of "The Dancers' has arrived in New York. The cast includes George O'Brien, Alma Rubens, Madge Bellamy and Walter McGrail.

"Dick Turpin" has just been completed at the Fox West Coast Studios but the prints have not arrived in the East. Tom Mix has the title role of the celebrated English highwayman who holds a unique place in song and story.

For once Tom has to get along without the valiant aid of his wonder horse, Tony. This beautiful stallion refused to become a female impersonator and Tom will be seen in this picture performing his daring feats of horsemanship mounted on a mare named "Black Bess" after the original horse of the English outlaw. To make up for the absence of Tony, Buck Jones, Fox star, was drafted to play a part which called for some daring riding.

Another feature of "Dick Turpin" is the appearance of Kathleen Myers, a Fox discovery, in the leading feminine role.. It is claimed for Miss Myers that she is the most distinguished looking woman on the screen. Alan Hale, Philo McCullough, James Marcus, Lucile Hutton and Bull Montana have important roles, Jack Blystone directed.

"The Hunted Woman" is in the course of production at the Fox West Coast Studios with Seena Owens and Earl Schenk in the leading roles.

"Hunting Wild Animals in Hollywood" is being held for special release during Fox Anniversary Week, beginning January 25. It is a Thomas Buckingham Production.

"The Arizona Romeo" is a western comedy-drama starring Buck Jones. "Ports of Call" is an adventure film.

Schedule Changed

Number of Changes are Announced in Fox Release Plans

A number of important changes have been made in the 1924-25 release schedule of Fox Film Corporation. The two specials for Christmas week, "Gold Heels" and "Folly of Vanity" have been put back to January 4. The Shirley Mason production, "The Stardust Trail" originally scheduled for December 28, has been put back until February 8.

This has the effect of setting back for a week or more every special on the company's schedule. For instance, "The Dancers," scheduled for January 4, is set back until the week of January 11, and "Dick Turpin," Tom Mix' first costume picture, scheduled for the second week of January, has been set back until the third week of that month. The screen version of James Oliver Curwood's novel, "The Hunted Woman," which should have been released on January 18 has been held up until January 25.

"Hunting Wild Animals in Hollywood," set for special release during Fox Anniversary Week, beginning January 25, has been put back to some time in February, the exact date to be decided later.

"Free to Love"

Clara Bow and Raymond McKee, two young players who made their first big hits in "Down to the Sea in Ships," and subsequently have built big names for themselves, are reunited as the leads in B. P. Schulberg's new Preferred Picture, "Free to Love," which Frank O'Connor is now directing. Hallam Cooley, Winter Hall and Francis Feeney are in the supporting cast.

Theatre Owners "Shopping" for Films, Says Eschmann

"A RECENT trip to the Mid-West confirmed an opinion which I had formed relative to the buying of pictures by exhibitors for the new year; they are proceeding cautiously in the filling of their playing time," said E. A. Eschmann, head of distribution for First National Pictures, in a statement to Moving Picture World, this week. "They have come to realize, I believe, more seriously than ever before, that their playing time is the only commodity which they have to sell, and that if they sell it unwisely they will have to pocket a loss which may place them on the wrong side of the ledger when the year's business is totaled.

"The proof that my opinion is correct was found on my trip in the fact that exhibitors are going slow in their bookings and are shopping for pictures to fill in their playing time. They are not snapping up a block of pictures just because they are offered by a distributor from whom they are accustomed to buy, but are examining, sifting and correlating the information which they have on hand as to the quality of the new product—also as to the result obtained through showing product of the various companies during the past season.

"Exhibitors are no longer willing to lose on one part of the season, or on a certain group of pictures, what they make on another part of the season or another group. The public, some exhibitors have found to their cost, have been educated to appreciate and demand the highest quality in their screen entertainment. Exhibitors are determined to sell their playing time to the public at a profit to themselves. To do so they must shop for the pictures which they wish to sell to their patrons.

"This simplifies in a way the selling problem for the distributor, if he has a list of pictures which excel in quality, but stiffens it in another way—competition is stronger unless the quality of his product is known from past performances and not from future promises only.

"Speaking for First National, I can say that the prospectus of our releases which appeared in recent issues of the trade journals, has awakened an unusually keen interest among exhibitors, which they proved to me by their desire for every scrap of information as to plans, directors, casts and approximate release dates that I could give them. This interest has already taken a more tangible aspect in several important instances, and First National looks forward with confidence to the coming season as the best in its history."

Bungalow for Marion Constance

Marion Constance, scenarist for Vitagraph specials produced by J. Stuart Blackton, has just been especially honored. Heretofore, though working at top speed and with gratifying results, Miss Constance has been handicapped, without a real office. Now, a bungalow, isolated from the rest of the studio, and ideal for continuity-writing, has been built and turned over to her. Besides boasting of privacy and freedom from studio noises, the bungalow is without a telephone or a speaking-tube.

"Dangerous Innocence"

William A. Seiter has completed the filming of "Dangerous Innocence," the new Universal-Jewel production starring Laura La Plante and Eugene O'Brien, adapted from Pamela Wynn's "Ann's An Idiot," a popular novel.

Scene from Pathe's "A Mysterious Mystery," a two-reel comedy featuring the prominent "Our Gang" players and produced by Hal Roach.

fellow is getting more than him and that he advertises as much and sometimes more than the other fellow. And the row goes on.

We know of one instance where the dramatic editor was giving the exhibitors short features on their current or future attractions. One manager failed to see the posibilities and failed even to send in anything outside of his regular reader. Instead, he went to the advertising department and complained. Result—the dramatic editor soon received orders not to give any extra readers unless exhibitors increased their advertising. This shortsighted exhibitor not only ruined his own but every other exhibitor's chances for some valuable free publicity.

One exhibitor solved the problem. Always he was having trouble in getting his wants satisfied. The movie editors suffered from his contributions as the writer has suffered from those mentioned above. Finally, the movie editor went to the managing editor and the advertising manager and explained the kind of publicity the exhibitor was furnishing. And, likewise, finally, the exhibitor went to these men and wanted some kind of satisfaction.

The situation was gone over and explained and the exhibitor in the end turned over his newspaper publicity to the movie editor and agreed to pay him so much per week for getting it out right. It was stipulated by the managing editor that the movie editor must hand his publicity to the city editor before publication, in order that there would be a check on the editor and that the desk would not be commercialized.

Thereafter, that movie house began to get worthwhile publicity, stories that had a news value and did the exhibitor some box office good. The editor would take in the pre-views and in the theatre's publicity would play up the salient features. When the picture was released and shown to the public the editor wrote his usual review. Whenever the manager booked a new picture of note or a series of pictures there were stories for all the papers on the booking. The names of the theatre was constantly before the public.

This is not a plea that exhibitors turn over their publicity to the motion picture editors. The editors usually have enough to do as it is. But these same exhibitors could talk with the editors, find out what stories had news values, furnish them with sufficient information about their pictures, let them in on a pre-view occasionally and find out what photos make the best newspaper cuts. And, ten to one, the movie editors would be tickled to death to help the exhibitors out.

We know of one case where a good picture was falling down at the box office for some unexplainable reason. The manager came over to the movie editor, told him that his picture was flopping and asked him to give him some help. As a result the manager received extra, worthwhile publicity during the week. We will not say that the business showed a tremendous improvement, but it did improve and proved one fact—that the editors are more than willing to cooperate. They want better pages. And they know better publicity will help them to better pages and better news mean more interest in pictures—and that is what every exhibitor wants.

JAMES C. BRADFORD

Mr. Bradford, of the Cameo Music Company, makers of the Thematic Music Cue Sheets, wrote the score for the Johnny Hines feature, "The Early Bird," and directed the orchestra for the special preview showing of this riotous comedy in the grand ball room at the Hotel Astor.

Mae Carroll Signed

Century Roof Beauty Will Return to Films Under M. H. Karper

Mae Carroll, vivacious stage and screen beauty, the original "Century Roof Girl," has been placed under a three-year contract by M. H. Karper, stage and screen impresario and head of Karper Productions, 1480 Broadway, who will exploit and feature Miss Carroll exclusively for the pictures.

Mr. Karper first met Miss Carroll during a performance on the Century Roof, where the now famous screen stars, Nita Naldi and Dorothy MacKail, were "discovered." He was so impressed with Miss Carroll's work that he immediately offered her a contract to star in "The Japanese Honeymoon," his own musical extravaganza, in which Miss Carroll toured the B. F. Keith circuit.

Following two successful seasons in "The Japanese Honeymoon," Miss Carroll left the Karper management to accept an offer to join Eddie Cantor's Midnight Rounders, in which she appeared with Mr. Cantor until she entered the pictures.

Immediately after Miss Carroll's return to New York from Hollywood, where she played in comedies, negotiations for her return under Mr. Karper's management were taken up.

Barthelmess Completes "New Toys"

Richard Barthelmess has completed for First National distribution his new Inspiration production, "New Toys," from the stage play by Oscar Hammerstein II and Milton Herbert Gropper. It is in this picture that Mrs. Barthelmess (Mary Hay) makes her reappearance in films as leading woman. After a business trip to the Pacific Coast, Mr. Barthelmess will start his new production for the First National program on February 14. This is an adaptation of Martin Brown's new play, "Great Music," retitled for the screen. It will be released as "Soul-Fire."

Hudson Adds to Scenario Staff of First National

EARL HUDSON, who recently advanced the theory that newspaper reporters are the best class of writers from which to develop scenario writers, is giving his theory the benefit of a thorough test. Hudson yesterday added two more newspaper veterans to his scenario departments with First National Pictures.

They are Jack Jungmeyer, former Los Angeles correspondent and feature writer for the Newspaper Enterprise Association, and Raymond S. Harris, New York and San Francisco veteran.

The new members will collaborate with Joseph Franklin Poland and Earl Snell, former reporters who have achieved distinction by their recent adaptations for First National of Colleen Moore's hits, "The Perfect Flapper" and "Flirting With Love."

Poland and Snell will be separated, the former collaborating with Harris on "The Eternal Lamps," scheduled for early production with Doris Kenyon in the featured role. Jungmeyer will work with Snell on the continuity of Stephen Vincent Benet's magazine tale, "Uriah's Son."

Hudson, himself a former newspaper editor, voiced the belief that men of wide newspaper experience are best qualified for the work of adapting books and stories to the screen, because of their broad contact with life in all its dramatic phases, its richness of detail and variety of experience.

Jungmeyer is well known to the film industry through his connection for many years as a reviewer of films and writer of film topics. Harris has had several years experience in scenario work, having been scenario editor of C. C. Burr productions. His latest effort was the continuity of "The Speed Spook," in which Johnny Hines was featured.

With the engaging of Marion Orth and Elaine Sterne, well-known scenario and magazine writers, Mr. Hudson's First National units now have a formidable staff to carry out the literary phases of the Eastern production program arranged by General Manager R. A. Rowland.

Miss Orth is to prepare the adaptation of "Chickie." Elinor Meherin's sensational novel which has been appearing serially in newspapers throughout the country. Miss Sterne is adapting "Uriah's Son," in which Ben Lyon is to be featured, from a magazine story by Stephen Vincent Benet.

Hudson's staff now contains four women, including Marion Fairfax, who is chief of the editorial staff, and Alice Scully. Miss Fairfax is editing "The Lost World," which First National and Watterson R. Rothacker are producing from Conan Doyle's adventurous novel. This spectacle is expected to be completed in about a month.

Arthur Statter and Alice Scully have completed the continuity of "One Way Street," which John Francis Dillon has started filming with Ben Lyon and Anna Q. Nilsson in the featured roles.

"Desert Flower"

First National Pictures, Inc., announces the purchase of the screen rights to "The Desert Flower," the new play by Don Mullally, author of "Conscience," now current on Broadway, for future production. "The Desert Flower" is a play of primitive love and passion.

Scene from "Peter Pan" which Herbert Brenon produced for Paramount.

New Comedies Under Way For Educational's Program

MANY new comedies are under way for Educational under the supervision of the Christie Studio producing organizations.

The Bobby Vernon unit has just returned from Catalina Island where ten days were spent making a part of Bobby's new picture. The company left San Diego harbor with the Sea Bee, a sixty-four-foot schooner, the Apache, a barge, Al. Christie's speedboat, the Miss Sunset, a squad of carpenters and property men and several actors. Harold Beaudine, the director, was nearly given up as lost the first night when he was driving the runabout, the Bluejacket, following the schooner on which the company was going to location. Beaudine, lost in the fog west of Catalina, went entirely around the island, a distance of about fifty miles, before he found his bearings.

The Walter Hiers Company has finished Hiers' third picture, which will be called "Good Spirits." The comedy will revolve around a house in which a fake spiritualist medium holds forth. Hiers will be supported by Duane Thompson, Jack Duffy, William Blaisdell and Jack McHugh, who has been featured in educational-Juvenile comedies.

Two Christie companies are working on new pictures. Jimmie Adams will be in "Smoked Out." While Neal Burns will appear in a comedy probably titled "Sea Legs." Vera Steadman will be seen as his leading lady. The Burns comedy is being made on the steamer Ruth Alexander, which plies up and down the coast between Alaskan ports and San Diego. The balance of the picture will be shot in the studio where a realistic set of the interior of the ship has been erected.

Kathleen Myers, one of the Christie leading ladies, has just finished an engagement in drama as leading lady to Tom Mix in his big production, "Dick Turpin," which the Fox Company will release as a special next year. Miss Myers is back again at the Christie Studios and will be Jimmie Adams' leading lady in the new comedy to be put in production after Adams finishes "Smoked Out."

Educational's on Broadway

Broadway is dotted with Educational Comedies this week. At the Rialto the Educational-Larry Semon Special Comedy, "Kid Speed," is on the bill. At the Strand, the Cameo Comedy, "Watch Your Pep," is an item on the program, while at the new Piccadilly, Kinograms, Educational's news reel, is showing in its entirety.

NAZIMOVA

Featured in First National's "My Son," and shortly to be seen in other First National features.

Educational Starts 1925 with Rare List of Shorts

EDUCATIONAL is starting off the new year with a representative program of one and two-reel comedies. The January schedule calls for four two-reel comedies and four single-reel subjects of comedy and novelty.

The two-reel releases will comprise one each of the Bobby Vernon Comedies, Mermaid Comedies, Christie Comedies and a Walter Hiers Comedy, while the single reel releases will consist of two Cameo Comedies and one release each of the Earl Hurd Pen and Ink Vaudeville series and the Lyman H. Howe Hodge-Podge series.

The first week of the new year will present Bobby Vernon in "French Pastry," a two-reel Bobby Vernon Comedy with the World War as a background. Vernon will be supported by Anne Cornwall. The single-reel comedy for the week will be "Have Mercy," a Cameo Comedy with Cliff Bowes, Virginia Vance and Phil Dunham.

The week of January 11 has for its two-reel release the Mermaid Comedy "Low Tide" with Ned Sparks in the leading role supported by Peg O'Neill and the Mermaid cast. Sparks is a newcomer to the Marmaid ranks but has previously appeared on the Educational program in Tuxedo Comedies. "Broadcasting" will be the single-reel subject for the week. This is an Earl Hurd Cartoon Comedy with the popular radio craze as a foundation for the comedy.

A Christie Comedy, as yet untitled, is scheduled for release the week starting January 18. This is said to be one of the funniest and fastest comedies in which Jimmie Adams has yet appeared. "The Mad Rush" is the single-reel release of the week, a Cameo Comedy with Cliff Bowes, Virginia Vance and Phil Dunham.

Walter Hiers will be seen in his third Walter Hiers Comedy on the last week of the month in "Good Spirits," a comedy with spooks and spiritualism as the basis of many funny gags. The week is completed with the Lyman H. Howe Hodge-Podge subject, "Topsy Turvy Travel."

Kinograms, Educational's news reel, will continue its twice-a-week issue of up-to-the-minute news and views.

Scene from "Desert Blues," an Educational Cameo Comedy with Cliff Bowes and Virginia Vance.

"Ten Commandments" Begins Second Year on Broadway

LAST SUNDAY Cecil B. DeMille's production, "The Ten Commandments" entered its second year of a Broadway engagement. This is the second motion picture in history of the industry to accomplish the feat. The first was "The Covered Wagon," which ran continuously at the Criterion Theatre for fifty-nine weeks. "The Ten Commandments" is now in its fifty-third week on Broadway, showing at the Criterion, although it opened at the George M. Cohan Theatre.

A second opening night was celebrated Monday at the Criterion Theatre with Richard Dix as host. He received his friends during the intermission. Throughout the week souvenir calendars in three colors, suspended by silk cords, and bronze watch charms inscribed with the Ten Commandments were distributed to the audience.

Approximately 1,000,000 persons have paid admissions of 50 cents, $1.00 and $1.50 to see "The Ten Commandments" on Broadway. It is estimated that another million have paid the same admissions to see the production exhibited by ten road companies which have had engagements in most of the principal cities in the United States. Those who are familiar with the average time that a big attraction can play in key points of the United States can get a good idea of the drawing power of "The Ten Commandments" from the fact that it played San Francisco, and Cleveland for eight weeks; Detroit, Washington and Cincinnati for five weeks, and Kansas City and St. Louis for four weeks.

In Europe the production has had several long runs in the capital cities. It played sixteen weeks in London, ten weeks in Melbourne, and six weeks in Sydney and Berlin.

"The Ten Commandments" has not been shown anywhere at popular prices and will not be seen at less than the present prices during 1925.

"Dressmaker From Paris" to Feature Leatrice Joy

LEATRICE JOY will return to the screen after an absence of more than eight months and will play in "The Dressmaker from Paris." The popular Paramount player, who was to have been elevated to stardom when her retirement was announced last Spring, corroborated Mr. Lasky's announcement, and took possession of her old dressing room at the Lasky Studio where most of her film successes have been made.

Miss Joy's return to her old dressing room was a signal for a series of congratulatory welcomes from scores of players who were associated with her in many of her former triumphs, notably, "Manslaughter," "Triumph," and "The Ten Commandments."

Mr. Lasky expressed satisfaction in once again adding Miss Joy to the list of brilliant players now appearing in Paramount pictures.

"Miss Joy is one of the brightest personalities of the screen," stated the executive. "Plans for her elevation to stardom, interrupted by her retirement, will now be renewed."

Miss Joy also expressed delight at being able to resume her work. "There was a time when I thought it would be necessary to abandon my career in order to devote my entire time to my baby, but happily I find this will not be required," said the actress, who was busily engaged in rearranging her dressing room perched above the giant stages of the Lasky Studio. "I am delighted beyond words with the plans which Mr. Lasky has for me and I am especially happy over the picture that marks the close of my temporary retirement."

"The Dressmaker from Paris" will be produced by Paul Bern, and will be started in Hollywood early in January. It will be one of the most lavishly staged productions in the history of the screen and will present the most elaborate array of fashion which the vast wardrobe department in the Paramount studio is capable of attending to.

Ernest Torrence has been cast in this production and will play chief character role.

Stromberg Supervising

Jacqueline Logan will next be seen on the Producers Distributing Corporation program under Hunt Stromberg's supervision, according to an announcement made this week upon the arrival of the star in Los Angeles. Stromberg has started supervision of "Off The Highway," with Miss Logan in the stellar role, at the Ince studio, for release by Producers Distributing Corporation on January 25th.

"His Supreme Moment"

The title of the next Samuel Goldwyn-George Fitzmaurice production for First National release will be "His Supreme Moment." This is the production previously announced under the title which the author, May Edginton, gave to her story, "World Without End." Two of the three leading players have been selected. They are Blanche Sweet and Ronald Colman.

Prod. Dist. Corp. Executives See "Big Business" for 1925

THE FOUR executives of Producers Distributing Corporation, F. C. Munroe, Raymond Pawley, Paul C. Mooney and John C. Flinn, who have been away on active company business, returned to New York this week, intensely enthusiastic over present conditions and inspiringly optimistic on immediate prospects.

F. C. Munroe and Raymond Pawley came direct from Los Angeles, where they consummated deals with several big producers that will add many exceptionally important pictures to the Pro-Dis-Co program during the coming year. The details of these deals are not yet ready for publication, but it is understood that the plans call for names in each story, director, and cast that will make each production a combination of box-office assets.

On the way East, Munroe and Pawley were joined by Mooney and Flinn at Chicago, where they had held the last of the series of Sales Conventions, and after personal contact with the salesmen in the field as well as the branch managers, Paul Mooney felt justified in predicting an even greater success in 1925 than the company enjoyed in 1924.

"In heart-to-heart talks with our sales force," said Mr. Mooney, "they told me the exhibitors are expressing general satisfaction with the product we supplied during the current year, and with this friendly disposition backing us in 1925, plus the bigger and better pistures that we will distribute, we cannot fail to have a great year.

"When we announced the list of pictures for the first period between February 2nd and July 15th, the men assembled at each convention rose to their feet and actually shouted their expressions of approval and confidence that their respective territories would show big increases with the coming product.

"I have attended many sales conferences but I have never come from any that filled me with as much enthusiasm as the ones we have just held in New York, Cleveland and Chicago."

The second and third of the Anniversary Sales Conferences of Producers Distributing Corporation, held last week at Cleveland and Chicago, were, like the New York Conference, marked by displays of exceptional enthusiasm when Paul C. Mooney in charge of distribution read the official reports of the splendid accomplishments of the company in the first year of its existence, and John C. Flinn announced the titles and described the pictures that the sales force will have to sell during the coming season.

Following the first sales conference held at the Commodore Hotel in New York on December 12th and 13th, Paul Mooney and John Flinn went to Cleveland where the Central Division managers and salesmen assembled at the Hollenden Hotel for a two day session last Monday and Tuesday, (Dec. 15th and 16th) followed by a third conference with the Mid-Western division at the Congress Hotel in Chicago on Wednesday and Thursday (Dec. 17th and 18th).

Those attending the Cleveland Convention were Vice President Paul C. Mooney; Vice President John C. Flinn; Central Division Manager Robert Cotton; Western Division Manager L. W. Weir; J. J. Mooney, Cleveland Manager; R. E. Peckham, Detroit Manager; Dudley Williston, Indianapolis Manager; N. G. Shafer, Cincinnati Manager; Charles W. Tyler, Indianapolis salesman; R. Mochrie and F. G. Schram, Cleveland salesmen; W. L. Schmidt, J. C. DeWalt and Joseph P. Hamilton, Cincinnati salesmen; Arthur Richardson, C. A. Gordon and E. H. Shalitt, Detroit salesmen.

The third convention at the Congress Hotel, Chicago was attended by Mid-West Division Manager Cecil Maberry; Western Division Manager L. W. Weir; Branch Managers: H. S. Lorch, Chicago; C. H. Feldman, Minneapolis; C. D. Hill, St. Louis; Charles Knickerbocker, Kansas City; Truly Wildman, Omaha; G. C. Brown, New Orleans; R. A. Morrow, Dallas. Salesmen: Clarence Phillips, Thomas Greenwood, Sig Decker, J. M. Hickey, W. Van Gelder, Charles Lundgren, Chicago; Frank Owens, Minneapolis; L. W. Brown, W. S. Haynes, G. I. Bradford, J. H. Bradford, of St. Louis; L. W. Nathanson and George Naylor, Kansas City; Milton Frank, of Omaha.

Rin-Tin-Tin's Latest

"Tracked in the Snow Country" Goes Into Work For Warner Bros.

"Tracked in the Snow Country" is the title of the famous Rin-Tin-Tin's latest starring picture for Warner Bros. As the picture opens Rin-Tin-Tin is introduced as quite a young puppy, and for the first time in the history of dog pictures, Rin-Tin-Tin's own offspring will play this part, "Rinty" having only recently become the proud father of seven police puppies.

Herman Raymaker, long known for his direction of hazardous and dangerous stunts is handling the megaphone in this latest canine production. The company leaves shortly for Truckee to make the snow scenes, and will take with them the entire cast, including Rin-Tin-Tin, June Marlowe, David Butler, Charles Sellon and Mitchell Lewis.

Warners Take the Dome

The Dome Theatre in Youngstown, Ohio is now in the possession of Warner Bros., the property having been turned over to the firm on Saturday December 13, and is the first of a chain which the company intends to establish throughout that state. Sam Warner went out to Youngstown to close the deal and formally take over the house. Harold Lloyd in "Hot Water" was the opening attraction under the new management, and the company intends to immediately put in one of its best recently released pictures to be followed by the firm's output of 20 Screen Classics.

Wright Film in Michigan

American Booking Co. Takes Principal's "The Mine With the Iron Door"

Irving M. Lesser, vice president of Principal Pictures Corporation, announces that Harry Rathner, special representative of Principal, has closed a deal by which the American Booking Company will handle Harold Bell Wright's "The Mine With The Iron Door," the Baby Peggy Principal productions and the Big 6, distributed through Principal, for the Michigan territory.

Representatives of the American Booking Company took over the Michigan territory after studying the run at the Madison Theatre, Detroit, of "The Mine With The Iron Door." At this run the Harold Bell Wright picture smashed records and caused much favorable comment.

"Baxter," Warner's Next

Mal St. Clair has finished "On Thin Ice," at the Warner Bros. studio, and has been assigned to "How Baxter Butted In" as the next picture to go into production. Margaret Seddon has been engaged to play Mrs. Dyer, and is the first of the cast selected. This is an old stage play of fond memory, and has plenty of opportunity for comedy situations. "On Thin Ice" has in it Tom Moore, William Russell, Edith Roberts, Theodore Von Eltz and Wilfred North.

Artclass Producer Seeking Story Material for Stars

LESTER F. SCOTT, JR., producer of the Buffalo Bill, Jr. and Buddy Roosevelt series of Western action features, distributed by Weiss Brothers' Artclass Pictures Corporation, is spending his holidays with Mrs. Scott in New York, combining business with pleasure.

While Mrs. Scott is doing her holiday shopping and sightseeing, her husband is busy at the offices of the Weiss Brothers' Artclass Pictures Corporation, 1540 Broadway, where he makes his headquarters, planning new thrillers for the coming season.

In addition to the Buffalo Bill, Jr. and Buddy Roosevelt series of eight five-reel features each, which Mr. Scott plans to produce next year on a most elaborate scale, in point of story, settings and production cost, it is announced that he also is completing plans for a third series of similar high quality and box office appeal, but which will be distinctly novel in character.

Who the featured player will be has not yet been disclosed, but it is said to be a well-known Western star, who has already won a wide following among picture fans and whose name will be a box-office asset of as proven worth as those of his future running mates, Buffalo Bill, Jr. and Buddy Roosevelt.

Both these young stars, according to Mr. Scott, have demonstrated that they are no longer "comers," but real attractions at the theatres showing their pictures and their popularity among the public is increasing by leaps and bounds, according to reports from the exchanges in all sections.

Mr. Scott is devoting part of his busy time while staying in New York, on a still hunt for fresh material for features for Buffalo Bill, Jr., Buddy Roosevelt and his new series. He wants to get high-class action stories, which call for plenty of thrilling episodes and for locales and settings that are typical of the Western country, but which are away from the beaten path of cut and dried "Western."

He confesses that thus far his quest has not been attended entirely by success, for most of the stories thus far vised are not of the quality demanded, but he is dickering now with a well-known writer to furnish him with at least four during the coming season, and hopes to get others before he returns West.

Either published stories or original scripts will be acceptable, Mr. Scott says, but the stories must be high class in tone and novel in plot and incident, for Mr. Scott's plans for the coming season include only features of extraordinary box-office quality and require plot material out of the ordinary run.

During his stay here, Mr. Scott may be reached at Weiss Brothers' Artclass Pictures Corporation, 1540 Broadway, New York, and after his return to the Coast early in January, at the Action Pictures, Inc. studio, 933 Seward street, Hollywood, Cal.

Barbara La Marr's Story

To Be Published By "Movie Weekly" In Nine Installments

Under arrangements entered into between Movie Weekly, one of the fan publications, and Associated Pictures Corporation, the life story of Barbara La Marr will be published serially in this magazine beginning Saturday, December 13th.

This serial will take the form of nine installments and it has been written by Miss La Marr herself and edited by Bert Ennis, director of publicity for the star.

The publication of this serial, marks as far as is known, the first time that a famous motion picture player has written his or her own life story. Miss La Marr will soon start work on her next picture for release through First National, "Hail and Farewell," from William Hurlburt's stage success.

New Title: "On Thin Ice"

Mal St. Clair has just completed "The Dear Pretender" under the title of "On Thin Ice" at the Warner Bros. Hollywood studio. This is the novel by Alice Ross Colder that made quite a hit on publication. It was adapted to the screen by Darryl Francis Zannuck. A feature cast and a special scenic production promises to make this picture one of real entertainment with several big exploitation angles. Tom Moore is the featured player supported by Edith Roberts, William Russell, Theodore Von Eltz, Wilfred North, and William T. Norris.

Gantvoort a Producer

Motion Picture Expert Turns to Spoken Drama With New Barry Conners Play

A new theatrical producer has been added to Broadway's growing managerial population. His name is Herman Gantvoort, and his debut will occur shortly, with "Fool's Gold," a new play by Barry Conners, author of "Strange Bedfellows," "Applesauce" and "The Dreamer." Mr. Gantvoort is not new to Broadway. For a number of years he was prominent in the concert field, both as a singer and composer. He first came to New York to sing in Victor Herbert's "Madcap Duchess." Later he entered the motion picture field, and in association with Laurens Hammond introduced "Teleview," the first stereoscopic motion pictures. He and Mr. Hammond also sponsored the "Shadowgraph," which for over a year has been one of the big hits in the "Ziegfeld Follies."

Mr. Gantvoort has signed Edmund Breese for the principal role in "Fool's Gold," which will reach the screen later. Others in the cast will be Edward Garvie, Humphrey Bogart, Lottie Linthicum, Shirley Booth and Violet Dunn.

Century Title Changes

Abe Stern, vice-president of Century comedies, has changed the titles of four recently produced Century comedies. Edna Marian's latest production has been changed from "Rich Ideas," to "Putting On Airs." "You Cute Little Devil," starring Wanda Wiley, has been changed to "Queen of Hearts." "Cleaning Up," which Jess Robbins directed with Eddie Gordon, Larry Richardson and Beth Darlington, has been changed to "The Polo Kid." "Who's to Blame," made with Arthur Lake and Beth Darlington under Charles Lamont's direction, has been changed to "Love Sick."

PEGGY KELLY

New vamp to appear in "School for Wives," to be a Vitagraph release.

London Likes C. B. C. Films

Trade Showings of "Midnight Express" and "Racing for Life" Win Praise

A cablegram received from Pathe Freres Cinema, Ltd., of London, states that at the special showing given on December 17th at the Rialto Theatre, London, the exhibitors were unanimous in their approval of "The Midnight Express," the C. B. C. special which Pathe Freres acquired for Great Britain.

Special comment was made of the exceptional acting by William Haines and Elaine Hammerstein in this picture.

"Racing for Life," the Perfection picture, also produced by C. B. C. and featuring Eva Novak and William Fairbanks, distributed by Wardour of London, was given a trade showing and likewise received the commendation of the exhibitors as a feature that was worthy of popular general booking.

Bookings for "Royal Jazz"

For the first time in the history of the Stanley Theatre, Philadelphia, there is a one-reel comedy on its program. The picture is a Pathe single-reeler featuring Charley Chase, produced by Hal Roach under the title of "The Royal Razz." In Chicago, the three leading Balaban & Katz theatres, the Chicago, the Riviera and the Rivoli, are also running the film over the holiday week.

Mary Astor and Clive Brook in "Enticement," a First National release.

DORIS KENYON

Charming star will shortly be seen in First National's "A Thief in Paradise" and "The Interpreter's House."

Metro-Goldwyn Features Listed in January Releases

FIVE releases were announced by Metro-Goldwyn this week for January, a month which will see some of this company's finest productions of the season reach the screens of the country.

"Chu-Chin-Chow," the Oriental spectacle filmed abroad with Betty Blythe in the leading role, will be released January 5; Reginald Barker's "The Dixie Handicap" on January 12; Rupert Hughes' "Excuse Me" on January 19; Robert Z. Leonard's "Cheaper to Marry" on January 26; and Jackie Coogan's "The Rag Man" also on January 26. All five pictures, except "Cheaper to Marry," are completed.

"Chu-Chin-Chow," produced and directed by Herbert Wilcox from the sensational stage success by Oscar Asche and Frederic Norton, has been pre-shown in Washington. The three remaining productions are in the cutting and titling stage.

"The Dixie Handicap" was produced for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer by Reginald Barker from the story by Gerald Beaumont, adapted to the screen by Waldemar Young. Frank Keenan, Claire Windsor, Lloyd Hughes, John Sainpolis and Otis Harlan have leading roles.

"Excuse Me" is a Rupert Hughes production directed from the Hughes stage success by Alf Goulding. Norma Shearer, Conrad Nagel, Renee Adoree, Walter Hiers and John Boles have the leading roles.

"Cheaper to Marry," Robert Z. Leonard's production, is a picturization of the successful drama by Samuel Shipman. Alice D. G. Miller wrote the scenario, while Frederick and Fannie Hatton made the adaptation. Conrad Nagel, Marguerite de la Motte and Lewis Stone are featured.

Browning Signed by Metro, Will Direct Mae Busch

TOD BROWNING, one of the foremost film directors, has been placed under contract by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer to make a series of productions, according to announcement by Irving G. Thalberg, studio executive.

"The Unholy Three" will be Browning's first production. Mae Busch has been cast for the feminine lead. Browning has just completed a series for another company, and has moved his offices to the Culver City studios at Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. Production will start at once on "The Unholy Three," which Thalberg expects to be one of the company's biggest winners of the season. Production plans call for an especially pretentious picture. "The Unholy Three" is said to have everything necessary to screen popularity.

Miss Busch made her last Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer appearance in "Married Flirts."

Browning, in many years of directorial experience, has made a reputation as a director of melodrama and underworld stories. "The Virgin of Stamboul," "Under Two Flags," "White Tiger," "Outside the Law," and "Drifting" are typical of the type of box-office pictures that have made Browning the figure of prominence that he is, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer expects the Tod Browning series to be among the best of its 1925 product.

Browning is the second director to be signed by the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer organization in the past few weeks. Josef von Sternberg having been placed under contract to direct for this company at the completion of his two-picture agreement with Mary Pickford.

Margaret Quimby Signed

Announcement has been made by Universal of the signing of a long-term contract by Margaret Quimby, former Follies' beauty and dancer, who recently was leading lady for Jack Dempsey in his "Fight and Win" films.

Alice Calhoun's Role

Plays Three Ages in Vitagraph's "Pampered Youth," a David Smith Production

For the first time in her career on the screen, Alice Calhoun, the Vitagraph star, plays a role in "Pampered Youth" which shows her first as a young woman, then as a young mother, and finally as a matron past middle age.

Such a role is by no means an easy one to play, and calls for all the makeup ability and craftsmanship that can be accumulated in years of thoughtful work. When David Smith, the producer of "Pampered Youth," was recruiting his cast, he was a trifle skeptical of Miss Calhoun's ability to conceal her youthful beauty in the period that calls for age. Also, there was the difficulty of playing a mother part to a person actually her own age. But Miss Calhoun has met every test splendidly.

"Pampered Youth" is a picturization of Booth Tarkington's Pulitzer prize-winning novel, "The Magnificent Ambersons."

William Fox presents Shirley Mason in "Curlytop."

Frank Lloyd Productions

"The Rose of Monterey" and "The Splendid Road" Acquired for Director

First National Pictures has recently acquired the screen rights to two stories which will serve as Frank Lloyd productions. Mr. Lloyd recently completed photography on "Her Husband's Secret," from the May Edginton story, "Judgment," with Antonio Moreno and Patsy Ruth Miller in the leading roles, and is now in New York consulting with R. A. Rowland, general manager of First National, concerning his future productions.

The story that will probably be done next by Mr. Lloyd is "The Rose of Monterey," by Minna Smith and Eugenie Woodward. This is a dramatic love story with an historical background of annexation of California by the United States.

Mr. Lloyd has accepted for summer production "The Splendid Road," the serial novel by Vingie E. Roe, now running in McCall's Magazine, the film rights to which First National recently acquired. This is a gold rush pioneer story of 1849 with a big love theme.

"From Office Boy to Boss"

Arthur Q. Hagerman Succeeds Garrett Graham at Hal Roach Studios

This story should read like a "Horatio Alger" and should be entitled "From Office Boy to Boss" because that is really what has happened to Arthur Q. Hagerman, now in charge of publicity at the Hal Roach Studios.

It was announced last week that Hagerman has succeeded Garret Graham as publicity manager on the Hal Roach lot. This announcement will recall to many the tall office boy who started to work in the publicity department at Universal City five years ago. He remained with the Universal organization until he was appointed manager of their West Coast publicity.

Leaving the Universal two years ago he became publicity representative for Louis B Mayer and remained with that organization uptil last week when he took up his new duties at the Hal Roach Studios. From now on he will be responsible for the publicizing of such subjects as "Our Gang," "The Spats" and Hal Roach Star Comedies, all distributed by Pathe.

Circuit Takes "Foolish Virgin"

C. B. C. officials have just been notified that Commonwealth Film Exchange of New York has booked their Columbia Picture, "The Foolish Virgin," over the entire Keith circuit starting January 5th. "The Foolish Virgin" is the film version of Thomas Dixon's novel of the same name. The featured players are Elaine Hammerstein and Robert Fraser, supported by Phyllis Haver, Lloyd Whitlock and others. George W. Hill was the director.

Lucille Lee Stewart Signed

After concluding their triumphant vaudeville tour of the Orpheum Circuit of Theatres, Joe Weber and Lew Fields arrived in Los Angeles this week to appear in the screen adaption of "Friendly Enemies," which A. H. Sebastian will present through the Producers Distributing Corporation during the coming season. Lucille Lee Stewart, who has the leading feminine role opposite the famous team of stage stars, arrived in Hollywood this week.

Chicago Tribune Party

The Chicago Tribune staged a gigantic Christmas Party for orphans, crippled and destitute children in Chicago's greatest auditorium, The Coliseum. In conjunction with McVickers Theatre, a special Christmas entertainment was presented, featuring the first showing in the world of Paramount's "Peter Pan." Tickets were issued by The Tribune to more than 11,000 kiddies who otherwise would never see this production. A fleet of chartered busses, trucks and street cars assembled to carry this army of children to and from The Coliseum.

11,000 boxes of candy were distributed. 1,000 Boy Scouts were ushers. A monster Christmas tree and the biggest Santa Claus in the world will be added features.

McVickers Theatre Symphony Orchestra, directed by Spitalny, supplied the music.

Will Claim $1,000 Bet

Irving Lesser Upsets Sol's Calculations in re: "A 1924 Honeymoon"

When Irving M. Lesser, vice president of Principal Pictures Corporation, was married two months ago to Miss Helen Shaw, member of an old Pennsylvania family, Mr. and Mrs. Sol Lesser, then in New York, attended the ceremony, and Sol asked:

"Where are you going on your honeymoon, Irving?"

"Right here in New York," was the reply. "No time for a honeymoon trip. Too much work with Harold Bell Wright's pictures. We will take our honeymoon later on. Helen agrees with me on this."

"Tell you what I'll do, Irving," said Sol. "One thousand dollars says you will not take a honeymoon trip this year. I know you better than anybody else, and I know you won't be separated from your work—not even by such an important event as being married." Irving did not reply, but he did much quiet thinking.

Last week he made reservations on the Twentieth Century Limited and the Overland Limited for himself and his bride. On the day of his departure he sent the following wire to Sol:

"Leaving to-day on honeymoon. Going direct to San Francisco and then will visit you Los Angeles. Will claim $1,000."

"I'll claim the money," laughed Irving, "but I won't collect. You see, this trip is worth $1,000,000 to me, for I am taking to the Coast a priceless super-special—Mrs. Irving M. Lesser. Am I not right, dear?"

Mrs. Lesser blushed and train hands and newspaper men turned their heads away.

Romance is a great thing, even off the lot!

"I Want My Man"

First National Pictures has selected "I Want My Man" as the release title for "The Interpreter's House," now being made from Struthers Burt's novel by Director Lambert Hillyer at the company's New York studios, under the supervision of Earl Hudson. Milton Sills and Doris Kenyon are featured.

Europe's "Funniest Face"

Jack Root, for Mack Sennett, Signs Georgie Harriss, Now in Hollywood

Georgie Harriss, "the man with the funniest face in all Europe," has arrived in Los Angeles and will soon start to work at the Mack Sennet lot. Harriss is the product of the English Music Halls and was discovered last summer by Jack Root in Northeast London.

During his stay in Europe, Jack Root interviewed comedians in the British Isles, France, Germany, Holland, Spain, Italy and the Balkan States, on the look-out for motion picture comedy material. He finally selected Georgie Harriss from the thousands of candidates from the stage comedy field.

The comedian is a small man, 5 feet 4 inches tall and weighing 102 pounds. He was born in Liverpool 26 years ago and at the age of ten first appeared on the English "kerosene variety circuits." Since then he has achieved considerable fame in his chosen field.

Records for "Classmates"

The Richard Barthelmess-Inspiration-First National Film Sweeps 'Frisco

First National's latest Richard Barthelmess-Inspiration release, "Classmates," from the old stage success by William C. DeMille, is creating new box office records throughout the country. At its recent showing at Loew's Warfield Theatre, San Francisco, it went $5,000 in excess of any picture ever played by any motion picture theatre in San Francisco, breaking every known record.

First National states that "Classmates" is already ranking right along with Mr. Barthelmess' previous biggest success, "Tol'able David," and that prospects are that it will even surpass that notable achievement in box office receipts.

Selling "After Six Days"

Louis Weiss, executive head of Weiss Brothers' Artclass Pictures Corporation, announced early this week that the details of a deal covering the sale of the Eastern Missouri and Southern Illinois territory on "After Six Days," the big ten-reel Artclass attraction, picturing the Old Testament, had been practically completed. Jack Weil, well-known St. Louis picture man, is the purchaser. Mr. Weil is now organizing a new distributing company to handle the Weiss Brothers' super-attraction in this territory and later will also distribute other big features of similar box-office quality. His headquarters will be in St. Louis, Missouri.

"One Year to Live"

Director Irving Cummings is deep in the filming of M. C. Levee's next production for First National release, "One Year to Live," from John Hunter's widely syndicated novel, which he is making at the Clune Studios. The cast has been completed with the addition of Rosemary Theby, Joseph Kilgour and Leo White. It already had a roster of brilliant players—Aileen Pringle, Antonio Moreno, Dorothy Mackaill, Tully Marshall, Marc MacDermott, Robert Edeson and Marjorie Daw. A host of Hollywood's most beautiful girls will appear in the first sequence of "One Year to Live," which shows a masquerade ball on the stage of the Theatre Internationale in Paris.

Goldwyn-Freud Pictures

"Psychology of Love" and "Advice to the Lovelorn" Slated for Production

"Psychology of Love" and "Advice to the Lovelorn" will undoubtedly be the two first productions to be made by Samuel Goldwyn if he persuades Professor Sigmund Freud to collaborate on his pictures.

It is Mr. Goldwyn's intention to picturize love in a dramatic and human manner, using the Freudian science as a basic motif.

The appeal in both pictures will be directed to the average girl who feels the need of enlightenment in her heart problems.

Plans call for making the pictures straight screen entertainment with a stirring story of emotional character without, however, a preachment or moral.

Upon his return from Europe Mr. Goldwyn will announce the director he has chosen for these productions and will immediately start casting the pictures when he arrives in California.

"Her Husband's Secret"

Title Chosen for Frank Lloyd-First National Picture, "Judgment"

Frank Lloyd has selected a new title for his forthcoming First National picture based upon the May Edginton story, "Judgment." He will call it "Her Husband's Secret." Photography on the film has been completed, and Mr. Lloyd is now editing it and assisting in the titling.

Reports from the studio in Hollywood state that in his new picture, Mr. Lloyd has made another production to rank right along with "The Silent Watcher," which is proving a box-office success as well as a winner of the highest critical praise.

In the cast of "Her Husband's Secret" are Antonio Moreno, Patsy Ruth Miller, David Torrence, Ruth Clifford, Phyllis Haver and Walter McGrail.

Completed Ince Pictures

The Thomas H. Ince studios have completed the two productions for First National release which were far along in production at the time of Mr. Ince's death, and to which he had devoted a large share of personal attention. The two productions are "Enticement," from Clive Arden's new novel, directed by George Archainbaud, with Mary Astor, Ian Keith and Clive Brook in the leads, and "Playing with Souls," from the novel by the Countess de Chambrau. Ralph Ince directed the latter production. The leading players are Mary Astor, Belle Bennett, Clive Brook, Jacqueline Logan and William Collier, Jr. These two Ince productions are now being edited and titled and prints are expected at First National's home office early in January.

Vignola Directing "Declasse"

Director Robert G. Vignola has started photography on Zoe Akins' "Declasse," the next Corinne Griffith production for First National release. Miss Griffith will have the role portrayed on the stage by Ethel Barrymore. Clive Brook has been signed for the part of Solomon. The cast includes Lloyd Hughes, Lilyan Tashman, Rockcliffe Fellowes, Edgar Norton, Hedda Hopper, Gale Henry, Louise Fazenda and Eddie Lyons.

Queen Mother Sees "Beaucaire"

High tribute was paid the motion picture industry in Great Britain on Dec. 1st, when a command showing of "Monsieur Beaucaire" was held at Sandringham as the feature of a surprise program arranged in honor of the eightieth birthday of Queen Alexandra. The royal command was issued to Reginald C. Bromhead, managing director of the Gaumont Company, Ltd., who selected the Paramount picture from among scores of available subjects.

Inasmuch as "Monsieur Beaucaire" is one of Queen Alexandra's favorite stories, she is reported as having enjoyed its presentation in motion picture form.

Simmonds-Kann Deal

Harry Rowson Announces Foreign Plans for "Charley's Aunt"

Just prior to sailing for home on the S. S. Majestic this week Harry Rowson of Ideal Films, London, announced the closing of contract with Simmonds-Kann Enterprises, Inc., whereby that firm acquires the rights in all foreign countries except the United Kingdom, on the big Al Christie feature "Charley's Aunt," starring Sydney Chaplin, that will be released in the United States through the Producers Distributing Coporation.

In speaking of this contract, Mr. Rowson said, "'Charley's Aunt' has been played on the legitimate English stage for over thirty-three years and it is as familiar a name as 'Mother Goose.' Several traveling companies are constantly playing it throughout England, and only yesterday I read in the New York papers that another revival of the play is being made in a West End London Theatre. I have just returned from Hollywood where I went to see the production and from what I have seen of it, it is unquestionably the biggest comedy success of all times.

"Because of the wide circulation that the play has had not only in the English speaking countries but in Germany and Central Europe as well, it was essential that we have the foreign distribution in those countries in proper hands. I was particularly impressed with the Simmonds-Kann organization and by the liberal, businesslike and fair treatment that they accorded to me. They have paid a record price for a picture of this type without seeing a print, based largely on my report to them, but I am certain that after seeing it, they will be as pleased as I was, with the production."

Second La Marr Picture

In order to establish the proper credit in connection with the adaptation of "Hail and Farewell," the second Sawyer-Lubin starring vehicle in which Barbara La Marr will appear, Arthur H. Sawyer, supervising director of Associated Pictures Corporation, has stated that this stage play has been adapted and put into continuity form by the Hattons, Frederic and Fanny. The Universal Studios at Fort Lee, N. J., have been engaged for the filming of this picture, and details as to director, supporting cast, etc., will be announced within the next few weeks.

Queen of Oakland Ball

Dorothy Devore, Warner Bros. Star, Signally Honored in California

The exhibitors of Oakland, Cal., sponsoring the Greater Movie Week in that city starting December 19, have chosen Dorothy Devore, newest featured player of Warner Bros., to be Queen of the Movie Ball, which will open the week of pageants and other feature calling attention to the motion picture industry.

Miss Devore will also be a guest of Oakland for a week prior to the ball at a celebration which will mark the presentation to the city of a $2,000,000 collection of African and Arctic natural history specimens by H. A. Snow, world known explorer.

These specimens were obtained by Mr. Snow while hunting big game with a camera, and were later shown to the public on the screen. They will be housed in the public museum of Oakland, and Miss Devore will take part in the presentation ceremonies.

"One Glorious Night"

C. B. C. Announces Release of Newest Elaine Hammerstein Picture

C. B. C. announces the release of "One Glorious Night," fourth of the series of eight Columbia Pictures. Elaine Hammerstein is the star. She is supported by Phyllis Haver, Al Roscoe, Freeman Wood, Lillian Elliot, Mathilda Brundage, Clarissa Selwynne and Edward Coxen.

This production is the third made by Miss Hammerstein for C. B. C. this season. The story is of a girl who believed that the possession of money was the prime requisite to happiness. A number of severe experiences prove to the contrary.

Her earlier vehicles were "The Foolish Virgin," which has just completed a successful run at the Broadway Theatre, and "The Midnight Express," which broke attendance records at the Broadway Theatre.

The Beginning of Vitagraph

The New Orleans Times Picayune said in a recent issue:

"John B. Rock, general manager of Vitagraph, Inc., with headquarters in New York, is in New Orleans for a rest and duck shoot. Mr. Rock calls this 'home,' because it was here that his father, the late William T. Rock, established and operated the city's first motion picture theatre, at Canal street and Exchange Place. The success of the venture eventually resulted in the organization of Vitagraph as a producing and distributing motion picture company. Mr. Rock expressed himself as being amazed at the growth and possibilities of New Orleans."

Mary Carr in Schulberg Pictures

Mary Carr, famous screen mother, is playing featured roles in two Preferred Pictures for B. P. Schulberg. She has a prominent place in the cast of the Schulberg special, "Capital Punishment" and is also featured in Gasnier's new Production, "The Parasite."

Stars Dash to East Studios to Start "Daughters Who Pay"

PRODUCTION work on "Daughters Who Pay," fourth and last of the Banner Big Four series, was begun at the Whitman Bennett Studio in Yonkers, on Monday, December 22nd, under the direction of George Terwilliger, according to an announcement by George H. Davis and Samuel J. Briskin, directing heads of Banner Productions, Inc.

John Bowers and Marguerite de la Motte, who head the all-star cast, and pending whose arrival from the Coast actual camera work had been held up, arrived in New York on Sunday and reported to Director Terwilliger at the studio promptly on Monday morning. Both stars had been busy at work on other productions on the Coast up to the minute when they took the train for New York, and it was only by making the closest connections that they were enabled to fulfill their promise to the Banner officials that they would be ready for work on December 22nd.

Besides the two named, who will be featured, the balance of the cast for "Daughters Who Pay," as now completed, includes: J. Barney Sherry, Paul Panzer, Alyce Mills, Joseph Striker and Marie Shoffer.

"Daughters Who Pay" was written and adapted for the screen by William B. Laub, and is scheduled as the fourth and final feature of the Banner Big Four series. The first three were, "The Truth About Women," "The Man Without a Heart" and "Those Who Judge."

According to present plans by the Banner officials, prints will be ready to go to the exchanges early in February, following "Speed," the Ben Verschleiser production, directed by Edward J. Le Saint from Grace Sartwell Mason's Saturday Evening Post story, which Banner Productions, Inc., also is handling.

"Daughters Who Pay" is said to be a society melodrama of unusual plot, which the Banner officials say offers great possibilities for sensational exploitation, and it is their intention to produce it upon a scale that will be most elaborate and which will bring out its distinctive box office qualities in the fullest degree.

"Phantom of the Opera"

Lon Chaney Heads Star Cast in Newest "U" Super-feature

Work is well under way at Universal City on "The Phantom of the Opera," a super-picture which is expected to rival "The Hunchback of Notre Dame" in grandeur. The film is adapted from Gaston Leroux's widely-read novel of the same name. Rupert Julian, who made "Merry-Go-Round," is the director, and Lon Chaney, star of "The Hunchback", also has the leading role in "The Phantom." Mary Philbin and Norman Kerry have the chief supporting roles.

The Parisian Opera House has been reproduced at Universal City for this production. The sets include the grand foyer, the auditorium, the stage, back stage scenes, and the vast labyrinth of storage places, moats and subterranean passages under the Opera House.

About 3000 extras are being used at Universal City these days for striking sequences of the picture.

"Baree" for Vitagraph

Jay Pilcher Completes Script for David Smith's Next Production

Jay Pilcher, writer of scripts for many of the Vitagraph productions, has just finished the script for "Baree, Son of Kazan," and David Smith will begin work on this picture soon, a dispatch from Hollywood to Vitagraph offices in New York says.

Mr. Pilcher wrote the scripts also for Rafael Sabatini's "Captain Blood," and "Pampered Youth," the latter of which, an adaptation of Booth Tarkington's "The Magnificent Ambersons," is to be released before many months of the new year have passed. Though "Baree" is widely different from these he found it a story greatly to his liking, and he is said to have followed the text closely.

"Baree, Son of Kazan" is a typical James Oliver Curwood story, most of its scenes laid in the northern snow country. Besides relating the adventures of a more than ordinarily appealing dog, it includes romance and adventure in which life in the wild, open tracts of the Northwest is mirrored faithfully, and affords uncommon opportunities for striking scenic effects.

Vitagraph counts itself fortunate in having obtained the services of Wolf, the world-celebrated war dog, personally decorated by Marshal Foch and declared by college professors who have put him to the test to possess almost human intellectual powers. It is expected that the cast of "Baree" will be announced soon.

Broskie in Charge of Jans Sales

Maurice Broskie, who has been associated with Herman F. Jans for more than seventeen years, and who has built up a wide reputation for fair treatment of exhibitors while with Jans Film Service Inc., has been appointed to take charge of sales for Jans Productions Inc. In his new capacity, Mr. Broskie left last week for a tour of the key cities in the interest of the first of the new Jans features, "Playthings of Desire." He will close the territory still open, and acquaint the exchangemen and exhibitors with the unusual exploitation possibilities of the picture, as well as "The Mad Dancer" and "Ermine and Rhinestones," which follow it.

Gerson Pictures to Renown

New York State and Northern New Jersey Rights Disposed of

Prior to leaving New York, General Manager Berger of Gerson Pictures, producing a series of Richard Holt productions and distributing them under franchise on the independent market, closed a deal with Manager Jack Bellman of Renown Exchange New York, whereby Renown will handle the entire series of eight pictures in the territory comprising the entire State of New York, Long Island, and Northern New Jersey.

After completing this transaction, which gives Renown two pictures already completed, "Ten Days" and "Too Much Youth," Mr. Berger left for Chicago and Milwaukee, and thence to San Francisco, to consult with the production officials of Gerson Pictures. Berger will then go to Los Angeles and Seattle to close for the West Coast franchises to this series.

Sales Manager Charles Schwerin who has left New York on a sales trip will go to Boston, Philadelphia Washington, Pittsburgh, Cleveland, Detroit, and then to St. Louis, Omaha, Atlanta and Dallas.

The Gerson Studios in San Francisco are now at work on "It Can Be Done," starring Richard Holt, which will be followed by "The Canvas-Kisser," "Once in a Lifetime" and "Going the Limit." This series will be directed by Duke Worne.

Leightons Back from Honolulu

A cablegram received this week anounces that Hope Loring and Louis Leighton, popular Warner Bros. writers, who have been vacationing in Honolulu for the last four weeks, will arrive at the studio next week. The cablegram stated further that "Eve's Lover," which they have been adapting during their absence, is completed and practically ready to go into production.

Australian Beauty Engaged

Trilby Clark, an Australian beauty of considerable prominence in that country, has been engaged by Julius Stern, president of Century Comedies, to play the part of the artist's model in "It's All Wrong," latest Century production featuring Hilliard Karr and Billy Engle.

Vitagraph's "Redeeming Sin" Stars Dazzling Nazimova

VITAGRAPH executives at the main offices in Brooklyn had their first view this week of "The Redeeming Sin," the first of the Nazimova specials made for that organization. The showing caused wild elation, the officials declaring that this photoplay is assured a high place in the current Vitagraph schedule, already acclaimed by reviewers and exhibitors as the best these producers and distributors have ever offered.

The performance of Nazimova is said to be a revelation, the world celebrated star rising to heights of artistry she never had attained before. This is a broad assertion, the Vitagraph officials admit in an official statement, but they express entire confidence that the public will confirm their judgment once it has seen the picture.

Lou Tellegen, in the role of a fearless, roughneck Apache leader, also is declared to give a characterization which should heighten his prestige materially, even with the staunchest of Tellegen fans—who include nearly everybody who sees motion pictures. The remainder of the cast, including Carl Miller, Otis Harlan, Rositta Marstini, William Dunn, Rose Tapley and Violet Virginia, also was carefully-selected, and every player is thoroughly adequate to his part.

"The Redeeming Sin" is an adaptation of L. V. Jefferson's colorful story. Every scene is laid in "old" Paris, and J. Stuart Blackton, the producer, has pictured the weather-beaten, age-worn buildings, the tortuous passageways, the haunts of the Apaches, studios in the Parisian Bohemia, and, perhaps most striking high light of all, the famous Paris sewers, so graphically described by Victor Hugo, with remarkable fidelity. A fight among Apaches, one of whom has been marked for death as a traitor, provides a rare scene on the screen.

Nazimova, as the reckless, carefree, seductive "Joan of the Sewers, Queen of the Apaches," is a constant object of contention, and the center of a romance which tempers the seamy life of the ruffians and reveals their human tenderness.

Assignments for Directors

Three Metro - Goldwyn - Mayer Pictures Designated, With Stars

"Proud Flesh," Lawrence Rising's novel, will provide King Vidor's next Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production. Pat O'Malley has been engaged for the male lead. Vidor recently completed "Wife of the Centaur," Cyril Hume's novel. "Women and Wives," Harvy Ferguson's novel, is also scheduled for Vidor.

"Confessions of a Queen" has been decided upon as the title under which Victor Seastrom's next Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production will reach the screen. The production, which has Alice Terry, Lewis Stone, and John Bowers in leading roles, is an adaptation by Agnes Christine Johnston of Alphonse Daudet's novel, "Kings in Exile," and it has been filmed under the original title.

"The Way of a Girl" will be the name of Robert G. Vignola's next Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production, which has been made under the title of "The Summons," from the story of that name by Katherine Newlin Burt. Eleanor Boardman is the "girl" of the title, and Matt Moore and William Russell have leading roles.

Lewis S. Stone and Mary Astor in First National's "Inez from Hollywood."

New Chadwick Pictures

"Romance of an Actress" and "Sunshine of Paradise Alley" to Go Into Production

Chadwick Pictures Corporation announced that it has completed arrangements to put into production two more of the Chadwick 9 series—"The Romance of an Actress" and "Sunshine of Paradise Alley." Both will be made on the coast.

"The Romance of an Actress" is a Hunt Stromberg production and will be directed by Stromberg personally. The scenario is now in preparation by Harvey Gates. It is taken from the famous play by Langdon McCormack, famous author of "The Storm" and other celebrated plays.

"Sunshine of Paradise Alley" is taken from the play by Denman Thompson, author of "The Old Homestead." It will be directed by Colin Campbell from the scenario by J. Grubb Alexander.

"The Romance of an Actress" and "Sunshine of Paradise Alley" are eighth and ninth in the Chadwick series. "The Street Singer" is soon to go into production in New York under the direction of John Gorman, and the new Lionel Barrymore special, also soon to go into production, will complete the Chadwick program for this season. Pictures already released are "The Fire Patrol," "The Painted Flapper," the two Lionel Barrymore pictures, "Meddling Women" and "I am the Man" and "The Tom Boy."

Bookings on "Inez"

First National's distribution department reports the Sam Rork production of "Inez From Hollywood," with Anna Q. Nilsson and Lewis Stone in the feature roles, as being booked heavily in a large number of cities for New Year's Week. Many of these bookings are in key point cities and many others in smaller towns.

Fox Purchases "Lazybones," Current Broadway Success

WITH the announcement of the purchase of the screen rights of "Lazybones," the Sam H. Harris stage play written by Owen Davis, Fox Film Corporation has nearly completed its plans for its 1925-26 program of film productions.

All decks are cleared at the Fox West Coast studios preparatory for the beginning of immediate production of the first of next season's special productions, and it is probable that "Lazybones" will be among those that will be started shortly. The play contains the right kind of stuff for a screen production.

It was also announced by Fox that contracts have just been signed for the immediate screening of "Havoc," the London stage success about the war. Edmund Goulding has just completed the scenario for this production.

In addition to these two attractions, arrangements are being made for early production of all the John Golden stage successes, contracts for which were sensationally signed some time ago whereby Fox Film Corporation and John Golden jointly will stage these great plays for the screen.

It is probable that "Lightnin'," in which the beloved Frank Bacon scored such a tremendous success, will be the first to reach the screen. The one knotty problem connected with screening this play is the selection of an actor to play the title role.

Among the names that have predominated in the suggestions are Will Rogers, Claude Gillingwater, Tom Wise, Alec Francis, Harry Beresford, John Barrymore, Charles Coburn, David Warfield and Raymond Hitchcock.

However, the subject is still an open one and suggestions are just as welcome now as ever and exhibitors are invited to come forward with a choice for "Lightnin' Bill."

The other Golden successes to be produced at the Fox studios include: "Seventh Heaven," one of the greatest stage successes of the last ten years; "Thank-U," "Chicken Feed," "The Wheel" and "Howdy Folks."

The scenario for "Loyalties," the John Galsworthy play, has been completed this week and was submitted to the author and Mr. Golden for their recommendation and approval. This production will be started at the Fox West Coast studios some time this winter.

The Fox Film Corporation 1925-26 series of special attractions will be headed with "The Iron Horse," that sensational epic picture of the linking of the East and West by rail, now playing to capacity audiences in New York and Chicago and which will not be shown elsewhere until next September.

"The Fool," the screen translation of Channing Pollock's great stage hit, which was recently completed at the Fox East studios, will be another of the giant special productions to be released by Fox next season. It was for his excellent work in the title role of this production that Edmund Lowe was created a star.

As a fitting stablemate to "The Iron Horse" and "The Fool" there is "The Man Without a Country," which in the opinion of the officials of Fox Film Corporation is one of the organization's greatest triumphs. The picturization of Edward Everett Hale's justly celebrated story was done under the direction of Rowland V. Lee, with Edward Hearn and Pauline Starke in the leading roles.

Negotiations are now in progress for high-class popular stories in which Tom Mix, whose productions will be included in next season's list of special photoplays, will be starred. In all probability Mix will make six pictures during the coming year to be released under the Fox banner.

Including the Tom Mix specials, this makes a grand total of eighteen attractions already contracted for to be released by Fox Film Corporation during next season, beginning September 1. It is probable that announcements will be forthcoming shortly of the twelve additional attractions which Mr. Fox intends to produce to complete his schedule for thirty special productions for 1925-26.

"Crossed Words" Hoffman's Next

The title of the second production in the forthcoming Renaud Hoffman series on the Producers Distributing Corp. program will be "Crossed Words." This title, while tying up with the present cross-word puzzle fad, is also well suited to the story which deals with a package of missing letters that alters the lives of several people and causes complications that range from the sublime to the ridiculous.

James Kirkwood and Pauline Garon in "The Painted Flapper," which Chadwick Pictures Corp. is distributing.

Joe Brandt Discusses 1925 Outlook for Independents

JOE BRANDT, of C. B. C. Film Sales Corporation, in a statement to Moving Picture World this week, says the independent situation is constantly improving, and he looks forward to "big business" during 1925. In his statement Mr. Brandt says:

"In going about to the exchanges in the various territories I found a different sentiment prevailing from that which so alarmed the independent producers and exhibitors during the early part of the summer.

"There seemed to be unrest in the air. There was much talk of big talk of big consolidations in the field of exhibitors as well as producers. The recent concern of all producers, exhibitors and even the public over the merger of the United Artists and the Joseph Schenck interests has now passed. The air is somewhat cleared. The block booking which caused so much worry to the independent producers and exhibitors has been greatly offset by the response of the exhibitors to the appeal of the independent producers for support. The appeal was a genuine one and in the face of real danger. The response has been very excellent. Exhibitors all over are now reporting better business and producers are reporting better bookings and play dates. The recently announced sales of the C. B. C.'s Columbia and Perfection series have been duplicated in independent offices throughout the producing field.

Results Are Surprising

"The elections over, the country is settling down to an era of prosperity. The public knows at least in part, what the trend of business and events will be for another four years. With renewed public confidence and activity the exhibitor can see results for himself. Then, too, the advertising campaigns and plans for production entered upon by the independent producers in the early part of the producing year have been in a large part completed and the exhibitor can see for himself whether or not the results are as advertised. The results have really been surprising. Exchange men have stopped crying for good product, they have it, and what is more they are selling it continuously and for good prices. The 'live and let live' policy has redounded to the independent producers' credit as well as their benefit. A flood of good, pleasing program pictures and the absolute assurance of their ability to produce many more of the same has been the mark of the independent producers' activities.

"Pictures well made, without waste of money and sold at reasonable prices, are all the exhibitor needs. His booking sheets and his box office report tell the tale of his response.

"The stress of competition forced the independent producers to stand together in their fight for room to play their good pictures and it is to be hoped that the movement will not stop here just because a momentary feeling of safety may have been experienced. Modern competitive methods require that men with similar viewpoints stand together. Organization and group action are the order of the day. The independent producers must do just that; not sporadically, but consistently, so that they may follow a definite plan of action and derive the benefits of their labors accordingly. A movement has recently been put under way to appoint a dictator over the activities of the independent field and to serve that field just as Mr. Hays serves his organization. The arbitration of disputes and their settlement out of court has been tried and proven to be of inestimable value in the saving of time and money. Then, too, such a dictator is alone able to direct the efforts of a group of producers in such a way that they are all working together and not against each other.

"Let's all get behind the load and push for all we are worth. We can not lose that way."

"Classmates" Sweeps Albany

First National Feature, Starring Richard Barthelmess, Held Over Second Week—Getting Excellent Reviews

For the first time in the history of Oscar Perrin's popular Clinton Square Theatre in Albany, N. Y., a photoplay has been held over for a second week. This honor goes to First National's new Richard Barthelmess picture, made by Inspiration, "Classmates," recently released, and shown in 125 theatres during its first release week.

Mr. Perrin reported to First National that "Classmates," in addition to being the only picture ever held there for two consecutive weeks, is the best picture Barthelmess has ever made from every viewpoint—box-office receipts and audience approval.

"Classmates" has been receiving fine reviews from all parts of the country, First National reports, and it has proved its right to stand right along with the best pictures in First National's Pace Maker group of releases for the current half year.

Chadwick Signs Theda Bara For Series of Big Pictures

CHADWICK PICTURES CORPORATION announced recently that it had signed Theda Bara to a contract whereby this well-known screen vampire will come out of her retirement to star in a group of big productions.

Miss Bara's first vehicle will be "The Unchastened Woman" from the play by Louis K. Anspacher, which was presented in New York and all through the country with great success several years ago, with Emily Stevens in the title role, and which is considered among the best American plays written. Featured with Miss Bara in this production will be George Walsh.

No information as to the director, who will make "The Unchastened Woman," nor the cast, that will surround the star was forthcoming from the Chadwick offices at this time, but it was indicated that negotiations are now in progress with a well-known director.

Scenes from "Bad Company," the initial St. Regis-Associated Exhibitors release.

"Bad Company" Is New Title for St. Regis' "Ultimate Good"

THE importance of the title of a picture is so significant that St. Regis Pictures Corporation which has completed the filming of J. C. Brownell's novelette, "The Ultimate Good," put the decision up to one thousand patrons of motion pictures and exhibitors.

All the officers and personnel of St. Regis Pictures were enlisted in this detailed effort to obtain a name for their first picture which would have a drawing power with both the public and the theatre, a power that would get them into the theatres, because St. Regis is then prepared to leave the outcome of their first effort in the hands of the public, feeling certain that they have obtained what will be one of the most remembered pictures of the year.

Each of those called upon for an opinion as to the title of this St. Regis picture, were furnished with a slip upon which to vote, first and second choice. Five titles were listed as possibilities for the production and the results were grouped in two classes, first, the Public, and second, Exhibitors, and besides this the public was subdivided into "male" and "female."

The result of this wide-spread balloting decided St. Regis, and Associated Exhibitors which is distributing this series of productions, upon the name of the first picture. A resume of the ballots tells the story.

Accordingly the title of the picture will be "Bad Company." Starred in this picture are Conway Tearle and Madge Kennedy with such well-known players as Lucille Lee Stewart. Charles Emmett Mack, Bigelow Cooper and William A. Bechtel in the supporting cast. It was directed by E. H. Griffith.

Some unusual departures in the film are the inclusion of an entire act from Earl Carroll's Vanities of 1924, "Counting the Hours," including Kathryn Ray the Pendelum Girl, and the chorus of the Greenwich Village Follies in another portion of the picture.

Dudley Williston Appointed

Paul C. Mooney, vice-president of Producers Distributing Corporation, announced this week the appointment of Dudley Williston as Branch Manager at Indianapolis, where he will fill the vacancy caused by the transfer of C. R. Lundgren to the Chicago Branch. Dudley Williston is known to every exhibitor in the Indianapolis territory through his previous associations with the old World Film Corporation and Selznick. Before his affiliation with the selling end of the industry, Williston was a theatre owner and at one time controlled four houses.

Old Short-Reels in Demand

When J. Stuart Blackton resurrected that pioneer one-reeler, "The Haunted Hotel" and showed it in connection with the run of Vitagraph's "Between Friends" at the Forum Theatre, Los Angeles, he "started something." He has since been so deluged with requests for prints made nearly a generation ago that he has started to prepare a reel measuring 967 feet, on which thirty-three subjects, each a sensation when it first appeared, will be shown. This reel will serve as a standard by which to demonstrate the advance made in motion picture art.

Lawlor Turns to Writing

Production Technician Takes Up Editing and Original Work

Hoey Lawlor, production technician, is now devoting his entire time to writing and editing pictures. Following his early literary work for the leading magazines and newspapers, Lawlor undertook a long career in technical work, and became a recognized expert. He has worked on some of the biggest pictures, and demonstrated the value of specializing.

Among the latest attractions he has edited are "The Circus Maniac," featuring Max Linder; "The Ancient Law," "When Dreams Come True," and a new version of "William Tell," recently completed in Switzerland by an American producer.

Mr. Lawlor will be remembered for his work on "School Days" and "Why Girls Leave Home."

Keese Succeeds Risinger

Appointment of Alex Keese, associate conductor, as musical director of the Howard theatre orchestra, Atlanta, Ga., to succeed the late Mr. Buel B. Risinger, was announced by Howard Price Kingsmore, director of the Howard. The appointment was made by Harold B. Franklin, director of theatres for the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation in New York, and will take effect immediately. Mr. Keese, born in Georgia, gained his musical education in Chattanooga. He was assistant conductor at the Tivoli, in Chattanooga, for some time, and went to Atlanta as assistant conductor under Enrici Liede.

Nazimova at the Broom

Nazimova, who has just finished her work as the star in "The Redeeming Sin" for Vitagraph, proved while production was in progress that she is thoroughly capable of handling a broom and a dust brush, as well as dramatic roles. Voluntarily, willingly and personally, she "house-cleaned one of the elaborate interior sets before "shooting" began one day, with results that could not have been so satisfactory but for the feminine touch.

Miss Adoree in "Parisian Nights"

Having recovered from her recent illness, Renee Adoree has returned to Hollywood to undertake a leading role in "Parisian Nights," made by Gothic Pictures Corporation at the F. B. O. lot.

Richard Barthelmess in "Classmates," an Inspiration-First National Release. Madge Evans plays the lead opposite the star.

Praise Estabrook Picture

"Price of a Party" Well Received by New York Newspaper Critics

Howard Estabrooks' first production for the Associated Exhibitors, called "The Price of a Party," was well received by New York daily newspaper critics when it played last week at B. F. Moss's Cameo Theatre.

Harriette Underhill in the Herald-Tribune stated: "Hope Hampton's latest picture 'The Price of A Party,' is at the Cameo, and we are delighted to record that it is a good picture—a melodrama without hokum. Charles Giblyn directed it, and, while we are not as familiar with Mr. Giblyn's work as with some others, we should like to see more of him. None of his people overacts and none of his points is overstressed. Miss Hampton does the best work we have ever seen her do on the screen, and she flits through the story a lovely, slender, graceful figure."

All of the New York newspapers laid much stress on the box-office possibilities of the production with the following review: "Howard Estabrook's first venture as a producer on his own, 'The Price of A Party,' released by the Associated Exhibitors, and seen at the Cameo, discoses elaborate production on part of the producer, intelligent direction by Charles Giblyn, the director, and a thoroughly capable cast headed by Hope Hampton."

Louella Parsons in the New York American had this to say: "Howard Estabrook being a young man of sagacious inclines, and film experience, kept one thought in the back of his mind all the time he was producing 'The Price of A Party,' and that was to give the dear public what it wants. 'The Price of A Party' from name to plot, has all been designed with the box-office in mind. But go and see for yourself."

Monta Bell Begins Fourth

Monta Bell started work this week on his next Harry Rapf production for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, from a story by Adela Rogers St. John. Norma Shearer and Malcolm MacGregor have leading roles in the picture, and Guy K. Arthur is also named among those present. The story as yet has not been definitely titled. It will mark Bell's second Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picture, his fourth since taking up the megaphone for the first time.

Star Cast Supporting Mix In "Riders of the Purple Sage"

"RIDERS OF THE PURPLE SAGE," Zane Grey's ever popular novel now being picturized at the Fox Film Corporation West Coast studio with Tom Mix as the star under the direction of Lynn Reynolds, will see Mix supported by the best cast ever gathered together for one of his vehicles, if the first selection of players can be taken as a criterion.

Mabel Ballin, the screen star, is cast in the feminine lead. Then in the ingenue role there is Marian Nixon, who played opposite Mr. Mix in an earlier starring vehicle of this year, namely, "The Last of the Duanes."

For the juvenile role Harold Goodwin has been selected while Charles Le Moyne will play the "heavy" part. In the character roles such well known thespians as Arthur Morrison, Warner Oland and Fred Kohler are cast in parts suitable to their particular talent.

Other players will be chosen from time to time for the other roles and due to the desire of the producers to give this Zane Grey story an excellent screen presentation it can be taken for granted that the best talent available will be secured.

The exact release date for "Riders of the Purple Sage" has not been decided on as yet, but under tentative plans it is hoped to have it ready for distribution some time in Februray. This is Mix's sixth picture of the current season and leaves only one more release to be completed for him to say "finis" for his 1924-25 productions.

Mr. Mix's final production for the year will be "The Rainbow Trail," also from the pen of Zane Grey and a sequel to "Riders of the Purple Sage." Incidentally, this is the third Zane Grey story in which Mix has starred this season, "The Last of the Duanes" being a creation of the celebrated writer of Western tales.

To Direct "Off the Highway"

The second Jacqueline Logan starring vehicle on Producers Distributing Corporation program, "Off The Highway" will be started within the next week or ten days according to a report from Regal Pictures that also announces the signing of R. William Neill to direct the production.

"The House of Youth," Miss Logan's first starring picture is a successful current release and "Off The Highway" is scheduled for release on January 25.

Sennett and Roach Comedies Head Pathe List for Jan. 4

TWO comedy offerings, one from the Mack Sennett and one from the Hal Roach Studios, head the Pathe program of releases for January 4th. The Mack Sennett comedy subject is in two reels and stars Harry Langdon, the title of the production being "The Sea Squawk." The Hal Roach offering is also in two reels and is titled "The Wages of Tin" with Glenn Tryon in the featured role. Another comedy number on the January 4th schedule is the Charley Chase single-reeler "The Rat's Knuckles."

In the Langdon comedy most of the situations are staged on board a ship on which the hero is coming to this country from Scotland. The theft of a famous ruby coupled with the work of an ambitious comedy detective makes this one of the best comedy productions that this fast rising screen comedian has made to date. The picture was directed by Harry Edwards under the supervision of F. Richard Jones. A well-known collection of comedy screen players assist Langdon in this picture. Among them are Eugenia Gilbert, Christian Frank, Charlotte Mineau, Bud Ross and Leo Sulky.

Martha Sleeper, William Gillespie, Jack Gavin, Sammy Brooks and Jules Mendel assist Charley Chase in the production of what is declared to be one of the best comedies turned out by this star at the Hal Roach Studios. It is a single-reeler and was directed by Leo McCarey. The story of the picture concerns a young man who has invented a rat trap that is positively guaranteed to rid any home of rodents. The principle of the invention is that the rodents are so ashamed of themselves after springing the trap, that they will simply crawl into a corner and die. One of the principal features of this picture is the clever way that a "news" shot of the Prince of Wales has been incorporated in the action of the story.

"The Wages of Tin" a two reel Hal Roach Star Comedy, scheduled for this week's release by Pathe features Glenn Tryon. The production was directed by Roy Clements and carries a strong supporting cast consisting of Blanche Mehaffey, Noah Young, Jack Gavin, Billy Engle, Jimmy Kelly, Helen Gilmore, Martin Wolfkeil and George Rowe.

The third chapter of the Patheseriel "Galloping Hoofs" on Pathe's release for the week is entitled "Neck and Neck." This is one of the big suspense chapters of this popular serial directed by George B. Seitz and featuring Allene Ray and Johnnie Walker. Ernest Hilliard, J. Barney Sherry, Armand Cortes and William Nally are the supporting cast in this chapter.

Pathe Review released this week will again start at Number 1. The first issue of the Pathe Review for 1925 will consist of three subjects. The first is "The Wise Men of The East" and is the picture story of working elephants in India. In the series of "Visiting Our Own America" the city of Asheville, N. C., is beautifully presented in Pathecolor. The third subject of the Review is the introduction of a new camera novelty under the title of "The Phantom Ballet."

"On the Ice" is the title of the animated cartoon comedy release for the week. This series of "Aesop's Film Fables" is fast becoming the most popular one reel subject in America and shows a larger number of weekly bookings than any other one reel picture in the field.

"Topics of the Day" Number 1, and Pathe News Nos. 4 and 5 complete the Pathe program for the week of January 4th.

"Speed" Completed

George H. Davis and Samuel J. Briskin, executive heads of Banner Productions, Inc., were elated this week by the telegraphic announcement that camera work on their West Coast production, "Speed," has been completed and that a finished print of the picture will be shipped to the New York offices during the first week of the new year.

"Speed" is the widely heralded Saturday Evening Post story by Grace Hartwell Mason, which Ben Verschleiser has been producing for the Banner organization under the direction of Edward J. Le Saint. Betty Blythe heads the cast, and her support includes Pauline Garon, Robert Ellis, William V. Mong, Arthur Rankin and Eddie Phillips.

"Lincoln" Takes Atlanta

Rockett-First National Special Has Splendid Premiere at Metropolitan

"Abraham Lincoln" opened at the Metropolitan Theatre, Atlanta, last week, and won the motion picture public of that city just as it did the city officials, educators, clergy and others at its invitation showing there a few weeks previously.

The picture opened to a big business, which has continued. It went beyond the rosiest expectations of all of those concerned in the Atlanta showing. Col. Willard M. Patterson gave the picture an exceptionally thorough and brilliant exploitation campaign.

The audience that witnessed the first regular showing of "Abraham Lincoln" at the Metropolitan was the most representative ever gathered in the history of that theatre. It included the Governor of the State, the Mayor of Atlanta and leaders in State, municipal, social and civic life.

The reviewers on the Atlanta newspapers were unanimous in their praise of the picture and the individual comment was of a highly commendatory nature.

Havez Back with Lloyd

Jean Havez, one of the foremost story writers and "gag" men in the motion picture comedy field, has returned to the fold of the Harold Lloyd Corporation to assist in the making of the new college comedy for Pathe. Lloyd's production staff now consists of Sam Taylor and Fred Newmeyer, directors; and John Gray, Tim Whelan and Ted Wilde as title writers and gagmen.

Boston Office of P. D. C. Wins Sales Contest; St. Louis Next

THE FIRST selling and booking contests between the branches and territorial divisions of Producers Distributing Corporation were brought to a close last week with the exchanges in the Eastern Division topping the Central, Mid-Western and Western divison even though every branch in the defeated divisions exceeded its sales quota.

Paul C. Mooney, vice-president in charge of distribution, says that it was the hardest fought sales competition he ever witnessed and that while congratulating the winners he felt called upon to compliment the entire sales force.

The first prize in the sales contest was won by L. J. Hacking, manager of the Boston Branch; C. D. Hill, of St. Louis, was second, and G. R. Ainsworth, of Pittsburgh was third.

With the Boston and Pittsburgh offices winning first and third places, the prize for the Division Manager making the best showing went to W. F. Seymour, eastern division manager.

Two prizes were offered to the individual salesman making the best personal sales record. First prize in this contest went to G. Solomon, while the second prize was won by E. M. Schnitzer, both of whom are well known salesmen in the New York territory.

During the period of the sales contests, prizes were offered the bookers making the best record in each division, with a National Bookers Prize for the booker making the best record of all bookers in the organization. These contests were divided into two periods of four weeks each.

The contests in the first period were won by W. I. Cowan of Boston in the Eastern Division, William Skerrett of Detroit in the Central Division, L. A. LaPlante of St. Louis in the Mid-West Division and M. Hossfeld of Los Angeles in the Western Division.

The National Prize for this period was won by W. I. Cowan of Boston.

In the bookers contest for the second period, the same bookers were again returned winners in their respective division, but M. Hossfeld of Los Angeles won the National prize.

Exhibitor Reports "Tornado" as Greater Than "The Storm"

"THE TORNADO," the latest House Peters picture, a Universal Jewel production adapted from Lincoln J. Carter's celebrated stage melodrama, the last of Universal Fall releases, will have its New York premiere this week in the new Piccadilly Theatre, Fifty-second street and Broadway.

An indication of the exceptional success "The Tornado" is meeting in various sections of the country may be had from the following comment of Jules Levy, sales director of the Eastern Division of Universal's sales force.

"We have just received a wonderful report from Morris Fitzer of the Empire Theatre, Syracuse, N. Y.," said Levy. "Fitzer originally booked the picture for showing next June without having seen it. Two weeks ago he had an opportunity of looking at the production. He immediately changed his mind of play dates and asked to show it right away.

"He showed the picture in the Empire on the week of November 29th and broke all house records with it. Here is what he wired in on his showing:

"'Opened Saturday in the face of a terrific snowstorm to wonderful business with greater business on Sunday. It will undoubtedly break all house records before the week is over. 'The Tornado' is far superior to 'The Storm.' I made a personal canvass of my audiences and found their criticisms unanimous as to the picture being a perfect production. The work of House Peters and his supporting cast unexcelled.'

"This remarkable report," continued Levy, "was unsolicited by us. As good as it is, however, it is matched by another report we received from E. L. McEvoy, manager of the Palace Theatre, Norwich, Conn. Here is what McEvoy had to say about 'The Tornado':

"'Tornado' opened to biggest Thursday house has ever had. Topped Lloyd, which held the record, by six dollars. It's a great picture.'

"In the face of reports such as these we are bound to be convinced that we have a great screen offering. If it does as well as 'The Storm' it will be one in a thousand. 'The Storm' had done more for Universal in good will and for House Peters in popularity than any picture on record. Think of a picture playing in 8,000 houses! We expect 'The Tornado' to equal 'The Storm' because many people have told us it is even greater than 'The Storm.'"

Critics Lavish Praise on Metro-Goldwyn's "Greed"

ERICH VON STROHEIM'S "Greed" has been hailed as an epoch-making screen masterpiece by the Manhattan critics, by the brilliant array of notables who attended its premiere at the Cosmopolitan Theatre, and by the public, which has demonstrated its enthusiasm in a manner which indicates this Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production will be one of the greatest box-office successes known in the industry.

"Von Stroheim has taken Frank Norris's powerful story, 'McTeague'," writes Rose Pelswick in the New York Journal, "and with a dynamic touch transformed it into an epic of almost ruthless realism. Character brought out by contrast; details that any other director might have overlooked swept into drama; emotions bared and trivial occurrences made significant. Continuity, direction and acting are developed with sledgehammer force. It is a remarkable picture. I have never seen such a portrayal of human conflict. It is forceful, gripping, colossal. Von Stroheim's strength of direction is tremendous and the acting of the leading players is a revelation. The entire action and characterization an extraordinary achievement."

"I have seen 'Greed'," states Mildred Spain in the New York Daily News. "I have seen Erich von Stroheim's 'Greed' that took millions of dollars and a couple of years and one broken heart to make. I have seen and I am conquered. Frank Norris's story, 'McTeague,' has been made into one of the most conspicuous pictures of all times."

"It is undeniably a dramatic story," testifies Mordaunt Hall in the New York Times. "The three principals deliver splendid performances in their respective roles. Gibson Gowland is unusually fine as McTeague. Mr. Gowland slides into the character and stays with it. He is clever in his exhibition of temper and wonderfully effective in the desert scenes."

"'Greed' is a masterpiece," declares Dorothy Herzog in the New York Daily Mirror. "The photoplay is superb and the acting excels any on the screen in many a day."

Says George Gerhard in the New York Evening World: "It must be admitted that Erich von Stroheim is probably the foremost exponent in motion picture production. 'Greed' is truly a great picture. Movie fans will find in 'Greed' the acme of motion picture artistry."

Begin "Thundering Herd"

Zane Gray's "The Thundering Herd," one of Paramount's Second Famous Forty, has gone into production at Calabasas, Cal., a location personally selected by the author. It will be directed by William K. Howard. Its cast of featured players includes Jack Holt, Lois Wilson, Noah Beery, Raymond Hatton and Charles Ogle. The story is written around the making of the West. One of the big scenes will be the stampede of a herd of 5,000 buffalo.

Many exhibitors tell us that Moving Picture World Guide to Releases is the most accurate available to them. We know it is the most complete in that it is the only chart containing names of stars, type of picture, and all necessary information to the exhibitor.

We want it to be absolutely accurate—Moving Picture World recognizes the importance of accurate footage information, etc.

If you notice an error in FEATURE footage, or any other major error, we will pay you $1 for the effort on your part of writing us a letter telling us the correct facts.

In many territories local censorship cuts alter the footage to a minor extent. Don't write to tell us of these unimportant variations. But in any case where you feel that our figures will work a real hardship on the exhibitor following them—shoot us the word and we will shoot the dollar for your trouble.

Moving Picture World is willing to back up its complete confidence in the accuracy of its chart with its money.

We can't do more. No one else does as much. We thank you.

PROJECTION

EDITED BY F. H. RICHARDSON

New Book—Get One

The Eastman Kodak Company, Rochester, N. Y., has just issued an 18-page booklet on "Film Mutilation and How to Prevent It." There are several illustrations. I believe every projectionist may have one, free of cost, by addressing the company, making request and mailing the title of the booklet.

I was a bit surprised and amused to find a trade paper which, so far as I know, has made comparatively but very little effort to stop film mutilation, held up as one which did much to carry on the effort THIS DEPARTMENT STARTED, as all you old timers know, five years or more ago, to get film exchanges to employ a competent inspector to make periodical inspection of theatre projection equipment. Also it is to be noted that the paper which is quoted doesn't have much respect for the S. M. P. E. nomenclature, as it speaks glibly of "projection machines" and "booths."

Booklet Good

The booklet is a good one. We would expect nothing else from the Eastman Company; also in several places it deals with things neither this department nor my books have touched upon. It backs up my position literally all the way through. For many years I have harped and harped and harped upon the damage done to film by excessive projector aperture tension, excessive take-up tension, worn sprocket teeth, sprocket idlers not properly adjusted, rewinder elements out of line, crooked reels, pulling down, poorly made splices, etc., etc. I am well pleased that at last someone else has awakened and got busy on the subject.

I advise you all to secure the booklet, and to study it. Nearly all the way through the author of the book adheres to the "projection machine." I wonder why? A camera is a machine. So is an organ or a piano, BUT we don't say "camera machine," "organ machine" or "piano machine." Also the S. M. P. E. has declared the mechanism which projects motion pictures to be a Motion Picture Projector quite some while ago.

Important!!

The time approaches when a large number of our local unions will proceed to the selection of officers for the ensuing year, and it might not be amiss to suggest that THERE IS NO MORE IMPORTANT DUTY DEVOLVING UPON THE INDIVIDUAL MEMBER THAN THE RESPONSIBILITY OF TAKING AN ACTIVE AND INTELLIGENT PART IN THE CHOICE OF EXECUTIVES.

Perhaps the MOST IMPORTANT QUALIFICATION FOR ANY OFFICE IS A HIGH DEGREE OF PERSONAL INTEGRITY; secondly, the qualifications to properly discharge the duties of the office, and third, the GOOD SENSE TO HOLD ALOOF FROM FACTIONAL DIFFERENCES.

The capital letters are our own. There was never more truth contained in a fewer number of words in connection with the subject discussed. Union men all over this broad land, and Canada, will do well to ponder the above lines deeply and well. NEW YORK CITY MOTION PICTURE PROJECTIONISTS ARE ESPECIALLY INVITED TO STUDY THEM WELL. Look well at the "PERSONAL INTEGRITY." It means a LOT TO ALL OF YOU!

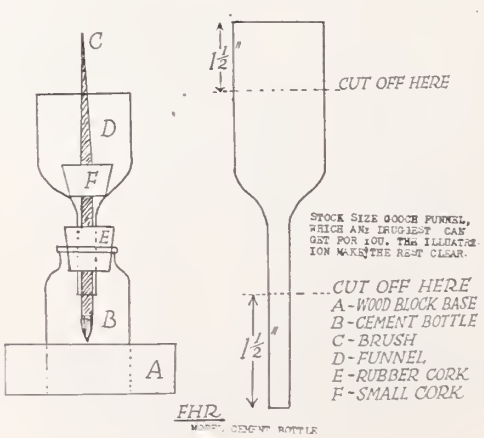
Cement Bottle

John R. Daily, New Orlenas, La., asks:

Can you tell me what is the best plan to make a film cement bottle, which while being convenient as to manipulation, still will be air tight? I don't like the plan of shoving the brush handle through the cork of the bottle, which is the plan followed by nearly every one. I will appreciate your advice in this matter.

The really best film cement bottle I know of is, like other really good things mostly are, a bit of trouble to make. However, its excellence will repay the small cost and the trouble.

Go to any good druggist and have him order for you (if he has not one in stock) a "Gooch" funnel, stock size. By any suitable means cut it off as indicated in the drawing, after which mount it in a wide-neck bottle, as indicated, F and E being corks.



A is a block of wood of suitable dimensions and perhaps an inch and a quarter thick. In one side a hole is bored nearly through the block, of a size to fit the bottle snugly. If you have no bit with which you can bore just the right size hole, then bore it a bit larger and wind strips of paper around the lower portion of the bottle until it will fit the hole snugly. The block is merely to hold the bottle right size up. I would suggest that it be three or four inches square.

The rest seems fairly self evident. The glass funnel is thrust tightly through a hole drilled in cork E and the brush handle through a hole drilled through cork F. Cork E fits tightly in bottle B and cork F merely rests on the curve of the funnel. It should be set to hold the tip of the brush at the desired distance from bottom of the bottle.

Help Him—If You Can

George W. Pettingill, Sr., 801 Park street, St., Petersburg, Florida, is in need of assistance, which I don't feel competent to supply adequately. If any of you can help him let them get busy. He says:

Have been reading the World for two years. Could hardly get along without it. I book pictures for showing at one of the local auditoriums each week. Find Van's department very helpful in selecting my program. I own two Powers projectors, and always depend upon "Rich's" department for the best dope on projection. However, for some while back I have been watching for hints upon lighting effects. I have a spot light and some other equipment, and would like very much to get some ideas for lighting effects on banquets, dances, etc. I would feel grateful if you would refer me to some one who could advise me on such matters.

While I don't pose as an expert on lighting effects, still I have some admittedly rather vague ideas concerning them. Not so long ago I fixed up a little stunt for a friend, and it worked out pretty well. It was a small private dinner. The table was oblong—about six feet across and twice that length. I secured a small mazda spot, which was swung from the ceiling, directing a beam four feet in diameter to the center of the table where a big but low center floral piece was arranged. Then I placed two fairly powerful floods at either end of the room, so shielded that the beams could not strike the walls. To start with one was a medium red and the other green. The colors were changed every five minutes.

The effect was decidedly novel, and a bit startling. One side of a man's face would be perhaps red, and the other side green. The shadow effects caused much pleased comment. All other lights were, of course, extinguished. This is not given as my own original idea. I have seen something like it used in the Capitol Theatre, here in New York City.

I really don't know any one to refer friend Pettingfill to. Don't think there really is any one, but maybe our readers can help.

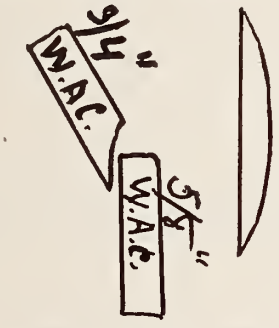
Help for Lambert

Fred Allard, Projectionist Royal Theatre, Salina, Kansas, radios us the following by mail:

I have been a reader of the department for some while, and have received many helpful hints therefrom. Never felt myself sufficiently advanced in projection to try to help others through the department, but after reading the letter of brother Lambert, Nov. 15 issue, I am going to take a shy at it. What I have to say may help some.

Have projected motion pictures for several years, using D. C. always, from a Transverter. When this theatre was purchased I was transferred here, where I use A. C. at the arc, from a pair of 220 volt, 60 cycle, 60 ampere Compensarcs. Project a twelve foot picture ninety feet, with two Simplex projectors. The former projectionist had been using 5/8 National cored carbons, from which a fair illumination was had, but at the expense of a fierce noise.

I suggested White A. C. Specials to my manager, who at once sent for a trial package of 5/8 and 3/4. Adjusted my carbon holders and lamp as per diagram, placing the lower holder as nearly horizontal as possible, which caused the lower carbon to incline out toward the collector lens a bit, insead of back toward the lamp frame.



Next I drew the lamp frame up as far as could, and moved my lamphouse back until I had a clear screen, or until I got rid of the blue ghost in the center, but not too far, because that would substitute a white spot for the blue one.

I then started my tests to determine which carbons gave me the best light, at the least cost and with the least noise. Each test lasted two days the first week. The second I used different grades of carbons and different sizes on each projector. Here are the results. If I have overlooked anything please advise me.

Results

(1) Monday, with 5/8 inch National carbons in both projectors. Show starts at one P. M., running continuous until 11 P. M. Making ten hours of actual use. Started with two new 12 inch uppers, and four six inch lowers obtained by sawing two 12 inch carbons in two. These carbons cost nine (9) cents each, or 36 cents for the four carbons, and they lasted one whole day. Repeated next day with same results, hence the carbon cost is 36 cents per day.

(2) Wednesday started with two 5/8 inch White A. C. Specials 12 inches long for uppers, with four lowers six inches long. These cost 24 cents for one upper and two lowers, or 48 cents for the two "sets." I burned them ten hours Wednesday and an hour and forty minutes Thursday, which means a daily cost of 41 cents for carbons of that brand. My main objection to these is that they pencil too much—burn back with a long tapering point, with a very small crater. The taper is from half an inch to two inches.

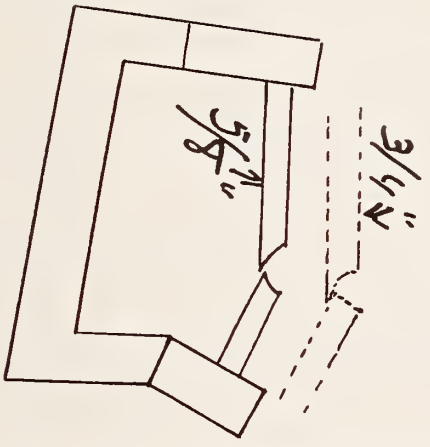
Friday

(3) Friday I installed two sets of 3/4 White A. C. Special carbons, the lowers made the same as I have described. These cost 56 cents per set of one upper and two lowers for both projectors—six carbons in all. They lasted from one P. M to 11 P. M. Friday and from one P. M. until 10.30 Saturday, lacking thirty minutes of being two whole days. This made the cost 28 cents daily, but the lower carbons burned a fraction more rapidly than the upper and were used completely up at 8.15 Saturday evening, causing me to use an extra lower in each lamp, which had burned down 1.5 inches when closing time came. This added to the above brought the total cost up to 59.5 cents for the two days, or 29¾ cents per day. The cost compares thus: Two ordinary cored 5/8 carbons used, cost 36 cents per day. White A. C. Special 5/8 carbons 41 cents per day and White A. C. Special 3/4 carbons 29.75 cents per day.

The Second Week

I used 5/8 National ordinary, cored of course, in one projector, and 5/8 White A. C. Special in the other. The difference in screen illumination was so greatly in favor of the White A. C. Special, that the ordinary was discarded, after the test, as unworthy of consideration. My next experiment was White A. C. Special in both projectors—the 5/8 in one and the 3/4 in the other. Neither myself nor the manager was able to tell the difference in the screen illumination produced by the two diameters of carbons.

And now let me admonish you not to try to use the upper carbon stub in the lower, as the result is awful. Buy a carbon saver, if you have none, and use up the long stubs that way. Moreover, when using 3/4 inch White A. C. Special carbons you cannot get best results if you carry the carbons and craters at the same angle as that which is best for the 5/8 carbons. To get best results with the 3/4, pull the upper back until its tip seems about even with the center of the lower carbon, as per drawing. At first those using this set will probably have trouble because of the lower carbon forming into a peak at the rear, but with a little practice and constant drawing the upper carbon back, and holding them close enough together so that you can just see between them, a result such as shown will be attained.



I believe brother Lambert will be pleased with and willing to use the 3/4 White A. C. Special, because of the saving in burning in new carbons. the odor of which is rather unpleasant.

Well, friend Allard, while I will point out one or two weak points in your experiments, still they have, on the whole, been conducted in a way which entitles them to respect. My main objection to your whole procedure is found in the fact that I am, always have been, and I guess always will be opposed to the "jackknife" set. Possibly I am in error in this. Carbons are now very different from what they were when I wrestled (I use the word "wrestled" advisedly, though fought might have been more appropriate) with an A. C. arc in the far away days when the gink who had D. C. at the arc was king of all he surveyed, and thrust his tongue derisively into his cheek at we poor boobs who cranked by hand and tried hard to get an A. C. arc to behave itself for thirty whole, great big consecutive seconds. BUT, at that, I've got to be shown. According to your own drawing, which I am reproducing exactly as you made it, you certainly would have a pretty fierce interference by the lower carbon tip, even though it be pointed. Another thing the tendency would be for the peak to rise on the front (collector lens) side of the lower carbon, hence the interference would be augmented. May I direct your attention to figure 119, page 404, of the Bluebook?

Your test of carbon cost is excellent, BUT your test of what is vastly more important, viz.: results in screen illumination, leaves room for improvement. You would better do this: With the 5/8 carbons in one lamp and the 3/4 in the other, with both arcs burning normally, project the light from both projectors to the screen, first having prepared two strips of metal which you can slip in back of the cooling plate to mask just half the projector aperture—either the top of one projector and the bottom of the other, or opposite sides. It does not matter which. This may be done with the projectors standing still and the fire shutter blocked open. You will thus be able to see exactly what the effect in screen illumination really is.

If your 5/8 upper pencils back as much as you say, then it certainly is too small for the amperage, though I think the 3/4 are too large. There ought to be an 11/16 inch carbon available, but there is not.

Now DON'T imagine I am adversely criticising you. I am NOT. I am not a "yes man" though. Your true friend never is. In fact the "yes man's" friendship is hardly worth bothering with anyhow. He is of the sort that will smile to your face and—stick a knife in your BACK. You have started an experiment which ought to be carried further, and by many projectionists. Get busy, you fellows using A. C. at the arc. See what YOU can tell us with regard to this matter, not so much from the carbon consumption cost (which is relatively a rather small item, though it of course counts), but from the viewpoint of relative results on the screen, checked by the method I have indicated. Also brother Allard did not tell us what he found with relation to the item noise.

Which?

Really, now, which would you rather be called—a motion picture projectionist or a "moving picture machine operator," which latter really means, as you know, a machine attendant?

Don't YOU think Projectionist MEANS MORE? Not much credit or glory in merely attending to a machine, is there? Projecting motion pictures is a different matter, though, and "Projectionist" includes many things not at all essential to the operation of a machine. Don't YOU think my argument looks and sounds at least a bit reasonable? Which are YOU—a machine attendant or a motion picture projectionist? Think it over!

Bluebook School—Answers 156 to 160

Question No. 156—Suppose you had a heavy projection angle. A 16-foot picture would serve the auditorium, but the exhibitor demanded a 22 footer. Would you protest, and if so what would you say about the effect of the projection angle with relation to increase in picture size?

Daniel Constantino, Easton, Pa.; Karl H. Sommermeyer, Marietta, Minn.; Arthur H. Gray, Boston, Mass.; A. L. Fell, Collingswood, N. J.; C. H. Hanover, Burlington, Iowa and G. W. Bennewitz, Sioux Falls, So. Dakota, made good on this one. I think Hanover gave the most comprehensive answer. Here it is:

Certainly I would protest, and my protest would cover the following points, viz: (A) If a sixteen foot picture is large enough for house, then it is distinctly bad practice to make it larger, because enlarging the picture increases the magnification and increases the "fuzzy" appearance as viewed from the front seats. In other words, the sixteen foot picture will appear sharper and more clean cut from the front rows than the larger one would . (B) The distortion, while perhaps in the same relative proportions, will I think, be more evident with the larger picture. (C) Flicker tendency increases with increase in picture size. I do not know why this is, but we have been advised through the projection department that it is so, and I have personally found the conclusion to be correct. (D) On page 244 of the Bluebook we are told that as picture size is increased the eye strain from front rows of seats is increased, due to the eye having a wider area of surface to "cover" in watching the picture. (D) As picture size is increased the area to be illuminated is also increased, therefore (see table 10, page 246 of Bluebook —in which an error appears in the heading of two first columns in which width should read height and vice versa) any increase in picture area calls for increase in total light projected, if the screen brilliancy of the large picture is to be equal to that of the smaller one. (E) I think it will be more difficult to secure satisfactory definition all over the screen with the larger picture than with the smaller one. (F) There is nothing to be gained by increasing the picture size above that which is necessary for the auditorium, and there is much to be lost.

Which seems to me to be a very good and a very fairly complete answer, except that one point was overlooked, viz: added cost of the larger screen, which would be considerable. Oh yes, and there is the added distortion due to side viewing angle. Almost overlooked that myself.

Question No. 157—Give us your views with relation to proper picture size, both minimum and maximum, in any given auditorium.

I was both surprised and pleased at the excellence of several of the answers to this. Bennewitz, Fell, Gray and Thomas all did very well indeed, and all the others named as replying correctly to question 156 did very well also.

I hesitated as between the replies of Fell and Gray, but finally decided Gray has the best of it. He says:

This is a pretty large contract, and in my opinion cannot be properly handled merely by using arbitrary minimum and maximum figures of dimension. After considerable thought I have decided that my reply will take somewhat the form of a plea for minimum picture size.

In deciding upon the most desirable size of picture for any given auditorium condition, the matter should be viewed from two separate and very distinct angles; with perhaps some of the desirable points in one direct conflict with equally desirable points in the other.

The factors "efficiency," "economy" and "good visibility" may be grouped under the general head of projection, while the question of the size of picture necessary to harmonize with the shape and proportions of the immediate screen surroundings, proscenium opening and the general architecture of the auditorium may be classed under the head of presentation, and designated at the "other point of view." All these various items must be carefully weighed and considered.

A picture of the minimum permissible size should be the first, as well as the principal consideration in any theatre, and the magnification is sufficient if objects therein appear of natural size, or approximately so, and if caption matter may be read without more than ordinary effort by those farthest away from the screen.

There may be isolated cases where it is deemed, from the viewpoint of artistic proportions, to project a larger picture than is necessary from the standpoint of visibility, but such instances are, I believe, very much the exception. A large proscenium opening and a broad expanse of front wall does not necessarily mean that a picture of relatively small size cannot be made to harmonize with the general lay-out. Just as, for instance, a painting may, by the judicious selection of properly proportioned frames, be made to "fill" different sized spaces or areas on a wall, without spoiling the artistic proportions between the scene, frame and general background, so may a picture of given size, by the careful selection of screen surroundings, be made to "fill" proscenium openings of various dimensions.

Disregarding, therefore, the question of exact, arbitrary figures, my view would be that the most sound procedure is to determine the smallest picture which will insure naturalness of appearance and good visibility, and then fit the screen surroundings in such way that an artistic, harmonious whole will be produced.

The question of extraneous lighting, with splashes of color, to "fill in" the front walls of the auditorium, or the settings of the stage itself, on either side is a study in itself, and is not, it seems to me, within the scope of the question.

May I direct the attention of each one of you to the fact that here is a distinctly good answer, because it tends to discuss FUNDAMENTALS, and to show that the man answering has a good grasp of THE UNDERLYING PRINCIPLES involved. And that, after, all, is what we are after. Categorically correct replies do not always appeal so strongly as replies that show the man really understands what the whole matter is BASED upon.

Question No. 158—Explain your views as to the relation of picture size and distance of screen from front row of seats.

All the before named gave correct and more or less complete answers to this one. I think, however, that Gray wins very easily in the matter of publication, though as his reply is not complete, it must be supplemented. He says:

There is a certain angle of vision within which the eye can readily discern all objects without changing its focus, or altering the line of sight. The eye's ability in this respect is taxed severely in attempting to "take-in" the entire surface of a picture when viewed at the comparatively short distance from the screen at which the front row of seats is necessarily placed. The larger the picture the more difficult becomes this function for the eye, and consequently a condition is set up which causes a severe and often painful eye strain. Furthermore, there is another angle to this question, which though generally overlooked, appears to me to be one quite important. The center of a picture is always above the direct line of vision of a person sitting in the front row, thus causing them to bend the head back somewhat and look "up" at the picture. For this reason a picture should be projected as low as possible without the foots hood intercepting the view of the lower part of the screen. Now, if the picture be made larger, then the mean or average height of the picture will be raised, and this increases the general vertical angle at which the picture must be viewed.

DANIEL CONSTANTINO
Motion Picture Projectionist, Easton, Pa.

Brother Fell says:

The size of the picture has directly to do with the value of the front rows of seats, because if the picture be large in proportion to its distance from them, then those occupying these seats will be subjected to more or less heavy eye strain, according to how bad the condition is, besides having an unsatisfactory view of the picture.

The eye strain will be caused by two separate things, viz: first, the picture will appear "coarse," as though not in sharp focus. Second, if one be seated too close to a large picture the movement of the eye in following the action on the screen through the wide angle involved, will set up a terrific strain.

Fell then quotes Bluebook figures, etc., as to what the relation of size to distance should be, but that is not germain to the question under discussion.

I don't know quite what to say as to the correctness of the various replies to this question. They are about what one might expect from the question, but Hanover, it seems to me, is the only one who really has the right end of it. He says:

No effect whatever, I think, though it has an APPARENT effect. It is really a matter of magnification. As you probably know, a razor edge which looks and feels absolutely perfectly sharp and smooth, when enormously magnified looks something like the business edge of a rip saw.

A piece of paper which looks wonderfully smooth, appears very round when subjected to the action of a not very powerful microscope, or even of an ordinary magnifying glass.

When a picture is enlarged, it is magnified in proportion to the enlargement, therefore it has somewhat the appearance of the smooth paper under the "glass." As a matter of fact I don't think the picture (screen image) itself is changed in any degree, assuming the lens systems to have been of equal excellence in both cases, but we are given what amounts to a microscopic view of it. Every roughness we see in the larger picture was present in the small one, BUT the magnification of the defects was too small to be noted by the eye. If you get up close to the small picture and far enough away from the large one you will get about the same effect.

In my opinion the real answer to this question is that increasing picture size, if carried far enough, merely serves to make the inherent faults of the picture and the lens action visible to the eye.

Frankly I had never thought of it quite in that light, myself, gentlemen, but friend Hanover is, I think, absolutely right, AND right-

By the way: for some reason or other friend Hanover has never sent his street address, and Burlington is quite some place. I would like to have your street or theatre address, if you have no objection, brother Hanover.

Question No. 160—Just what is the relation between screen brilliancy and picture size?

Hanover, Bennewitz, Fell, Constantino, Sommermeyer and Gray all came through on this one.

Gray says:

With other values being equal and remaining unchanged, the screen illumination is governed by the intrinsic brilliancy of the film illumination and the closing angle of the rays forming the screen image. Or, it is proportionate to the factor of magnification, i. e., the number of times the illuminated film has been magnified by the lens when it takes the form of the picture on the screen. Thus, the larger the picture the greater the the area over which the total c. p. at the aperture must be spread, and this results in a proportionate diminished brilliancy at any unit area on the screen.

Thomas says:

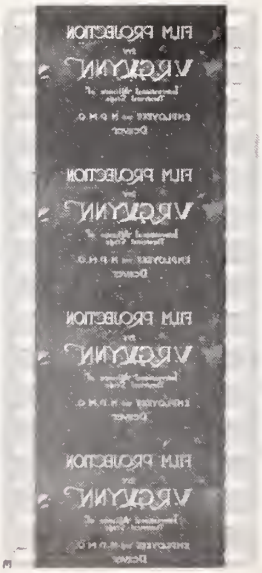
Increase in size of picture will demand increase in current consumption. If a fifteen foot picture with a given brilliancy per unit area be increased until its area were 25 per cent. greater, then 25 per cent more total illumination would be necessary at the screen.

Fell says:

As the size of the picture is increased the amount of light necessary to maintain the brilliancy per unit area increases rapidly. Refering to Table No. 10 of the Bluebook, assuming that the same percentage of the total light reaches the screen in every case, we find that by increasing the size of the picture from 10 to 14 feet we have decreased its brilliancy by 49 per cent, and that a 14 foot picture will require 61 per cent. added light to be as brilliant as a ten footer.

Good Stunt

W. R. Gwynn, Projectionist, Longmont, Colorado, who has just joined the Bluebook School, and who seems a most promising "pupil," hands me a clipping from the leader he attaches forninst the main title of the first reel of each show. His manager, in my 'umble opinion, shows good judgment and good showmanship in having this done, or in permitting it to be done if it is that way. Managers would be doing themselves a distinct favor by supplying leaders similar to this one, and demanding that it be used.



There will be those who will immediately ask why? The answer is very simple. As you all know, the names of the producer, the director, the cinematographer and often a lot of others are duly blazoned forth upon the screen at the beginning of each production. This, as you also all know, is just plain, simon-pure SELF ADVERTISING. Their work, so far as has to do with the production, is finished and done. The audience is only very mildly, if in any degree at all, interested in reading their names, or even in knowing who they are, except as to the producer and the actors playing the principal roles. To publish the rest of the names on the screen does no one but themselves any manner of good, and it has developed into a distinct annoyance to audiences and a serious waste of film footage.

The screen publication of the name of the theatre projectionist or projectionists is, however, an entirely different matter. IT IS THE ONE BEST BET OF THE MANAGER TO GET THE VERY BEST RESULTS UPON THE SCREEN THAT HIS PROJECTIONIST IS CAPABLE OF GIVING.

The work of the theatre projectionist is NOT yet done when his name appears, and the audience is in position to note any flaws which may appear therein. Under this condition is it not just plain common sense to suppose that WHEN THE AUDIENCE RIGHT THERE IN THE THEATRE KNOWS WHO IS PROJECTING THE PRODUCTION, THE PROJECTIONIST IS GOING TO BE MIGHTY CAREFUL THAT NO "BALKS" OCCUR? He is going to do the very best he knows how, is he not, especially in the smaller towns and cities, for he won't want a lot of people stopping him and roasting him next day for some bobble THEY KNOW OR BELIEVE HE WAS RESPONSIBLE FOR.

DON'T THAT SOUND LIKE SOUND REASONING, Mr. Theatre Manager? Can YOU dispute, or even question, its correctness? Don't YOU think it is RIGHT?

"But," you ask, "suppose there are two or more projectionists—what then?"

Very simple—also it multiplies the benefit. The title should then read something like this: "Projection in This Theatre In Charge of John Doe, Chief Projectionist. Wm. Doe, Assistant." Of if there be more, then William Doe, Charles Doe and Tom Doe, Assistants.

The effect? Huh! You just let Bill Doe make a bad break on the screen, and watch John, William and Tom climb his frame vigorously, because they know the audience don't know but what one of THEM was to blame.

Suggestion

However, may I suggest to brother Gwynn that he change the wording when he gets some new title. "Film Projection" is not good form, because one does not project film. I would suggest: "Projection in this theatre in charge of Alfred Gwynn." Or: "This picture projected by Alfred Gwynn," though the first is much better, I think.

Another Small Error

Cecil Fernandez, Chief Projectionist Liberty Theatre, St. Petersburg, Florida, and member local union 552 I. A., calls attention to the fact that "Table 11," in the eighth line from the top of page 262, should be Table 12.

We are indebted to brother Fernandez for the correction, which the owners of Bluebooks may make with a pencil.

It can't be done!

THE best show can't be put on unless the equipment of the projection room is of the best. And the best is none too good for the exhibitor who is desirous of pleasing the public. Here, then, is a suggestion. It comes from the foremost manufacturer of lenses in the world. It is, "Equip your projectors with CINEPHORS and stop worrying about insufficient and hazy illumination." Phone your dealer today for a convincing trial.

Loew Men Dine

When I received an invitation to attend the "Eighth Annual Testimonial Banquet, Tendered to Our Friend and Chief, M. J. Campbell, by the Projectionists of Loew's, Inc.," to be held at the Hotel Astor—one of the last words in "class" in this great city—at and after midnight December twentieth, I was strongly tempted to side-step, because I well knew it would be one of those all-night-and-part-of-the-morning affairs, and I'm getting so the "hay" looks real good along about the center of the night.

However, I have too many friends in the Loew bunch to do that, so I showed up at the Astor at midnight, all dolled up, my nose powdered and ready to join in the festivities—I use the word "festivities" advisedly.

Glad I Did

I'm real glad I did, for the reason that I met many old friends, some of whom I hardly see except at these annual affairs; also the gathering was one to warm the heart of one who has literally battled for many years to gain for the projection of motion pictures that respect which is its due, by reason of the importance of high grade knowledge and skill therein, and to get the Powers That Be in the motion picture industry to respect the projectionist, and the projectionists to respect each other and their profession.

The beautiful banquet hall, the splendidly decorated tables—to which the photograph does not nearly do justice—and the men themselves formed a picture I would have given considerable to have had some exhibitors look upon who still regard the projectionist as a mere unimportant machine attendant. I was told that the affair cost ten dollars a plate, and I believe it.

There were 150 Loew projectionists and guests present, each one of whom received a substantial souvenir—either a complete safety razor shaving set, a gold pencil or a silver cigarette case. Music was supplied by a most excellent band—from one of the Loew theatres I believe, though I am sorry to say I failed to make note of which one it was.

The affair was in charge of the following committee, which certainly did its work well: A. Polin, popularly known as the "War Horse of the Bronx," Chairman; L. Feldman, J. Goldhammer, E. Spinola and H. Zinberg, all of whom, as you may readily see by their names, came from the Emerald Isle.

The menu began with Pamblemousee, Porto Rico (which I am sure you all are partial to), and ended in Moka—with plenty in between, including Genoise Glacee aux Marrons. Don't you just dote on that last?

F. H. Richardson, of whom some of you may have heard, had the job of Toastmaster wished upon him, which job he filled with only an occasional splash of brown on the screen, and the necessity for framing up once in a while.

"Joe" Hornstein, who admits to being Vice-President and General Manager of the Howell Cine Equipment Company, sat on the left of "Mike" Campbell. "Joe" personally gave out something like thirty excellent watches and chains, presumably as souvenirs, during the evening. Any of the men who did not get theirs can have same by calling at Howell Cine Equipment Company, Seventh avenue and 49th street.

At the guest table were Mike Campbell, Supervisor of Projection for all Loew Theatres; Toastmaster F. H. Richardson, Joseph Hornstein, Walter Green, Sales Manager Precision Machine Company; A. D. Spear, and R. S. Sealy, Sales Department National Carbon Company; Wm. Gluckman, who does the sheet metal work for Loew's theatres; Frank J. Bird, Raven Screens; Michael Roth, Bio Carbons; Joe Abrams, Nicholas Power Company; Dave Marley, Howell Cine Equipment Company; Edward Altman, who does the lighting effects for Loew theatres; R. C. Kneuer, Precision Machine Company; P. A. MacGuire, Advertising Manager Nicholas Power Company; P. S. Conrad, Blue Seal Products; "Bill" Rabell, President Independent Movie Supply Company, and A. E. Meyers, Nicholas Power Company.

Others Present

Harry Mackler, President Local Union 306; Abe Horowitz, Secretary L. U. 306; "Joe" Basson, Candidate to succeed President Mackler, was there, as also were James Lafente, Business Representative of L. U. 306 in Brooklyn, and James White, Business Representative for Manhattan and the Bronx.

Among those others present (152 in all) the following were noted: H. Stein, L. Feldman, J. Goldhammer, H. Limberg, E. Spinola, Wm. Guth, M. Rattiner, H. Levin, M. Bernard, J. Wolheimer, A. Lang, H. Kelbane, S. Milstein, T. Rugino, A. Moshetto, M. Goodman, L. Alter, J. Brennan, B. Greenberg, E. Klinowski, J. Woodland, L. Epstine, J. Kortiff, J. Kelban, Wm. Salkey, L. Lazarus and, as I before said, A. Polin, Chairman of the committee, who, by the way, fully expects to be elected Business Representative of Local Union 306 in the coming election.

Film Damage!

What's the Real Cause?

By F. H. RICHARDSON

NOTE—The Famous Players-Lasky Corporation is responsible only for the comment by Mr. Dennison, printed under each photograph. Responsibility for all the rest is assumed by the editor of this department.

The accompanying photographs were made by the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, under the personal supervision of Earl J. Dennison. The company gave consent to their use in this department, and the Moving Picture World is going to a very considerable expense in the matter of the cuts necessary to their proper presentation. We are doing this because of the good we believe will result through the forceful and effective presentation to motion picture projectionists and moving picture machine operators, and to theatre managers of the enormous damage done to film through wrong projection procedure.

Plate No. 7 shows you that Technicolor film suffers damage as well as does standard film stock; also take note of the dirt adhering to the film at splices, caused by the dirty fingers of the one who made these "finger-film-press" splices.

In plate No. 8 we see a different type of damage to film abuse and damage, which happens very frequently. It is caused by loosing the lower loop. The lower loop may be lost for any one of several reasons, but it is always much more apt to happen if there is excessive take-up tension. A wide, stiff splice is a prolific cause of loosing the lower loop, especially when the take-up tension pull is very heavy. A splice which has poorly matched sprocket holes is another cause, which also is aggravated by heavy take-up tension. In fact any serious defect in the film is apt to cause this trouble if the take-up tension is heavy and to some extent even if it is normal. A weak lower sprocket idler bracket spring, or a badly adjusted lower sprocket idler also adds very greatly to the liability of loosing the lower loop.

Moral: Use only the amount of take-up tension necessary to do the work, AND be sure your lower sprocket idler is correctly adjusted, and that its bracket spring has sufficient power.

PLATE 7

Comment by Mr. Dennison: Shows that Technicolor film suffers damage the same as standard stock.

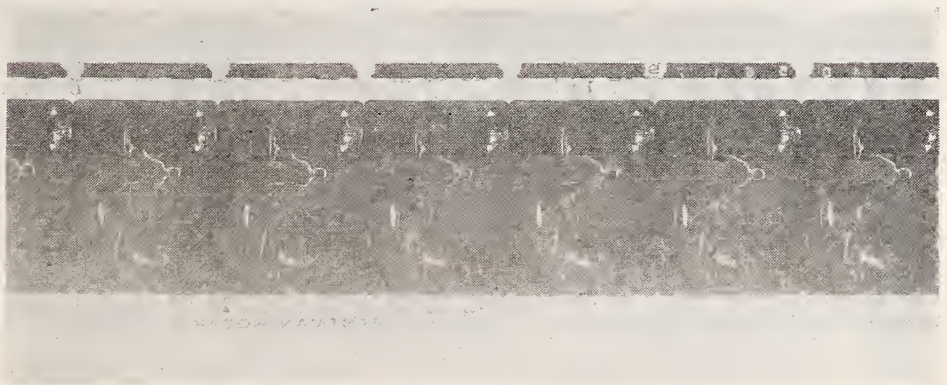

PLATE 8

Comment by Mr. Dennison: Film damaged by reason of loosing lower loop. Note how perforations have been torn out bodily on both sides, and directly opposite in every case.

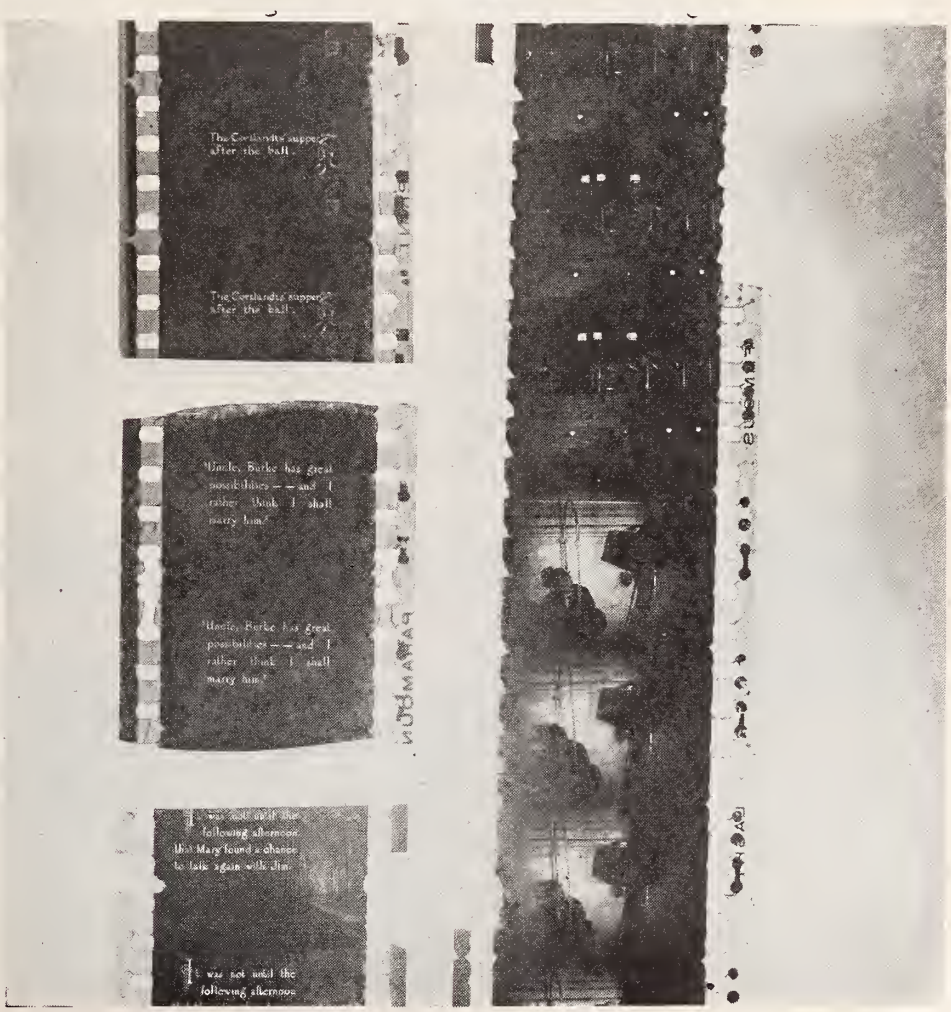

PLATE NO. 9

Comment by Mr. Dennison: Other examples of damage, usually caused by loosing the lower loop. Nice looking junk, isn't it? And mostly caused by just pure carelessness in making film splices, or in adjusting the take-up tension and lower sprocket idler. Don't YOU be guilty of such things, my brother. THIS FILM IS THE SEAL OF INCOMPETENCY OR RANK CARELESSNESS ON THE PART OF SOMEONE. There are few instances where the basic reason for such damage may justly be charged to any fault on the part of the theatre manager, though failure to supply new lower sprocket in place of worn ones, of course, increases the liability to loosing the lower loop.

The IRON

NOW IN ITS SIXTH MONTH—LYRIC THEATRE—

LOVE & ADVENTURE

THE IRON HORSE tells a dramatic story of LOVE, ADVENTURE, danger and thrills that accompanied the building of the great iron road upon which "iron horses" now travel puffing and steaming across this land from ocean to ocean.

It is a story of danger, devotion, tragedy—crime punished, virtue and loyalty rewarded.

It is a story that stirs the blood, makes moments pass like seconds, carries the looker-on, breathless, through the great scenes and the moving adventures that accompanied one of the greatest, most important enterprises and victories of the American nation.

PROGRESS AND CIVILIZATION

Intelligent Americans will see THE IRON HORSE more than once. Mothers and fathers will take their children to see it.

Progress, civilization, courage are the basis of this magnificent moving picture play of real education.

From the scene in Washington, with the tall, noble, sad, pathetic figure of the great Lincoln moving among the smaller statesmen, to the last triumphant ending, THE IRON HORSE teaches this lesson: AMERICA OWES HER GREATNESS to the individual courage and devotion of the American man and woman, to the daring of great business kings, and above all to the fact that the people work and live TOGETHER CLOSELY UNITED.

A moving picture such as "The Iron Horse," just produced by William Fox, showing the building of the first railroad across this continent, will do more to "Americanize" foreigners than any number of dreary sermons on the Constitution, and "100 per cent Americanism."

To see Lincoln walking in the White House corridors, to see live bison actually pursued by live Indians, and men laying the Union Pacific tracks under the fire of bows and arrows, is real education.

ORIGIN of the IRON HORSE

Sitting Bull, the mighty War Chief of the Sioux Indians, coined the phrase, THE IRON HORSE. The inspiration came to him after he had gotten his first glimpse of a steam locomotive as it chugged and tooted its way across the far-western prairies as an unwelcome invader of the realm of redskins. Col. W. F. Cody (Buffalo Bill) is authority for this statement.

All the inherent instincts of the great tribal leader were opposed to this harbinger of Progress and hence he united his hordes of warriors to impede its advancement and to obliterate it.

To the Indian Chief his horse meant speed enough in transportation and it was inevitable he would rebel against having his trusty steed supplanted by such an astounding contraption as a man-made IRON HORSE.

So epochal as a part of American history has become this term and all the bitter hostility of the primitive inhabitant of this then virgin soil that it belongs to the ages, being perpetuated as such as the title of the incomparable William Fox production,
THE IRON HORSE.

The
Founded in 1907 by J. P. Chalmers

"We Beg to Announce—"

NINETEEN TWENTY-FIVE presents no more important problem to the motion picture industry than intelligently constructive steps towards the solution of what we roughly call "the foreign situation." And the opening days of Nineteen Twenty-Five present the occasion to state that anything "intelligently constructive" must be of mutual benefit—to the increased advantage of foreign producers in the American market as well as of American producers in the field abroad.

Nor is this solely a producer's problem. Exhibitors also have a direct and personal interest.. Inevitably, any steps that are worthy the term "intelligently constructive" must redound to the gain of theatre owners both here and abroad.

We of the industry need a broader view of the entire problem. We suffer from the fact that each of us is too close to a particular phase of the situation to allow clear vision of the whole.

If I am an American distributor selling pictures abroad, my thoughts are narrowed on the point of increased revenue and the obstacles to be overcome; if I am a Continental producer vainly wondering why an eighty per cent market seems closed to me, my calm judgment is twisted by the sour of disappointment. The British or Continental trade paper man writing from London or Berlin and the American scribbling in New York are equally hampered despite their own good intentions.

There is the problem. There are the facts.

All of which is leading up to a very important announcement.

MOVING PICTURE WORLD feels that the close of Nineteen Twenty-Five should see a vast change in the foreign situation—should see intelligent cooperation replacing distrust and blindness. Moving Picture World feels that its duty as a representative trade organ calls for a real contribution to that end.

If first-hand information presented with a broad-gauged viewpoint cannot be found in the trade press of the industry it is useless to look for it elsewhere.

To get it calls for a specific action.

No film man making an occasional hurried trip through Europe can expect to step down the gangplank with a formulated foreign market solution that is anything more than a transient view shaped by momentary considerations.

No trade paper "foreign department" originating information and in viewpoint between Forty-second Street and Forty-ninth Street on New York's Seventh Avenue can hope to rise in usefulness above its source.

A roster of foreign correspondents cannot help, for they lack the necessary background of American film experience.

There is only one solution:

Send a man to Europe who can observe with eyes sharpened by extensive European experience, who can speak with the authority of long association with the American film field, American film men, and American film tastes. Send such a man there—and KEEP HIM ON THE GROUND.

Moving Picture World is doing that.

As its unselfish—if far-seeing—contribution to the industry's Nineteen Twenty-Five.

W. STEPHEN BUSH, whose name is in itself a sufficient expression of high standing and experience in the American film field, sails from New York on Tuesday, January 6, to again take up the duties of European representative for Moving Picture World.

For a three-year period, interrupted only by his recent brief visit to this side, Mr. Bush has been sending the most authoritative reports of conditions abroad to World readers. But he returns now to take up duties as an interpreter of conditions on a broader and more comprehensive scale than in the past. In addition to his work through the columns of Moving Picture World, we are pleased to place at the service of American and foreign producers the counsel and aid of a film man unusually well qualified to view both sides of the fence.

This is the initial announcement in a Nineteen Twenty-Five program that we feel certain will see an even more useful Moving Picture World than ever.

Speaking Freely

Gosh, we slipped up! Didn't give you a half dozen pages or so of "Forecasts for Nineteen Twenty-five by the Industry's Leaders" — and others. Hope you won't miss them. In fact, we know you won't. But if by any chance you do want to read that "Nineteen Twenty-five is going to be the greatest ever—the birds are singing and the sun is bright—etc., etc.," why just turn to your files. Look up the Holiday Numbers for Nineteen Twenty, Twenty-one, or any year you happen to strike. The statements don't change much from year to year. A few of the names disappear—Lewis J. Selznick, f'rexample. But otherwise you can get the official forecasts from the files, if you want 'em. Or write your own. Which might mean more.

Might do a little prophesying on our own hook. F'rinstance: "Nineteen Twenty-five will see bigger and better pictures than ever." That's safe.

Also: Along about November, Danny will add the figures up and show that it has been the most prosperous year in film history; two dozen independent producers and distributors will say that there never has been a worse year, and a few thousand exhibitors will confess that they never have had a winning week in their theatres.

All of which is playing safe for the seer. I can't lose.

Gosh, this safe stuff is easy. Here's another: Along about October after one hundred and four novels, seventy-nine plays, and eight hundred short story adaptations have constituted the year's output, six visiting production department heads will declare in New York that the day of the original story is here. "We are looking for new ideas," they will chorus. "For men who can grow up in the screen's own technique."

Then they will have to cut the interview short to keep six appointments with play brokers engaged in the joyous task of seeing six production heads bid against each other for the rights to a plot concerning which the picture critics will later say, "Was very well done considering that the vehicle was never intended for the screen. Only the marvelous genius of Director Whoozis overcame apparently insurmountable obstacles and made the picture passable."

Here's where we take a chance. And make a stab that isn't in the safe and sane cards. Nineteen Twenty-five is going to be another buyer's year. Because the general average and numerical strength of good pictures is still on the increase. And because the concentration of theatre buying power continues and will continue. Twelve months is not long enough to work out a solution. There are practically no real weak sisters among distributors, juggling bank loans and apt to relieve tension by dying any day. The ones that were weak in recent years are in a sounder position than ever. Despite the buyer's year. The ones that were too weak have passed out. Sound financing and intelligent executive work have put the others beyond immediate worry.

But here is something else that is happening. It is illustrated by a remark a big film executive made to us the other day. "Of course," he said, "We do not compete with Paramount and First National. We don't try to—and don't have to in order to make money. A lot of money, if all continues well in Nineteen Twenty-five."

That's radical for this business. It has been fact for a long time. But how many broken hearts and busted bank-rolls can be charged to unwillingness to admit this fact?

We are writing this looking out a window that is frosted with snow and upon a street that is covered with slush-to-be. And the only thought that can enter our mind at this moment is:

Tomorrow Bruce Johnston, Felix Feist, and Louis Brock sail for Cuba. Where they say that the fur stores sell Palm Beach cloth in January. And the only pair of arctics that ever struck the island is preserved in the National Museum.

But the boys have to be back in time for the First National Executive Committee meeting on January 12th. And we just know it's going to snow, rain, and hail blue blazes on January 13th. Watch and wait.

Universal has them worrying. Not because of the paltry three million dollars represented in the preferred stock issue. But because of the plans that may be behind the moves that resulted in the issue. All are guessing. And that's all. We are not even guessing. But we do know this: None of Uncle Carl's loyal subordinates who have come within our range closely following a talk with the chief in recent months have failed to look very happy, very mysterious, and very much as if in the frame of mind that says, "I can't tell you anything now—but I wish you knew all the boss told me, and the plans he has." S's'sh!

Our memory may be tricky, but we doubt if this business has ever seen a sales campaign handled with the all-embracing efficiency of the "Peter Pan" effort put forth by Paramount. Wasn't that a whale?

Take it back to the start. The working up of advance interest in selection of the star. An international proposition. Handled in an international way.

Then the tie-ups. Real tie-ups. Not merely hokum statements that this and that company will help you—maybe. Accent on the maybe. But Peter Pan's name on everything that could possibly be put into a window display or a newspaper ad. And the manufacturers and dealers vitally interested.

Then the double truck Saturday Evening Post page. With two hundred and fifty-eight houses actually listed as part of the country-wide simultaneous showing. And actually showing the picture. No bulls. That was sales work.

It has been a great job. On a picture that was tricky. Because many exhibitors just viewing it as "fillum" would be apt to say, "oh, a fairy story."

We are sorry if they do. They'll miss something for their houses that can't be counted in dollars and cents. And that is not saying they won't also miss the dollars. Because the dollars are there, too. But there is more. And that is what counts—in a year that consists of fifty-two weeks. Fifty-one of which we might give over to getting dollars alone, and the fifty-second to getting dollars plus PRESTIGE.

Any exhibitor who personally endorses "Peter Pan" as the type of picture that he is proud to show is raising his individual standing in his community one hundred per cent. They'll forget the "Wayward Step-Daughters" that he showed the week before and say, "Exhibitor So-and-So probably couldn't help that one."—R. E. W.

From Losing Second-Run Theatre to Successful First-Run—Overnight!

"Billy" Goldman Startles St. Louis with His Remarkable Showmanship

By DAVID F. BARRETT

ADDING extra days—getting an extra box office wallop out of a given attraction, making it go successfully just a little bit longer, is an accomplishment almost any exhibitor would and should be proud of. But to transform a losing second-run neighborhood movie, with a rather checkered career behind it, into a successful first-run palace—and to do that little thing almost overnight—is—well that takes real showmanship.

Out in St. Louis, "Billy" Goldman is synonymous for showmanship. And that's the answer why, at the recent hearing before the Federal Trade Commission in the Mound City, competent and truthful witnesses listed the Kings Theatre, Kings Highway, just north of Delmar boulevard, as one of the first-run houses of St. Louis, a desirable place for distributors to sell their premier showings in this important key city. A few years ago the Kings would not have been thought of in that way.

"The Recollection of the Quality Remains Long After the Price is Forgotten!" The gentleman who coined that phase has long since gone to his eternal reward. But before departing this life he builded a fortune on that basis—quality for a price.

As a boy Billy Goldman bought one of the old gent's jack knives. He's still got the frog sticker. It's lost among sundry tools in the back of his garage. He has long since forgotten what was paid for the piece of cutlery, but he shall always remember its quality. It clinched for him the secret of success in the movies or any other business-quality at a price. That's the keystone of the secret of the Kings, and more recently the Rivoli, which Billy added to his string but a few months ago. But I am getting ahead of my story. I set out to tell how Billy Goldman turned a losing second-run neighborhood show into a winning first-run house.

In the Spring of 1923, when Goldman announced through the public press that he had acquired the Kings Theatre, the wise boys along Picture Row shook their heads. Some laughed quietly. Others, more thoughtful, opined they felt sorry for Bill. He was a real good fellow—and they hated to see him lose his dough.

At the time no thought was given to the Kings as a possible first-run house. Far be it from such. A mere second-rate, second-run neighborhood house. And a loser at that.

Twelve years ago the Kings was some show house. It has just been opened by O. T. Crawford as a combination picture and vaudeville theatre. It was a thing of beauty. The last word architecturally speaking. A desirable place in which to be amused.

WILLIAM GOLDMAN

But somehow the public had never taken to it. Crawford could not make it go.

Others had tried their hands with it. Everything on the calendar of amusements had been put on there—a combination show, musical comedies, burlesque, light operas, serious dramas and even Marcus Loew gave it a whirl with his vaudeville and some feature pictures. When he gave it up, Famous Players tried to put it over as a second-run house but it simply wasn't there.

So it looked like the chaps in the know were right for once when they made floral reservations for Bill's financial demise so far as the Kings was concerned.

Going in, as they say, Goldman thought of the Kings in terms of second-runs. At that time he did not consider the first-run possibilities of the house. First of all, he knew that it would be difficult to secure high-class attractions first-run. So with a desirable second-run contract with Paramount in his hands, the right to play the big Famous Players-Lasky feature right in back of their first-run palace, the Missouri, Goldman wasn't worrying so very much, except that he knew he was up against a tough game.

But even he didn't realize then how tough the going would really be. As said, the Kings had been tried out on all sorts of attractions, and some of them left a bad taste in the mouths of the logical patrons of the house. The handicaps were many. It didn't take Goldman long to conclude that the Kings couldn't be put over as a second run house.

And right there he showed his showmanship. How many exhibitors would have had the courage or the foresight in the face of failure to consider changing the policy from second-run to first-run. To seize the bull by the horns and make him say his prayers as it were. But that is exactly what Goldman did.

Quietly he laid his plans. He went into the first-run markets and bought his product. The best to be secured, paying top prices for what he wanted.

And then—with a bang that was heard throughout the entire city—the Kings burst forth as a first-run theatre de luxe. And the United States Government, the Marines, the Navy, the Army, the City Administration, the Health Department and even the newspapers helped put it over. Overnight Goldman transformed a losing second-run house into a winning first-runner and he has kept it there.

The campaign through which Mrs. Wallace Reid in person, in conjunction with "Human Wreckage," put the Kings into the ranks of successful first-run houses marked an epoch in St. Louis showmanship. It set a mark that prior to that time was never attempted, and which probably will never again be reached—for it was of the once-in-a-life-time class.

When everything was set, Bill went. And it was with some speed. Overnight he blanketed the town with his bills. Signs on every prominent corners. Every Army, Navy and Marine Corps recruiting signboard in town carried his message. "The Army wants

Three Elements in William Goldman's Tremendous Parade

Only Good Men. See Mrs. Wallace Reid in Person with 'Human Wreckage' at the Kings Theatre and Save the Rising Generation." That was the message that greeted hundreds of thousands of St. Louisians as they hurried to their tasks the morning of the big day, July 28th.

Mayor Henry W. Kiel declared the seven-day period Anti-Narcotic Week, issuing a proclamation in which he called upon the entire citizenry of the city to join Mrs. Wallace Reid in her noble fight. At the City Hall he greeted her in person when, with her mother and accompanied by Col. Phillip Brockman, president of the Board of Police Commissioners, she called upon the chief executive to explain her mission. To her he gave the keys of the city.

Following which Bill put on a parade. And what a turn-out it was! Headed by a platoon of police as big as that which escorts the Veiled Prophet on his annual pilgrimage of the Mound City, it moved through the streets of the down-town section. The United States Navy band was there, and in line were high city officials, federal officers attached to the anti-narcotic service, the Fire Department, Police Patrols, Army, Navy and Marine Corps trucks and automobiles, city ambulances, taxicabs and many private cars.

So thoroughly and completely had Goldman tied up every arm of the government, the state and city administrations to put over his show that some of the newspapers in a somewhat critical vein played the story up in lead positions on their first pages, devoting upwards of a column to the story. It was publicity that Bill could never hope to obtain otherwise.

Within a few hours every man, woman and child knew that the Kings was on the map. Thousands of them trooped to the house to see Mrs. Wallace Reid in person, and when they got there Bill was ready again. On the screen he flashed the ten big attractions that were to follow "Human Wreckage." "Rupert of Hentzau," "Enemies of Women" and others of that type. Titles and stars to conjure with. Bill's theory was and has always been "When you get them keep them coming."

The first week of the new policy was a big winner, and he came right back by holding Mrs. Reid and the picture over for another seven days.

Always a firm believer in printer's ink Goldman was generous in his advertising of this and other big attractions he put on at the Kings during the period he has been operating it first-run. But there are other things to putting a theatre over besides generous advertising—some so trivial that many exhibitors would ignore them entirely.

Walking or driving along Kingshighway toward the Kings, Goldman had noticed that you couldn't see the house until you were right upon it. A row of handsome, stately old maple trees hid it from view. And on his orders the woodman didn't spare those particular trees. They were cut down. Today you can see the Kings' big electric sign from Easton avenue on the north to the Chase Hotel at Forest Park on the south. Like a beacon light it greets those pleasure-bound.

Secondly, he convinced the powers that be that a traffic rule against left-hand turns at the corner of Kingshighway and Delmar boulevards was a hindrance rather than a benefit to traffic. This permits thousands of machine owners leaving west of Kingshighway and coming in Delmar boulevard, the principal east and west thoroughfare of the city, to conveniently turn north to the Kings Theatre.

Those two little things have had a tremendous effect on the Kings box office receipts on more than one occoming!"

"When you get them, keep them comnig!"

Goldman doesn't chance that. In his public relations department at the Kings Theatre he keeps three young women busy mailing out notices to patrons. He has a mailing list of some 7,500 names. Every week the guests of all of the principal hotels of the city find a nice little greeting from the management of the Kings in their mail boxes. They are informed what the program will contain and the best time to see the feature picture, etc.

Between times these girls telephone persons on the lists of patrons of the house to obtain personal expressions of their views of the shows that are being presented, what suggestions they have to improve conditions at the house. And if you don't think this pays, ask Goldman. It's a personal touch that can't be purchased.

In buying his product for the Kings and now for his Rivoli, Sixth street near Olive, Goldman is careful not to vary the class of the attraction too much. There is danger in buying the great big super-specials, he says, for he points out there are not enough of the outstanding supers to have a new one every week. So if you put only a few on every year, you feed your patrons up to a standard that can't be mantained. His theory is to have a good picture every week. The patrons may not rave about it, but they will always be satisfied. And keeping them satisfied is one of the secrets of successful showmanship.

That Goldman's system with the Kings can be carried out successfully with other houses, he has since demonstrated by taking over the Rivoli, a downtown theatre that had the reputation of being a "dead one." Like the Kings it had had a somewhat varied career, although it had always been a picture house.

The week of December 6th Goldman put on "Dante's Inferno" for an extra week, having had a record-breaking week with it the previous seven-day period. In fact, playing at 30 cents he grossed almost twice as much as an outstanding super-special had played to under the previous management at 55 cents.

With the Rivoli, Goldman varies slightly from his Kings advertising policy. Being a downtown house, it caters to the passerby, the casual, and whereas at the Kings a neat glass case with a pretty hand-painted card or two suffices to inform patrons of the attractions current and coming, at the Rivoli one must shout out the wares, so every bit of space is utilized for outstanding advertising material. Newspaper space is not so effective there as at the Kings.

Institutional advertising is also an important adjunct to the Rivoli. It has a service bureau mailing list of 4,000 names, and also carries advertising boards in all of the down town Class B hotels. Department store patrons are catered to, and an educational campaign is under way to get them to utilize the theatre as a sort of shoppers' rest.

Goldman has long been an outstanding figure in St. Louis's motion picture world. He started his picture career in 1910 when he opened the St. Louis Tent Show at St. Louis and Prairie avenues. In 1912 he took over the Maffitt Theatre on Vandeventer avenue near Maffitt avenue. This house had been built by O. T. Crawford when he was in his prime. Under Goldman's management it was a gold mine.

From the profits of the Maffitt he built the New Lindell Theatre on Grand boulevard, near Hebert street, in 1915, and in 1918 built the Grand-Florissant Theatre. He also added the Novelty and Lowell to his string later.

In 1920, when the Famous Players Missouri Corporation was launched, he was selected as its managing director, his Maffitt, Lindell, Novelty, Lowell and Grand-Florissant houses becoming part of the string of some twenty-two houses operated by their corporation.

Under his direction the Famous Players built the Criterion, Broadway near Olive street; the Delmonte, Delmar boulevard near Clara avenue, the largest one-floor theatre in the world, and on November 9, 1922, opened the Missouri Theatre, Grand boulevard at Lucas avenue. The Missouri at that time was the largest and finest picture theatre in the West and still remains the class of the Mississippi Valley.

He remained in charge of the Missouri until September, 1922. During his regime as managing director of the big Paramount first-run house he set a standard of showmanship that lifted St. Louis out of the mediocre class. He was the first to give the city modern presentations and to educate the movie fans to possibilities of soft light, organ prelude, orchestral accompaniment and overtures, the refinements that have come into motion picture presentation in recent years.

In his regime the Missouri was made an institution of St. Louis, a standard to be guided by, as Sterling on silver. All of which made his task of putting the Kings over as a first-run house all the more difficult. Sixty per cent of the patrons of the Grand boulevard palaces come from the West End. With his seating capacity of 1,900 seats at the Kings he also faced the task of combating the influence of the Grand boulevard houses with their 6,000 seats.

In addition to the Kings and Rivoli, Goldman also owns the Queens, a neighborhood house at Euclid and Maffitt avenues. He also promoted the St. Louis Theatre, Grand boulevard and Morgan street, a 4,500-seat, $1,000,000 picture palace now under construction, and recently was reported to have purchased Harry Koplar's half-interest in the St. Louis Amusement Company's group of sixteen neighborhood houses. However, that deal has not been finally put through, it is understood.

So Goldman has had thorough experience. But he does not leave things to chance, and he is always reaching out for new ideas to keep his houses moving successfully. An instance of this kind is the "Youth Week" he arranged for the week of December 20 to 25, inclusive. During that week the management of the Kings was completely taken over by boys and girls nominated by patrons of the house. Several thousand votes were received in the contest, and the twenty-four girls and seventy-six boys who received the most votes were assigned the task of handling the big show house that week. Bill got his idea from Boy Scout Week, recently held, when Boy Scouts took over the reins of the city government, etc., in St. Louis.

GOLDMAN'S RECORD

William Goldman is no stranger to St. Louis, having begun exhibiting in 1910 with the St. Louis Tent Show, at St. Louis and Prairie avenues.

In 1912 he acquired the Maffitt Theatre on Vandeventer avenue, near Maffitt avenue.

In 1915 he built the New Lindell Theatre on Grand Boulevard, near Hebert street.

In 1918 he erected the Grand-Florissant Theatre.

A little later he added the Novelty and Lowell to his string.

In 1920 he was made managing director of the then new Famous Players Missouri Corporation, his five houses becoming a part of the circuit of twenty - two operated by the corporation.

Famous Players built the Criterion and Delmonte, and opened the Missouri under his direction. He remained in charge of the Missouri, then the largest and finest picture theatre in the West, until September, 1922.

He promoted the St. Louis Theatre—a 4,500-seat, $1,000,000 theatre, now under construction.

He now is reported to be seeking to buy Harry Koplar's half interest in the St. Louis Amusement Company, which controls sixteen neighborhood houses.

Ideas!

Gathered Along Broadway By W. Stephen Bush

TWO of the theatres on Broadway this week were given over entirely to the children. Both the Rivoli and Rialto were crowded every afternoon and evening with litttle folks and their parents or guardians, testing the extensive preparations for handling them to the fullest extent. Rarely did I see audiences, matching in numbers and enthusiasm the throngs at the two theatres named. In each theatre the star of "Peter Pan" appeared at the end of the two performances de luxe and was given an ovation. "Peter Pan" dwarfed the rest of the program, the only other unit being a very clever and highly suitable Max Fleischer "Inkwell" cartoon: "The Storm." Even the weekly was omitted, for "Peter Pan" is a feature of unusual length.

As an entertainment chiefly intended for children, the program and presentation might well serve as a model. The cartoon, "The Storm," carried the children and the adults into gales of laughter, a thoroughly fitting conclusion to a children's performance. As to "Peter Pan" one may safely say, that Dr. Riesenfeld in the prologue and the musical accompaniment cleverly accentuated the underlying note of pathos and weirdness, which characterizes this modern fairy tale. The prologue had no particular title but it might well have been called a glimpse into fairyland. The prologue hushed the lively young audience into silent attention and prepared them for the main attraction and no prologue can do more.

The parting of the curtains disclosed a scene of a fairy landscape with a dim and mysterious background with stars shining faintly here and there. Room was left in the foreground of the stage for the dance which ended the prologue. The orchestra played a valedictory and slowly went into a "chanson plaintif" as the curtain rose. The figure of "Peter Pan" in its recognized airy dress and jaunty hat was dimly seen at the right, seated on a rock, and presently took up the notes of the song. As it neared its end there appeared in the semi-darkness of the foreground a trio of dancing faires all clad in white which was in quick succession joined by the full ballet of the Rivoli. It was a short but most graceful dance and before the curtain closed again the fairies and "Peter Pan" quickly disappeared into the shadows of fairyland.

The audience gave the prologue "a generous hand" and less than twenty seconds later "Peter Pan" was on its way. It was well introduced in a musical way by "The Dawn" from the suite, "A Day In May." All the telling points in the feature were most aptly scored, the "allegroprecipitoso" at the appearance of the lions giving the youngsters a special thrill. A good deal of the musical accompaniment of "Peter Pan" consisted of special themes composed for the occasion by Dr. Riesenfeld. The "Peter Pan" motif and the "mother theme" made a fine contrast and greatly heightened the charm of the performance. The applause at the end was well sustained, but scarcely less so than the demonstrations of enthusiastic approval in response to the question of a subtitle: "Do you believe in fairies? If you do, clap your hands."

FOR imparting a seasonal air and atmosphere to his program Roxy at the Capitol was greatly appreciated and applauded by his audiences. The unit responsible for the New Year's spirit of the program was No. 1, described on the bill as "Happy New Year" (A Declamation) Father Time, Frank Moulan. As a rule, it is well known and understood by screen showmen, declamations are "de trop" and a drug on the market as far as any demand by the audience is concerned. Exceptions to this rule are extremely rare, but there is no doubt that the declamation at the Capitol, short, well conceived and well delivered by the conventional figure of Father Time was one of the rare exceptions for the audience showed its unmistakable appreciation.

Applauding "The Weekly"

A notable feature of the programs in the Broadway houses this week and last week has been the weekly. There seems to have been a special wealth of material as the duplications were few and far between. In the selection of the scenes composing the weekly preference was givn to animal scenes, pictures wtih babies, sports and outdoor scenes, ideal material for a good weekly. The frequent applause given to these weeklies in the last week again called forcible attention to the importance of this unit as often the most popular item on the program.

The program continued in an appropriate and dignified way with the Faust overture, which in turn was followed by "Caro Nome" from Verdi's "Rigoletto" sung by Miss Caroline Andrews. I do not want to attempt an explanation or analysis of the fact, but there was a pleasing and harmonious sequence in having "Caro Nome" follow the Faust overture, the combination gave tone and character to the musical portion of the program. This circumstance also helped the program as a whole, for the feature "The Dixie Handicap" dealt with a theme abundantly familiar to motion picture audiences.

There was not a solitary new wrinkle. "The Dixie Handicap" was well introduced by the last scene of the weekly showing an actual steeplechase with a long chapter of accidents over the hurdles and numerous exhibitions of clever and daring horsemanship. This last scene in the weekly was followed by a splendid prologue, which well deserves detailed mention. It emphasizes the southern atmosphere of the feature and consisted of very clever dancing and a potpourri of southern melodies. "Old Black Joe" was particularly well done. The singer, made up as an old darky, was called by the mistress of an old Colonial mansion. He came with the tardiness of old age and his song with its "I am coming" fitted well into the sketch. The prologue was very heartily applauded. The musical scoring was such as might be expected under the circumstances. "My Old Kentucky Home" in various moods and always cleverly attuned to the requirements of the play formed the dominant theme.

THE Piccadilly presentation was up to its usual good standard. There was a new edition of the Fur and Fashion show which again scored a hit with the audience. Two short and snappy musical numbers filled up the space between the overture and the Fur and Fashion show "Molly On the Shore," by the Piccadilly string quartette, and a short prologue with the song "When the Bell In the Lighthouse Rings Ding-Dong" introduced the feature "The Lighthouse By the Sea." Just as the feature on the program overshadowed all the other units, the dog "Rin-Tin-Tin" in turn overshadowed the feature and simply eclipsed both the story and the cast. There were spots throughout the feature where the barking of the dog was most skillfully imitated and added a touch of sensational and unexpected realism. Musically the feature was aptly introduced by the Fingal's Cave overture.

Have "Blues" Converted This Exhibitor?

Exhibitor Brownlee of the Palace Theatre, Adair, Ia., after losing his fight at the election for open picture shows on Sunday, has decided he wants to put Adair into the position of having nothing open on Sunday except the depot and the churches. He says the Iowa blue laws are about that strong, and it is only a matter of enforcing them. Since they are enforced with regard to the moving picture house he expects to seek to enforce them with respect to suspension of all work whatsoever with the exception of charity or necessity on Sunday.

Schine's Bath Theatre Opened Christmas; Sunday Agitation

Right on the heels of the opening of the new Babcock Theatre in Bath, N. Y., comes a petition to the office of Mayor Willson R. Campbell from the members of the local Women's Christian Temperance Union, asking the town executive to take immediate action prohibiting the showing of motion pictures in the house on the Sabbath. However, the mayor has taken no action in the matter, nor will he until the proposition is presented to the entire village board.

It is understood that certain members of the W. C. T. U. and the local clergy indorse the action of the women in protesting against Sunday pictures. Residents, however, are divided on the subject, there being fully as many, if not more, who desire Sunday shows, than those who oppose. Perhaps Bath will be the next town to stage a referendum on the proposition.

The Babcock, which is the newest house in the Schine Theatrical Corporation chain, was opened on Christmas night. The Mayor, Senator Ernest E. Cole, William D. Garrison, president of the Chamber of Commerce, and Robert C. Turnbull, head of the Rotary Club, spoke. The house seats 900 and is beautifully decorated inside and out and modernly equipped. Harold Lee has been appointed manager. The Schine interests are leasing the house from William W. Babcock, owner and builder of the structure.

Southeastern Kentucky Exhibitors Organizing

A tentative organization of the theatres of southeastern Kentucky was formed recently at a meeting at Pineville, in which 14 theatres of that section of the state were represented. Temporary officers were chosen as follows: F. Dooling, Harlan, president; C. C. Bowling, Pineville, vice-president; Arthur Brown, Middlesboro, secretary, and J. M. Miles, Barbourville, treasurer. Among the towns represented were Corbin, London, Williamsburg, Barboursville, Pineville, Middlesboro, Harlan, Benham, Lynch, Croxton, Evarts and Walling's Creek. According to a statement issued by J. M. Miles, necessary papers are being drawn up to effect a permanent organization.

Arthur S. Friend Pays $375,000 for Valuable Site in New Haven

The site of the former Rialto Theatre in New Haven, Conn., destroyed by fire several years ago, has been purchased by Arthur S. Friend of New York City, according to an announcement on December 26. The price involved was said to be $375,000.

Recently it was announced, when a New Haven realty company purchased the land, that a picture theatre to cost approximately $1,000,000 would be erected. A few weeks ago announcement was made that Yale University would perhaps acquire the site and erect thereon a business building and a theatre, the latter to serve as a place for the production of plays by Yale students participating as actors and authors. The former Rialto Theatre was operated by Alfred S. Black at the time of the disastrous fire in which several persons were killed.

Mr. Friend states that he made the purchase for clients, and that it will be immediately improved with an office and theatre building. There will be two hundred offices, eight stores, a cafe and a theatre to seat 2,600. The theatre will be equipped with every known device for safety, and to provide for the lavish entertainment of the New Haven public. The building will be completed and the theatre opened in August, 1925.

Towns in Southwest Having Some Trouble With Projectionists

Fred S. Gantz, Sand Springs, Okla., owner of the Star Theatre there, filed a petition in the district court, asking for an injunction against the Moving Picture Machine Operators, Local Union No. 513, a branch of the national organization; W. W. Bassett, president of the local; R. A. Roberts, business agent, and Eddie Miller, as operator.

Gantz alleges that on October 18 he entered into a contract with the local union whereby he was to be furnished a moving picture machine operator until September, 1925 for $40.00 a week. He says one Eddie Miller was employed. Now, he alleges, Miller is threatening to quit at the behest of the union officials. He asks the court to enjoin each defendant from breaching the contract.

All efforts to bring about peace and a settlement between the El Paso, Texas, theatres and the moving picture operators has failed and the theatres will run open shop until such time as a settlement can be reached.

OFFICIALS ATTEND OPENING OF BAKER, DOVER, N. Y.

The re-modeled Baker Theatre, Dover, N. J. was opened this week by R. F. Woodhull. The Baker in its new state is entirely modernized and seats about 1800 persons.

The Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America was represented at the opening by National President M. J. O'Toole and Chairman of the Administrative Committee Sydney S. Cohen. Woodhull is chairman of the board of directors. Mayor William Hoskins of Dover presided at a short series of congratulatory addresses and Mayor Frederick Breidenback of Newark, Superintendent of Schools Bowlby and others spoke.

Coming and Going

Rod LaRocque sailed on the S.S. Olympic for Paris on December 27. He had arrived in New York from the Coast in time to spend Christmas in New York.

Arthur Kelley, second vice-president of United Artists Corporation is in London. He is expected to return to New York shortly.

Michael Simmons, identified for a time with the trade press, announces that he will sail for Rome on January 3.

Jesse J. Goldburg is back in New York from the Coast.

A former manager of the Regent Theatre at Ottawa, Ontario, J. C. Kennedy, was a visitor in Ottawa over the holidays. Mr. Kennedy has been manager of the Capitol Theatre, Peterborough for Famous Players Canadian Corp., for the past 18 months. He had charge of the Ottawa Regent when it was controlled by the Allens of Toronto.

Harry Rapf, associate studio executive at Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's Culver City studios, has returned there after an extended stay in New York, during which he secured a large amount of film material.

Joe Klein, general manager of Celebrated Players of Chicago is in New York.

Sam E. Rork is back on the Coast after a visit in the East.

William M. Seabury sailed this week for Europe. He will spend some time in Berlin, it is said, before returning to America.

Director Dell Henderson is in New York from the Coast.

Albert E. Smith, head of Vitagraph, is expected to arrive in New York from the Coast on January 4.

Norbert Lusk, for some time connected with the Thomas H. Ince Corporation publicity bureau on the Coast, is in New York.

David O'Malley has returned to New York after an extensive trip through the South in the interests of C. B. C.

Canadian Independent Gets Dominion Films Business

Canadian Independent Films, Ltd., which was organized recently with headquarters in Montreal, Quebec, has taken over the business of Dominion Films, Ltd., a former important enterprise in the Dominion, of Jule and J. J. Allen, having branches in six cities from coast to coast.

The formation of the new company is of particular interest to independent exhibitors of the country, it is stated. The president is Louis Rosenfeld of Toronto, who was formerly prominently associated with the Allens, while the vice-president is Jules Levine of Montreal. Martin Arnovitz of Montreal is the secretary-treasurer.

That the company intends to do business on a large scale is indicated by the fact that the Canadian rights for three brands of pictures have already been secured, these being the Columbia, Perfection and Preferred pictures. Lists already announced indicate that the company has eight each of Perfection and Columbia releases and four features of the Preferred. Canadian Independent Films is also negotiating for several other makes of United States and European productions for the Canadian market, it is stated.

Universal Re-Incorporates; $3,000,000 Floatation; Theatre Acquisition Aim?

Old Directorate Heads Universal Pictures Company, Inc.—To be Listed On Stock Exchange—Plans Guarded But Building Motive Gains Credence by A. S. Friend's Purchases in Bigger Key Cities for an "Unknown Party"

By TOM WALLER

THE film industry is talking, wondering and conjecturing about Universal this week. Carl Laemmle started the White Way buzzing when he issued a lengthy prospectus. In this is contained the information that Universal Pictures Company, Inc., is being formed to "acquire the entire outstanding capital stock of Universal Pictures Corporation." At the same time, Arthur Friend is credited by the Film Daily with having been instrumental in interesting the Wall Street financial houses in the loan which, according to the prospectus, includes a $3,000,000 issue of 8 per cent first preferred stock. While all this is going on, Mr. Friend finds time to go to New Haven and purchase for an unknown party a $375,000 theatre site. What two and two makes in Universal calculus is what the filmdom outside the Laemmle sanctum is trying to dope out.

Glancing over the prospectus proves just an appetizer to read it over carefully; and after that to scrutinize it minutely. From the point of view of the man unversed in the intricacies of Wall Street, the final figuring would tend to show material decidedly interesting.

The present directorate of Unibersal will have control over the new company. The $3,000,000 is being floated by Dillon, Read & Co., and also by Shields & Co. With the par value per share at $100, the indicated preferred certificates total in the neighborhood of 30,000. There is a similar total of common stock certificates as adduced by the notation in the prospectus: "The purchaser of each five shares of first preferred stock to receive a warrant for the purchase of five shares of common stock." Elsewhere in the statement and apparently corroborative of the assertion that Laemmle and his associates will remain in control, in view of the figures as to the stock just mentioned, is a clause showing that Universal Pictures Company, Inc., has 250,000 shares of common stock "to be presently outstanding." The casual reader of the prospectus may therefore conclude that the major percentage of common stock is consequently not reckoned in the present flotation.

Getting its name and its activities on the board of the Stock Exchange authenticates facts and figures and greatly enhances their value, since they then become public property. Paramount was the first of the producing companies to place its stock in the market. The new Universal corporation aspires to be the second. The prestige and nation-wide confidence which this move will inspire would give rise to a belief, especially strong in New York, that Universal Pictures Company, Inc., will bend greater efforts toward gaining power in a department of the field comparatively little touched upon by Universal Pictures Corporation. This is the proposition of theatre acquisition.

In the prospectus, it is revealed under the section entitled "Distribution" that Universal "operates fifteen theatres, in important cities throughout the United States, and also operates five theatres in foreign territory."

Of course, there are many that consider $3,000,000 just a "drop in the bucket" so far as augmenting the "fifteen" and the "five" are concerned. But in the same breath they are quick to appreciate the value of $3,000,000 when its activities are being recorded on the tickers of the money overseers of the world.

Adhering to this course, those who are familiar with rumors extending back over the past six months or more—as to the seeming ambitions and plans of "U"—are today patting themselves on the back and "buttonholing" their friends along Broadway, reiterating the hackneyed salutation: "I told you so."

The summation of two and two in Universal calculus for them in an analyzation of the "dope" of the past year, crowned by the publicized facts during the week. Their understanding—and they are all expert dopesters who seldom overlook anything bearing even the semblance of a point emanating through premature odors from the kitchen of premeditation—is that Universal Pictures Company, Inc., is planning to further strengthen itself in such of the bigger key cities where its product may not be reaching the public on Grade A, Certified, screens.

In everyday English, such understanding has it that Universal Pictures Company, Inc., will, before the close of 1925, have one of these screens, surrounded by the most elaborate and expensive settings in no less a much coveted sector than the loop of Chicago.

With the mentioning of Chicago and Universal comes into position once more the name of Arthur S. Friend. The situation has been worked out by the dopesters, as already mentioned, along the lines of a crossword puzzle. Friend makes a purchase—a site for a theatre—in one of the bigger key cities. That much is provided for the solution. But the white space to fill is the name of the unknown party—the party which has put up the cash; the party for whom Arthur S. Friend makes the purchase.

With the report that Artur S. Friend was instrumental in introducing Universal to the Wall Street men, many, in fact most, of the "contentants" have filled in the vacant space with the words "Big U." And Friend admits that he has made many additional purchases in this respect. Chicago and New Haven lead, but Friend announces that he has visited and placed the necessary signature on other dotted lines which has materialized in fat commissions for real estate brokers also in Cleveland, Columbus, Cincinnati, Detroit, Buffalo and New York.

Facts submitted by Carl Laemmle show that the gross operating income for Universal Pictures Corporation for the years ended November 1921-22-23 are, $16,099,206 and $17,635,138 and $20,735,519, respectively. For the same periods the net earnings on 250,000 shares of common stock are listed at $254,334 and $544,859 and $886,763, respectively.

The prospectus prepared by Mr. Laemmle for the $1,000,000 flotation reveals, under the title of "Business," the following:

"Universal Pictures Company, Inc., is being formed to acquire the entire outstanding capital stock of Universal Pictures Corporation which, together with its subsidiaries, is one of the leading American companies engaged in the production, distribution and exhibition of motion pictures. Since incorporation in 1912, the business has grown under the original management until, for the fiscal year ended November 10, 1923, gross revenue exceeded $20,000,000 and net profits after Federal taxes amounted to more than $1,250,000.

"The Universal organization produces its pictures at Universal City, California, where it has probably the largest motion picture plant in the world. Its productions include not only specialty productions such as its 'The Hunchback of Notre Dame,' and feature pictures released under its well-known 'Jewel' brand, but standard serials, comedies and practically every kind of picture required for motion picture theatres. Its pictures, together with the news reels produced by the International News Reel Company, are distributed throughout the United States, Canada and foreign countries, its foreign business probably being larger than that of any other motion picture company."

As to assets and earnings, the official statement explains:

"The consolidated balance sheet for Universal Pictures Company, Inc., and subsidiary companies, as of May 10, 1924, as certified by Messrs. Price, Waterhouse & Co., but adjusted to give effect to the organization of the company and the present financing, shows net tangible assets equivalent to $250 and net current assets equivalent to $195 a share of first preferred stock and cur-

200,000 Seats Are Now Represented in Exhibitors' Association of Chicago

Of 280 Theatres 214 Are Members; Is Linked Up with State Organization—Well Over $12,700,000 in New Building Enterprises

THE story of the Exhibitors Association of Chicago is an interesting one. About a year ago when the plan to form a real working association was brought up before the moving picture people of the city there were many who thought it could not be done. . A few of the live-wire exhibitors got together and under the direction of E. D. Miller, well-known south side theatre owner, a start was made and the boys have kept at it until at the last meeting there was a total membership of 214 houses out of the 280 theatres in the city.

Not all theatre owners are eligible, for those who feature vaudeville have their own organization, but the houses where moving pictures predominate are urged to join for their own protection. The scale of membership dues is based on the seating capacity of the theatres, being 20 cents per seat annually in all houses over four hundred seats and ten cents per seat for houses seating less than four hundred.

During the year the officers of the association have fostered a better understanding between the owners and their employes and more cordial relations with the film exchanges directly and the Film Board of Arbitration, where the awards secured have been satisfactory to all concerned.

The various bureaus of the city government that come in contact with the theatres and their managers have found full co-operation from the members and the officers of the organization; witness the campaign of the city health department for better ventilation in the theatres and the fact that every association theatre complied with the full requirements of the city authorities.

The houses that were closed by the city health department for not complying with their orders on ventilation were not members of the Exhibitors Association of Chicago. There is about 200,000 seats represented by the members of the association and the largest and best houses are members of the organization as well as all but 64 of the smaller houses. The officers of the association who have been at its head during this time and have been hard at work for the upbuilding of the theatres of Chicago, have been Jack Miller, president and business manager; Samuel Abrahams, assistant manager; Ludwig Siegel, secretary, and Frank Schaefer, treasurer. Every member of the Exhibitors Association of Chicago automatically becomes a member of the Illinois Motion Picture Theatre Owners, as the Chicago body includes the state membership in their dues to the city members.

Lubliner & Trinz have just received a loan of $350,000 for ten years at 6½ per cent. from the State Bank of Chicago for construction of the Madison and Mayfield Theatre, the first of a group of three houses to be erected. The next movie house started will be the Belmont and Lincoln, for which a loan of $1,000,000 at 6 per cent. has been made by S. W. Straus & Co. Excavation will start this month for the Tower Theatre to be erected on Sixty-third and Blackstone and on which a loan of $1,500,000 at 6½ per cent. has been made by Greenebaum Sons Investment Company.

The Randolph Company, owners of the Bismarck, have made a temporary building loan of $2,000,000 running to May at 6 per cent. to finance the new hotel and theatre building. A loan of $350,000 has been made by the Continental & Commercial Trust & Savings Bank, trustee, to the Boulevard Amusement Company on the property at the northwest corner of Garfield and Ashland, for a year at 6 per cent.

A refinancing junior loan of $300,000 has been made on the 3,200-seat Senate Theatre for two years at 7 per cent. on the block at 3200 West Madison. Leo Spitz was attorney for Lubliner & Trintz circuit, who own the house.

The lease of the new Orpheum Theatre Building on Randolph street between LaSalle and Wells streets, provides not only for 26 years beginning in May at a term rental of $5,200,000, but also carries an option for five more years at $200,000 annually or an aggregate term rental of $6,200,000, records of the recorder's office show. The lease is between the Randolph Hotel Company and the Palace Theatre & Realty Company.

The northeast corner of Blue Island avenue and 16th place has been bought by John Voumvacias, who intends erecting a $500,000 theatre building. It will contain a 1,500-seat playhouse, stores and offices. Plans are being drawn by R. Levine & Co. and E. P. Rupert, architects and Samuel Klein, engineer. Mr. Voumvacias owns several theatres.

Using Aeroplane for Membership Drive

Can an exhibitor exploit himself to another exhibitor. That's exactly what will be attempted in Kansas in a few days, unless the plans of C. E. Cook, business manager of the M. P. T. O. of Kansas and Missouri and M. B. Shanberg, a director of the organization and an official of the Midland Circuit of Theatres, Hutchinson, Kans., go amiss.

As a formal opening of the huge membership drive to be conducted, Cook and Shanberg have arranged an airplane trip through many of the principal cities of Kansas, the plane being owned by Shanberg. Topeka, Hutchinson, Junction City, Salina and Wichita will be visited.

Prior to the flight a unique card of announcement will be mailed all exhibitors in the towns to be visited. At the top of the card in large lettering is: "Rollin' the Rounds!" In the middle is a sketch of a popular brand of motor car, pushing a huge medicine ball up a hill. At the bottom is the wording: "Will see you.—'Doc' Cook."

The flight will be made for nothing more than to "exploit" organization to exhibitors. Incidentally, a tie-up with all local newspapers will be effected, which will serve to open the eyes of the public to the fact that organization among exhibitors is more than a fable.

State Rights Sales

Rayart Pictures announce the sale of "Hattling Brewster," their serial in fifteen episodes of two reels each, produced by Dell Henderson, in which Franklyn Farnum and Helen Holmes are co-starred, for California, Arizona, Nevada and the Hawaiian Islands, to Nat Wagner of San Francisco. Sale is also announced of the entire Reed Howes series for Louisiana and Mississippi to Lonis Films of New Orleans. "Hattling Brewster" also sold to the Independent Film Company of Dallas for Texas, Oklahoma and Arkansas. "Safeguarded," starring Eva Novak, sold to Royal Pictures, Inc., of Philadelphia, for Eastern Pennsylvania; and to the Lande Film Company, of Pittsburgh, for Western Pennsylvania. Also for Western Pennsylvania territory, "Trail Dust," to Apex Pictures, Inc. In addition Rayart announces this week the sale to Richmount Pictures of the entire Rayart output for Porto Rico, and to the same concern the entire Rayart output for Australia.

Sanford Production Company has sold to Film Productions, Inc., 12 Billy Franey and 6 William (Hill) Mix productions, with Dick Carter, Gene Crosby, Billy Franey, Alys Murrell and Monty Montague.

CANADIAN F. P. DEFEATS FIDDES IN HIGHER COURT

John T. Fiddes, former manager of the Capitol Theatre, Winnipeg, Manitoba, has lost his case against Famous Players Canadian Corporation, Toronto, in the allowing of the appeal by the corporation against the decision of the Winnipeg court in the Court of Appeals. Fiddes, who was in charge of the theatre for only a few weeks, sued the corporation, alleging wrongful dismissal. He asked for $10,000 damages. Mr. Justice Curran of Winnipeg awarded damages of $1,900 and costs against Famous Players but the company has now secured a reversal of the decision in the higher court.

Revival of Old "Protection" Fight Is Imminent in Detroit

Agitation Likely to be Precipitated by Report that Kunsky Theatres Demand 60-Day Grace Period on Current First Runs

A RENEWAL of the old fight over "protection" is promised in Detroit with the report that the John H. Kunsky Theatres, operating the Capitol, Madison, the Adams and the New State now in the process of erection, have demanded a protection of 60 days on all first-run pictures playing their downtown houses.

Many of the bigger productions on which the Kunsky offices have spent much money in preparing special campaigns and attendant features at the showings, have been advertised as "coming attractions" in the lobbies of the small neighborhood theatres, it is complained. These signs, palpably designed to keep neighborhood patrons from going downtown to see the production, are placed in the theatres while the picture is running at the Adams. Thus, many picture patrons refuse to go downtown, where the admission price is much greater but where the expense of exhibition and presentation, is very much higher.

Two years ago a similar contest arose and and at that time it was believed to have been an accepted understanding that the Adams Theatre, at least, should be allowed a long protection period in order to safeguard its heavy investment. In recent weeks, however, with the showing of widely advertised productions, some of the smaller theatre owners are said to have overstepped their bounds by listing the pictures current at the Adams as "coming attractions."

The Kunsky management points out that the sixty-day grace period asked by them is only fair in view of the amount of money involved in the Adams' first runs. Heretofore, the Kunsky management only asked for 30-day protection periods.

Protection and zoning are questions likely to be given considerable attention in the Detroit city territory during coming months. Aside from the reopening of the Kunsky first-run protection argument, it is also understood that discussions are under way looking towards a re-zoning of the entire city. H. M. Ritchey, executive secretary of the Michigan Motion Picture Theatre Owners, and David Palfreyman, who holds a similar post with the Film Board of Trade, are the parties to this effort. Conditions in many of the zones have changed so materially in recent years that there is said to be continual friction and difficulties which both exchanges and exhibitors would like to see definitely straightened out.

Several downtown theatres gave successful New Year's Eve shows this year and in the neighborhood sections practically all of the theatres hit upon the plan. Success marked almost every effort.

"Peter Pan" opened at the Madison last Sunday to splendid business and will be held at least two weeks at this house. An extensive advertising campaign that spread to the mercantile establishments of the city preceded the showing. The picture received liberal notices in the press.

Hiram Abrams, president of the United Artists Corporation, was a Detroit visitor last week, spending a day at the local exchange talking over business matters with Herbert Travor, the local manager.

James Kent, who is the oldest exchange manager in point of service in the Detroit territory, has decided to open an independent exchange of his own and is now quartered on the fifth floor of the Film Building with a large quantity of product. Kent formerly managed the Selznick and Warner Brothers' exchanges in Detroit.

John H. Kunsky's Capitol, which was opened four years ago, will celebrate its anniversary with a special program, now under preparation by Howard O. Pierce and Thomas D. Moule. The Capitol was opened on the evening of Jan. 12, 1921.

About 100 members of the film fraternity in Detroit gathered under one roof on New Year's Eve and celebrated the passing of the old and the arrival of the new. It was an innovation planned by David Palfreyman, manager of the Film Board of Trade and H. M. Richey, manager of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Michigan.

Detroit got its first touch of zero weather over the holidays and instead of dampening business in the film theatres put considerably more pep into it. The temperature hovered around the zero mark and lower for almost 10 days, registering the coldest weather in more than 50 years.

George Sampson, manager of the Cinderella Theatre, turned over his house one afternoon recently to an orphan asylum and a home for crippled children, making it a sort of Christmas celebration for the unfortunates. George also arranged for Santa Claus to come and each child went away with a present. The stunt received considerable publicity in Sampson's sectional newspaper and the house should be repaid in the good will that was thus established.

WESTERN PA. M. P. T. O. PLANS FOR CONVENTION

Arrangements are being made for the fifth annual convention of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Western Pennsylvania, to be held in Washington, Pa., April 21, 22 and 23. The headquarters of the gathering will be at the George Washington Hotel.

Mixup Puts Exhibitor in Murderer's Shoes

A peculiar judicial mix-up involving a theatre owner occurred at Columbus, Ohio, recently. An error on the part of Chief Justice Marshall of the Ohio Supreme Court, in confusing a fine of $100 imposed on Norman G. Kendall, owner of the Nemo Theatre, Cleveland, for violation of the child labor law, with the death sentence pronounced on Joseph Clarence Kane, who was convicted on a charge of murder, resulted in a 20-day stay of the latter's execution. The chief justice had granted a delay in execution of the fine against Kendall, but it seems got the name confused with that of Kane, and forwarded the recommendation to Governor Donahey, which brought the reprieve for Kane.

Buffalo Film Board of Trade Adjusted 225 Claims During 1924

To prove the worth of the arbitration work being done by the committee of the Film Board of Trade of Buffalo, Sydney Samson, president of the board, announces that during the year just passed, 225 claims were filed aggregating $72,000. Of this number 110 claims were settled out of court, 22 were filed against exchanges by exhibitors of which 17 were decided in favor of the exhibitor. J. H. Michael, A. C. Hayman of Niagara Falls, and Joe Schuchert, Jr., and Arthur L. Skinner were among the most active in this work for the exhibitors.

Senator Leonard Lipowicz, newly elected from the Buffalo district, and an exhibitor himself, is about to introduce, at the request of the legislative committee of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of New York State, Inc., an amendment to the present censorship measure, known as the Lusk law, which will, the committee believes, satisfy all parties concerned, according to an announcement by J. H. Michael, chairman of Buffalo Zone, and a member of the committee.

The committee will meet in Albany January 6 at which time this amendment will be discussed. Another important bill which will be introduced from upstate by Senator Lipowicz will be a measure providing for the admission of minors to matinee performances under certain restrictions.

WARNERS ISSUE 200,000 SHARES OF CLASS A STOCK

Warner Brothers Pictures, Inc., announce they have authorized an issue of 200,000 shares of Class A stock, bearing preferred cumulative dividends at the rate of $1.50 a share a year, payable quarterly, and convertable into common stock at the option of the holder. The holders of the present common stock have been given the privilege of exchanging it for the Class A stock, share for share. On December 23 the board of directors declared the first quarterly dividend, which will be paid January 2, 1925.

Oscar Perrin Will Tell You Why Moving Picture World Is First

THE MOVING PICTURE WORLD is read the country over. If you are in any doubt, ask Oscar Perrin, of the Leland and Clinton Square Theatres in Albany, N. Y. Following the publication of an article in the December 13 issue of the World, narrating how Mr. Perrin has been successfully holding over pictures into the second week, letters have reached him from all sections of the United States.

A namesake, but no relation, C. T. Perrin, of the Wyoming Theatres Company, in Casper, Wyoming, writes in part:

"I have just completed reading the very fine two-page article on you in the World, of recent issue, and thought I would take a few moments to congratulate you on your very fine ideas of management, and your high degree of 'pep' and 'push,' and your high standing among showmen of the country.

"I was very much impressed with the article, and feel that it benefited me greatly to read your statements regarding necessary requirements of a showman in the present day and age."

In Cincinnatus, N. Y., W. H. Price, of the Avon Theatre, goes a bit further, seeking information on how to stop the flicker in pictures. Mr. Price says in part:

"I saw your article in the Moving Picture World, in which you spoke of not having a picture that flickers. I have been running a theatre for over a year, and of late my pictures once in awhile flicker in terrible shape. It certainly does get my 'goat.' I have tried adjusting my machine but nothing appears to help. Is it the machine or the film?

"I have asked a lot of people, but none seems to know what the trouble is. I have also had trouble breaking lenses. Can you tell me what causes this?"

If letters keep on coming, Mr. Perrin in all seriousness remarked the other day that he would be forced to employ a secretary to answer his mail.

"A Woman of Paris" Banned from Worcester, Mass., by Local Board

THE Worcester, Mass., Board of Motion Picture Review has banned for showing in that city "A Woman of Paris," the Charles Chaplin-directed production, which was picked by a committee of the Authors' League of America as one of the three best motion pictures of 1924. The action of the reviewers coupled with the honor bestowed upon this picture has led the Worcester Theatre Managers' Association to appeal to Chief of Police Hill that recommendations be passed making the censoring of photoplays by the Worcester board "more uniform." The chief has referred the recommendations to the board.

The board of review is composed of 57 persons, all of whom are members of approximately 20 civic organizations. They pass in judgment on a picture selected for showing in Worcester and even if it has passed the severe scrutiny of the Massachusetts State Department of Public Safety's reviewers and the Worcester people deem it objectionable in Worcester they have the power, through the city police department, to order the picture feature banned.

The theatre managers ask that the entire membership of the board of review attend the screening of a picture and that in the absence of any members the votes of those not attending be counted in favor of approval of the film; also that a feature which has been passed by the state department as fit for showing on Sunday be considered worthy of showing in Worcester, Mass., at all times.

Robert K. Shaw, president of the board of review, and Police Chief Hill declared that "A Woman of Paris" was barred from Worcester because it was found "morally objectionable" by a two-thirds vote of the board. This feature has been exhibited in many Worcester county towns and many other Massachusetts cities. Members of the board of review, who banned the picture, in upholding their decision aver that the picture was barred from the State of Pennsylvania until it had been revised in accordance with the instructions of the censoring body.

Arc Theatre, Columbus, Purchased by Smith

J. M. Smith, of Columbus, Ohio, an experienced exhibitor, has purchased the Arc Theatre from Martin M. Levitt, who has operated the house for the past nine years. The theatre, which was formerly on Main street, between Fourth and Fifth, Lafayette, Ind., came under the management of Mr. Levitt in April, 1916. In 1920 it was moved around the corner to its present location, which was remodeled for that purpose, with seating capacity of 500. The house will be conducted under the management of William G. Outland. Policy of first-class pictures will prevail. Admission prices, it is announced, will be five cents for children and ten cents for adults.

1924 Was a Banner Year for M. P. T. O. of Kansas and Missouri

In a letter, which will be mailed to members of the M. P. T. O., Kansas and Missouri next week, is a summarization of the accomplishments realized during 1924 from the standpoint of finance, progress and morals, by exhibitors of those two states.

"I realize, of course, that Christmas announcements are made more or less on a wholesale scale," said C. E. Cook, business manager, "but there are some advancements in Kansas and Missouri which should not be overlooked.

"First, we have, through organization, so educated the exhibitor that no longer will he sign contracts at random with an irresponsible type of salesman, who promises an abundance of exploitation and advertising.

"Second, we have taught the exhibitor that fighting his battles individually is a tough assignment. He now is 'sold' on organization.

"Third, and most important of all, the M. P. T. O. Kansas and Missouri is now upon such a strong footing that we can cease being selfish in looking after our own affairs only.

"A large part of our work for 1925 will consist in reaching out to aid other weaker state organizations in gaining a more firm foothold. We intend to put our shoulders to the wheel with Allied State Organizations and combat all adverse national and state legislation. We will not overlook any tasks within our own association, but we feel now that we are able to walk alone and aid others. What greater work could we do?"

LOUISVILLE EXHIBITOR'S WIFE IS BURNED TO DEATH

Coaxing a stubborn kitchen stove fire with a dash of kerosene resulted in the burning to death this week of Mrs. Elizabeth Rausch, wife of the manager of the Baxter Theatre, Louisville, Ky. Rausch and his thirteen year old daughter were at the theatre at the time.

"Reformers" Mobilizing for National Motion Picture Pow-Wow in Capital

Program Reveals Films Will be Associated with Prohibition, Religion and Morality—"Canon" Chase Keystone Talker

By TOM WALLER

ONE of the greatest galaxies of reformers ever collected in one spot will grace the National Capital, not for one day but for three days this month. Their pilgrimages will include itineraries from nearby Hohokus to far-off What-Cheer. And they are willing to encounter the hardships and perils of Pullmans and coaches for what they promise will be for the benefit and benevolence of one of the greatest industries. "America Mobilizing for Wholesome Moving Pictures" is their mission and inspiration for this particular trip and visit in Washington, D. C.

This "National Motion Picture Conference," as it is heralded in a lengthy program which has been circularized far and wide, will endeavor to analyze the motion picture industry from Algebra to Zebra, so as to render its case, when the sun droops over the senatorial landscape in the gloaming of the third day, one of stark nudity.

The walls of the grand ball room in the Raleigh Hotel are expected to remain intact during the days of January 14-15-16, when the reformers will indulge in verbal tirade on this and that and why and how. It is confidently expected by the committee on arrangements that every resolution on these subjects will be adopted with hilarious unanimity. The films, according to the circular, will be associated with everything from bootleggers to girls that leave home unexpectedly. Whether the chairman's gavel will be accentuated by a cumbersome blue ribbon—whether there will be a vase of blue carnations beside the pitcher of glittering aqua on the speakers' table—whether the stately ballroom will be festooned with sky colored streamers—comes under the title of circumspection at this particular time.

The closing day is promised to be one of the great rejoicing by the reformers for the reformations accomplished during the two preceding days. One wiseacre has suggested that the Seat of Government should institute a Reformers' Day when the dome of the White House might be draped in some kind of blue, with the proper and essential illumination at night. On that occasion all amusement halls might close so as to bring more business for the city's reservoirs and so that other places could borrow the theatres' SRO signs. Nothing official, however, has developed from this rumor about such an occasion at this writing.

General topics up for official discussion and consideration during the three-day session are relegated to the following classes:

"Motion Pictures and International Relations; Motion Pictures and the Eighteenth Amendment; Motion Pictures and Morals; Motion Pictures and Education; Motion Pictures at Home and Aboard; Motion Pictures and Legislation; Motion Pictures and Religion."

The speakers list includes some names preeminently brilliant and revered for the advocacy of their possessors for such things as Forty-Eight-State Sunday Closing, Censorship and other things in these categories.

Occupying a keystone position in this list, his name so placed that he will mount the pulpit on the second day and climax of the conference, is the Rev. William Sheafe Chase. The "Canon" has appeared in the limelight and the public press on occasions so numerous as to be beyond our calculation. He is decidedly well known in Washington so that this time he will not be singularized like some of the other orators on reformation who will enjoy the distinction of making a debute on the senatorial stamping ground. "Cannon" Chase's last appearance in Washington—last as to event of particular note—was when he endeavored to deprive Tex Rickard of the prospects of unusually big gate receipts. But the "Canon," as every one knows, failed to put a crimp in Battler Firpo's ring career in our own America. This defeat is said, however, to have only accelerated the "Canon's" zeal to further the campaign of the reformers. His subject for oration before his many enthusiasts will be none other than the "Upshaw Federal Motion Picture Bill." This bill apparently is the essence of all that the reformers could desire as pertains to the motion picture industry. It threatens to break out of committee, which it failed to do last year, and actually come before an early session of Congress this year.

Below is the official program authentically duplicated:

Wednesday, January 14, 1925. Morning Session—10:00 o'clock. Raleigh Hotel:

Re-elect Chadwick

I. E. Chadwick was re-elected president of the Independent Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America at the annual meeting on December 30. Other re-elections are Oscar A. Price as first vice-president and Joe Brandt as second vice-president. W. E. Shallenberger is the new treasurer, succeeding Bobby North who resigned because he no longer is active in distribution.

President Chadwick is to name the new executive committee within a few days, and this will at once take up the matter of obtaining a prominent man to act in an advisory capacity and inaugurate constructive policies.

Geraghty a Busy Invalid

TOM J. GERAGHTY, the author-producer, who has been laid up in Los Angeles with a smashed hip, certainly has made hay while he gathered some moss. He has been working on six or seven stories since his accident, besides two stage plays, two short stories and a syndicated string of articles.

Tom is working with George Ade, who is at the Los Angeles Ambassador, on a Tom Meighan story, an original by Mr. Ade, called "Old Home Week." Then he is just finishing with Marshall Neilan on "The Sporting Venus," in which Blanche Sweet and Lew Cody are featured. Tom also is putting the finishing touches on "Any Woman," which Henry King will direct, a Robert T. Kane production for Famous Players-Lasky. He worked on the treatment and story supervision of "Sackcloth and Scarlet," the Henry King-Robert Kane story now in production, featuring Alice Terry. Another Geraghty story going into production next week is "I'll Show You the Town," starring Reginald Denny.

Mr. Geraghty also has sold an original story to Famous Players, and with C. D. Lancaster has finished a stage play, "The Mug Wamp," which will be produced in Los Angeles at the Playhouse. He has another play under way, in collaboration with Mr. Lancaster. Altogether, it has not proved a bad year for Mr. Geraghty, despite his being laid up for more than five months.

New Copyright Bill, Settling Music Situation, to be Considered by U. S.

A NEW copyright bill, containing a complete revision of the law, is to be introduced in Congress in the near future, it is understood, as an administration measure. The bill, which is to be prepared by Thorvald Solberg, Registrar of Copyrights of the Library of Congress, will be a very comprehensive measure, dealing with all of the subjects which were discussed last session at the hearings before the House patents committee.

The bill, it is said, will authorize the President to issue a proclamation declaring the adherence of the United States, as a country of the first class, to the Berne Convention, or International Copyright Union, to which most of the important nations now adhere.

The new measure will grant copyrights on both published or unpublished works and vests the copyright in the author immediately without any conditions or formalities. No one is given the status of an author except the actual author and the conditions under which employers become owners of copyright carefully safeguard the rights of authors, upon which licenses are granted to print and publish unless an agreement is made to the contrary.

In dealing with "public performance," including radio broadcasting, the new bill will not require that such performances must be "for purposes of profit," thereby settling definitely and finally the status of copyright music played by orchestras in moving picture theatres.

The new bill is being strenuously advocated by the Authors' League, from which a committee recently came to Washington for the purpose of discussing the measure with members of Congress, and it is probable that, if the measure is introduced in the near future, hearings will be held before a committee.

News on Every Page

Cranberry Lake, N. Y., has a population of about 100 persons and yet E. F. Gaylord, who runs the Amusement Hall there, gets the biggest break this week in the headlines of the department entitled Exhibitors News and Views. The reason, in substance from the article appearing on page 143, is that Gaylord puts over his lunchroom in the theatre every time he has a show.

Theatres in the very orderly city of Boston seem to have been literally over-run with "rowdies" of late. As the result a few of these houses have found it necessary to have three and four members of the local police force stand guard during the performances. For the details turn to page 145.

Fred Wehrenberg just celebrated the opening of a brand new theatre in St. Louis and now he has plans for the erection of another. See the rest of it on page 150.

CANADIAN FIRE COMMISSION QUERIES PROJECTIONIST

Arthur Hebert, projection machine operator at the Lord Nelson Theatre, Montreal, Quebec, appeared before the Fire Commissioner's Court at Montreal to explain how a fire occurred in the projection room of the theatre on December 22 when a packed house was almost aroused to panic. Mr. Hebert swore that he was under orders from the management to speed up the pictures because, he said, "we had 19 reels to run off in about three hours." As a result of the high friction, he declared, the film caught fire. Hebert grabbed the flaming celluloid and tore it from the machine but not soon enough to prevent further fire. Hebert's hands were badly burned in the attempt and he had to take refuge on the roof. There was no damage to the theatre outside of the projection room.

BOSTON PRODUCING COMPANY IS INCORPORATED

The Supreme Film Corporation, Boston, has filed articles of incorporation with the secretary of state. Herman Rifkin is named as general manager. The company plans to release at least 52 pictures at the rate of one a week during the next 12 months.

Springfield, Mo., Sunday Situation Up to People

After three years of "blue Sundays," Springfield, Mo., will endeavor to stage a come-back, January 6. By the narrowest of margins a Sunday closing ordinance was passed in 1921, much against the sentiment of both daily newspapers, the allegation that not more than one-third of the registered voters voted being made by both publications. A petition has been circulated, and the necessary number of names obtained, asking the city commissioners to submit the Sunday closing proposition to another vote. Springfield has about 50,000 population. S. E. Wilhoit, owner of the Jefferson theater and a veteran worker in exhibitor organization, is busily at work on the campaign.

RULES COLUMBUS PROJECTIONIST BLINDED ACCIDENTALLY

A case which has attracted widespread attention in moving picture circles has been finally disposed of by the State Supreme Court at Columbus, Ohio. Chas. M. Russell, who was projectionist at the Strand Theatre, Cincinnati, contended that the rays from the machine gradually affected his sight, until he became permanently blind. He applied to the Industrial Commission of Ohio for weekly pay for life, but his application was turned down. Carrying his case to the Hamilton County Common Pleas Court, he received a favorable verdict. However, the Court of Appeals reversed the decision, and this reversal has been sustained by the State Supreme Court, which contends that the blindness was not caused by an accident, and the Industrial Commission is, therefore, not liable.

FABIAN LEASES AUDITORIUM OF NEWARK MOSQUE

Jacob Fabian has signed a lease with the Salaam Temple Realty Corporation, Newark, N. J., for rental of the auditorium of the new $2,500,000 mosque which is under construction for Salaam Temple of the Mystic Shrine at 1020 Broad street., The amount involved is said to exceed $1,000,000. Mr. Fabian's deposit check was for $25,000. He will take possession of the auditorium on September 1. It has not yet been decided whether the policy will be motion pictures or a combination show, with occasional high-grade concerts. Mr. Fabian now owns or controls three Newark theatres, three in Paterson, two in Passaic and one in Elizabeth.

BELTON OFFERS PRODUCER ACREAGE AND BONUS

The Young Men's Chamber of Commerce of Belton, Texas, has offered the Blue Bonnet Motion Pictures Productions, Inc., a Texas company, 100 acres of land near Belton and a cash bonus if the company will locate its studio at that place. The corporation intends to film western dramas and plays dealing with Texas historical subjects. One of the feature films they have announced for the near future of the concern will be called "The Birth of Texas" and will be built along the same lines as the famous "Birth of a Nation."

REGAL DISTRIBUTING FOR PRODUCERS IN CANADA

An announcement at Toronto, Ontario, indicates that Regal Films, Ltd., which is closely allied with Famous Players Canadian Corporation, Toronto, is securing the Canadian distribution rights for productions of the Producers Distributing Corporation, of which Joseph Plowright of Toronto has been Canadian general manager. Famous Players already controls the Canadian release of pictures of Goldwyn, Pathe, Metro, Warner Brothers, Selznick, Betty Balfour and others.

Rothacker in New York for a Conference With First National

Watterson R. Rothacker, head of the laboratories in Chicago and Los Angeles that bear his name, is sitting in the seats of the anxious these days. Mr. Rothacker arrived in New York City last Monday for further conferences with officials of First National Pictures, Inc., regarding final details for the premiere on February 2 of the most novel of all feature releases lying directly head—"The Lost World."

The fact is, Mr. Rothacker's anxiety might better be referred to as a feeling akin to curiosity, for Mr. Rothacker never worries about anything. It is known that, despite the assurances of high officials in First National that they have a splendid picture in "The Lost World," Mr. Rothacker, who started his plans for this production more than seven years ago, is curious to know how the premiere audience will respond to the novelties of the production.

Supervised by Earl Hudson and directed by Harry O. Hoyt, "The Lost World" presents monsters of the animal kingdom that existed before anyone thought to devise a method of recording some of the salient facts regarding them, and long before cameramen were turned loose to "shoot" things. Mr. Rothacker turned over to First National all of his findings on the historical side of the narrative written by Sir A. Conan Doyle, together with data upon which the technical and art directors might work, coupled with necessary facts for Messrs. Hudson, Hoyt, etc.

The cast presenting this production includes Bessie Love, Wallace Beery, Lewis Stone, Arthur Hoyt and Lloyd Hughes.

Following the Boston premiere, February 2, the New York premiere will follow very quickly.

MATTEAWAN INMATES SAW FILMS

"The Warrens of Virginia," "The Iron Trail" and "The White Mouse" were shown to the 1200 inmates of the Matteawan State Hospital, Beacon, N. Y., on Christmas Day.

Universal Re-Incorporates, $3,000,000 Flotations

rent assets equivalent to 3.4 times current liabilities.

"The corporation has adopted the policy of charging off the entire cost of new pictures when released for exhibition. The item, released film, on the balance sheet has been carried at a fixed amount far below the value of current released film, if computed on the basis used by many other motion picture companies.

"The annual earnings on the first preferred stock have averaged $941,985 for the three-year priod, or 3.9 times the maximum annual dividend requirements on this first preferred stock. Earnings for the fiscal year ended November 8, 1924, are estimated by the officers of the corporation to have been at least as large as those for the fiscal year ended November 10, 1923, which were more than five times such dividend requirements."

On the subject of common stock purchase warrants and sinking fund, the prospectus contains the following:

"Warrants will be issued entitling the holders to purchase a specified number of shares of the common stock of Universal Pictures Company, Inc., at $35 a share to and including January 1, 1928, and thereafter to and including January 1, 1930, at $40 a share. The warrants will be issued in form providing for the purchase of five shares or multiples thereof.

"The net earnings shown above for the fiscal year ended November 10, 1923, were equivalent to $3.54 a share on the 250,000 shares of common stock of Universal Pictures Company, Inc., to be presently outstanding.

"The charter will provide that a sinking fund sufficient to retire $150,000 first preferred stock each year, but together with first preferred stock dividend reuqirements not exceeding for each year one-third of the net earnings for the preceding fiscal year, will be applied semi-annually to the purchase of stock in the market at or below the call price, or, if not so obtainable, to the call of stock by lot at that price."

Gruwell Disagrees

Editor, Moving Picture World:

Your editorial in issue of 13th made me remember that my subscription is overdue, so enclosed is check; also that I liked the advice in your editorial, but feel constrained to disagree heartily. As an old exploitation man, I feel I am somewhat conversant with the subject of seat selling.

If you were writing merely to the publicity men of the downtown, transient-filled theatres of the big cities, O. K., but otherwise, unfortunately, there are many poor pictures and there are also quite a number of automatic successes. "Over the Hill" was an example, and if you will read the exhibitor comment in your own and other trade journals you will find "The Alaskan," rated a 65 per cent Meighan, outdrawing almost all the other Meighans without any exploitation effort by small-town exhibitors.

By the way, exploitation in a small town is dangerous except on proven super-specials. It may prove a boomerang. You can't make 'em forget the star. Have just run Mary Pickford's latest to big business against bad weather, and comment shows this picture is considerable of a flop in many places. No, Welsh, you haven't found the answer yet. But no one else has either, so keep right on trying. With best wishes.

Very sincerely yours,
J. F. GRUWELL,
Manager, Ideal Theatre,
Wisconsin Rapids, Wis.

M. P. T. O. A. HEADS ISSUE STATEMENT REGARDING PROGRESS

A lengthy statement, in which the progress of the past year in the motion picture industry is reviewed and in which the prospects for 1925 are held forth as indicative of prosperity, was issued this week from headquarters of the M. P. T. O. A. The statement bears the signatures of M. J. O'Toole, president, and R. F. Woodhull, chairman of the board of directors.

SARA FRIEDMAN SEEKS JOB IN N. Y. PICTURE COMMISSION

Mrs. Sara Friedman, of New York City, whose term as deputy secretary of State in New York, expired on January, is seeking appointment to the New York State Motion Picture Commission, succeeding Mrs. Helen M. Hosmer, of Buffalo, whose term of office expires. Mrs. Friedman's name has already been presented to Governor Alfred E. Smith, and has the endorsement of the Democratic organization from Mrs. Friedman's home county.

MANITOBA EXHIBITORS FIGHTING TAX

The Manitoba Exhibitors Association, of which Helmer N. Jernberg of Winnipeg is president, has organized a strong campaign against the amusement tax of the Manitoba Provincial Government in the hope of securing the complete abolishment of the ticket tax throughout the province at the coming session of the Legislature. A particular effort is being made for the early repeal of the tax on tickets up to 50 cents.

SELLING the PICTURE to the PUBLIC

EDITED BY EPES WINTHROP SARGENT

Sells 88,000 Tickets to Sea Hawk in First Nine Days in Australia

WE believe that American as well as Australian records were broken during the initial run of The Sea Hawk at the Tivoli Theatre, Brisbane, Australia. They sold rather more than 88,000 paid admissions in nine days.

That may sound somewhat fishy until you are told that the picture was shown both in the auditorium and the roof garden, the combined capacity of the two auditoriums being about 2,500. The runs were started at 9:45 A. M. and the film was run continuously until midnight, so that selling to nearly 10,000 persons a day was merely a matter of four full-houses on about 8 shows.

But even with the capacity, it took intensive selling to get that many persons in, and credit is due Gordon Conrad, a First National exploiteer, for a well-considered program of advertising that brought such remarkable results. Even the preparation of the prologue was made to ballyhoo for the production.

The Local Appeal

This was done through the playing up of the local talent idea. The theatre advertised for players and asked them to report at the theatre the day before the showing. Of course the acting parts had been looked after, but a dozen pirates were needed, and instead of picking them up quietly they were advertised for in the newspapers and on a house banner.

The result was a mob of some 500 ranging from whiskered old men to boy scouts, and they gathered in front of the house long before the announced hour. As the interviewing took some time, they provided a ballyhoo that lasted about three hours.

The prologue was different from the two generally used over here, and showed The Sea Hawk and his crew.

Odd Perambulator

For a street stunt a small galleon was mounted on a two-wheeled pony cart and chaperoned by a man dressed to represent Beery as the sea captain. Every little while the man would halt the outfit by throwing overboard a large property anchor and hand out literature on the show.

The film arrived in a fancy crate boldly lettered: "The Sea Hawk, £800,000 worth of film." It was carried to the theatre by four black porters dressed as Moorish slaves and guarded by a detail of police. One of the men had been coached to fake a faint, which was worked at the most populous point along the route, and he had been told that he would not get his pay if he responded too quickly to the restoratives.

As the stunt had been timed for the noon hour, most of the business population was apprised of the arrival of the picture, and went home to tell the rest of the folks.

A Regular Campaign

All of this was supplemental to a campaign of newspaper work and bill posting that was thorough in all its details. Conrad had thoroughly sold the local press on co-operation and all of his stunts were duly recorded in news stories, in addition to which his lavish advertising carried a barrage of press stories for ten days in advance of the opening. Fifteen stores were tied up to various co-operative stunts, mailing pieces were used, and of course the books were largely sold.

The campaign was nicely judged as to pace, and worked up to the final smash the day before the opening, while interest was sustained throughout the run with newspaper appeals, though after the first day the verbal advertising was the chief asset.

He's Starting In

J. M. Edgar Hart is now located at the Opera House, Augusta, Maine, having made a clean jump from San Diego, Calif. Just as a preliminary canter, he sends in some trick balloons he gave out on the first chapter of Into the Net, but Edgar has not hit his stride yet. If he can swing exploitation up there, he'll make them take notice, for there are few stunts reported from that section of the country and he has a virgin field.

As the Opera House is a second-story proposition, he has no lobby to speak of, and cannot repeat the wonderful work he did in El Paso, with his house artist, so we imagine that he will take to general stunts. We look for a lot of good stuff presently.

Special Talk

To give emphasis to the importance of Abraham Lincoln, J. Fred Ostorstock, of the Colonial Theatre, Easton, Pa., took three special advertisements.

In the first he emphasized the fact that he felt it an honor to be able to present this notable film to his townsmen, in the second he told why he thought Lincoln was a great picture, while in the third he quotes press and managerial opinions. And on top of that he came out with a hook-up page on the opening day, most of the space being taken by the dealers in Lincoln cars.

TWO OF THE STUNTS WHICH HELPED THE SEA HAWK BREAK ALL AUSTRALIAN RECORDS

On the left is the stage prologue, which differs from the cabin or inn prologues generally used in this country. Local talent was advertised for and the 500 applicants were stood out for a ballyhoo. On the right is the perambulator, drawn by a pony and conducted by a man made up as Beery in the production. Every little while an anchor was thrown overboard.

Girls Pass Bills in Return for Ride

Offering it in the form of a lark got Jack Rowley a lot of girls to pass out bills on Why Men Leave Home. He had the picture at the Royal Theatre, Laredo, Texas, and he bannered a car with the title of the picture with red fists pointing upward to the occupants.

Then he offered a number of girls a box party if they had the nerve to ride around in the car for a couple of hours. Of course when he put it in that light, it became an adventure instead of a job and he got six girls of the sort he could not have hired.

He had planned to have a couple of boys on bicycles ride beside the car and throw out bills, but the girls though it would add to the fun if they looked after the distribution, so the car veered drunkenly from side to side of the streets, regardless of traffic rules, and the girls shot out the throwaways with a word of personal commendation.

Saw the Soldiers

The ride wound up at Ft. McIntosh, where the Fourth Field Artillery is stationed, and there was a preponderance of soldiers in the Thanksgiving Day audience.

The play broke the midweek record for a two day run, and Mr. Rowley figures that it is a legitimate record, since Thanksgiving day has not been a good business holiday in the past, which is why he was moved to extra effort.

Rowley's idea in kidding the girls into the stunt was not so much to save money as to get the right sort of girls.

Production Hints from Edward L. Hyman

Managing Director, Mark-Strand Theatre, Brooklyn

FOUR musical presentations, Louis B. Mayer's "Husbands and Lovers" as the photoplay, a comedy called "A Royal Razz" and a special Christmas edition of the Topical Review made up the Christmas week program. This show ran three minutes over the customary two hours and was divided as follows: Musical numbers, thirty-one minutes; feature picture, one hour and thirteen minutes, and the film fillers nineteen minutes. Three of the musical presentations were especially put on for Christmas, and the fourth, a medley of popular songs, help balance it up very nicely.

Each performance started off with what was programmed as "The Heart of Christmas." This was a transition scene, which at the opening revealed the exterior of a cathedral. This was painted on a scrim and hung on a traveler down stage. A male quartette attired as monks came on from the left and sang "Silent Night," and slowly the scrim parted in the centre, giving an impression of the big cathedral doors opening. The lights on this scrim and singers were soft blue floods from the sides augmented by a soft blue Mestrum from the dome. As the scrim opened, the lights came up and set back of it, showing the interior of the cathedral. A soprano dressed as a white sister was centre stage under a white spot from overhead. Back of the singer was a round leaded window and to the side was the premiere danseuse on a pedestal as the Madonna, wearing white and blue drapes with blue veil and jeweled crown. As the soprano sang "Ava Maria" the lights came up behind the church window showing members of the ballet as angels, finally the Star of the East appears in the sky, which was a neutral backdrop to back up the window. At the finish stage lights dimmed out and the scrims used at opening were closed again. Six minutes for this.

The overture was programmed as "A Symphony of Christmas," and with it was shown on the screen the film called "A Little Friend of the World." At the beginning of this a Christmas tree at either side of the production stage was lighted and dimmed down as the picture progressed. Magenta Mestrum floods were thrown on the orchestra from the booth and green spots crossed on the ceiling drapes from the dome. Eight minutes required for this overture.

"In a Toy Shop," running five minutes, was billed as a dance revelry in Santa Claus' treasure vault. For this a toy shop scene previously used was again brought out, the back drop showing a fireplace, Christmas candles and transparent windows with snow painted outside. Props included various toys usually seen in a toy shop. Members of the Ballet Corp presented the toys, there being ten in all. At the opening a baritone as Santa Claus came on and sang "Toyland," the Victor Herbert number, and when he made his exit the orchestra went into Herbert's "March of the Toys," and all the toys came to life for a dance. This number took five minutes.

The medley of popular numbers ran for twelve minutes, and introduced a male quartette, a soprano, a baritone, the premiere danseuse, a tango team and the ballet corp. There were eight selection used, among them being "June Night" for the quartette, "Nightingale" by the soprano, "Rose Marie" solo dance, "At the End of the Road" by the baritone, a Brazilian tango by the tango team and the following by the ensemble :"Follow the Swallows," "My Best Girl," "All Alone" and "Eliza." The set for this was a back-drop of neutral blue, lighted by deep blue open box lamps and through which showed several stars. Side drapes of gold draw curtains blocked out all but the centre of this back-drop. Running across the stage just in front of these curtains was a marble balustrade. Settees, cushions, floor lamps and pedestals formed the props. The lighting was light pink, white and amber and orange, principally from spots on the stage. White spots from the booth picked out the soloists.

Progressive Teaser on These 24-Sheets

After the straight title had stood a couple of days, the information was added that "Four Horsemen was thrilling." A day or so later it was positively announced that "Miracle Man was human," and then that His Hour was sensational. Then, with the optimism of a campaign manager, it was said that "He Who Gets Slapped has everything." The next day strips advised that the picture would be seen at the Warfield.

This style of teaser campaign is capital where enough paper can be used to put them all over town, but it is too costly for a small capacity house and it would be uninteresting were it not for the fact that the same thing can be done, at a smaller cost, as one of the details of a newspaper campaign.

It's the same way with almost all big exploitation stunts. They can be cut down to fit.

A Metro-Goldwyn Release

A TEASER 24-SHEET THAT WAS AN INTERESTING FEATURE OF A SAN FRANCISCO CAMPAIGN

Originally the bills were posted as shown at the left, and the other lines were added, one at a time, until the final announcement of the house was posted. This date line was added the day after the "He" line was pasted up. This stunt is too expensive for the average house, but the same thing can be done in newspaper teasers at a cost within the reach of any manager.

Paramounteer Does Constructive Work

Leslie F. Whelan, who does the exploitation work out of Philadelphia for Paramount, is putting over a stunt in his territory that not only brings results for Paramount but reacts in favor of the picture business in general.

He has arranged with editors in the various towns he makes to run a series of semi-editorial articles on the motion picture, each dealing with some slant of the picture business in general, the first story, for example, gives the reasons why the family should attend the picture shows and pointing out the benefits to be derived.

The Paramount edge is the fact that each story is ornamented with a single column cut of some Paramount star. The rest of the copy runs for the business in general, though now and then some play title will be slipped in when it can be introduced legitimately.

It always has been Claud Saunders' theory that what helps the business in general is good for Paramount, and his staff has worked a number of good stunts, but this planting of fifty-two stories in a series is doing something even for Whelan; who is one of the most active members of the present organization.

ADAPTING AN OLD TOAST TO NORMA TALMADGE'S SECRETS

The heart reads: "My husband! In his relations with other women may he always be right, but right or wrong, my Husband.—M. O." Just for that many husbands took their wives to the Rex Theatre, Eugene, Ore., in the hope the lesson would stick.

Cutouts to Attract Attention to Frames

Dewey Mousson, of the Knickerbocker. Nashville, Tenn., has a nice scheme for making his still frames show up. He backs them with cutouts from the paper. The frame to the right of the box office is done with the cutout shown on the three sheet boards on either side. The one on the left is derived from some other paper on When a Man's a Man.

To link this to the Harold Bell Wright novel Mr. Mousson used a book over the box office and this, too, is given a decorative cover through the use of a smaller cutout. This very simple device improves the appearance of the book very materially. It's not often you get two good new ideas in one display.

Beat His Offer

Harry Handel, of McKees Rock, Pa., offered a covered wagon and twelve jack knives for the best covered wagons in a parade stunt. He supplied an ox-drawn schooner to head the parade, feeling that he would need it.

But the kids turned out with sixty odd wagons, and when Handel saw the layout he started the parade on its hour and a half route and by the time they got back to the house he had swelled the prizes to more than double the original number, and you never saw such a number of pleased kids. The extra cost was more than repaid by the talk his generosity created.

All told he had about 2,000 kiddies lined up.

Ten windows were obtained through a hook-in with Prince Albert pipe tobacco, with hats, hardware, barber supplies and trunks also linked in on the idea that when a man's a man he wants these things.

The book idea was also laid off to the library to advertise the Wright novels and the visualized story.

BACKING STILL FRAMES WITH THREE SHEET CUTOUTS

Dewey Mousson, of the Knickerbocker Theatre, Nashville, Tenn., backed his stills on When a Man's a Man with cutouts and got a fine effect. He also used a cutout to trim up the book over the box office. Note the better effect.

Two Orchestras in Combination Work

Because of the praise accorded both the Arcade and the Imperial theatres in Jacksonville, it was decided to work them into a combination. Both houses are under the direction of Southern Enterprises section of the Famous Players theatre department, and it was a simple matter to effect this consolidation.

For the engagements of Secrets at the Arcade the orchestra was augmented by the men from the Imperial, who are normally on their swing at the times set for the Arcade overtures at 3:15, 7:15 and 9:45. A slight increase in their pay to the Arcade men makes them content.

This gives the Arcade band of twenty men for the big musical number. Not a large number as some cities would reckon, but more than can usually be found under one baton in the south. It gave both theatres a splendid advertisement.

We believe that they could go a step further and give about an hour's concert some Sunday, prior to the regular opening. The Sunday concerts by some large orchestras, notably those given at the California Theatre, San Francisco, under the Roth and Partington management, have been real musical events.

Carded Physicians

Joe Weil, of Universal, sent out 10,000 postals to physicians and nurses to interest them in the showing of K, the Unknown, at the Cameo Theatre.

It was written with especial appeal to the fraternity, and stressed the plot of the story, concerning as it does a physician and his relations with two nurses.

In a smaller place the telephone stunt will work better than postals. Medical men are pestered with mailed advertising.

A Scratch Start

Arguing that advertising begins at home, Sol Lesser has had the Principal Pictures studios in Los Angeles surrounded with billboards advertising the current Harold Bell Wright release. As a tour of the studios is a part of the itinerary of every visitor, this is virtually national advertising. The Mine with the Iron Door was the first picture advertised.

THE NEW STYLE PUZZLE

This was run for two days without the slightest reference to the theatre. Delaney figured that with any hook-in to the theatre it would be "just an ad," but that if they worked on it long enough to discover it was Captain Blood, they would then be sufficiently interested to try and get out the rest of it. The third day, which was just before the opening, he took a single six to show the result, as displayed on the right of the cut. The original was a two nines.

That was not the only thing Delaney did to put over the special, but he figures that it did more than its share toward making for interest. The diagram is machine set, but it sufficed, and the stunt brought in a large return on its cost.

As a puzzle it was not so good, but it built a lot of business and that is the real point.

Used Pantomimist for His Ballyhoo

Something new was worked by Roland G. McCurdy, a Universal exploiteer, for the run of Rose of Paris at the Cameo Theatre, Los Angeles.

Over the box office there was run a banner for the attraction with an opening suggestive of the old-fashioned Punch and Judy shows.

In this opening a professional pantomimist worked to a female dummy, doing his advertising with a series of painted cards. Any action ballyhoo will get attention, and the stunt played to crowds whenever the clown was at work. A curtain was provided which could be drawn to break the standees into the theatre, and with the box office so handy a lot of sales were made.

This is a good stunt where a good pantomimist is available, but a man who is not clever is apt to tire the crowd.

Helps the Tornado with Weather Maps

Joe Weil went over to Union Hill, N. J., which is just across the Hudson from New York, and tried out a number of stunts from the press book for Keith's State Theatre. One of the best is shown on this page: the weather chart, got the most attention. It was used in a more elaborate form in New York for the run at the Piccadilly, where a regulation weather map was shown, giving the conditions all over the country, with a tornado forecasted for New York.

That stunt is possible only where close cooperation may be had from a branch of the weather bureau, but the flag idea is applicable even to the smallest house, since it involves no elaborate painting, and it is as good as the warning used for The Storm.

The top row gives the various flags and their meanings, while below "fair and colder" is forecast for "tomorrow," with the tornado signal for the opening date of the attraction. The tornado is a black center on a red ground, the regular storm warning. The other flags are explained in most almanacs or the local paper can help you out as to the colors.

Joe also put over a successful "Tornado Sale" in a local store and proved that other stunts from the plan book are as good as they look on paper.

Real Money

John P. Read, of the Joie Theatre, Fort Smith, Ark., knows the value of real money as an attractor. For the engagement of Dangerous Money he showed a lot of coins and bills in a glass case. The card read: "Hands off. It is Dangerous Money. See what it does to Bebe Daniels."

Better than a cutout for getting attention and you can repeat it in the bank window if you think of that in time.

A PARTICULARLY EFFECTIVE STUNT FOR THE TORNADO

It is from the press book and has been used in a number of houses with decided success. This was shown at the State Theatre, Union Hill, N. J., but an even more elaborate idea was worked at the Piccadilly in New York City.

Makes One Cut Do Good Advertising

The America Theatre, Denver, used only small space to launch K, the Unknown, but it gets it over nicely in the space here shown, which is the same size as the original. It's a very compact placing of the full show, but since it gets it over and no more seems to be needed, more would be a waste. Presumably, other forms of exploitation get over the fuller details, and this is fully advertising if there are not overlarge advertisements to be combatted.

A Universal Release

SMALL, BUT TELLING

Took Extra Space for Opening Show

Opening with Tess of the d'Urbervilles, the Lyceum Theatre, Minneapolis, used extra spaces to get attention for the house, and made an intelligent appeal with well displayed copy. The halftone in the upper right hand corner was more or less of a gamble, but it came through all right, and lightens the mass of black in that corner, but the simpler lines of the figure on the left gives more attention value, though this, too, is in halftone where a line cut would have been much better. The title is run through the figure, but so well displayed through cutting away a white outline that none of it is lost. There are two selling appeals, one just below the signature and the other set in below the title. One sells the play on its past repute when Minnie Maddern Fiske gained one of her greatest successes in the name-part. The other sells the play as a play and without reference to either star. Blanche Sweet and Conrad Nagel are named, but they are not played up. Possibly the press agent is new to the pictures. Presently he will find that Blanche Sweet can sell more tickets for him than the mention of Mrs. Fiske. That white panel in the lower border is an advertisement of a nursery where the children may be left in charge of a trained nurse while the mothers enjoy the play. There is also an announcement of free dancing, from which it will be seen that the Lyceum gives much for its fifty cent admission. This display is well laid out, and particularly intelligent is the use of black to bring out the white.

Lots of Cut But Little Meaning

This display from St. Louis for the Kings and Rivoli shows a cut form that is purely attractor. It doesn't mean a darned thing, but you look at it to see what it is all about, and as long as you are there you read the copy. Probably the stuff is all taken from the stills, but it is all too small to mean much, though it looks interesting. And once you get down to the text you probably are sold, for there is something opulent about "To see the screen's greatest exponent of youth is to live one golden hour of youthful romance." If this is not worth your four-bits there is something radically wrong with your blood pressure. And they throw in the statement that Denny is the perfect lover, without mentioning his serial number, and if that won't sell, how about "Youth and love in league with speed and adventure?" That should sell The Reckless Age to the reckless of all ages. It's great copy and the conglomerate cut matches the text and helps through its purely attention-value. What we like best about this really good space is that not a line is lost through stuffing. It is all given proper valuation and display.

A Universal Release

A Halftone Hurts Strength of Appeal

A NICE USE OF BLACK TO THROW WHITE INTO DISPLAY

would have been greater strength to the space had the pictorial display been held to line. A good line cut is always to be preferred to a muddy halftone, and halftones generally are muddy in newspaper work, or else they are too open a screen and look washy. A smaller scene sketch in line would have made a better appeal, and we are inclined to think that the omission of this cut would have helped. The picture will be sold largely on the dog, and this drawing would have carried through without the humans. We do not like a cut which lines the space. Here the advertisement is in two sections. You see the dog and then you get the fact that Miss Boardman is the star in a second look. Because the eye is trained to regard cutoff rules, the eye first takes in only the space above the line and then reads the copy below. It does not take it in as a whole, as would be done had the cut been sunk to the bottom of the space, with the text above. This would have interfered with the signature, but this could have been overcome through a rearrangement of the type values. The cut that fills the width seldom has the value of one which does not use more than two-thirds of the width, unless the cut is so framed that it can sink to the bottom and still remain a part of the display.

Plenty of Action in Plan Book

There is plenty of action in this plan book cut for Barbara Frietchie. You can get the idea that it is not another society drama, and do it with one eye shut. The drawing is rather woodeny, but people do not expect an art gallery in an amusement page, and they do get the message. The Fulton Theatre, Jersey City, built up a few lines around the cut, notched to let in the smaller lengths and let it ride. There is not much more to be said than is carried in the five lines below Barbara's picture, and the house let well enough alone. There is more to that than you might think. The temptation is strong to oversell, and generally that kills sales.

A Producers Distributing Release

AN ACTION CUT

Neat Design Has Too Many Letters

Milt Crandall sends in his Captain Blood advertisement for the State Theatre, Pittsburgh. This is a press proof and not the actual newspaper display, and we question whether all that white lettering came through the notoriously poor press work of the Pittsburgh papers. It looks very good with a solid black and a pure white. It may have come through in the papers, but the chances are against it. The best part of the display is the intervening white space and the connecting arrow. It sells the two essential parts, the attraction and the house. You get a more definite message to the effect that Captain Blood is at the State than you would were the two sections joined. For this reason it is a valuable design, but we think it would be even better were the panels strongly outlined in black but with straight black on white for the lettering. Just add it to the collection. You can use it some time to good advantage.

A Vitagraph Release

Loaf of Bread Was Admission Ticket

Bread hook-ups to the Metro-Goldwyn production of the Norris novel have been general and varied. We told some weeks ago of some houses which offered a free admission for a loaf of bread, the latter being turned over to the Salvation Army for distribution. This page from the American Theatre, Evansville, Ind., shows how the idea was worked for a half-price showing. Free admissions were given all who presented a large loaf of a specified brand, but on condition that there was one paid admission. In other words, you got two tickets for one admission and a loaf of bread. The house got the money and the poor eat the bread. A drug store just across the street opened a temporary bread counter, but it could also be purchased at most groceries. The panel in the lower left hand corner is a letter from the ranking officer of the Salvation Army, thanking the management for its cooperation. In consideration of the charity angle the newspaper let the house have the back page instead of throwing the display to one of the inside pages. It's a good stunt, and if you lose a little of the money you might have made, you'll get it back in the long run, and probably you won't even lose much. You'll play to more people than you would at straight admission, get about your average, and get some of those extras back on the following weeks, not once but often. A stunt like this is not limited to the week it is used. Generally it acts as a sort of business tonic.

A New Angle

Library hook-ups are common, but C. C. Deardouff, Metro-Goldwyn exploiteer, gave it a new kink when he perambulated a wagon to urge the town of Denison, Ohio, to go to the library and get a copy of Janice Meredith before they saw the picture at the Grand Theatre.

This seems to be the first instance of perambulating a library hook, and it won an extra strong co-operation. This idea and special school tickets sold Denison on the literary value of the production.

On the Job

Harry Silver, resident manager of the Palace Theatre, Hamilton, Ohio, is a member of the Lions. The Lions gave a dinner-dance Thanksgiving Eve. Each guest received a dance program on the back of which was a letter from Merton Gill, expressing his regret at not being able to be present and adding the hope that he would see them all at the Palace the following day. And they thanked Silver and Fred S. Meyer for the programs.

"Peter Pan"

Barrie's Immortal Fantasy of Childhood Made Into Delightful Picture That Should Be a Clean-Up

Reviewed by C. S. Sewell

Peter Pan, the eerie little sprite of the woods, the little chap who never wanted to grow up but wished always to remain a boy so he could have fun, now disports on the screen, thanks to the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation.

In whimsical charm and wealth of imagination, probably no writer even closely approaches J. M. Barrie, and certainly "Peter Pan" is head and shoulders above his other works in this respect. As a book it delighted countless thousands, young and old alike; as a play, with Maude Adams in the title role, it was a joyous visualization of the story, and as a picture, with Betty Bronson, we believe it will fascinate and delight many, many more.

A pure fantasy, an out-and-out fairy tale with no pretense at reality, is "Peter Pan." This is made clear at the outset, consequently the mind is free to leap over the bounds of logic and fact and in sympathetic mood to soar with the story to the realms of imagination.

Barrie himself selected Miss Bronson, and Director Herbert Brenon conferred with him, and surely the completed product gives ample evidence of having caught the spirit of the author's work. There have been fairy stories before on the screen, but none with such wistfulness and charm, such simplicity and fascination, such superb fantasy and wealth of beautiful imagination as "Peter Pan."

Combining the wisdom of mature years and the boundless imagination of childhood, Barrie achieved a stroke of genius in fashioning this story. Apparently he sought to combine the things that most strongly impress children, especially boys, but girls, however, are not forgotten: there are fairies, mermaids, Indians, pirates, a crocodile that snapped off the hand of the pirate chief, and a big, friendly dog that acts as nurse to the kiddies. Every boy has at some time longed to be a pirate, or to kill one, and his wishes are fulfilled here.

Appealing primarily to the kiddies, Barrie accomplished the almost insuperable task of writing successfully to the grown-ups at the same time. They will be fascinated with its literary beauty, the imaginative heights, the simplicity, with certain titles that are brilliant in their wit and scintillating shafts of satire, but which have been so cleverly introduced that they will not befuddle the childish mind.

The selection of Miss Bronson for the role of "Peter Pan" seems almost an inspiration, in line with the writing of the story. Not only does she bring to the screen a personality unfettered by association with other roles—a valuable point in a characterization of this kind—but she is the very ideal of one's imagination. She convinces you that she "is" Peter Pan, and when she asks if you believe in fairies you are liable to find yourself so carried away that you will signify "yes." Distinctly feminine, she at the same time registers the boyish charm of the role and you don't blame Wendy for falling in love with Peter Pan.

Great praise is due to Herbert Brenon for his direction. With several fine things to his credit, "Peter Pan" overtops them all; and Willis Goldbeck's adaptation should not be overlooked in bestowing praise. Mr. Brenon's direction seems as near faultless as it is possible to be, and we recall no detail really deserving of criticism; no scene that we would wish shortened, no role that seems miscast. We liked his limited use of trick photography and mechanical aids, confined to the few scenes where Tinker Bell the tiny fairy is shown, the flying children and the soaring of the pirate ship through the air. This renders such scenes much more effective.

Excellent are the performances of the grown-ups, Esther Ralston as the beautiful, loving mother, Cyril Chadwick as the irritable father, and Ernest Torrence as the bloodthirsty pirate is of course fine. But it is the children, including Miss Bronson, who is but a slip of a girl, that really carry the picture. Mary Brian is delightfully childish, natural and pretty as Wendy; Philippe De Lacey and Jack Murphy are very real as the little Darling boys, and the group of kiddies who portray the little lost boys are every one of them human and lovable. Virginia Brown Faire is the tiny fairy and Anna May Wong the little Indian girl. One of the finest performances is George Ali as Nana, the dog. His work is interesting, amusing and it is truly remarkable how much feeling he gets out of the performance.

"Peter Pan" is a masterpiece from every standpoint and a credit to the industry. It will not only appeal to every real child—and every child in the country should see it—but will fascinate every grown-up who has an ounce of imagination or a single remembrance of the delightful fantasies of childhood left; and, from a strictly material angle, it should prove a real clean-up for any exhibitor.

Mrs. Darling is worried because she has seen a boyish face at the nursery window and found a shadow on the floor, and reluctantly goes out to a party, leaving the three children in charge of the dog, Nana, as Dr. Darling is so irritable they cannot keep a nurse, and Nana acts as the nurse. Soon a lively boy appears at the window with a little fairy, "Tinker Bell," and finds his shadow in a drawer. Wendy, the oldest child, awakens and sees him, and he tells her about his home in the woods and about the fairies and finally teaches the children to fly and they go away to Never Never land to join Peter's colony of Lost Boys who have fallen out of their carriages when the nurses were not looking. Tinker Bell is jealous and prompts one of the boys to shoot Wendy, thinking she is a bird, and almost kills her. The boys, who live in an underground home, adopt her as their mother. A band of Indians are friendly and battle a band of pirates led by Captain Hook, but are defeated. Hook hates Peter Pan as he blames him because a crocodile once bit off his hand and ever since has followed him. Hook fears the crocodile and feeds him a clock so that the tick-tock will warn of his approach. The pirates poison Peter's medicine and carry off the children. Tinker Bell drinks the poison and nearly dies but is saved when the children say they believe in fairies. Peter enlists the aid of the mermaids and then gets aboard the pirate ship and finally with the Lost Boys they fight and conquer the pirates and then sail away through the air back home. Mrs. Darling, who has grieved, believes she is dreaming when she again sees the children until they rush up to her. Wendy tries to keep Peter but he says he does not want to grow up and goes back to the woods with the promise that Wendy will visit him each year. Mrs. Darling, however, adopts all the lost boys.

"Let Er Buck"

Hoot Gibson in Excellent Universal Western That Shows Real Rodeo Stunts

Reviewed by Sumner Smith

Universal's "Let 'Er Buck," is one of the most pleasing and actionful pictures in which Hoot Gibson has yet appeared. The interest of its well-knit story is heightened by real scenes of the Pendleton. Ore., rodeo. These are not dragged in for advertising reasons but made a real part of the story, and they certainly will fascinate "western" audiences who like first-rate horsemanship.

The picture begins like the routine western but quickly develops stronger incident and characterization than usually found in those of its type. The story builds up logically for the rodeo climax, when Gibson drives a chariot team to victory. This is put over with a distinct punch, not so much because of its individual staging but because of the cumulative effect of the preceding action. Some of it ought to be eliminated to avoid repetition and speed up the action slightly, but even in its present form the rodeo climax is highly entertaining.

Gibson does excellent work. In fact, that may be said of every artist in "Let 'Er Buck." Marian Nixon again proves a particularly attractive heroine. In the latter part of the picture Josie Sedgwick temporarily walks away with the honors through her very effective characterization of the rough-and-ready cowgirl in love with Gibson. She makes the role one of humor mingled with pathos.

Carl Laemmle has put "Let 'Er Buck" on his White List and it belongs there. We liked the picture immensely and believe that it will please the great majority of fans.

Story

Bob Carson, working on Col. McCall's ranch in Texas, is admired by Jacqueline McCall. Ralston, her cousin, is jealous. He fakes being shot in a gun duel with Bob and the latter flees, finally reaching Pendleton, Ore. There Crosby, foreman of Mabel Thompson's ranch, knocks him down. Mabel comes along and accuses Bob of being a coward. Bob worsts Crosby in a fight and also wins Mabel's admiration by riding a dangerous broncho. She asks him to ride in the rodeo for her. Col. McCall, Jacqueline and Ralston arrive with their famous chariot team and are astonished to meet Bob. Mabel sees that he is in love with Jacqueline and perplexes Bob by proposing. Bob learns he was duped by Ralston. Crosby and Ralston kidnap Bob but he manages to escape as the chariot race is about to be run off. He drives Mabel's team and bests Col. McCall's entry. Mabel sees that her love is not returned and leaves when Bob and Jacqueline embrace.

"The Sign of the Cactus"

Jack Hoxie Appears as Mysterious Champion of Harassed Settlers in Newest Universal Picture

Reviewed by C. S. Sewell

Suggestive of a serial is the character that Jack Hoxie portrays in "The Sign of the Cactus" his newest starring vehicle for Universal, for he appears as a mysterious person known as Whitehorse Cactus because of his mount and the fact that he always leaves a piece of cactus as the sign of his visits.

The story is built on the familiar theme of the fight of Western settlers against a water power company that has dammed the valley and left their cattle to perish of thirst, and Hoxie has the role of the mysterious person who is their champion, a sort of Robin Hood role as the impression is conveyed that the money he gives to the settlers is obtained by taking it from the water power people.

The development follows along conventional and fairly obvious lines except for the fact that a novel and interesting if not altogether convincing twist has been given in the prominence of the horses of the hero and heroine in the action, both the meeting of this pair and the climax of the film are dependent on the fact that the girl's horse runs away from her in order to be with his mate belonging to the hero.

Hoxie has a role that is suited to his physique and personality and Helen Holmes is satisfactory as the heroine, with J. Gordon Russell as a heavy and Francis Ford giving a good performance in the character role of an eccentric lawyer.

There is considerable action and a good thrill where the heroine plunges into a stream and before the hero can save her, both are carried a long way by the rushing current. By no means the best picture in which he has appeared, "The Sign of the Cactus" will probably prove a fair program attraction for audiences that like out-door stories.

Old Man Hayes, a settler, resists the attempt of the water company to secure his property and is killed. Years later a mysterious champion known as Whitehorse Cactus, arises and helps them in their fight to keep their cattle from dying of thirst. Henderton is representative of the water interests and his daughter while riding in the woods sees her horse run away to its mate owned by Whitehorse Cactus who is really Hayes' son, and he discovers by a scar that she is the little girl playmate of his, and they become friends. Later, Bell learns that Hayes is the mysterious champion and when her father is shot she goes to arrest him herself. He convinces her of his innocence and when the sheriff appears tells him that she is the only one who can prove he is Whitehorse Cactus and that a wife cannot be made to testify against her husband, and he gladly agrees to this arrangement.

"Curlytop"

Shirley Mason and Wallace MacDonald in Fox Picture of Limehouse Story

Reviewed by Sumner Smith

"Curlytop," William Fox's picturization of one of Thomas Burke's "Limehouse Nights," makes a direct assault on the emotions through the presentation of a romantic story with melodramatic angles. The plot is not replete with action, and so the picture must please or displease through its ability to awaken heart interest in the chief characters, an unusually unsophisticated girl, considering her environment, and a youth bearing most of the earmarks of a crook. His reformation is faintly indicated, not stressed.

The efforts of Maurice Elvey, the director, to gain sympathy for these two characters result, here and there, in too many close-ups and overacting by the players. By far the best work is done by Shirley Mason, who is starred, and Wallace MacDonald registers effectively as the lover. Warner Oland seems over-melodramatic, and the other players resort to much flinging about of arms and use of the facial muscles to convey the impression of toughness. Miss Mason generally is good in a part utterly lacking comedy touches.

Here again it is necessary for the reviewer to say that the success of the picture depends upon the type of audience to which it is shown. Blase people will scorn its stressing of sentiment; emotional folk will revel in it.

We can understand how it may be difficult to film any of the Burke stories for American audiences. They are strictly stories of characterization and atmosphere, dealing with the psychology of a strange conglomeration of Orientals and white folks living in squalor in London's Limehouse section. "Broken Blossoms" expressed the atmosphere about perfectly, largely through extraordinary acting and remarkable sets.

Big Bill Branigan leaves his sweetheart, Bessie, for Curlytop, whose unconscious beauty and naivete enthrall him. Shanghai Dan, who dominates a gang of Chinese crooks, desires her. Bill goes off in search of a job, determined to reform, and Bessie revenges herself by getting Curlytop drunk and cutting off her golden curls. Bill returns but cannot find Curlytop and is persuaded to renew friendship with Bessie. He finds the golden curls among her belongings and forces her to reveal Curlytop's whereabouts. In the meantime, Curlytop has become a waitress on a floating barge for Dan. As he is hypnotizing her, another vessel crashes into the barge, Dan is drowned and Curlytop is rescued by Bill.

"The Lighthouse by the Sea"

Rin Tin Tin Does Wonderfully Effective Work in Warner Version of Thrilling Stage Melodrama

Reviewed by C. S. Sewell

As the newest starring vehicle for the remarkable police dog, Rin Tin Tin, Warner Brothers selected the well-known melodramatic thriller, "The Lighthouse by the Sea," and entrusted the direction to Mal St. Clair, who handled the megaphone for the other Warner subjects, "Where the North Begins" and "Find Your Man," in which this wonderful animal has been starred.

While an up-to-date twist has been given to the story by having the hero a survivor of the World War and the action centre around the plotting of a gang of bootleggers to land their cargo by putting out the light, it still remains a melodrama of unbridled and primitive emotions in which dastardly villainy, intense heroism, pathos and a play upon the sympathies in the plight of the blind aged lighthouse keeper are all played up to the utmost.

In a story of this type more attention is given to providing thrills and playing upon the various emotions than to plausibility; consequently the fact that some of the stunts that Rin Tin Tin is made to perform indicate greater intelligence than seems feasible in a dog are excusable if they are effective, and they certainly are.

This wonderful animal certainly has been given opportunities to appear to advantage in this film, and he registers with a bang, getting your admiration and undivided attention every time he appears on the screen. Among the effective stunts of Rin Tin Tin are a swim to shore from a wreck, several fights with the villains, including one in the water, gnawing his way out of a net in which he is tied and then biting through the ropes that bind his master, using his forefeet to dig up a stake so as to rescue the blind keeper as he is about to fall over a cliff, and the scene which will appeal to all dog lovers where he sheepishly goes back and begs his master to fasten him up again. The big climax comes where the hero, chained and helpless, manages with the aid of the dog to set fire to some burning waste and Rin Tin Tin dashes up the stairway, drops it into the light and starts it going again. Rather implausible but certainly there with a punch that will get you.

Rin Tin Tin certainly lives up to the reputation he has gained in his past pictures. Buster Collier gives a good performance as the hero and Louise Fazenda is entirely satisfactory as the girl, though she has little to do and no opportunity for the comedy for which she is famous. Charles Hill Mailes gives a sympathetic portrayal of the blind man, and Matthew Bets and Douglas Gerrard with the assistance of others effectively provide an abundant supply of villainy.

For those who like primitive, out-and-out thrill melodrama this picture would appeal even without Rin Tin Tin. The presence of this dog adds greatly to the story, however, and widens the appeal so that it should provide good entertainment for a majority of spectators and be a good box office attraction.

Shipwrecked off the coast of Maine, Albert Dorn, a young Belgian would have perished from exposure and the difficulties he encountered were it not for his dog Rin Tin Tin. Finally their little boat drifts to the shore and Flora, daughter of the lighthouse-keeper rescues Albert, who is given a job tending the light as the old man has gone blind and fears he will lose his job if this fact is known. Bootleggers operating in the vicinity scheme to put out the light on a certain night in order to discharge their cargo. They kidnap Albert and Rin Tin Tin tying Albert and putting a net around the dog and take them out to a ship, fell the old man and put out the light. Rin Tin Tin chews his way out of the net and then gnaws the ropes that bind Albert and they succeed in reaching shore after battling the crew. Cavanna, the bootleg leader and Daggett his pal chain Albert, but he succeeds in setting fire to some waste and Rin Tin Tin dashes up with the burning waste and drops it in the light starting it again. Flora has been kidnapped and taken aboard the boat. Albert is freed by the old man and he and Rin Tin Tin get aboard and are battling to save Flora when a revenue cutter captures the ship. Albert finds happiness in Flora's love.

"The Deadwood Coach"

Tom Mix and His Horse, Tony, Are Starred in This Spectacular Western Presented by William Fox

Reviewed by Tom Waller

As spectacular a Western as has ever been produced is William Fox's "The Deadwood Coach," in which Tom Mix and his horse, Tony, are starred. Mountainous country, bad lands and plains comprise the backgrounds while bad men, Indians and a stampede of thousands of sheep make up the bulk of the cast. For a western this picture has been produced on a lavish scale—lavish in the sense that nothing has been left undone to furnish a maximum of thrills in gunplay and revenge.

Apparently, Director Lynn Reynolds had the phase of thrills uppermost in his mind from the start to the finish of "The Deadwood Coach." He certainly has succeeded and is deserving of much praise. Mix's role is nothing short of that of a superman and the action is so meteoric that one has little time for experiencing anything but suspense. Such speed should prove a big asset towards the success of this production since it has a tendency to make credible much of the incredible.

Audience sympathy and hatred of the marauders is aroused in the prologue in which Ernest Butterworth ably portrays the role later enacted by Mix. As the orphan, Mix is a good-badman, a kindly character whose chief motive in life is to avenge the murder of his parents.

Coach hold-ups thwarted by Mix, in his search for the killer of his parents, inevitably lead to the appearance of the heroine, a girl from the East en route to the home of her brother, the local sheriff.

The picture terminates in a brilliant climax with Mix rescuing his bride from the marauders and at the same time realizing his vengeance by hurling from a cliff in the lurid bad lands the chief cut-throat and terrorizer of the community.

Directed by Lynn Reynolds.
Length, 6,346 feet.

Story

The chief aim of the Orphan is to "get" Tex Wilson, who murdered his parents. In trailing Wilson's gang the Orphan averts the hold-up of the Deadwood Coach and thus meets Helen Winters enroute to visit her brother, Jim Shields, the local sheriff. Mix is a friend of the sheriff, having saved him from the Indians. The sheriff tells Helen the Orphan's story and it arouses additional interest on her part. About to be wed, Tex Wilson breaks into the church and makes known his real identity. He escapes with the girl, hotly pursued by the Orphan. In the bad lands the coach, which Wilson's men had stolen, breaks down and Wilson, abandoning the girl, takes to foot. The Orphan captures him and hurls him from a high cliff. Then he about faces and settles down to a career of domestication.

"The Dixie Handicap"

Human Interest and Sympathy Rather Than Heavy Melodrama in Entertaining Race Track Story

Reviewed by C. S. Sewell

Gerald Beaumont a popular writer of stories of the race track is the author of the magazine story on which Metro-Goldwyn's "The Dixie Handicap" is based, and as is obvious from the title, the climax of this production centers in a big racing scene.

While this angle of the picture follows familiar lines with everything depending on the winning of the big race in which the favored horse of course triumphs, the general treatment of the story differs considerably from the usual picture of this type.

Ordinarily, a racing story is treated as rather heavy melodrama with considerable thrills and villainy culminating in dastardly attempts such as railroad wrecks, etc., to prevent the horse from winning, but this picture is different. There is no real villainy and no attempt at melodrama. On the other hand the appeal has been centered on the sympathy and human interest angles all leading up to the big racing scene.

Although the outcome of this race is obvious, there is a good kick in the big race scene which was filmed at the celebrated track in Latonia, Ky., as you watch the hero's horse, "Dixie", come up from behind and run neck and neck.

All who like horses will like this story which is intensely human and sympathetic. First is shown a famous racing mare, the last possession of an old Southern gentleman, then how she gets lost in a severe storm and gives birth to a colt which is nursed and cared for like a baby; this horse's first race where it is badly injured and about to be killed. The stable boy's love which causes him to care for it and nurse it back to condition and finally the winning of the big race. There is a lot of pathos in the character of the old father who sacrifices everything to hide his poverty from his daughter, although her ignorance of this fact is not altogether convincing.

The characters are satisfactorily handled, Claire Windsor as the girl has a role that does not get much sympathy. Lloyd Hughes gives a good performance as the hero while Frank Keenan is excellent as the old gentleman and Otis Harlan does well as the negro butler. John Sainpolis has little to do in what would ordinarily be a heavy role.

Spectators who are looking for heavy racing melodrama will probably find this picture slow because of its more moderate tempo although the racing scene certainly has enough snap. We believe however, that the majority of spectators will find "The Dixie Handicap" provides pleasing entertainment.

Judge Roberts, greatly reduced in circumstances hides his true financial condition from his daughter Virginia rearing her in luxury by continually selling parts of his estate, until finally all he has left is the old home and his racing mare Southern Melody about to have a colt. Through the carelessness of a stable boy, the mare wanders away and the colt is born in a rainstorm and nearly dies from exposure, the horse giving her life to save it when attacked by a wild cat. Dexter, trainer of a millionaire who owns an adjoining racing stable loves Virginia and tells her of her father's poverty. To counteract this her father sells the colt and sends Virginia to Europe. This colt Dixie, is injured and Johnny Sheridan begs permission to try to save it when it is to be shot. Virginia returns just before the great Dixie handicap in which Dixie is entered, and learns that her father has sacrificed all and is living in poverty. Dixie wins the race and a purse of $50,000. The old estate is restored and Virginia, thoroughly chastened agrees to marry Johnny who has always loved her.

"The Legend of Hollywood"

Renaud Hoffman Production for Producers Distributing Corporation Has Intensely Dramatic Climax
Reviewed by C. S. Sewell

Intensely dramatic is the climax of "The Legend of Hollywood," a Producers Distributing Corporation picture based on what is said to be a true incident that served as the basis for Frank Condon's story and also for one several years ago by Frederick Arnold Kummer entitled "The Seventh Glass."

It is a story of Hollywood but differs widely from other pictures of this locale as the theme deals entirely with the disappointments of a scenario writer and a girl who sought fame in the movies, and the only "inside" stuff is an unsuccessful attempt of the hero to get his story before the head of a scenario department.

There is a really big theme behind this picture and Renaud Hoffman, who gained sudden fame by his wonderful handling of "Not One to Spare," directed it. The big climax comes when the hero, who has filled seven glasses with wine and put poison in one, comes to the last glass. Terrific suspense is built up here as there is a letter on the way at the time accepting the scenario, and the drama is intensified by the unexpected situation of the hero actually drinking the last glass before it arrives and sinking into a sort of stupor. His being awakened by the girl and her explanation that she had broken one glass and replaced it is not so convincing.

Mr. Renaud's direction of this scene and Percy Marmont's fine acting cause it to register strongly, but the weakness of the picture lies in the fact that the whole story hinges on this one situation, and in making a production of feature length there is so much stressing of details and atmospheric touches that the story drags and the interest is liable to weaken before the climax is reached. Added to this is the fact that it is a drab little tale of disappointment with anything but a cheerful atmosphere; in fact, it is depressing, with the heroine disappointed and the hero waiting for death. There is a happy ending, but this is abrupt, for there has been no hint of any love for her on the hero's part. ZaSu Pitts is excellent as the girl.

The entire audience appeal of this picture is centred in the climax, and while it is a big and intensely dramatic situation, it is doubtful if it is strong enough to carry the whole picture.

Story

A boarding house in Hollywood shelters a variety of persons who are seeking success in the movies, among them is John Smith who is writing what he hopes will be the screen's greatest story. Filled with enthusiasm he visits the studios but without result. The landlady tells him his board is overdue but offers to let him have the room without meals for seven more days. He determines to end it all by poison but notices he has seven glasses, so he gambles with death by filling the glasses with wine, one poisoned and taking one each day. The first six days of despair is nothing to the seventh when there is no longer any element of chance. He drinks the last glass as a friend brings him a letter that the story has been accepted. The little slavey who is his friend comes in and finds him apparently dead. Finally he opens his eyes and she explains she knocked one glass off the mantel and to hide it, got him another one. She has planned to return home, but he persaudes her to stay and share his success.

"The Rat's Knuckles"

(Pathe—Comedy—One Reel)

Charlie Chase had many of the trade paper critics reviewing "The Rat's Knuckles" in the Pathe projection room in an uproar. This one-reeler has lots of funny incidents and ridiculous episodes and should prove to be the type of comedy material which would go strong in any house. Chase's invention, that of a "painless rat trap," fails to go with banking houses. It will get a typhoon of laughs, since it is so designed to "offend" the rodent's "feelings" so that he will depart in shame in search of other quarters. The comedy also contains a lot of good slapstick activities in a lunchroom.—T. W.

"Film Facts"

(Red Seal—Magazine—One Reel)

This reel opens with views of the Netherlands taken fifteen years ago, and then enters upon fascinating scenes of Luther Burbank's plant-growing establishment in the West. Other views are of an ostrich farm in France and surf-board riding at Hawaii; but by far the best scenes have to do with Burbank. Trees of weird shape and plants just recently made edible are shown. Among the latter is the cactus, which Burbank says can be grown in such quantities as to supply the entire world with food. The tallest and richest wheat in the world also is shown. This is Issue C of "Films Facts."—S. S.

"The Violin Speaks"

(Fox—Instructive—One Reel)

This subject opens with views of a violin and then proceeds to show how it is manufactured. Each of the various steps are presented in detail, and prove more instructive and interesting than would seem possible. This particular violin is hand-made. The skill of the workman is plainly apparent in the care he lavishes on the splicing, trimming and varnishing. Certainly we now have more appreciation of the labor involved in the making of a violin than ever before, and we believe that others will enjoy learning the process.—S. S.

"RoughandTumbling"

(Pathe—"Sportlight"—One Reel)

That colleges lay stress upon building the body as well as developing the brain is the theme which Grantland Rice brings home in sub-titles in "shots" of various intercollegiate sports. The views are of recent football games, wrestling and other sports. All who like these Rice presentations should find this one quite entertaining.—T. W.

"One Game Pup"

(Pathe—Cartoon—One Reel)

Cartoonist Paul Terry provides an abundance of mirth in his "One Game Pup." The farmer has several flocks of white pups when a black one joins the assemblage. The pup rescues a duck from the clutches of a ravenous wolf. The whole thing is ridiculously entertaining and a mighty clever exhibition of cartoon skill.—T. W.

NEWS AND REVIEWS OF SHORT SUBJECTS AND SERIALS

"Step Fast"

(Educational—Comedy—Two Reels)

This Christie Comedy, starring Jimmie Adams, and distributed by Educational, demonstrates an unusually entertaining comedy can be built on a time-worn idea. There is probably no basis for comedy that has seen greater service than the necessity for the hero to marry by a specified time in order to inherit a relative's wealth. By shortening this time to one hour, the suspense and speed is intensified. The first reel follows along familiar lines with the disgruntled relatives seeking to prevent the marriage, and you are liable to wonder whether the pace can be kept up. So ingeniously has the story been handled, however, that the second reel is even better, for a lot of new and amusing situations are introduced. It is farce with some slapstick, with an abundance of novel ideas introduced to delay the wedding. The most laughable and clever scenes are where the house is set on fire and the hero dashes into the smoke and keeps bringing out the wrong girl and has the same difficulty with the justice of the peace, and the scene where the justice loses his glasses and the party goes on the roof so he can get the right focus with field glasses on the marriage ritual held by a chap in the yard. This comedy should please and get a lot of laughs from any audience. —C. S. S.

"The Big Town"

(Pathe—Comedy—Two Reels)

The "Our Gang" youngsters visit New York City in "The Big Town," which is one of the best of their many excellent vehicles. One of their association leaves the home town to visit relatives in Manhattan. He writes back about the wonderful sights. This arouses the curiosity and jealousy of the rest of the crowd. Quite unexpectedly they reach New York when the freight car in which they are "playing house" is suddenly towed away by a locomotive. In New York they ride on the ferries and end up by touring the city in an omnibus which one of their tribe seems able to operate at a terrific speed. This ride will afford audiences many thrills, with the huge vehicle dashing through Broadway traffic. The ride home in the train in the custody of a detective is especially funny. One of the crowd kicks over a collection belonging to a "bugologist" to the intense discomfort of the Pullman passengers.—T. W.

"Pathe Review 2"

(Pathe—Magazine—One Reel)

"The Siren of the South Seas" heads the three subjects in the current Pathe magazine attraction. Snappy subtitles make it appear that a chattering monkey is actually saying something. The Pathecolor is of the "Visiting Our Own America" series. It reveals some delightful scenes of Honolulu. The last is of the "Keep Fit" series, showing the correct and the incorrect manner in which to stand.—T. W.

In this Cameo Comedy distributed through Educational Cliff Bowes appears as a chap who is continually getting in trouble and his father hires a fellow to look out for him. In this role Phil Dunham has an encounter with thugs and fares badly. To retrieve his standing he goes into a prize fight, thinking his opponent is a little fellow. He proves to be a big bruiser and Phil is up against it. There are a number of amusing situations in this comedy of the familiar slapstick type and it is up to the standard of this series as a laugh-getter.—C. S. S.

"Straight Shootin"

(Universal—Western—Two Reels)

This Universal Western is a reissue cut down from a five-reel feature starring Harry Carey. The cutting out of all but the meat of the story and the best of the action has the effect of making it a fast-moving two-reeler crammed with the kind of scenes that register with Western fans, and it should prove an acceptable offering. The story concerns a row between cattlemen and settlers, with Carey as a chap hired to get rid of the settlers but who joins forces with the other side when he finds the cattlemen are warring on the women and children.—C. "The Plumber"

(Pathe—Comedy—Two Reels)

Mack Sennett has Ralph Graves, as the plumber, spring a leak in the pipe in the bathroom of a luxurious home. Slapstick actions in floundering about in the water, the flooding of the lavatory and the crumpling of much plaster furnish much of the familiar comedy which rarely fails in getting the laughs. A vamp engenders the displeasure of the hostess and she wreaks her vengeance by "dolling up" the plumber and introducing him as a football star. The plumber is immune to the writhings of the siren. He falls in love with a little dressmaker. The vamp, however, pursues him, even to the extent of attending a plumbers' ball. There a free-for-all brawl takes place in which everything movable is smashed. The fight provides a few good thrills as well as laughs. In all "The Plumber" is well up to the average Mack Sennett mirth-maker. The supporting cast includes Alice Day, Eugenia Gilbert, Marvin Lobach and Elsie Tarron.—T. W.

"Dangerous Curves"

(Fox—Comedy—Two Reels)

The principal scene in this subject is a modiste's shop, displaying several more than ordinarily attractive models and introducing, along the bull in the china shop idea, a mischievous monkey and an energetic skunk into a throng of well-gowned customers. The ensuing pandemonium may be easily imagined. This is well done from a burlesque viewpoint, but we think that the choicest scenes in the comedy are the opening ones, where father is shown in bed with some twelve or thirteen of his children and they play pranks at his expense. These scenes make a hit because of the cuteness of the youngsters and the lively way in which they cavort about. "Dangerous Curves" impresses as good slapstick entertainment.—S. S.

"The Milk Bottle Bandits"

(Fox—Comedy—Two Reels)

This Fox Comedy in two reels contains a lot of amusing slapstick that should register with the average patron. The action starts off with the mysterious disappearance of bottles of milk, and nearly everybody in town acting as a detective to ferret out the mystery, and in comedy fashion it develops that each one of the "detectives" has been taking the other fellow's milk. Suddenly there is a gold rush when a kid brings in a nugget. All rush to the hills and dig frantically. It develops that a half-wit has gilded a number of stones and buried them so that he can get the cellar for his new house dug without cost. This comedy is fast-moving and up to the average as a laugh-getter—C. S. S.

Critics Pronounce "Peter Pan" a Triumph In New York, Los Angeles, and Philadelphia

LEADING newspaper screen critics in New York, Los Angeles, Philadelphia and other cities are unanimous in pronouncing "Peter Pan" a screen triumph.

Almost unparalleled superlatives are used to describe the Paramount picture produced by Herbert Brenon, with Betty Bronson in the title role.

Among the New York City comments are the following:

Mildred Spain, Daily News: "Breathe easily. The movie version of 'Peter Pan,' the beloved, isn't a disappointment. In fact it's a big surprise. When I tell you that a noontime audience of grownups clapped and cheered when Peter begged them to clap for Tinker Bell's life, then you'll know just what the director has done. All grownups should see 'Peter Pan.' All children must see 'Peter Pan.'"

Harriette Underhill, New York Herald Tribune: "There is the inspiration of Barrie himself, there is the direction of Herbert Brenon amounting to positive genius. There is the fine acting, the perfect casting, the splendid mechanism, the pictorial beauty. But there is a soul in 'Peter Pan' which is a thing apart from all its tangible perfection."

Dorothy Herzog, Daily Mirror: "Whatever you do—no matter how busy you are—be sure and see 'Peter Pan.'"

Quinn Martin, Morning World: "'Peter Pan' is one of the triumphs of the screen. And Famous Players-Lasky remind us once again that, although they also deal in quantity, quality is one of their specialties."

F. W. M. Hall, The Times: "A great credit to the Famous Players-Lasky Corporatio and also to the whole motion picture industry. It is not a movie, but a pictorial masterpiece."

Your "Bank of England"

In Los Angeles, where "Peter Pan" first saw the light of day, Albert A. Kaufman, managing director of the Million Dollar Theatre, wired the Paramount Home Office:

"'Peter Pan' opened at the Million Dollar Theatre tonight to the greatest enthusiasm in the history of the theatre. It is more than big, or great, or wonderful. It is the last word in screen entertainment. We counted thirty-one big situations that received big applause during the showing. It is the Bank of England for all exhibitors. A thousand congratulations."

In corroboration are the opinions of the critics on the Los Angeles dailies, who were present at its world premier.

Edwin Schallert wrote in the Times: "A new highway to childhood land has been discovered. And this time it is motion pictures that have charted the magic road. If you would venture into an enchanted domain you have only to behold 'Peter Pan.' It points a path so remarkably new and promising that it is to be heralded as one of the screen's most remarkable and brilliant achievements. It is the achievement of the season and of many seasons, too."

Of Miss Bronson, Mr. Schallert says: "Her 'Peter Pan' is absolutely her own. It is delicate and engaging from every point of view. The grace of Miss Bronson's movements, the almost boyish radiance of her presence, the carefree vitality that seems to inspire every action she performs literally fill the screen with youth in all its merry exhuberance."

The Critics Agree

Other Los Angeles reviewers commented as follows:

L. B. Fowler, Daily News: "Carries the spirit of Barrie's master fantasy; same sentiment, same poetic beauty; keeping intact the bewitching fairy-like quality that so predominated in the stage play, and worthy to be catalogued as the greatest photoplay of its kind ever made."

Florence Lawrence, Examiner: "In the leading role, Betty Bronson, recent film discovery, makes good with every gesture of her lithe young body, and with every smile of her radiant countenance."

Guy Price, Evening Herald: "'Peter Pan' is a supreme delight. Miss Bronson scores an immediate hit. If the thunderous applause of last night's house is any indication of the popular belief in eternal youth, then all of us remain children at heart throughout our life."

Praise For the Director

Ted Taylor, Record: "It is the best accomplishment in light fantasy yet brought to the screen. It is a delightful thing that Herbert Brenon has done. I though Betty Bronson delightful,—great, surprised eyes, the face of a beautiful child; the lithe body of a wiry boy, always poised strangely as if for instant flight, and so graceful in movement that even the flying scenes seemed perfectly natural."

Orlando Northcutt, Express: "'Peter Pan' flew in from the Never Never land to thrill the hearts of children of all ages. That belief in fairies has not altogether vanished from our sophisticated world was amply proved by the warm reception given the picture at the first showing. Betty Bronson plays the part like a veteran actress. She is buoyant, expressive and whimsical. She doesn't make a false move. Technically, 'Peter Pan' has moments which lift it to the level of the best motion picture productions."

Quaker City Capitulates

The Philadelphia critics are a unit in their praise. Brief extracts from lengthy reviews follow:

Philadelphia Bulletin: "It will be a hard-boiled grownup who will not immensely enjoy 'Peter Pan.'"

Philadelphia Record: "It was a tough-minded grownup who could resist its charm."

Philadelphia North American: "Never has been equaled on the screen. One needs a fresh vocabulary to describe 'Peter Pan.'"

Philadelphia Public Ledger: "Columns would hardly suffice to mention all the admirable things about the picture. Should do much to raise the artistic standards of the movie industry."

Philadelphia Inquirer: "A treat for children and grownups alike. Bettey Bronson is most truly the 'Peter Pan' Barrie created."

In Other Cities

The receptions accorded "Peter Pan" in cities other than those mentioned above were of an equally flattering character.

In the Middle West, and in the South, the newspaper writers found ample opportunity to distribute their praise among the members of cast, as well as on the director, and also the producers.

Exhibitors in any community will find, on examining the reviews published in their home territory, that in "Peter Pan" they have a booking that covers, better than almost any other picture thus far released, all of the ground so necessary to meet every requirement, everywhere.

Two Showings of "Peter Pan" Prove a Success in N. Y.

Opening at the Rialto and Rivoli theatres, New York City, for a simultaneous showing, in common with showing in 250 theatres throughout the country, "Peter Pan" is recorded on the books of both houses as one of the greatest Sunday openings the theatres have ever had. It is impossible to estimate to what extent the records of either house would have been broken had the picture not opened at both houses at the same time. Crowds were in line from one o'clock in the afternoon until after the second de luxe performances had started at night. During the peak rush of the Sunday afternoon business there were policemen in front of the Rialto and Rivoli keeping the crowds in order and preventing them from congesting the sidewalks.

Monday and Tuesday matinee business at both houses was record breaking, with evening business maintaining Sunday's high level, which is within a few dollars of the record.

Harold B. Franklin, director of theatres for FamousPlayers, said: "I never saw audiences respond with such enthusiasm to a picture in my career. At the point where 'Peter Pan' asks the audience if they believe in fairies, and to clap their hands if they do, the audience reaction is so demonstrative it is thrilling to hear the applause. It bears out the Max Rheinhardt theory of making the audience part of the show."

Mr. Franklin pointed out that this is particularly true in the enjoyment that grown-ups see mto get listening to the effects of the picture on the children in the audience, who gasp, cheer and applaud and are in themselves quite a show apart from the picture.

The most important motion picture premiere of all time
ERICH VON STROHEIM'S greatest achievement as a director is "Greed," a Metro-Goldwyn picture produced by Louis B. Mayer. To make this faithful picturization of Frank Norris' immortal American classic, "McTeague," has occupied more than two years. From start to finish this powerful study in realism is true to its story. No detail is sugar-dipped, no character is distorted, no scenic detail is an embellishment for mere theatrical effect. Tonight, 8.30 P.M. And twice daily thereafter.

Erich Von Stroheim's "Greed" presented a peculiar advertising problem and Howard Dietz, of Metro-Goldwyn, met it in an unusual and striking way that had much to do with the picture's success at the Cosmopolitan box office. A few of the ads are reproduced above and will give the keynote of the campaign. In addition to frequent use of the views of the critics, Mr. Dietz played upon the point that "Greed" is the sort of picture that produces violent argument, and he succeeded in making a goodly portion of the New York public feel that it could not afford to be out of the argument. The strikingly effective use of art, type and white space needs no comment.—R. E. W.

Amusing Whirlwind of Action In "The Battling Orioles"

Audience at Cameo Theatre Highly Entertained by Comedy Episodes in Hal Roach's New Photo Play.

By ROSE PELSWICK.

I never have seen
So much a riot. I mean
So much action in so small a place.
All the actors appear
In an unrefined dire
And hard bottles in each other's face.

For it seems that the cast
Had some fifty years past
Been the heroes of baseball.
At first
I respectfully observed,
But in time it appeared
That their feat fifty years were their worst.

Having shown how to make an umpire give a favorable decision, and presented the baseball attire and manners of 1874, the team of "The Battling Orioles," at the Cameo Theatre, posed for posterity, parked themselves in an antiquated club to talk over their victories and reverted to type.

And, as far as I could follow the trend of the story, Glenn Tryon, the most eligible barber in an up State town, came to New York to rescue Blanche Mehaffy from a crowd of crooks, drifted into the club, and the rest of the picture resembles election night in the dear, dead past.

Bottles, blows, pictures, furniture and policemen are scattered about at random, upsetting the plot, waking up the fighting spirit of the Battling Orioles, saving the girl and giving Tryon no chance to stop for breath. The old slapstick comedies seem like slow-motion pictures compared to this film, but the actors seemed to be enjoying themselves and the Cameo audience bowled, so that settles that.

of the son of a famous Oriole, and things start to hum. The boy's girl is in the toils of her crooked uncle, who uses her as a decoy, so when the boy is given the gate at the club—after wrecking the place in workmanlike fashion—he goes to the rescue, but not before he has given the old vets a piece of his mind, and told them they are now old fogies of the most blabbering type. At the cafe the girl's uncle runs, the youth is in for a trimming, when the Orioles, their fighting spirit aroused, come to the rescue, putting up a whale of a fight and gaining their objective.

This is short on story, but is long on action and comedy. It's the kind of spontaneous pep and humor that will make the spectators want to get into the fracas and yell their heads off cheering for the kid, as he gets into mixups.

Glenn Tryon's the star, and a real comedy find he is, demonstrating he can act, as well as swing a mean right and get into trouble.

You've got some good material to work with in selling this to your patrons. Go after the baseball angle, and promise them a comedy with real action (six reels).

"The Battling Orioles"

Producer: Hal Roach
Distributor: Pathe

As a Whole..... FEATURE LENGTH COMEDY WITH NEW IDEAS IN PLOT AND GAGS. LOOKS LIKE A FIRST-RATE LAUGH-GETTER BUT CAN STAND A BIT OF CUTTING

Cast....Glenn Tryon, the featured player, looks like a winner in the comedy line. He has a very likeable personality and does not overact. Blanche Mehaffey a very pretty lead. Others include Noah Young, John T. Price and a score or more of excellently chosen "old men" types that help to put the comedy over in good shape.

Type of Story..... Hal Roach seems to have hit another novel idea in the plot of this comedy. It looks as if "The Battling Orioles" will be a knock-out comedy offering for any house. The gags are new and really funny and the story is "different." It opens with a "still" showing a group picture of "The Battling Orioles"—a ball team of 1874. That's a laugh right away. Then comes an introduction to the remaining Orioles as they look today, sitting around a luxurious club, old and grouchy, lame and cranky. Then the scene reverts to a young barber in a country town—Glenn Tryon—who is the son of one of the "Orioles." He is discovered and recognized by a member of the club who promises him a job at the New York club. His girl having been lured away to the city by her "bad egg" uncle, he accepts the proffered job, comes to New York and just turns that old-men's home up-side down. He is finally ordered from the club and goes to a dive to find his sweetheart. But the old men have been rejuvenated by the excitement and rush after him en masse. There is a wild fight between the "Orioles,"—who totter around hitting the toughs on the head with bottles— and the bad men with the "Orioles" winning and getting the boy and the girl in the finish. That fracas will send any audience into gales of laughter. One old boy makes a bean-shooter out of his suspenders and shoots beer bottles at the enemy. Another stands behind the bar throwing bottles and taking a cigar out of the stock whenever he knocks a man out.

Box Office Angle....You can certainly entertain and amuse them with this. Where feature comedies are liked, this one is in.

Exploitation....Get behind this. The title sounds like a baseball story. It isn't. You can either tell them about the story, or promise them a surprise. They'll get it if they think they are coming to see a ball-team in action.

Direction.....Ted Wilde and Fred Guiol; excellent, but a little too much footage.

Author..... Hal Roach
Scenario by..... Hal Roach
Cameramen.....Floyd Jackman and George Stevens
Photography..... Very good
Locale....New York and small town

The Orioles, they were called, that famous baseball team of years ago, when all players wore a generous decoration of foliage, and the umpire took his life in his hands every time he ventured a decision. They may not have been such hears at the gentle art of baseball, but when it came to a fight, they were all big leaguers. Story written and directed by Hal Roach.

Here is a comedy of battle that makes the Civil War look like an engagement between two anemic chorus girls armed with large powder puffs. The Tyler family battles itself, when it isn't fighting the town. Fun and action dominate this feature, and if that's the sort of stuff your house likes, book this picture; they'll eat it up.

When the Tyler family isn't fighting the rest of Tyler, Kansas, it puts on a glorious inter-family scrap. Dad beats up the two older boys, bruisers both, and they, in turn, pounce on the youngest, Toby, the "white sheep" of the clan. He's anything but a "fightin' Tyler," but he shines, in the town, by the reflected glory of his brothers' right arms.

BLANCHE MEHAFFEY

There's no doubt old man Nelse rules the town, with his strong and sinewy arms. You've guessed it; he's the village smithy, too. And, oh, what a mighty man is he. His bitter enemy is Tom Calvert, local loan shark, whose business would go way out of bounds if it were not for Nelse. So he tries to force through an opposition candidate for mayor.

The Tylers hear of it and intimidate the citizens, so Nelse is elected to the important office. Judge Matthews and his family have migrated from Peoria and are allowed to reside in Tyler. The white sheep falls in love with the daughter. But so do the other two brothers. Begins a battle of brawn against brain, with all the comedy situations that therein lie.

Patience Matthews prefers the white sheep, the romantic youth, who is interested, one would infer, in the "finer things."

Hal Roach ably directed the scenes showing the dinner given by Patience to the brothers. It is a gem. I had to bite my tongue to keep from laughing out loud in the projecting room, an unseemly rupture of decorum that would probably have shocked some of the staider old ladies.

Calvert, out to "get" Nelse Tyler, frames him on a filthy murder charge. Law and order take charge and it looks pretty tough for the old campaigner. His huskier sons are powerless to help him, and indeed they don't much try.

But the white sheep seems to be always fighting somebody in an effort to save his father. Finally, he gives up, in despair, when Nelse is convicted and sentenced to hang.

"It's no use," he tells Patience, "I'm not a fighting Tyler." The demure girl, fresh from the plains of Illinois, suggests prayer. Lo, and likewise behold, the prayer is answered and the white sheep saves father. Climax, etc., etc. Close-up and fade-out.

A dawg-gone good picture, neighbor, even if you don't like that kind of story. But I'll bet you do.

The White Sheep

(Hal Roach Production-Pathe—Seven Reels)

(Reviewed by Frank Elliott)

MARK this up as a real treat. It is so different from the usual run of features, so full of fun, original business and thrills, that it comes to the screen at a most opportune time—a time when the fans are getting "fed up" on the formula plots. The production also has an added asset in the new faces of the stars, Glenn Tryon and Blanche Mehaffey, as well as most of the supporting cast.

Made for fun purposes only, this feature length comedy, can be chalked up as a success. Audiences everywhere should enjoy it immensely. The plot is laid in "covered wagon days," in a town on the border line between Kansas and Missouri. This town is "run" by the "Fightin' Tylers," and a brawny bunch they are. But comes a day when some of the village folks tire of Old Man Tyler's iron rule, so they frame him on a murder charge. The scenes, following, dealing with the trial, the debate of the jury, the conviction, the sentence to the "rope party," and the rescue of dad by "the white sheep," the younger son, who brings back the "murdered" man, just in the nick of time, are filled with alternating laughs and thrills.

The trial is one of the most humorous ever pictured, while the climax in which Tobby, the non-fighting son, goes after his man, the one his dad is charged with sending to the happy hunting grounds; and brings him back after a battle royal on land and in the water, furnishes a whirlwind finish to a picture that is crammed full of action.

It would take a whole page to enumerate the laughable situations. Mr. Tryon and Miss Mehaffy are excellent in the stellar roles. The support is thoroughly capable.

THEME. A melodramatic comedy in showing how the fightin' Tylers triumphed over their enemies and how "the white sheep" of the family proved that in reality he is the "fightinest" one of the hunch.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The excellent characterizations contributed by every member of the cast. The fun at the Matthews party. The trial sequence. The scene in which the two sons throw their dad out a second story window believing him to be "the white sheep" The thrilling climax.

DIRECTION. Hal Roach and his assistants are to be congratulated on their work in this offering. They have given us something different. They have pepped things up from beginning end and tacked on a wow of a climax for good measure.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Have a man dress as a shepherd and lead a white sheep thru the streets with your advertising painted on a blanket. Play up the names of Hal Roach and the stars. Tell the folks about the great fights and the pack of fun. Put on a "Fun Night" with this picture as the "piece de resistance."

DRAWING POWER. Should please most any audience, principally because it will make 'em laugh. Especially good for houses catering to a family trade because it is as clean as as whistle.

SUMMARY. You'll have to look a long way before you can find a picture with more action in it than this one possesses. It starts out with a fight and there is one every few minutes or some other original piece of business. And interspersed with the thrills is a barrel of laughs. The work of the excellently picked cast is one of the highlights of the picture.

THE CAST

Tobias Tyler	Glenn Tryon

Written and directed by Hal Roach. Photographed by Floyd Jackman and George Stevens.

SYNOPSIS. Tom Calvert, jealous of the power of Nelse Tyler and his fighting sons, frames Nelse on a murder charge. A jury finds him guilty and he is sentenced to be hanged. Patience Matthews tells her sweetheart, Tobias Tyler, the younger son to pray. As they are praying, Tobby overhears Calvert tell that Newt Randall, the man believed to be murdered is camping nearby. Unable to convince the mob that Newt is alive, Tobby goes after him and after a tough battle gets him back just as his dad is to be hanged. "The white sheep" proves the hero of the family.

EXHIBITORS' NEWS AND VIEWS

EDITED BY SUMNER SMITH

Cranberry Lake's Theatre Is Unique

As an exhibitor, E. F. Gaylord, who runs the Amusement Hall in Cranberry Lake, N. Y., stands alone—that is, in some respects. Mr. Gaylord's theatre occupies a hall on the second floor of a block the downstairs portion of which he runs as a sort of lunch room and soft drink parlor, catering to whom may come or go, in the main, woodsmen. A pair of stairs lead from the lunch room to the theatre. Mr. Gaylord operates his own machine and in fact runs the whole establishment. When he finishes a reel he slips in a slide reading "One minute, please, while operator changes reel." This is a signal to everyone present to get up from their seats, trudge downstairs, indulge in a cigarette, a limburger sandwich, a glass of cider or a cup of coffee, handed out by a clerk, while Mr. Gaylord takes his time in changing the reel. There really isn't any hurry, for the longer he takes, the more his patrons will spend in in the lunch parlor.

Once the reel is in place, he stamps on the floor with his heel, yells out, "All ready, boys," and the crowd flocks back, takes their seats, which are ordinary chairs, and the show proceeds, Mr. Gaylord being careful to see that everyone is back in the hall before he starts grinding away. It's the same after each reel, one needing little or no imagination to picture the scene on a ten-reel feature. Cranberry Lake is practically isolated during the winter season and has a population of about 100 persons.

W. W. Farley, head of Farash Theatres, Inc., announced last week that a definite move would be made on January 10 toward selling the big State Theatre in Schenectady under the hammer. On that date a Troy bank will appear before Judge Nichols seeking an order to bring about the sale.

H. E. Flack, owner of the Star in Potsdam, has reduced admission prices to 10 and 15 cents, following the opening of the Papayanakos Theatre, and reports more business than when he was charging 25 cents.

Listen in. Tony Veiller of the Lincoln Theatre in Troy will be heard over the radio on January 5, speaking from the WHAZ station in that city and discussing the relationship of radio to motion pictures. It will be Tony's first bow to the invisible audience.

According to some of the exhibitors in Schenectady, the Hudson Theatre, lately opened with stock, is stepping on their corns a bit.

After noticing all the different combinations for smokers, or of toilet sets, or this or that for Christmas gifts, William Shirley, managing director of the theatres operated by the Farash company in Schenectady, came out with one of his own during the holidays, advertising a combination of "Classmates" at the Strand, "Secrets" at the State and "The Last of the Duanes" at the Albany Theatre.

C. Marx, who runs the Rialto and Highland theatres in Utica, played Santa Claus to himself and woke up on Christmas morning with a brand new Maxwell sedan in his stocking.

That the Capitol Theatre in Albany, given over largely to road shows, has adopted a policy of playing the super-feature pictures at prices ranging from 50 cents to $1.65 became evident during the past week with the announcement that "The Ten Commandments" would be shown during New Year's week. "The Thief of Bagdad" was recently shown at the same theatre and drew well.

Exhibitors in Albany, Troy and Schenectady believe in Santa Claus. Nothing strange in that, considering the presents that came their way. When William Shirley and Meyer Friedman, manager and assistant of Farash Theatres, Inc., of Schenectady, entered their offices on Christmas morning they found two beautiful traveling bags, the one bearing Mr. Shirley's initials also containing a silk lounging robe. At the Lincoln in Troy, Eddie Trembley, the doorman, impersonated Santa Claus and presented Tony Veiller, house manager, with a beautiful wrist watch from the employes. It was quite an occasion, sandwiches, ice cream and refreshments being served, the affair taking place on the mezzanine floor at the conclusion of the late show.

At the Rose Theatre, Jake Rosenthal received, among other things, a smoking jacket, while Joe Saperstein of the Griswold Theatre found a pair of beautiful cuff links in his stocking. Ben Apple of the American and King theatres in Troy woke up bright and early Christmas morning, rubbed his eyes and discovered a Masonic ring, a card case and a set of poker chips and cards. Walter Roberts of the Troy Theatre received an umbrella and a handsome pen from employes of the theatre. In Albany, Oscar Perrin was fairly showered with gold, Buckley and Tarsches, owners of the Clinton Square and Leland theatres, presenting Mr. Perrin with $100 in gold pieces, while employes of the two theatres gave him $25 more in coin of the realm.

The exhibitors themselves played Santa Claus to their employes. At the three Farash theatres in Schenectady the employes not only received their pay envelopes six days in advance, enabling them to do their shopping, but each one received a crisp ten dollar bill from the management. Manager Shirley also sent fountain pens to every film manager in Albany, as well as candy and cigars to the office help. J. H. MacIntyre of the Paramount exchange in Albany, with a beautiful traveling bag from his employes and a raccoon coat from his wife, simply can't come down to earth these days. Jake Rosenthal gave everyone working for him a present, including pairs of shoes. Julius Singer of the Universal exchange received a handsome gold pen and pencil from his employes, while Charles Stombaugh of the Pathe exchange received a wardrobe trunk.

The love of a dog for his master is being shown these days to a marked degree in Burlington, Vt., where the Airedale owned by Bernard C. Whalen, who was drowned while duck hunting two weeks or so ago, refuses to allow anyone to approach him. When the boat overturned the dog managed to swim ashore. The body of Oscar Guyette, one of the party, who made a strong struggle but who later died from exposture, is the only one of the party of four to have been recovered. During the past week a diver was employed.

All the leading theatres in this section ran late shows on New Year's Eve to big business. There was a bad slump at practically all of the houses from just before Christmas until New Year's Day. Owners generally, however, have enjoyed an excellent fall, and in the words of one, the situation is well expressed by the statement that "there was nothing to complain about."

Jimmy Chest of Canajoharie, running the Capitol, has just completed remodeling the interior of the house and is also tied up with the Citizens' Band of that place for a concert once a month along with pictures.

Although James Burnham is doing a wonderful business with the house he lately acquired in Ogdensburg, he isn't permitting things to go any old way at the big farm which he owns near Governeur. Each week end finds Mr. Burnham on his farm, looking after things and outlining the work to be done during the week to come.

There was a big New Year's Eve party staged at the State Theatre in Schenectady, but with the tables turned, for instead of Manager Shirley paying the check, the employes not only of this theatre but also of the Strand and Albany houses paid the bill. Many from along Albany's Film Row were present, and with the Strand orchestra furnishing the music dozens of couples danced out the old year.

Pin the Croix de Guerre on Jake Rosenthal of Troy, who not only donned a Christmas necktie on the day he received it, but is still wearing it. In due justice to Jake, it might be said that the tie was not such a bad looking one at that. Mr. Rosenthal is sitting in the box office himself this week, while his daughter, Celia, is enjoying a couple of weeks in New York.

The snappiest Christmas card put out by any exhibitor this past Christmas was devised by Tony Veiller of the Lincoln in Troy. In plain, every-day English, it was a corker, hand painted, the figures presenting Mr. and Mrs. Veiller strolling along and wishing everyone a Merry Christmas. And speaking of clever cards, the exhibitors in this section are indebted to Max Fleischer of the "Out-of-the-Inkwell" series, who remembered them all.

The Capitol Theatre in Troy is once more dark, having closed on Monday, Al Bothner now being in Mohawk, managing the Strand there for William Smalley.

"Pop" Linton may be getting along in years a bit but it doesn't seem to affect his pep. He is as enthusiastic as a ten-year-old over the Olympic which he is building in Utica and which will open within the next few weeks as a first-run house. Linton knows his business and it's a safe bet right now that the house will become one of the most popular ones in the city.

John Augello, owner of the Family Theatre in Utica, has added to his holdings, acquiring Hibernian Hall, which he will shortly reopen and run one day a week. Mr. Augello took a trip to Italy this summer and was no sooner back home than he decided to buy out his opposition.

ALICE LAKE
One of the featured players in the Arrow picture, "The Lost Chord," produced by Whitman Bennett.

C. H. Dopp, Jr., of the Electric Theatre in Johnstown, dropped into Albany right after Christmas, did a little shopping along Film Row and casually remarked that Santa had been pretty good to him not only during the holidays but throughout the fall.

Nathan Vinegard, former owner of the Academy in Newburgh, together with the Coleman Brothers of New York City, old-time exhibitors, were in Albany during the past week on the lookout for a theatre.

George Roberts, manager of the Berinstein chain of theatres, spending Christmas at his home in Albany, declared on the day following that he had received more socks and neckties than any exhibitor in the entire Capital District. In fact, the gifts were so numerous that Mr. Roberts was tempted to open a store, devote it to first-run goods, with leniency towards exhibitors but exchange managers barred. Mr. Roberts stated, in talking over business prospects, that the Van Curler in Schenectady will continue to run big feature pictures as they appear from time to time.

Ben Apple of the American in Troy will do no more bowling this winter, according to doctor's orders. Mr. Apple is once more back on the job and was among members of the Kiwanis Club entertaining 75 of the poor children of the city with a chicken dinner and Christmas tree and later with a show at the American Theatre.

Louis Buettner, one of the popular exhibitors in this section and who hails from Cohoes, is laying claim these days to being the best bowler in all Cohoes. Mr. Buettner certainly practices enough, bowling every day and meeting any one at any weight. Say what you will, his score of 259 is still high at the Elks alleys.

Vic Warren of the Strand in Massena journeyed to New York for the week end.

Harry Hellman of the Royal Theatre in Albany is back from a week or two at Lake Placid and feeling so rejuvenated that he intends to return to the well known resort some time in January. Harry works hard, makes good money and knows how to spend it in getting the most enjoyment.

There is one big day, or perhaps it may be a week, in 1925 for Herman Vineberg of the Mark Strand Theatre in Albany. It's January 25, when with Mrs. Vineberg he will celebrate the fifth wedding anniversary. Plans call for a trip to New York.

Nate Robbins has announced a distinctly new policy at his Avon Theatre in Watertown. Burlesque will hold forth for the first three days of each week.

Walter Roberts of the Troy Theatre got the surprise of his life last week when store after store in the Collar City co-operated in connection with the run of "Peter Pan." As a rule storekeepers in Troy turn down all propositions of this sort.

The Carthage Opera House announces a new policy with amateur performances each Saturday night, along with pictures.

The meeting of the Albany Zone committee at the Hotel Ten Eyck, Albany, January 6, will be held at 1:30 o'clock. All exhibitors are invited.

Buffalo, N. Y.

After being closed a week, the New Ariel Theatre on High street, Buffalo, reopened on December 26 under the management of Billy West. The house has been leased by Dewey Michaels, who also operated the Plaza and Avon. The week's closing was necessary to adjust picture contracts and other business.

Exhibitors in Oswego, Onondaga, Cortland and Broome counties will be served in the future from the Buffalo office of Pathe. In the past they have obtained their shipments from the Albany office. The realignment of territory gives the Pathe office the same district as other Buffalo exchanges. Included in the new territory are such cities as Syracuse, Binghamton, Oswego and Cortland. The change was effective on December 28. Al Teschmacher, who resigned this week as Pathe booker to take over the Casino Theatre, Buffalo, has been succeeded by George Canty, former booker at the F. B. O. office.

One hundred dollars in prizes will be distributed at the Movie Ball to be staged by Buffalo Zone, M. P. T. O. of N. Y., in Elmwood Music Hall on January 29 to those who appear in the best impersonations of their favorite movie stars.

Vaudeville has been added to the program of the Andrews Theatre in Salamanca under a new policy announced by the Schine Theatrical Corporation. The Strand, also operated by the Schine company in the same town, has been reopened following closing for redecoration. Walter Trass is managing the Andrews and Hilmer. C. Johnson has taken charge of the Strand.

It is reported that the Majestic Theatre in Hornell, N. Y., owned by Fred Peters, is about to be acquired by the Comerford interests. The lease on the Legion Theatre in Wayland, N. Y., has been acquired from Walter E. Greenwood by Mr. Graham.

Victor G. Boehnlein, leader of the Strand Theatre orchestra in Auburn, N. Y., was found dead in his Garrett Hotel room on the afternoon of December 23. Death was due to heart trouble. Mr. Boehnlein is survived by a widow and six children. His home was in Rome, N. Y.

Rowdies Becoming a Nuisance in Many Massachusetts Houses

Theatre managers are having their troubles with rowdies not only in the Boston houses but in other cities as well. For creating a disturbance in the Rialto Theatre in Westfield a youth was arrested and fined $25. In the Dorchester and Fields Corner theatres in the Dorchester section of Boston and at other theatres in that area rowdies are attempting to virtually run the theatres. Putting them out or refusing their money apparently failing to check the trouble, arrests are to be made in the hope that this will quell the disturbers. Some Boston theatres have as many as three or four police officers to aid in maintaining order.

Articles of incorporation have been filed with the Secretary of State for the Bellevue Theatres, Inc., of Boston. The capital is given as $50,000. The incorporators named are E. Rollins, A. Lewis and V. Rollins.

The management of the Franklin Park Theatre in the Dorchester section of Boston was host to the employes at a Christmas party and supper after the night show on December 20. Chas. H. Williams is manager of the Franklin Park.

The difficulty in which the Colonial Theatre in Haverhill was involved with the I. A. T. S. E., Local 381, in regard to the payment of men for split weeks has been settled. The theatre management insisted that the union employes were entitled to only a half week's salary for three days. The settlement brings a $10 a day for split weeks, this sum being more than was offered by the management.

Jubilee and Anniversary Month was opened at the Strand Theatre in Lowell on December 28 by Managing Director David Perkins. A double feature program for the first four days of that week included "Three Women" and "In Hollywood with Potash and Perlmutter."

Charles H. Keeshin, aged 80, an old-time showman, died in Boston on December 8. Robert M. Sternburg, manager of Gordon's Scollay Square Olympia Theatre, took charge of the funeral arrangements. Mr. Keeshin had been advertising agent at the Olympia for five years.

Steve C. Hurley, who for several months has managed the Gordon Codman Square Theatre in the Dorchester section of Boston, has resigned. He was given a farewell party by members of the theatre staff and business men of Codman Square. They gave Mr. Hurley a gold watch and chain.

Norma Shearer and John Gilbert in "He Who Gets Slapped," a Metro-Goldwyn picture.

"He Who Gets Slapped" opened at the Tremont Temple in Boston on December 26 at 25, 50, 75 cents and $1. A soloist appears in a prologue and there is a good-sized orchestra. Engraved invitations from Marcus Loew were sent to Boston exhibitors with the date for the invitation performance set for Monday, December 29.

The Morton Theatre Company, Inc., of Boston has been granted articles of incorporation and propose to engage in entertainment enterprises. The capital is given as $100,000. The incorporators are Samuel Pinanski of Brookline, Jacob Lourie of Roxbury and Edward S. Canter of Newton.

A. Goodside, owner of the Bijou Theatre in Springfield, effected a splendid tie-up with the Springfield Daily Union in holding a theatre party for 1,000 Boy and Girl Scouts at a special performance of "America" preliminary to the opening of this feature on December 28.

The sudden death of Fred Wright, nationally known manager of the Selwyn Theatre in Boston, was announced on December 13 on a bulletin in front of one of the Boston newspaper offices. BUT—the following day Mr. Wright said there was no truth in the report. And—that's that.

The Greater Boston Theatre Managers' Association played host to more than 300 theatre folk in the Adams House, Boston, at a Christmas party at the conclusion of the Christmas night performances. Fred Stone wished everyone a Happy New Year. The committee in charge included: R. G. Larsen, general manager of the Keith Theatres; Victor J. Morris, manager of Marcus Loew's Orpheum Theatre; M. Douglas Flattery, Boston representative for Marcus Loew; Joseph H. Brennan, manager of Loew's State Theatre; Al Somerby, Charles Harris, James J. McGuiness and T. Francis Meagher.

"Peter Pan" was shown simultaneously the week of December 28 in Boston at the Fenway (Paramount) Theatre and the Modern and Beacon theatres.

Connecticut

Henry L. Needles, managing director of the Strand and Princess theatres in Hartford, was host to more than 1,000 children from nine Hartford homes and institutions at a Christmas party in the Strand. The feature was "The Lighthouse by the Sea." Bert Williams, conductor of the Strand orchestra, was leader of a 26-piece orchestra recruited from the pit aggregations in both the Strand and Princess.

Trouble with I. A. T. S. E. employes in the Stamford Theatre in Stamford, Conn., has been settled.

BESSIE EYTON

Cincinnati

I. Libson, who controls all of the first-run houses in the downtown district, and Ned Hastings, who holds down the managerial chair of Keith's Theatre, Cincinnati, were hosts to the Stage and Screen Scribes of America at a banquet given at Hotel Gibson on January 2.

A radical departure in amusement circles has been inaugurated at Iager, W. Va. The Iager Theatre has installed a complete skating rink, where patrons may skate after the pictures are shown. Admission to the theatre includes privileges of the rink.

Charlie Hines has purchased the McKinley Theatre, Niles, Ohio, from C. Gable, while at at Akron, Ohio, the Winter's Theatre has passed into possession of Charles Brill, who also operates the Miles Royal, Norka and Empress theatres. Brill has renamed his new house the Rex.

A new $100,000 theatre is being constructed at Lorain, Ohio, by August Ilg, whose house was condemned after the tornado last fall. Construction work is progressing and the tentative opening date is March 1. The house, which has not yet been named, will seat 700.

The Colonial, Dayton, Ohio, recently played a benefit performance for the Salvation Army, admission to the theatre being some article of food which the management turned over for relief to the poor. Large barrels and other similar receptables were placed in the lobby to collect the "admissions."

Jules Frankel, manager of Gifts Theatre, Cincinnati, is receiving the congratulations of his many friends. It's a girl.

The Northwest Watches Newman

M. H. NEWMAN, president of Newman Theatres, Inc., who on December 13 opened an entirely re-created American Theatre in Spokane, is an interesting figure in the life of showmanship, both on the legitimate stage and in motion pictures, in which he pioneered. Mr. Newman was born in Chicago, where he completed a course in the public schools and specialized in the study of bacteriology. Having always had a leaning toward the dramatic, he deserted the bacteria and joined Anna Eva Fay in her mind reading act. Later he appeared in Shakesperian roles, and achieved fame in Lincoln J. Carter's masterpiece, "The Fast Mail" and "Do We Live?" After twenty years of legitimate stage experience, he turned his attention to the new moving pictures, throwing himself whole heartedly into the new venture, and opened the first Pacific Coast exchange for feature pictures in San Francisco.

Still later Mr. Newman opened the first Americanized picture theatres in Shanghai. He grew to such popularity that he was commissioned in the Chinese army by Dr. Sun Yat Sen and as a colonel helped to overthrow the Manchu dynasty. For his gallantry he received the Manchu decoration, which is the highest of Chinese honors. Only two of these medals have ever been awarded, one to Mr. Newman, the second to a Major Robinson of the English diplomatic corps. After the Chinese War Mr. Newman sold pictures all over the Orient, and finally returning to the United States, became associated with Sid Grauman, boyhood chum, in the latter's theatrical activities.

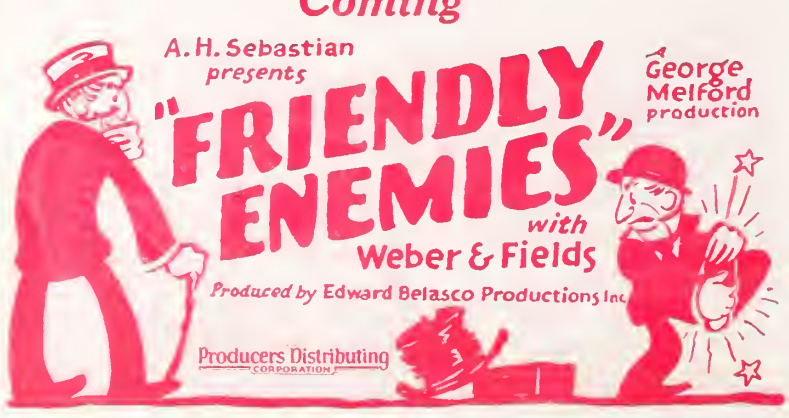
He was with Grauman when he opened the Egyptian Theatre and later the Metropolitan. Mr. Newman was manager of all the Grauman theatres in Los Angeles, and has the highest admiration for Mr. Grauman as an artist in showmanship. He is very much the artist himself and is admittedly a brilliant showman, with a keen sense of exploitation values and artistic presentations.

For his formal opening, Mr. Newman had his exterior illuminated with Kleig lights that blazed a trail from Riverside avenue to the American, where he played to two packed houses and turned over 500 away. The interior is warmly decorated in a color scheme wherein rich scarlets predominate. Huge floral offerings filled the foyer, and a wonderfully fine program pleased and gratified the audience.

In March, Mr. Newman will repeat something of this performance in Bellingham, where he has just signed a ten-year lease on the Grand Theatre. He will acquire still other houses, and it is predicted that he will blaze a spectacular trail in showmanship annals in the Pacific Northwest.

Washington, D. C.

The usual Christmas parties for the orphans of Washington were held by Harry M. Crandall at the various theatres operated by him in the District of Columbia during Christmas week, the juvenile inmates of all the eleemosynary institutions being transported to the nearest Crandall theatre, where a special program was arranged for their benefit. Each little guest of the Crandall organization was given gifts of toys, candy and other seasonable things. The various Crandall theaters also held Christmas parties for their youthful patrons, several thousand pounds of candy and a large volume of toys being distributed during the week to the boys and girls visiting the theatres.



Mildred Harris, who is Harry Carey's new leading lady, in "Beyond the Border," the first of a new series of Carey Westerns for release through Producers Distributing Corporation.

Kansas

Theatre construction in the Kansas City territory is showing a marked increase of late. A new house, which has not yet been named, is under construction at Forty-first street and Indiana avenue, Kansas City. The cost of the structure, which will be a suburban house, will be $25,000. The theatre is being built by a syndicate of persons, who purchased the land for $4,750. The theatre will have a 100-foot frontage on Indiana avenue.

The architectural firm of Earl Hawkins & Company of Springfield, Mo., has been retained by Frank E. Headley, who is planning the construction of one of the most expensive and largest picture and vaudeville theatres in Southwest Missouri. The theatre, which will cost more than $250,000, will be one of the most modern houses in the state, Mr. Headley asserts. The capacity will be 2,000. Contracts will be let early in the spring.

Other new theatre construction in the Kansas City territory: Weaubleau Theatre, Weaubleau, Mo.; Schools Theatre, Benton, Kans.; Opera House, Amity, Mo.; Winston Theatre, Winston, Mo.; I. O. O. F. Hall, Wheatland, Mo.

The Grand Theatre, Iola, Kans., owned by E. Van Hyning, was completely destroyed by fire, the loss being estimated at $75,000. The fire followed a gas explosion, the origin of which was undetermined.

Frank L. Newman, owner of the Newman Theatre, Kansas City, is losing no time in exploiting the fact that Mrs. Wallace Reid will appear in conjunction with the showing of "Broken Laws" at the Newman Theatre at an early date. She will come to Kansas City direct from Los Angeles and probably will be accompanied by her two children, Wally Reid, Jr., and Betty.

Among the out-of-town exhibitors in the Kansas City market this week were: W. D. Fite, Iris, El Dorado, Kans.; Herb Thatcher, Lyric, Abeline, Kans.; F. G. Weary, Farris Theatre, Richmond, Mo.; Charles Sears, Star, Nevada, Mo.; C. M. Pattee, Pattee Theatre, Lawrence, Kans.; C. M. Shanberg, Midland Circuit, Hutchinson, Kans.

The Wonderland Theatre, Wheeling, Mo., has been sold by Harley E. House to L. W. Wingfield, who also operates the Opera House at Moorsville, Mo.

U. C. Theatre, Berkeley, Cal., Reopened After Redecoration

The U. C. Theatre at Berkeley, Cal., one of San Francisco's most important east-bay suburbs, was re-opened on the evening of December 19 after having been closed for remodeling, redecorating and refurnishing. In its new form it resembles the old theatre but little and is acclaimed as being one of the most beautiful places of amusement in the state. As a California institution, the Spanish motif chosen for the decorations is most appropriate. The former bare sidewalls now carry paintings of Spanish scenes, each picture standing above a narrow balcony from which concealed lights shed a warm glok.

The old lighting facilities have been entirely done away with and in their place are huge chandeliers with lights of the semi-indirect type. Glass partitions, hung with draperies, separate the auditorium from the foyer and assist in regulating the ventilation. Eight rows of chairs at the rear have been removed and overstuffed loge chairs have been installed in their place, this being the first time that this house has had reserved seats. New carpeting has been installed throughout the house and the entrance lobby is now carpeted, in place of the former hard tile floor. This lobby has a new ceiling and new decorations. The heating and ventilating system has been overhauled, the operating room rewired and new equipment installed, and the house thoroughly modernized.

The U. C. Theatre is operated under the direction of West Coast Theatres, Inc., and is under the direct management of Frank C. Burhans. Among the members of this organization and friends who attended the opening were M. Gore, Los Angeles; A. M. Bowles, Charles Thall, Robert Harvey, M. Naify, Robert McNeil, E. H. Emmick, Elmer Hanks, San Francisco, and Clem Pope, Oakland. The opening bill included Harold Lloyd in "Hot Water" and a Prizma production.

The California Theatre, San Francisco, gave its third annual Christmas party to youngsters on the morning of December 19, in cooperation with Roos Bros. Long before the doors opened a line was formed, and at one time this was almost three blocks in length. Although the capacity of the house is but 2,400, the show was witnessed by 1,000 mothers and 4,000 kiddies, each seat accommodating two or three. Chief of police Dan O'Brien was the head usher, so there were no complaints made on the score of over-crowding. Santa Claus was present in person, there was a gift for everyone and a great time was had by all. Manager Nat Holt and Director of Publicity Charles Kurtzman had the assistance of N. L. Borgeault, manager of Roos Bros., in arranging the affair. The program included "The Man Who Smiles," a cowboy drama, with the comedy offerings, "Alice in Dutch," "The Sundown Limited," "The Reel Virginian" and "Felix in Hollywood."

Under the direction of Manager R. R. Boomer a special Kiddies Show was offered at the Cameo Theatre, San Francisco, during Christmas week, with diminutive dancers appearing in a novel stage offering.

Every member of the staff of every theatre conducted by West Coast Theatres, Inc., from ushers to managers, received a Christmas check from the home office, the amount varying with their salary.

When A. M. Bowles, general manager of West Coast Theatres, Inc., Northern California Division, entered the Warfield Theatre one morning just before Christmas to witness the stage rehearsal, he found the entire staff assembled and singing "For He's a Jolly Good Fellow." Before he realized that this was not a part of the regular performance, he was taken to the stage and presented with a fine Howard watch, the gift of employes. A couple of days later he was enticed to Marquard's cafe, where twenty-two theatre managers and members of the San Francisco office staff were gathered, and presented with a 120-piece silver set.

Sid Grauman of Los Angeles was a visitor at San Francisco shortly before Christmas, coming up to attend the Jungle Movie Ball of H. A. Snow. He stated that the suburban city of Oakland had been selected as one of the twenty cities in the United States for a chain of coast-to-coast theatres to be backed by Joseph M. Schenck and himself.

The Haight Theatre, San Francisco, owned by William S. Godfrey, Jr., and Harry Sack, was remodeled just before Christmas and closed for a short period.

H. M. S. Kendrick, formerly manager of the Fox-Oakland Theatre, has been transferred to Denver, Col., where he will have charge of the Fox houses maintained there.

The Golden State Theatre & Realty Company has arranged to open offices at 86 Golden Gate avenue, San Francisco.

George Mann, who conducts several theatres in the northern part of the state and in Oregon, has arranged to build a house at Ferndale, Cal. He recently left his San Francisco headquarters on a trip to Eureka.

Ed Sullivan, formerly of the Capitol Theatre, Sacramento, Cal., has been made assistant manager of the new Senator Theatre of that city.

James Wood of Redding, Cal., plans the opening of another house in that city.

The Fern Theatre has been opened at Elmhurst, Cal., by Jack O'Neill.

Pittsburgh

The Browarsky Brothers, owners of the Hippodrome and Variety theatres on the North Side, Pittsburgh, gave the neighborhood kiddies a treat on Christmas afternoon at both theatres. The houses were packed with children and the event was a great success. At each theatre a man impersonated Santa Claus in costume and gave to each child a half-pound box of chocolate candy. Managing Director Larry Jacobs supervised the Yuletide decorations at both theatres.

Pat Bayer of the Family Theatre, St. Marys, gave the kiddies in the town a Christmas treat. His endeavor was very much similar to that of the Browarsky Brothers. Pat had his treat on Saturday, December 13, and the local Moose lodge thought so well of it that they duplicated the event in their lodge rooms several days later.

A. H. Geisler, who recently sold the Grandview Theatre in Duquesne Heights, Pittsburgh, has purchased the Jewel Theatre, Spring Garden avenue, North Side, from M. F. Tyson and took charge the first of the year. Tyson told a World representative that he is undecided as to his future plans, but expects nevertheless to be in the market for another picture theatre soon.

O. M. White has opened his new Euphemian Theatre at Buckhannon, W. Va. The new house boasts a high-class orchestra.

The Capitol Amusement Company, Charleston, W. Va., has been granted a charter by the Secretary of State. It was authorized to issue $50,000 capital stock. Charles Middelburg, D. C. Shiarella and C. K. Thomas, all of Charleston, and F. Fidelburg and A. B. Hyman of Huntington were named incorporators.

Canada

Announcement is made of the appointment of George Stroud of Hamilton, Ontario, as general manager of theatres in the Hamilton district for Famous Players Canadian Corporation, the appointment being made by Clarence Robson of Toronto, director of theatres in Eastern Canada for Famous Players. Mr. Stroud has direct charge of three Hamilton houses, the Pantages, Capitol and Savoy. The Savoy policy is to present special features twice daily, with special music and prologues at advanced prices.

Walter F. Davis, manager of the Metropolitan Theatre, Winnipeg, Manitoba, provided a special Christmas gift in the form of a neat book of admission tickets for the theatre, which he sold at regular prices to those desiring to give them to relatives or friends. A fairly large number of the books were disposed of during the Christmas season.

The Star Theatre at St. Thomas, Ontario, has a new owner in Mr. Swaneck of the Princess Theatre, Hamilton, Ontario. Dr. W. A. Blake is associated with Mr. Swaneck in the enterprise and Ernie L. Sanders is the manager of the Star. The Star was leased for many years by T. Minshall.

Additions to Cast

Additions to the cast of "Beyond the Border," the first of the new series of Harry Carey pictures, were made this week with the signing of Tom Santchi, William Scott and Jack Richardson. Mildred Harris, who has just finished work in First National's "Frivolous Sal," has been cast for the leading feminine role.

Indiana

The reopening of the Liberty Theatre, Terre Haute, was celebrated along with Christmas by the Terre Haute theatregoers. After having been closed for ten days for redecorating and remodeling, the theatre opened its doors on Christmas afternoon to a special matinee for 3,000 poor children of the city, who were guests of Ross Garver, manager of the Wabash Theatres Corporation, and later was opened to the general public.

Special films included both comic and educational reels and delighted the youngsters. Several vaudeville teams playing at the Indiana Theatre also performed at the Liberty for the children. The feature photoplay for the regular patrons was "So This Is Marriage." The theatre has been made spick and span throughout. J. C. Wodetsky is the new manager.

"Potato, please," will be the ticket-taker's greeting at various neighborhood picture theatres in Indianapolis during the holidays, at matinees to be given under the ausplees of the Indianapolis Indorsers of Photoplays. The showings during the holidays are an annual project of the indorsers and the proceeds are given to the needy. Announcement has been made that any kind of staple food will be accepted as admission.

Opportunity knocks at least once a year at the door of employes of the Circle Theatre, Indianapolis, for every Christmas they give a party and strut their own stuff after watching others for a twelvemonth. The annual affair took place Monday night after the evening performance and was most enjoyable. For a diversion there was the overture, played by the Circle orchestra, Bakeleinikoff conducting, but it was not an overture of the sort the public is accustomed to hear. This was followed by several tunes played by the ushers' own jazz band, and a short vaudeville skit by two of the ushers. Then the entire audience of employes sang "It Ain't Goin' to Rain No Mo'," to which rollicking tune were set lyrics telling about the private lives of some of the employes. Ace Berry, genial manager, then offered an insight into a directors' meeting in which he got the worst of it; there was a pictureless movie whose story consisted solely of subtitles, more music by the orchestra and a Christmas tree, on which were gifts for all members of the organization. 'Twas a real party.

Screams of joy greeted "Little Robinson Crusoe" on Christmas morning at the Circle Theatre, Indianapolis, when approximately 2,000 orphans and poor children gathered for the annual Christmas party given for them by the Circle management and the Indianapolis lodge of Elks. Fruits, candy and toys were distributed.

Chicago Picture Circuits Pay Employes Large Cash Bonuses

Christmas cheer among the employes of the various picture theatres in Chicago was plentiful, and the smiling faces that greeted the patrons were not only caused by the spirit of the day but by the fact that most of them had received cash from the theatre owners that in some cases was as much as a week's salary. Lubliner & Trinz gave each employe a week's pay for the holidays, the Aschers gave the managers a $1,500 insurance policy and cash to other employes, and the managers in turn gave a fine traveling bag to Harry, Max and Nate Ascher and to H. L. Newhafer, G. M. Greenebaum and A. L. Mayer, home office executives of the organization.

Balaban and Katz gave gold pieces to all employes, while Jones, Linick & Schaefer gave the older employes of the organization cash bonuses and some of the younger ones received better positions with larger salaries. The McVickers Theatre management gave each one, from janitor to manager, a week's salary. Other circuits gave cash to their employes, so, taking everything into consideration, it was a real Christmas for the film folks.

The growth in membership of the Illinois Motion Picture Theatre Owners goes right along under the direction of Joseph Hopp, who is personally conducting the membership drive. The past week the following were enrolled: C. A. Garard, Woodbine Theatre, Carthage; Don W. Wright, Lawford Theatre, Havana; William A. Clark, Castle Theatre, Havana; Rodmon Grigsby, Grand Theatre, Blandisville; A. C. King, Grand Theatre, El Paso; Bert Norton, Kozy Theatre, Eureka.

Manager Sam Trinz of the State Theatre, Chicago, has arranged a tie-up with the Sears-Roebuck radio broadcasting station, WLS, so that the musical selections of the house are broadcast each week to many thousands in this territory. Assistant Manager Herman Stern reported the reservations for the special midnight New Year's show at the house as the largest in its history.

Rodmon Grigsby, an enterprising young man, has under construction at Blandisville a modern theatre with about 400 seats. Mr. Grigsby hopes to have the house in operation before March 1. It will be named the Grand.

"The Silent Accuser" finds his man, a Metro-Goldwyn picture.

W. S. Butterfield, president of the Bijou Theatrical Circuit, has approved plans submitted by John Eberson, architect, for the building of a theatre in Flint. The house will be known as the Capitol. Work will commence about March 1 and it is hoped to have it completed by October 1. The investment will be $1,000,000.

The Chicago Civic Opera Company has just leased the Auditorium Theatre property to the Knickerbocker Theatre Company, beginning in 1927 for the non-opera months at a rent of $12,000 monthly during the occupancy. The lease is for February, March, April, September, half of May and parts of October and January. The lessee is to occupy the structure during June, July and August if possible.

Frank McGregor now is manager of the Park Ridge Theatre at Park Ridge, Ill. He put over a New Year's midnight show for an opening feature. Jack Lynch is looking after the management of the York Theatre at Elmhurst, Ill.

Charles E. Frizell, formerly in charge of the Auditorium Theatre, Chicago, died at Denver last week after an extended illness. His many friends in the trade mourn his passing. He is survived by two sons.

The Garden Theatre Corporation at Harvey, Ill., has surrendered its charter to the secretary of state and retired from business.

Charles H. Darrall has been transferred as manager from the Frolic Theatre of the Ascher Circuit, at 55th and Ellis avenue, Chicago, to the West Englewood Theatre. He is succeeded by Bennie Cohn, who has been in charge of the West Englewood.

Joe Callison has been made manager of the Irving Theatre, Chicago. He has added the Beckman orchestra to the program of the 1,400-seat house and will feature music with picture programs in the future.

Manager Claggett of the Calo Theatre, Chicago, put over a big Christmas matinee with the youngsters in the neighborhood of the house and had a real Santa Claus, who gave them toys and good things to eat.

General Manager Emil Stern of Lubliner & Trinz was a New York visitor last week. He has completely recovered from his recent illness and is hard at work again.

Work of redecorating and refurnishing the 1,600-seat Iris Theatre at 5747 West Chicago avenue, Chicago, at a cost of over $100,000 was completed last week, and in honor of the occasion Manager Scott celebrated the opening week with an elaborate program of pictures and music.

W. K. Hollander, of Balaban & Katz, says that the past year has been the best in the history of the organization. Most of the pictures went over well and the average was up to expectations. B. & K. plan to open the new Uptown Theatre, now going up at Lawrence and Broadway, early in the fall, and hope to open the new house the Masons are building on Randolph street in the new Masonic building late this year. There is also a possibility that the new house to be erected on Howard street will be ready this year. Plans for the new movie house to be erected in Detroit are rapidly being worked out.

Manager Phil Solomon of the Elland Tee Theatre on Devon street, Chicago, is all smiles these days, as the improvements in the house have been completed. With a nifty looking foyer to attract the passing crowds, he is doing a good business.

Work on Williams Pearl's new theatre in Highland Park, Ill., is under way. He expects to have the house ready for opening about May 15. It will seat 1,400. Mr. Pearl owns and operates the Pearl Theatre in Highland Park.

Simansky & Miller have appointed A. Hicks manager of their Windsor Theatre at 433 North Laramie avenue, Chicago. Mr. Hicks is well known both as a theatre manager and exploiteer.

A. B. Clark has purchased the Elmwood Theatre at Oak Park, Ill., from Tony Sabick.

Wehrenberg Opens New Theatre in St. Louis; Plans Another

Fred Wehrenberg's beautiful new Michigan Theatre, Michigan and Robert avenues, St. Louis, Mo., opened for the first time on Christmas Day. It played to fine business despite the severe cold. The Michigan is the newest and perhaps the finest of the group of splendid neighborhood picture palaces owned by Wehrenberg. His other houses include the Melba, Cherokee, Ivory, Marguerite, Lydell and Manion's Park Summer Theatre. In addition, Wehrenberg has plans prepared for a 2,000-seat house to be erected in the near future on Grand boulevard near Meramec street. He started his motion picture career in 1908 with a tent show at 3353 South Jefferson avenue. Today he is regarded as one of the most successful of the independent exhibitors of the Central West. He is vice-president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of St. Louis and prominent in the affairs of the Eastern Missouri and Southern Illinois exhibitors' organization.

Lou Menges, who has been away from his State Theatre, East St. Louis, Ill., for several weeks because of an attack of intestinal trouble, paid his first visit to the St. Louis exchanges in more than two months the past week.

Joe Greene has joined the St. Louis Amusement Company's staff, taking over the management of the Lafayette Theatre. He comes from the Pert Theatre, Gillespie, Ill., where he showed real showmanship.

The Famous Theatre on Franklin avenue has been closed. Reuben Spivak, who also owns the Chouteau, was operating the Franklin avenue show.

Fred Wehrenberg has reopened the Lydell Theatre in South St. Louis. His Marguerite on Virgin avenue has been closed until the warm weather.

The Palace Theatre, Rector, Ark., has been taken under lease by R. J. Yancy. Macon & Wall own the Palace.

The Alton Theatre, Alton, Mo., has reopened.

Guy M. Wampler is again operating the Royal Theatre, Palestine, Ill.

It is reported that Fred Trosper has taken over the Photo Play Theatre, Bluffs, Ill.

Mrs. J. Lamb has purchased the Strand Theatre, Cadiz, Ky.

Robert Wilborn is the new owner of the Strand Theatre, Marion, Ky.

A. M. Housner has purchased the American, Cherry Valley, Ark.

Theatres closed temporarily include: J. A. Berry Theatre, Blytheville, Ark.; Eugene Theatre, Eugene, Mo.; Kozy Theatre, Dresden, Tenn.; Grand Theatre, Frankfort Heights, Ill.; Star Theatre, Stoutsville, Mo.; Electric Theatre, Tuscumbia, Mo.; Puritan Opera House, West Salem, Ill.

James Collier has taken over the Opera House at Portageville, Mo., operated by the late Howard Brown.

Visitors of the week included: Oscar Wesley, Gillespie, Ill.; S. Roma, Benld, Ill.; Bill Karstetter, Columbia, Mo.; J. R. Galvin, Washington, Mo., and Albert Richards, Witt, Ill.

The Southwest

John Fanning has taken over the management of the Judia Theatre at Cisco, Texas, and will remodel it.

Grover C. Campbell of Denton, Texas, is reported to have purchased the Connelle Theatre at Eastland, Texas.

The Star Theatre at Eagle Pass, Texas, which has been closed for some time, has reopened with Franklin Walker as manager.

Brady & Omhart have opened their new Palace Theatre at San Benito, Texas. The new theatre seats 600.

The new Lyric Theatre at Ennis, Texas, expects to open February 1. A $7,500 orchestral organ and first-class equipment will be installed.

Taft and Smith are remodeling their Liberty Theatre at Carter, Okla.

T. D. Sanders has purchased the Cozy Theatre at Lometa, Texas.

T. H. Coyle is remodeling his Crystal Theatre at Roosevelt, Okla.

Omaha

Defective wiring caused a fire recently in the Opera House at Silver City, Ia., with a damage to the amount of $1,000.

What was once the old Rialto Theatre at Davenport, Ia., is now opened as the Liberty Theatre under the management of Thomas Bellamy and Max Rapp.

The Plainview News, Plainview, Neb., reports the sale of the Plainview Theatre building to Mr. Hoffman, who will continue it as a picture show house.

Among the out-of-town exhibitors in Omaha recently were: F. M. Honey, formerly of the Moon at Tecumseh, Neb.; A. Burrus, Lyric Theatre, Crete, Neb.; H. H. Cruickshank, Diamond Theatre, Wakefield, Neb.; M. Biemond, Liberty Theatre, Loup City, Neb.; Mabel Hockenberry, Liberty Theatre, Oakland, Ia.; E. P. Smith, Strand Theatre, Charlton, Ia.; M. H. Garvin, Crescent Theatre, Holdredge, Neb.; R. W. Small, Markel Amusement Company, Wymore, Neb.

Tarbell Returns

E. F. Tarbell has just taken charge of the Vitagraph branch office in Omaha as Manager, an announcement from Vitagraph's general offices says. The appointment marks Mr. Tarbell's return to this company after several months with another organization. In his previous connection with Vitagraph Mr. Tarbell was successively a salesman on the Pittsburgh staff, branch manager at Chicago and a special representative.

A DEPARTMENT FOR THE INFORMATION OF EXHIBITORS

EDITED BY A. VAN BUREN POWELL

Associated Exhibitors

(Includes Selznick)

UNSEEN HANDS. Star, Wallace Beery. Now the screen's most famous villain, Wallace Beery in his greatest role, supported by Cleo Madison and Joseph Dowling. William Noble, Rialto Theatre, Oklahoma City, Oklahoma.

WHEN A GIRL LOVES. (5,867 feet). Star cast. Very good picture that did a little above average business. Tone good. Sunday, yes. Good audience appeal. All classes, city of 14,000. Admission 10-35, 10-25. E. W. Collins, Grand and Liberty theatres (500-700 seats), Jonesboro, Arkansas.

WOMAN TO WOMAN. (6,994 feet). Star, Betty Compson. Have run and saw a lot of Compsons but this is the best she has ever made. Don't pay too much like I have done. Tone good. Sunday, no. Good audience appeal. All classes, town of 6,000. Admission 10-25. R. L. Cochran, Judia Theatre (402 seats), Cisco, Texas.

YANKEE CONSUL. (6,148 feet). Star, Douglas MacLean. Oh, boy, this had everything in it. Photography, action, thrills, good, clean entertainment. Tone good. Sunday, yes. Audience appeal one hundred per cent. Business and farming class, town of 2,200. Admission 10-25. A. F. Jenkins, Community Theatre, David City, Nebraska.

YANKEE CONSUL. (6,148 feet). Star, Douglas MacLean. A good comedy, but it failed to draw for me. We fell below average business. The picture is good, but we failed to make any money with it. Tone good. Good audience appeal. Town and rural class, town of 2,500. Admission 10-25. S. H. Rich, Rich Theatre (450 seats), Montpelier, Idaho.

F. B. O.

CAN A WOMAN LOVE TWICE. (6,100 feet). Star, Ethel Clayton. An old show, but we received a good print and it pleased all who saw it. Did not draw well on account of the cold weather, but was no fault of the picture. All who have not played it should jump on it. Tone, okay. Sunday, yes. Small town closs town of 3,300. Admission 15-30. P. L. Vann, Opera House Theatre (600 seats), Greenville, Alabama.

CRASHING THROUGH. (6 reels). Star, Harry Carey. Have seen worse westerns and some better ones. Worked well with a gang that hadn't seen a western for two months. Fair attendance with average moral tone. Admission 20-30. Henry W. Nauman, Moose Theatre, Elizabethtown, Pennsylvania.

LIGHTS OUT. (6,938 feet). Star cast. Sort of a mystery comedy drama. Only fair picture but got by on Saturday night with only a few kicks. Pleased on an average fifty fifty. Fair tone. Very good attendance. All classes town of 1,000. Admission 10-20. A. E. Rogers, Temple Theatre (250 seats), Dexter, New York.

LULLABY. (7,179 feet). Star, Jane Novak. Would class this as a good picture with drawing power if put over right. Can be bought right. F. B. O. are a nice bunch to do business with. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Good audience appeal. General class town of 3,600. Admission 10-20. William A. Clark, Sr., Castle Theatre (400 seats), Havana, Illinois.

MASK OF LOPEZ. (4,900 feet). Star, Fred Thomson. Fred Thomson can take his place with any of the western stars. There is plenty of comedy as well as action in this picture. The horse, Silver King, is a marvelous animal. Tone good. Sunday, yes. Audience appeal, went big. Working class, city of 100,000. Admission 10-15-20. W. C. Budge, Comedy Theatre (275 seats), Jamaica, New York.

These dependable tips come from exhibitors who tell the truth about pictures to help you book your program intelligently. "It is my utmost desire to serve my fellow man," is their motto.

Use the tips; follow the advice of exhibitors who agree with your experience on pictures you both have run.

NORTH OF NEVADA. (5,000 feet). Star, Fred Thomson. A very good western picture. I have used only two of the Thomson series but I am very well pleased with them. Hope the rest are just as good. Tone good. Hardly suitable for Sunday. Good audience appeal. Town and country class, town of 1,800. Admission 10-25. Herbert Tapp, Hippodrome Theatre (460 seats), Sheridan, Indiana.

ON TIME. (6,030 feet). Star, Richard Talmadge. Showed it three nights. Bad weather stopped the crowd. It is a comedy-thriller drama. Audience appeal ninety-five per cent. This one ends his pictures for a while. Showed all of his; can't go wrong on buying all of his. Admission 15-30. Robert W. Hines, Loyalton, South Dakota.

SILENT STRANGER. (5 reels). Star, Fred Thomson. About on an average with the rest of his pictures. As good a series of westerns as there are on the market today. Tone okay. Sunday, yes. Good audience appeal. Mixed class, town of 3,000. Admission 20-25. T. L. Barnett, Finn's Theatre (600 seats), Jewett City, Connecticut.

SPIRIT OF THE U. S. A. (8,312 feet). Star cast. A real show. It's a picture you can boost to every member of the family. Full of life and clean as a whistle. Good audience appeal. Sunday, yes. Admission 10-20.. R. A. Preuss, Arvada Theatre, Arvada, Colorado.

SPIRIT OF THE U. S. A. (8,312 feet). Star, Johnny Walker. A fairly good picture but too old to be of any appeal. I mean the story is too old. Tone good. Sunday, yes. Good audience appeal. Town and country class, town of 1,800. Admission 10-25. Herbert Tapp, Hippodrome Theatre (460 seats), Sheridan, Indiana.

WOMAN WHO SINNED. (6,500 feet). Star, Mae Busch. A splendid Sunday show. Also good for any program where they enjoy a good story. We had several compliments on this one. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Good audience appeal. General class town of 3,600. Admission 10-20. William A. Clark, Castle Theatre (400 seats), Havana, Illinois.

First National

BOB HAMPTON OF PLACER. Star cast. A good picture with plenty of action that pleased here. Liked better than the picture "Covered Wagon," by those that had seen it. A good picture. Play it. Tone, fair. Not suitable for Sunday. Good audience appeal. Farm and small town class. Admission 10-20. W. F. Denney, Electric Theatre (250 seats), Lowry City, Missouri.

ENCHANTED COTTAGE. (7,120 feet). Star, Richard Barthelmess. Poorest feature from entertainment standpoint I ever ran. Part left and rest razzed it. Terrible stuff. Poor tone. Not suitable for Sunday. Rotten audience appeal. Family and student class town of 4,000. Admission 10-25. R. J. Relf, Star Theatre (600 seats), Decorah, Iowa.

ETERNAL CITY. (7,800 feet). Star cast. Very fine picture that all should see. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Fine audience appeal. Tourist class town of 2,400. Admission 15-25. S. L. Taylor, Kozy Theatre (250 seats), Pass Christian, Mississippi.

ETERNAL CITY. (7,800 feet). Star cast. A good picture spoiled by too much crying and kissing by Bert Lytell. Once more, why will they let them do it. Tone, fair. Sunday, yes. Audience appeal, mostly good. Family and student class town of 4,000. Admission 10-25. R. J. Relf, Star Theatre (600 seats), Decorah, Iowa.

FLIRTING WITH LOVE. (6,926 feet). Star, Colleen Moore. The poorest thing she ever did. Can see no good excuse for placing this wonderful little star in a picture like this. A few in a bunch and back to the farm for Colleen. So watch your step little girl, demand stories and directors. Tone, poor. Not suitable for Sunday. Poor audience appeal. Best class town of 8,000. Admission 10-30. Ned Pedigo, Pollard Theatre, Guthrie, Oklahoma.

FLOWING GOLD. (8,005 feet). Star, Anna Q. Nilsson. Good thrilling melodrama will please seventy-five per cent. Sills is the dominating figure all the way. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Good audience appeal. Residential and factory class town of 7,000. Admission 15-25. H. W. Gillespie, St. Croix Opera House (800 seats), Calais, Maine.

LILLIES OF THE FIELD. (8,500 feet). Star, Corinne Griffith. A good picture of its type but not a small town show. A couple of raw spots. Tone, doubtful. Sunday, no.

Fair audience appeal. Family and student class town of 4,000. Admission 10-25. R. J. Relf, Star Theatre (600 seats), Decorah, Iowa.

MEANEST MAN IN THE WORLD. (6,500 feet). Star, Bert Lytell. A good one night program picture. Nothing special to recommend it. Tone, okay. Sunday, yes. Fair audience appeal. Family and student class town of 4,000. Admission 10-25. R. J. Relf, Star Theatre (600 seats), Decorah, Iowa.

OLE SWIMMING HOLE. Star, Charles Ray. Good hick story. Worth seeing. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Good audience appeal. Farmers and merchants town of 1,650. Mrs. J. B. Travelle, Elite Theatre, Placerville, California.

OLIVER TWIST. (7,000 feet). Star, Jackie Coogan. To my estimation I think this is the poorest of Jackie's pictures, yet it seemed to please about eighty per cent. because it was Jackie. Tone, fair. Sunday, yes. Good attendance. All classes town of 1,000. Admission 10-20. A. E. Rogers, Temple Theatre (250 seats), Dexter, New York.

PERFECT FLAPPER. (7,000 feet). Star, Colleen Moore. Book this picture because it will make you money. Good for any class of people, young and old. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Audience appeal, okay. All classes town of 1,200. Admission 25-50. Palace Theatre (800 seats), Blackwell, Oklahoma.

WHITE MOTH. (6,550 feet). Star, Barbara LaMarr. Here is one that you cannot go wrong on. Pleased everyone and heard many compliments. Miss LaMarr is getting to be a favorite here. A. Mitchell, Dixie Theatre, Russellville, Kentucky.

WHITE MOTH. (6,550 feet). Star, Barbara LaMarr. Just a little too peppy for the old folks. A regular battery charger that made a big hit with the rounders. If we were many years younger probably we would have praised it to the sky. No tone. Sunday, as well as any day. Appeals to live ones. Society class, city of 10,000. Admission 10-20. Ned Pedigo, Pollard Theatre (800 seats), Guthrie, Oklahoma.

WOMAN ON THE JURY. (7,331 feet). Star, Sylvia Breamer. Boys, here is one fine picture and what a cast! No less than ten stars and the story is so absorbing that you think that you are witnessing a real chapter from life. Tone okay. Sunday, yes. Good audience appeal. Mixed class, town of 3,000. Admission 20-25. T. L. Barnett, Finn's Theatre (600 seats), Jewett City, Connecticut.

Fox

BLIZZARD. (5,890 feet). Star cast. Did not want this picture; forced to play it to get pictures I did want. Poor entertainment value. Unknown cast. Reindeer stampede the only thing good about it. Tone, good. Sunday, maybe. Very poor audience appeal. Farmers and merchants town of 1,650. Mrs. J. B. Travelle, Elite Theatre, Placerville. California.

CIRCUS COWBOY. (6,400 feet). Star, Buck Jones. This is good. Everybody pleased, but just half a crowd. Roads are terrible. Tone, good. Sunday, no. Audience appeal, one hundred per cent. Business class and farmers town of 2,200. Admission 10-25. A. F. Jenkins, Community Theatre, David City, Nebraska.

Between Ourselves

A get-together place where we can talk things over

Scan the chatty, brotherly-help letters that I am proud to print this week.

They come from brother exhibitors—one from "across the pond"—and they show the friendly spirit that keeps growing among our good "Gang."

Let's hear from more of you—fellows, a letter on a pertinent exhibitor topic is always welcome to this department. Dependable tips are the first consideration, naturally; but letters that foster the spirit of good will, that give help to others, that bring the "Gang" into that talk-it-over harmony—these are well worth writing and mighty well worth reading.

VAN.

FIFTH HORSEMAN. Star cast. Poor picture. That's all. All classes town of 1,200. Admission 25-50. Palace Theatre, Blackwell, Oklahoma.

HEART BUSTER. (4,500 feet). Star, Tom Mix. Pretty good Mix picture, but mostly comedy. Had very little business for some reason. Tone, good. All classes, but white only. Admission 10-20-25. W. H. Odom, Pastime Theatre (250 seats), Sandersville, Georgia.

IF WINTER COMES. (10 reels). Star cast. A real special for us, picture great. Did not tire. Held attention of everyone for entire show. Worthy of any house, bar none. Good film. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Audience appeal, one hundred per cent. All classes town of 2,800. Admission 15-25. D. W. Strayer, Mt. Joy Theatre (250 seats), Mt. Joy, Peennsylvania.

IT IS THE LAW. (6,000 feet). Star cast. This picture was a pleasant surprise to me. Got it on short notice. Ran it on bad days. Not much business, but people raved about it. Had more favorable comments than on any picture in months. Tone, okay. Sunday, okay. Good audience appeal. All classes town of 3,000. Admission 10-30. M. W. Larmour, National Theatre (450 seats), Graham, Texas.

JUST OFF BROADWAY. (6,555 feet). Star, John Gilbert. A very good picture. One of those mysterious kind. Don't be afraid of it if you have it booked, but, of course, it is no special. Will hold for one night only. Tone, good. Sunday, no. Audience appeal, eighty per cent. All classes town of 2,800. Admission 15-25. David W. Strayer. Mt. Joy Theatre (250 Seats), Mt. Joy, Pennsylvania.

KENTUCKY DAYS. (5 reels). Star, Dustin Farnum. Fair program picture, but no business. Print a little cut short, which hurt our business on Saturday some. Fair tone. Not suitable for Sunday. All classes, but white only. Admission 10-20-25. W. H. Odom, Pastime Theatre (250 seats), Sandersville, Georgia.

MILE A MINUTE ROMEO. (4,800 feet). Star, Tom Mix. A good picture, with Tom doing his best, but the print was bad, which ruined the whole show, after arriving too late for a matinee. Tone, okay. Sunday, yes. Small town class town of 3,300. Admission 15-30. P. L. Vann, Opera House (600 seats). Greenville, Alabama.

NO MOTHER TO GUIDE HER. (7 reels). Star cast. A good program picture, worth seeing, but not a special. Rental paid entirely too high. Lost money on this account. Tone good. Sunday, yes. Good audience appeal. Farmers and merchants, town of 1,650. Mrs. J. B. Travelle, Elite Theatre, Placerville, California.

NORTH OF HUDSON BAY. (6 reels). Star, Tom Mix. Very beautiful scenery, also lots of action. Whenever I want to make a little money all I have to do is book Tom Mix. Tone okay. Small town and rural class, town of 800. Admission 15-30. C. O. Christ, Opera House (350 seats), Elgin, Iowa.

NORTH OF HUDSON BAY. (6 reels). Star, Tom Mix. A fair picture that reached me short about five hundred feet on the film. This is stealing when an exchange sends out prints that have been cut up this way, but what can we do? Don't buy Fox unless you get them new, as they will ship you rotten prints every time. I warn you from experience. Fair audience appeal. Small town class town of 5,000. Admission 10-30. L. O. Davis, Virginia Theatre (700 seats), Hazard. Kentucky.

NOT A DRUM WAS HEARD. (4,823 feet). Star, Buck Jones. Nothing extra but pleased, as no kick was heard. Tone good. Sunday, yes. Audience appeal forty per cent. Factory class, town of 2,800. Admission 15-25. D. W. Strayer, Mt. Joy Theatre (250 seats), Mt. Joy, Pennsylvania.

NOT A DRUM WAS HEARD. (4,823 feet). Star, Buck Jones. Our patrons enjoyed this picture, judging from the way it held them. The title means nothing, so we used big newspaper space. Tone okay. Sunday, yes. Good audience appeal. Town and rural class, town of 1,028. Admission 10-25. W. C. Geer, Princess Theatre (175 seats), Vermont, Illinois.

SHADOWS OF THE EAST. (5,874 feet). Star cast. A very good picture in every way. Although a special, I bought it as a program picture and did a good business. Tone okay. Sunday, yes. Audience appeal eighty per cent. Small town and rural class, town of 800. Admission 15-30. C. O. Christ, Opera House (350 seats), Elgin, Iowa.

SILENT COMMAND. Star cast. Very fine picture. We had strong opposition on this picture and it held up satisfactorily. Tone good. Good audience appeal. Town and rural class, town of 2,500. Admission 10-25. S. H. Rich, Rich Theatre (450 seats), Montpelier, Idaho.

SILENT COMMAND. Star, Edmund Lowe. Good enough for anybody. Exhibitors go back and get this one if you haven't played it. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Good audience appeal. Coal miners town of 800. Admission 10-20. E. B. Rea, Palace Theatre (468 seats). Velier, Illinois.

SOFT BOILED. (7,054 feet). Star, Tom Mix. Very good picture. Should please any audience. Plenty of pep. Lots of comedy situations. Good story. Tone good. Sunday, yes. Good audience appeal. Farmers and merchants, town of 1,650. Mrs. J. B. Travelle, Elite Theatre, Placerville, California.

THIS FREEDOM. (7,000 feet). Star cast. Not a motion picture. My patrons all agreed with me that it's terrible. No excuse or reason for making this seven thousand feet of nothing. Moral is good but way over done. Our patrons soon were disgusted and most all walked out. I would have, too, only

Friend Prescott Sends List and Chatty Letter

"Dear Van and 'Gang': I have before me on my desk a letter from a brother exhibitor in Illinois requesting information on a certain picture. I've handed him the information 'Straight From the Shoulder' and if he gets a 'bum steer' and his patronage and mine differ, that's all—for me it did a good business.

"And while I'm about it I will jot down a few of them in the last three months that have stood out from some of the others.

"COVERED WAGON, first place; WAY DOWN EAST, second place; OLD HOMESTEAD, MANSLAUGHTER, ZAZA, OVER THE TOP WITH THE ALLIES, TIGER THOMPSON. HOLD YOUR BREATH, great comedy, drama, thrills, stunts, as good as 'Safety Last.'

"Comedies—HORSESHOES, SEMON-VITAGRAPH, great; GOLF, good. HEAVY SEAS, ASLEEP AT THE SWITCH, SOLD AT AUCTION, HALFBACK OF DAME, all extra good.

"Now and then we hear from some chap who says, 'Don't brag on the show, the next one will cost you more.' From my ten years' experience I have not had my rentals boosted because I recommended any certain picture; on the other hand, I have received letters from exchanges and sales managers, thanking me for my approval.

"I have received a letter from Mr. Hunt Stromberg, who is directing the series of Carey Productions for Producers Distributing Corporation, thanking me for my approval of 'The Lightning Rider,' and assuring me that everything possible will be done to make the series bigger and better—and to prove it, along comes 'Tiger Thompson,' and, Oh, Boy! I'll say Stromberg isn't kidding—the best of them yet. (And I suppose some chap says with a chuckle, 'Wait until Prescott buys the next series; he'll wish he had a gag in his mug before he wised up the crowd that his people liked so-and-so's pictures.')

"Now, this is a Straight From the Shoulder Department and if anything like this should happen, I'll tell about it, whereupon you can laugh long and loud. But I say—if you find something good in any picture, whether long or short, serial or comedy, don't be a miser and can up the information—JUST LET IT CIRCULATE IN THIS DEPARTMENT WHERE WE WILL ALL APPRECIATE YOUR GOOD DEEDS."
E. N. Prescott, Prescott Circuit, Union, Maine.

I wanted to see just how bad it was, and when I say terrible that's not half of it. Sold to me as a special, and it's not even a poor program picture. This is the type of picture that will close a theatre quick. This is the first time I ever sent in a report like this, and I hope it won't be necessary again. My advice would be to pay for it and not run it if you have it bought. High class city of 350,000. Admission twenty cents. Louis Markun, Dream Theatre (500 seats), Indianapolis, Indiana.

TROUBLE SHOOTER. (5,702 feet). Star, Tom Mix. Excellent picture and one that will please and give satisfaction to all lovers of this popular star. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Audience appeal, A-1. Residential and factory class town of 7,000. Admission 15-25. H. W. Gillespie, St. Croix Opera House (800 seats), Calais, Maine.

Metro-Goldwyn

ALONG CAME RUTH. (5,000 feet). Star, Viola Dana. Better than usual. Just one giggle after the other. Only played it one night, which was too bad. Everybody said good show. Tone, good. Sunday, no. Audience appeal, one hundred per cent. Business class and farmers town of 2,200. Admission 10-25. A. F. Jenkins, Community Theatre, David City, Nebraska.

BOY OF FLANDERS. (7,018 feet). Star, Jackie Coogan. An exceptionally good picture and an excellent cast. Both Jackie and Jeanne Carpenter are wonders. Pleased all

HELD TO ANSWER. (5,601 feet). Star, House Peters. This would have been much better if it were all there. Too much cut out in the first two reels, but the people were satisfied once it settled down to normal. Tone good. Sunday, yes. Audience appeal ninety per cent. Factory class, town of 2,800. Admission 15-25. D. W. Strayer, Mt. Joy Theatre (250 seats), Mt. Joy, Pennsylvania.

HIS BACK AGAINST THE WALL. Star, Raymond Hatton. A fair kind of western type in the program class, first half of which is very dark. Latter part is in the open and shows up satisfactorily. Has fair amount of action. Print in fair condition. Tone good. Fair audience appeal. General class, town of 1,200. Admission 15-25. E. N. Prescott, Prescott Circuit Theatre (250-700 seats), Union, Maine.

HIS HOUR. (6,300 feet). Star, Aileen Pringle. A wonderful picture. Acting and everything, this sheik, John Gilbert, is the right support for Miss Pringle. He has the looks and is all this. Everybody pleased. Much better liked than "Three Weeks" on account of male lead. Tone good. Sunday, no. Audience appeal one hundred per cent. Business and farming class, town of 2,200. Admission 10-25. A. F. Jenkins, Community Theatre, David City, Nebraska.

LITTLE ROBINSON CRUSOE. (6,216 feet). Star, Jackie Coogan. We have run all of Coogan pictures and this is the best yet. Pleased one hundred per cent. Drew a larger house the second night. Price is right. Tone okay. Sunday, yes. Audience appeal both to young and old. Town and rural class, town of 800. Admission 15-30. C. O. Christ, Opera House (350 seats), Elgin, Iowa.

LITTLE ROBINSON CRUSOE. (6,216 feet). Star, Jackie Coogan. Audience liked it. Good for any house. For a youngster Jackie's work is well nigh perfect. Tone good. Sunday, yes. Audience appeal good. Town of 7,364. Arthur B. Smith, Fenwick Theatre, Salem, New Jersey.

LONG LIVE THE KING. (9,364 feet). Star, Jackie Coogan. A fine picture. Book it and boost it. Jackie outdoes himself in this one. Pleased one hundred per cent. Fair print. Tone good. Sunday, yes. Fair attendance. Admission 10-20. R. P. Higginbotham, Pastime Theatre, Leeds, Alabama.

QUINCY ADAMS SAWYER. (7,500 feet). Star cast. With a good deal of comedy relief, this is a very good picture for any house to run. It pleased practically all of my patrons. Tone good. Sunday, yes. Good audience appeal. Town and country class, town of 455. Admission 10-25-30. A. F. Schriever, Onida Theatre (225 seats), Onida, South Dakota.

RED LIGHTS. (6,841 feet). Star, Johnnie Walker. A real one hundred per cent picture. A melodrama with plenty of thrills and comedy. It will stand all the advertising you want to give it. Tone good. Sunday, yes. Audience appeal one hundred per cent. Farmers and townspeople, town of 800. Admission 10-25. Firkins and Laws, Crystal Theatre (200 seats), Moravia, Iowa.

REVELATION. (8,732 feet). Star cast. A beautifully done picture but one that failed to draw for us. It is not a popular type of story but they all seemed to like it. Tone good. Sunday, yes. Good audience appeal. All classes, city of 14,000. Admission 10-35, 10-25. E. W. Collins, Grand and Liberty theatres (500-700 seats), Jonesboro, Arkansas.

SCARAMOUCHE. (9,600 feet). Star cast. Excellent picture and pleased the majority. Did not do a big business on it, however. Tone good. Sunday, yes. Audience appeal eighty per cent. Agricultural class, town of 1,200. Admission 10-25. L. M. Zug, Rialto Theatre (280 seats), Jerome, Idaho.

SHERLOCK JR. (4,605 feet). Star, Buster Keaton. This one was a little old but I did a good business on it. You can bring them in on Buster. Tone good. Sunday, yes. Good audience appeal. All classes, town of 6,000. Admission 10-25. R. L. Cochran, Judia Theatre (402 seats), Cisco, Texas.

SHERLOCK JR. (4,605 feet). Star, Buster Keaton. Some liked it. Some didn't. Tone good. Sunday, yes. Varied audience appeal. Medium class, city of 16,000. Admission 10-30. S. A. Hayman, Lyda Theatre (360 seats), Grand Island, Nebraska.

SILENT ACCUSER. (6 reels). Star, Peter the Great (dog). Believe me, the picture is great. Played this Thanksgiving and Friday, November 27 and 28, and the wind was blowing sixty miles an hour, and what a business I did! Had house packed the two days. Book it and boost the dog; he's there. Advertising from exchange flashy and attractive. One hundred per cent audience appeal. Metro-Goldwyn has good pictures. R. A. Preuss, Arvada Theatre, Arvada, Colorado.

SINNERS IN SILK. (5,750 feet). Star, Aileen Pringle. A good picture but flopped for us. Tone fair. Sunday, no. Farmers and business class, town of 2,200. Admission 10-25. A. F. Jenkins, Community Theatre, David City, Nebraska.

THREE AGES. (5,500 feet). Star, Buster Keaton. Was supposed to run the above picture but on account of it being in bad shape Metro sent us a good print of "All the Brothers Were Valiant," with Lon Chaney, which went over good. Tone fair. Sunday, no. Audience appeal seventy per cent. Factory class, town of 2,800. Admission 15-25. D. W. Strayer, Mt. Joy Theatre (250 seats), Mt. Joy, Pennsylvania.

TRIFLING WOMEN. (9 reels). Star cast. A very good production that every exhibitor can well afford to run. It is really a big production and one that will please your audience. Tone very good. Sunday, yes. Good audience appeal. Country and town class, town of 455. Admission 10-25-30. A. F. Schriever, Onida Theatre (225 seats), Onida, South Dakota.

TRUE AS STEEL. (7 reels). Star cast. A fine picture but a bad title. Does not draw, so ran it at a loss. Tone good. Sunday, yes. Good audience appeal. Small town class, town of 300. Admission 10-25. Roy E. Cline, Osage Theatre (200 seats), Osage, Oklahoma.

WHITE SISTER. (10,400 feet). Star, Mary Philbin. An excellent picture. Will go anywhere, any time. Tone good. Sunday, yes. Good audience appeal. Family class, city of 65,000. Admission fifteen cents. R. K. Covington, Bijou Theatre (500 seats), Fresno, California.

Paramount

NOBODY'S MONEY. (5,587 feet). Star cast. Pleased a few. Nothing big. Played on Saturday with a comedy. Tone good. Sunday, yes. All classes, town of 1,800. Admission 15-20, 15-25. J. Neal Lanigan, Colonial Theatre (450 seats), Moulton, Iowa.

FORBIDDEN PARADISE. (7 reels). Star, Pola Negri. Best Pola Negri work she has ever done. Menjou and LaRocque help much. This is a Lubitsch-directed picture, adapted from "The Czarina," actually portraying a few love affairs of Catherine the Great of Russia. Local censors tried to stop the picture. Family and good class, city of 55,000. Admission thirty cents. Frank Vesley, National Theatre (936 seats), Stockton, California.

GARDEN OF WEEDS. (6,250 feet). Star, Betty Compson. James Cruze directed it. The picture is beautifully done. The story is the thing and if that is so we want cleaner stories. This type of stories creates trouble in some communities where you have some sort of censorship, official or otherwise. Tone, no. Sunday, no. Audience appeal limited. Family and good class, city of 55,000. Admission thirty cents. Frank Vesley, National Theatre (936 seats), Stockton, California.

GO-GETTER. (7,771 feet). Star cast. Old but pleased all. A good comedy drama, excellent cast. Well played. Tone okay. Sunday, yes. All classes, town of 1,800. Admission 15-20, 15-25. J. Neal Lanigan, Colonial Theatre (450 seats), Moulton, Iowa.

GO-GETTER. (7,771 feet). Star, T. Roy Barnes. Program pictures don't come much better than this one, I believe, from the satisfaction this gave here. Favorable "What the Picture Did for Me" reports were scanty, but you can mark mine down in favor of pictures like this, for this type is made with the idea that the first mission of a picture is to entertain. Tone okay. Sunday, yes. General audience appeal. Rural class, town of 300. Admission 10-30, 15-40. Charles W. Lewis, I. O. O. F. Theatre (225 seats), Grand Gorge, New York.

GUILTY ONE. (5,635 feet). Star, Agnes Ayres. Drags fearfully in spots. Rather good if you aren't too tired. Tone okay. Sunday, yes. Audience appeal seventy-five per cent. Small town class, town of 1,369. Admission 10-15-20-25-35. S. G. Harsh, Princess Theatre (249 seats), Mapleton, Iowa.

HER GILDED CAGE. (6,249 feet). Star, Gloria Swanson. Swanson not as well liked here as formerly. This was a fine costume play which pleased some. Sunday, yes. Audience appeal, women. All classes, town of 1,800. Admission 15-20, 15-25. Neal Lanigan, Colonial Theatre (450 seats), Moulton, Iowa.

HERITAGE OF THE DESERT. (5,785 feet). Star, Bebe Daniels. Our first Zane Grey picturization and it drew like any good picture ought to. Several remarked that they believed it to be as good as "The Covered Wagon." Anyway, it was wholesome and entertaining to the fullest extent. What more could one ask? Tone okay. Sunday, yes. Audience appeal exceptional. Rural class, town of 300. Admission 10-30, 15-40. Charles W. Lewis, I. O. O. F. Theatre (225 seats), Grand Gorge, New York.

IF YOU BELIEVE IT, IT'S SO. (5 reels). Star, Thomas Meighan. A real good picture; certainly has a good moral. Meighan pictures always bring us a full house. Print in awful condition. If anything is disgusting in the way of poor prints it is to have a lot of the end missing. Tone good. Audience appeal fine. Farming class, town of 800. Admission 15-25. A. B. McCullough, Community Theatre, Neosho Falls, Kansas.

MANHANDLED. (6,998 feet). Star, Gloria Swanson. Many good comments but not much business. Nothing seems to get them out these days. Highly advertised but fairs and tent shows have gone away with all the money. Tone good. Not suitable for Sunday. Good audience appeal. All classes of white only. Admission 10-20-30. W. H. Odom, Pastime Theatre (250 seats), Sandersville, Georgia.

MANHANDLED. (6,998 feet). Star, Gloria Swanson. This is different than her former pictures and I would call it fair to good. It will please ninety per cent. Tone good. Good audience appeal. Town class, town of 2,500. Admission 10-25. S. H. Rich, Rich Theatre (450 seats), Montpelier, Idaho.

MAN WHO SAW TOMORROW. Star, Thomas Meighan. A picture that is full of entertainment. Story unusual but good and pleased all. Tone good. Sunday, yes. All classes, town of 1,800. Admission 15-20, 15-25. J. Neal Lanigan, Colonial Theatre (450 seats), Moulton, Iowa.

MONSIEUR BEAUCAIRE. (9,932 feet). Star, Rudolph Valentino. A beautiful picture, but entirely too long and draggy. Did a complete flop for us at the box office, registering less than average business. Some raved over its beauty, while many others raved just as much over its weaknesses. Do not pay much for it. Valentino is gone. Tone okay. Sunday, yes. Medium audience appeal. Better class, city of 14,000. Admission 10-35. E. W. Collins, Grand Theatre (700 seats), Jonesboro, Arkansas.

MONSIEUR BEAUCAIRE. (9,932 feet). Rudolph Valentino. This did only regular business in spite of extra advertising and advanced prices. Our town is sick of costume plays. Small town class town of 3,300. Admission 15-30. P. L. Vann, Opera House (600 seats), Greenville, Alabama.

MY AMERICAN WIFE. (6,061 feet). Star, Gloria Swanson. Very fine, as are all Swanson's. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Fine audience appeal. Tourist class town of 2,400. Admission 15-25. S. L. Taylor, Kozy Theatre (250 seats), Pass Christian, Mississippi.

MY AMERICAN WIFE. (6,061 feet). Star, Gloria Swanson. Not a special but is a fair program picture. Fair acting and some action. Old but in good condition. Tone good. Sunday, yes. Fair audience appeal. All classes, town of 1,800. Admission 15-20, 15-25. J. Neal Lanigan, Colonial Theatre (450 seats), Moulton, Iowa.

PINK GODS. (7,602 feet). Star, Bebe Daniels. A pleasing little picture. Miss Daniels a favorite here. Played with comedy. All classes, town of 1,800. Admission 15-20, 15-25. Neal Lanigan, Colonial Theatre (450 seats), Moulton, Iowa.

PRIDE OF PALOMAR. (7,494 feet). Star, Marjorie Daw. A dandy picture. Should please any audience. Bought right, will make plenty of money. The Kansas City branch will furnish good prints. Tone good. Sunday, yes. Fine audience appeal. Farming class, town of 360. Admission 10-25. E. L. Delano, Electric Theatre (225 seats), Agra, Kansas.

PURPLE HIGHWAY. (6,574 feet). Star, Madge Kennedy. I was satisfied in every way with this picture. Town and rural class, town of 2,500. Admission 10-25. S. H. Rich, Rich Theatre (450 seats), Montpelier, Idaho.

SAINTED DEVIL. Star, Rudolph Valentino. As a handsome young blade of the Argentine, loving, tangoing, fighting, thrilling, as never before. That's the royal treat awaiting you in "A Sainted Devil." In the cast, Dagmar Godowsky, Nita Naldi, Louis LeGrange and Helen d'Algy. William Noble, Criterion Theatre, Oklahoma City, Oklahoma.

An English Friend Gives Trailer Viewpoint

"I have noticed your request on the question of Trailers as an advertising medium.

"Of course you will realize we are very much behind in every branch of the industry on this side—production, presentation, release, advertising, and so forth. Until the beginning of this year (1924) we had practically no trailers and the few we had were simply cuts from the film.

"Now First National supplies trailers with all subjects (free). Occasionally other firms furnish them at charges varying from 2/6 to 89 per week.

"There are trailers AND trailers. Some convey nothing and have no pulling power; others are great—especially those edited as a go-before, which tell of the merits of the coming attraction.

"Every subject should be trailed by a specially made Trailer, just as carefully thought out as the subject itself. Some of First National's output are excellent, and the exhibitor who fails to take advantage of this good service is doing himself and the trade an injustice.

"You have the people interested—everyone gazing at the screen—YOUR OWN SCREEN. Then why not use it for your own purpose? I say, trail 'em all, good, bad and indifferent; if you have a subject which you are afraid to trail it is not worth presenting, and the best way is to cut it out." R. Read, Exchange Hall, Maltoa, Yorkshire, England.

SHADOWS OF PARIS. (6,549 feet). Star, Pola Negri. A very interesting story of the Paris underworld which affords Pola an opportunity to display her abilities as an actress. Had poor attendance as for some reason Pola doesn't draw for us. Tone okay. Sunday, yes. Good audience appeal. Mixed class, town of 3,000. Admission 20-25. T. L. Barnett, Finn's Theatre (600 seats), Jewett City, Connecticut.

SHADOWS OF PARIS. (6,549 feet). Star cast. About as good as the average Paramount program pictures; that is, where Negri has a following. Tone, none. Sunday, no. Fair audience appeal. All classes, town of 2,000. Admission 10-25. H. Lloyd, Colonial Theatre (400 seats), Post, Texas.

SIDESHOW OF LIFE. (7,511 feet). Star, Ernest Torrence. A very fine picture. Every ex-service man will be interested in this production and it makes a nice tie-up with the Legion. The name is poorly chosen as the picture appeals most strongly to the serious thinking people and the name does not attract that class to come to see it. I enjoyed this picture more than ninety-five per cent of this year's product I have seen. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Appeals to intelligent class. Town of 3,200. Admission 10-20-30. Charles L. Hyde, Grand Theatre (500 seats), Pierre, South Dakota.

SIDE SHOW OF LIFE. (7,511 feet). Star, Viola Dana. Passable, that is all. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Passable audience appeal. Medium class city of 16,000. Admission 10-30. S. A. Hayman, Lyda Theatre (360 seats), Grand Island, Nebraska.

SINNERS IN HEAVEN. Star, Richard Dix. This little picture got me more money than any other of the Paramount bunch. While not a wonderful picture it had a pull that the people could not get away from, and it pleased the folks. A real audience picture and we are well pleased. Far fetched, but never-the-less entertaining. Tone, fair. Not suitable for Sunday. Great audience appeal. Society class city of 10,000. Admission 10-20. Ned Pedigo, Pollard Theatre (800 seats), Guthrie, Oklahoma.

SOCIETY SCANDAL. (6,433 feet). Star, Gloria Swanson. Needless to say, it got the money and pleased. Tone, not good. Sunday, no. Audience appeal, seventy-five per cent. All classes city of 200,000. Admission 10-20. R. M. Kennedy, Royal and Capitol Theatre (350 seats), Birmingham, Alabama.

SOCIETY SCANDAL. (6,433 feet). Star, Gloria Swanson. Gloria is glorious in a society drama that is the best of its kind. Splendid cast, bizarre costumes, sensational situations, and a remarkable courtroom scene of a divorce trial that you won't forget in a hurry. Don't cheat your clientele out of this one. High class stuff. City and country class, town of 3,000. Admission 10-30. George W. Walther, Dixie Theatre (500 seats), Kerrville, Texas.

SOCIETY SCANDAL. (6,433 feet). Star, Gloria Swanson. Very good Swanson. Just a little too much so for a small town. Got by, but we would be better without using some of these. Audience appeal eighty-five per cent. Small town class, town of 1,369. Admission 10-15-20-25-35. S. G. Harsh, Princess Theatre (249 seats), Mapleton, Iowa.

SOCIETY SCANDAL. (6,433 feet). Star cast. A fair picture. Not worth the money. Tone fair. All classes, town of 2,000. Admission 10-25. H. Lloyd, Colonial Theatre (400 seats), Post, Texas.

SPANISH DANCER. (8,434 feet). Star, Pola Negri. Well, this picture went over in some places but not with me. Too old, I guess. Anyway, I did not make anything on it. Mixed classes, town of 2,714. Admission ten cents up. T. S. Goolsby, Rex Theatre (460 seats), Brinkley, Arkansas.

STEPHEN STEPS OUT. (5,152 feet). Star, Douglas Fairbanks Jr. A very good program picture. Pleased a majority of my patrons. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Fair audience appeal. Town and country class town of 1,800. Admission 10-25. Herbert Tapp, Hippodrome Theatre (460 seats), Sheridan, Indiana.

STORY WITHOUT A NAME. (7,912 feet). Star cast. Very good picture above the ordinary program class. Should please anywhere. Plenty of action. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Good audience appeal. Farmers and merchants town of 1,650. Mrs. J. B. Travelle, Elite Theatre, Placerville, California.

Scene from the Bobby Vernon comedy, "French Pastry," released through Educational Film Exchange, Inc.

STORY WITHOUT A NAME. (7,912 feet). Star cast. A thrilling picture that suited here. I have noticed one or two knocks on this picture but it does not deserve them. Tone, good. Sunday, good. Good audience appeal, Howard Theatre, Alexandria, Minnesota.

THREE WORD BRAND. (6,638 feet). Star, William Hart. Here is a good one for the Bill Hart fans. Well liked. Tone good. Sunday, no. Audience appeal, dandy. Farmers, town of 800. Admission 10-25. Helen Drexler, Star Theatre (200 seats), Crofton, Nebraska.

TIGER LOVE. (5,325 feet). Star, Antonio Moreno. Fair program that the title kills. Tone okay. Sunday, yes. Audience appeal seventy-five per cent. Small town class, town of 1,369. Admission 10-15-20-25-35. S. G. Harsh, Princess Theatre (249 seats), Mapleton, Iowa.

TIGER LOVE. (5,325 feet). Star, Estelle Taylor. Good program picture. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Fair audience appeal. Farmers and merchants town of 1,650. Mrs. J. B. Travelle, Elite Theatre, Placerville, California.

TRIUMPH. (8,297 feet). Star cast. Many good comments on this one. Used it Thanksgiving. Attendance fair. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Audience appeal eighty per cent. Agricultural class town of 1,200. Admission 10-25. L. M. Zug, Rialto Theatre (280 seats), Jerome, Idaho.

WAGES OF VIRTUE. (7,083 feet). Star, Gloria Swanson. A wonderful picture which will please everyone who sees it. Enjoyed unusually good business in the face of strong opposition. Tone, okay. Sunday, yes. Great audience appeal. All classes city 91,000. Admission 40-50. Guy A. Kenimer, Arcade Theatre (1,152 seats), Jacksonville, Florida.

WAGES OF VIRTUE. (7,083 feet). Star, Gloria Swanson. All you have ever expected of Gloria and then some. Comedy that reminds you of "Manhandled" costumes and as gorgerous as those in "Society Scandle" and dramatic interest the equal of "Humming Bird." Glorious Gloria as a flaming rose of the regiment and as beautiful as a bird of paradise. You'll love her more than ever, and if you book "Wages of Virtue" your box office receipts will be tremendously increased by so doing. William Noble, Criterion Theatre, Oklahoma City, Oklahoma.

WORLDLY GOOD. (6,085 feet). Star, Agnes Ayres. Just a fair program picture with nothing much to it. Tone, okay. Sunday, yes. Fair audience appeal. Oil and farm class town of 1,000. Admission 10-25. H. E. Schlichter, Liggett Theatre (600 seats), Madison, Kansas.

BATTLING ORIOLES. (5,600 feet). Star, Glen Tyron. This one surprised me. It is a comedy knockout from start to finish and got as many laughs as "Girl Shy." Book it, boost it, it will certainly please. Oil and farm class town of 1,000. Admission 10-25. H. E. Schlichter, Liggett Theatre (600 seats), Madison, Kansas.

CALL OF THE WILD. (7,000 feet). Star, Buck (dog). Quite good. Will go well where they like animal and dog stories. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Fair audience appeal. Town of 7,364. Arthur B. Smith, Fenwick Theatre, Salem, New Jersey.

DR. JACK. (4,700 feet). Star, Harold Lloyd. A sure fire bet, that will go over big anywhere. You can guarantee to please or money back on this picture. Tone, fair. Sunday, yes. Good audience appeal. Country and town class. Admission 10-20. W. F. Denny, Electric Theatre (250 seats), Lowry City, Missouri.

GIRL SHY. (7,457 feet). Harold Lloyd. The prince of merry makers at his best in his best. Seven reels of Una Lloyd happiness, love, laughter, thrills. You can make no mistake in booking this one. William Noble, Liberty Theatre, Oklahoma City, Oklahoma.

GRANDMA'S BOY. (6 reels). Star, Harold Lloyd. Another sure fire winner. A laugh from start to finish. Also can guarantee this one for will sure please. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Good audience appeal. Country and town class. Admission 10-20. W. F. Denny, Electric Theatre (250 seats), Lowry City, Missouri.

KING OF WILD HORSES. (5 reels). Star, Rex (horse). It's good, but will give most satisfaction in large city houses, where the audience is unfamiliar with horses. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Town of 7,364. Arthur B. Smith, Fenwick, Salem, New Jersey.

KING OF WILD HORSES. (5 reels). Star, Rex (horse). A very good picture but not worth double than any other good program picture. If you can buy it right it has

KING OF WILD HORSES. (5 reels). Star, Rex (horse). The picture is full of thrills for those who like animal life. It is educational. It is at all times interesting and will hold an audience. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Strong audience appeal. Working class city of 100,000. Admission 10-15-20. W. C. Budge, Comedy Theatre (275 seats), Jamaica, New York.

KING OF WILD HORSES. (5 reels). Star cast. It's a pleasure to show a picture like this one. Something different, fit for any theatre anywhere and your patrons will thank you. Pleased everybody. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Good audience appeal. All classes town of 1,000. Admission 10-20. A. E. Rogers, Temple Theatre (250 seats), Dexter, New York.

KING OF WILD HORSES. (5 reels). Star, Rex (horse). One of the best horse pictures ever made. If your people like this kind of a picture by all means buy it. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Good audience appeal. Farmers town of 800. Admission 10-25. E. F. Gick, Pastime Theatre (250 seats), Moundridge, Kansas.

Preferred

BREATH OF SCANDAL. (6,940 feet). Star, Patsy Ruth Miller. Withering the souls of all whom it comes in contact, blasting the reputations of the innocent as well as the guilty, but which a beautiful girl defies to save her father. A great cast, which includes Patsy Ruth Miller, Phyllis Haver, Betty Blythe, Lou Tellegen and Forest Stanley. William Noble, Liberty Theatre, Oklahoma City, Oklahoma.

Principal

CAPTAIN JANUARY. Star, Baby Peggy. Another excellent picture that failed to draw for me. Pleased one hundred per cent. Tone, fine. Sunday, yes. Audience appeal, okay. Oil field class and farmers town of 1,000. Admisison 10-25. H. E. Schlichter, Liggett Theatre (600 seats), Madison, Kansas.

CAPTAIN JANUARY. (6,194 feet). Star, Baby Peggy. A picture that will please the kids and also the older folks, but not the flappers and cake-eaters. She is well liked in this town. A good program show. Tone, good. A picture for the family. Good audience appeal. Better class town of 4,500. Admission 10-15. C. A. Anglemire, "Y" Theatre (404 seats), Nazareth, Pennsylvania.

GOOD BAD BOY. (5,198 feet). Star cast. Don't need to be afraid of this. A clever five-act comedy drama. Tone, okay. Sunday, yes. Good audience appeal. Family and student class town of 4,000. Admission 10-25. R. J. Relf, Star Theatre (600 seats), Decorah, Iowa.

LISTEN LESTER. Star cast. An excellent comedy feature that pleased everybody. It did not draw enough business to pay expenses. That is the only kick I had. Tone, good. Good audience appeal. Better class town of 4,500. Admission 10-15. C. A. Anglemire, "Y" Theatre (404 seats), Nazareth, Pennsylvania.

Your Say Counts

"Just noticed that Vitagraph as well as Paramount have just started to put the LENGTH OF SUBJECTS on press books.

"I wrote an article about nine months ago asking the distributors why they didn't do this—and I am certainly glad these two companies have adopted it, FOR IT IS A GREAT HELP TO THE EXHIBITORS.

"Your dependable tip department carried my message to them, so I'll thank you at this time." Louis Markum, Dream and Tuxedo Theatres, Indianapolis, Indiana.

HIS DARKER SELF. (5 reels). Star Lloyd Hamilton. They spoiled a fairly good two-reel comedian when they tried to make a feature player out of Hamilton. This picture is a weak sister if there ever was one. All classes in small town. Admission 10-30. M. W. Larmour, National Theatre (450 seats), Graham, Texas.

HOLD YOUR BREATH. (5 reels). Star cast. Fair comedy. No box-office value. Just a picture. C. W. Garther, Forest Theatre, Detroit, Michigan.

HOLD YOUR BREATH. (5 reels). Star cast. Great cast of characters in a production as good as "Safety Last." Full of thrills, hokum, action, laughter. House in roars and gasps from start to finish. Good comments from patrons. Play it. It's fine. General class town of 1,200. Admission 15-25. E. N. Prescott, Prescott Circuit (250-700 seats), Union, Maine.

NIGHT HAWK. (5,115 feet). Star cast. Just a fair western. Fenton J. Lee, Essaness Theatre, Rushville, Nebraska.

TIGER THOMPSON. (5,700 feet). Star, Harry Carey. An excellent western production that went over fine with my audiences better than any of his previous pictures. If your patronage calls for westerns don't be afraid of this series. All good. General class town of 1,200. Admission 15-25. E. N. Prescott, Prescott Circuit (250-700 seats), Union, Maine.

YOUTHFUL CHEATERS. Star cast. Played comedy "Wild and Wicked" along with this, and, say, the people were pleased. Film in good condition. If all films were as good as this business would pick up. Film in good shape. Small town patronage. Dad Emmert, Emmert Theatre, Alcester, South Dakota.

United Artists

AMERICA. (14,000 feet). Star cast. The last word in patriotic pictures. Brings new patrons into the house and raises the standard all around. A picture that will please and entertain all classes. A picture that every house should run. General class city of 15,000. Ben L. Morris, Temple and Elk Grand Theatres, Bellaire, Ohio.

AMERICA. (14,000 feet). Star cast. The greatest picture yet. The birth of America. No true patriot should miss it. A love story with historical background. Tone okay. Sunday, no. Great audience appeal. Kept them roaring. Town of 3,700. Admission 10-25, 10-30, 10-35. Krieghbaum Brothers, Char Bell Theatre (800 seats), Rochester, Indiana.

AMERICA. (14,000 feet). Star cast. Ran this picture for the free literary and it is one of the biggest productions of the year and best we ever showed. Good crowd pleased one hundred per cent. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Great audience appeal. All classes town of 1,000. Admission 10-20. A. E. Rogers, Temple Theatre, (250 seats), Dexter, New York.

AMERICA. (14,000 feet). Star cast. Unquestionably, one of the finest photoplays ever made. It has high historical value and is entertaining to the ninth degree. In the face of a large campaign and tie-up with schools it did a disappointing business for us, but it's worth playing if you lose money. Tone, fine. Sunday, yes. Has the highest audience appeal. All classes city of 14,000. Admission 10-35, 10-25. E. W. Collins, Grand, and Liberty Theatres (500-700 seats), Jonesboro, Arkansas.

LOVE LIGHT. Star, Mary Pickford. Some said fine, others punk, personally did not think it was as good as "Through the Back Door." Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Audience appeal, seventy-five per cent. Small class town of 300. Admission 10-25. Roy E. Cline, Osage Theatre (200 seats), Osage, Oklahoma.

TESS OF THE STORM COUNTRY. (10 reels). Star, Mary Pickford. Played Thanksgiving to a full house. Bought right and made some money. Film in excellent condition. Pleased one hundred per cent. Don't think I ever showed a better picture. Town and country class town of 700. Admission 10-25, 15-35. J. B. Carter, Electric Theatre (250 seats), Browning, Missouri.

WHEN CLOUDS ROLL BY. Star Douglas Fairbanks. Just an average picture, will get by and that is all. Tone, good. Sunday, no. Audience appeal, not much. Small town class town of 300. Admission 10-25. Roy E. Cline, Osage Theatre (200 seats), Osage, Oklahoma.

Universal

BACK TRAIL. (4,615 feet). Star, Jack Hoxie. Pretty weak is my opinion of this one. Hoxie doesn't draw much here. Tone, okay. Sunday, yes. Fair audience appeal. Mixed class town of 3,000. Admission 20-25. T. L. Barnett, Finn's Theatre (600 seats), Jewett City, Connecticut.

BIG TIMBER. (4,650 feet). Star, William Desmond. Fair out door picture that appeals to a small town theatre. Tone, good. Town of 7,364. Arthur B. Smith, Fenwick Theatre, Salem, New Jersey.

BREATHLESS MOMENT. (5,556 feet). Star, William Desmond. Desmond is there with the goods. A fine little picture. Sunday, yes. Admission 15-25. E. E. Bays, Globe Theatre (250 seats), Buena Vista, Virginia.

BROADWAY OR BUST. (5,277 feet). Star, Hoot Gibson. A splendid program picture for this locality. Full of good humor. Audience appeal ninety per cent. Agricultural class town of 1,200. Admission 10-25. L. M. Zug, Rialto Theatre (280 seats), Jerome, Idaho.

CLEAN UP. (5,051 feet). Star, Herbert

Rawlinson. A very good program picture, the story is a little different and with a good comedy makes a nice program. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Audience appeal, seventy-five per cent. Firkins and Laws, Crystal Theatre, Moravia, Iowa.

EXCITEMENT. (4,912 feet). Star, Laura La Plante. Very good comedy with something doing every minute. Tone, fair. Sunday, yes. Good audience appeal. Farmers town of 800. Admission 10-25. E. F. Gick, Pastime Theatre (250 seats), Moundridge, Kansas.

EXCITEMENT. (4,912 feet). Star, Laura La Plante. Excitement is right. Our patrons ate it up. Not a heavy story, but lots of action, suspense, comedy, and hokum. Good drawing power. Tone okay. Sunday, no. Very good audience appeal. Town and rural class town of 1,028. Admission 10-25. W. C. Geer, Princess Theatre (175 seats), Vermont, Illinois.

FIGHTING AMERICAN. (5,251 feet). Star, Pat O'Malley. A corking good story with a lot of hokum in it that our people liked. It should please in any small town. Tone, good. Sunday, perhaps. Very good audience appeal. Town and rural class town of 1,028. Admission 10-25. W. C. Geer, Princess Theatre (175 seats), Vermont, Illinois.

FOOL'S HIGHWAY. (6,800 feet). Star, Mary Philbin. Very good, print in terrible shape, made three attempts and had to cut out fifth reel entirely. Universal has been giving me this regularly. Tone, fine. Not suitable for Sunday. Good audience appeal. Family class city of 65,000. Admission fifteen cents. R. K. Covington, Bijou Theatre (500 seats), Fresno, California.

FOOL'S HIGHWAY. (6,800 feet). Star, Mary Philbin. To the old timer who knew the Bowery this picture will bring back memories of Old New York. To the new generation it will be very interesting to know the old Bowery. Tone, strong. Sunday, yes. Good audience appeal. Working class city of 100,000. Admission 10-15-20. W. C. Budge, Comedy Theatre (275 seats), Jamaica, New York.

FOOL'S HIGHWAY. (6,800 feet). Star, Mary Philbin. Boys! Lay off this one. No good. If you book this one be sure you run and cut before showing. Print good. Sunday no. Fair attendance. Admission 10-20. R. P. Higginbotham, Pastime Theatre, Leeds, Alabama.

GAIETY GIRL. (7,419 feet). Star Mary Philbin. Too long to begin with. Think the direction was very jerky. No favorable comments. Tone, fair. Hardly suitable for Sunday. Fair audience appeal. Family and student class, town of 4,000. Admission 10-25. R. J. Relf, Star Theatre (600 seats), Decorah, Iowa.

GALLOPING ACE. (4,561 feet). Star, Jack Hoxie. Not worth showing. Compare Hoxie's horse to Silver King would be nothing. Sunday, yes. Admission 15-25. E. E. Bays, Globe Theatre (250 seats), Buena Vista, Virginia.

HUNCHBACK OF NOTRE DAME. (11,000 feet). Star, Lon Chaney. Great picture. I would advise anyone to run it on account of weather conditions. I did not do well, but I I had people that never came to anything else. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Good audience appeal. Small town class and farmers, town of 600. Admission 10-20, 10-30. H. W. Batchelder, Galt Theatre (175 seats), Galt, California.

MAN FROM WYOMNG. (4,717 feet). Star. Jack Hoxie. This is a good western and can be bought right. Buy it if you like this class of pictures. It's got lots of action. Tone, good. One hundred per cent. audience appeal. All classes, town of 806. Admission 10-20. W. C. Herndon, Liberty Theatre (250 seats), Valliant, Oklahoma.

RIDIN' KID FROM POWDER RIVER. (5,727 feet). Star, Hoot Gibson. A good picture and a real story for Gibson. It will please your small town audience. Try this against Beaucaire some time and see what they want in these hick places. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Good audience appeal. Small town class, town of 5,000. Admission 10-30. L. O. Davis, Virginia Theatre (700 seats), Hazard, Kentucky.

RIDIN' KID FROM POWDER RIVER. (5,727 feet). Star, Hoot Gibson. One of the best western pictures this star has ever appeared in. Gave excellent satisfaction. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Good audience appeal. Residential and factory class, town of 7,000. Admission 15-25. H. W. Gillespie, St. Croix Opera House (800 seats), Calais, Maine.

SAWDUST TRAIL. (5,500 feet). Star, Hoot Gibson. Gibson usually draws good patronage for me. Would like to see them keep him in westerns. That's where the fans expect to see him. Tone, okay. Sunday, yes. Fair audience appeal. Coal miners, town of 800. Admission 10-20. E. B. Rea, Palace Theatre (468 seats), Velier, Illinois.

TORNADO. (6,575 feet). Star, House Peters. As fine a feature I ever had the pleasure of showing. Will please 100 per cent. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Excellent audience appeal. Residential and factory class, town of 7,000. Admission 15-25. H. W. Gillespie, St. Croix Opera House (800 seats), Calais, Maine.

Vitagraph

CAPTAIN BLOOD. (10,680 feet). Star, J. Warren Kerrigan. A wonderful big picture and would have been a world beater had it been the first of this kind. I am very fond of Dave Smith's direction. Get in with Vitagraph. They are the coming company; you know they have recently added a John Rock foundation and believe me that means a lot. Their Chicago Exchange is A1 from a manager, assistant manager, to booker. Then their pictures are all consistently good. "Captain Blood" should prove a treat anywhere and you can step on the bigness. Tone okay. Sunday, yes. Good audience appeal. General class, town of 3,600. Admission 10-20. William A. Clark, Castle Theatre (400 seats), Havana, Illinois.

LET NOT MAN PUT ASUNDER. (8 reels). Star, Lou Tellegen. This was a very pretty picture and well acted. Everybody liked it and it registered high at the box office. Tone, okay. Sunday, yes. Small town class, town of 3,300. Admission 15-30. P. L. Cann, Opera House (600 seats), Greenville, Alabama.

MY MAN. (6,800 feet). Star cast. Could not give this one much. Failed to please and was very light. Tone, poor. Sunday, yes. Audience appeal, not much. Best class, town of 8,000. Admission 10-30. Ned Pedigo, Pollard Theatre, Guthrie, Oklahoma.

MY MAN. (6,800 feet). Star, Patsy Ruth Miller. Just another good Vitagraph picture. not a kick and lots of praise. Tone, okay. Sunday, yes. Small town class, town of 3,300. Admission 15-30. P. L. Vann, Opera House Theatre (600 seats), Greenville, Alabama.

Warner Bros.

BABBITT. (8 reels). Star, Willard Louis. A good picture. Companion picture of "Main Street," by same author. An old man tries to be young again but finally settles down with his good little wife. Tone, okay. Sunday, yes. Town of 3,700. Admission 10-25, 10-30, 10-35. Kreighbaum Brothers, Char Bell Theatre (800 seats), Rochester, Indiana.

BEAU BRUMMEL. (10 reels). Star, John Barrymore. A wonderful production, but one which a small town will not appreciate. The acting of Barrymore is simply marvelous. Tone, okay. Sunday, yes. Audience appeal, doubtful. Mixed class town of 3,000. Admission 20-25. T. L. Barnett, Finn's Theatre (600 seats), Jewett City, Connecticut.

BROADWAY AFTER DARK. (6,300 feet). Star, Norma Shearer. Advanced prices, and mostly all were pleased with it. Tone, okay. Sunday, yes. Good audience appeal. Mixed class, town of 3,000. Admission 10-20-30. Charles Martin, Family Theatre (300 seats), Mt. Morris, New York.

CORNERED. (7,500 feet).. Star, Marie Prevost. Crooks and detectives, and Marie Prevost in a dual role. Miss Prevost's best. Good attendance. Tone, okay. Sunday, yes. Town of 3,700. Admission 10-25, 10-30, 10-35. Kreighbaum Brothers, Char Bell Theatre (800 seats), Rochester, Indiana.

CORNERED. (7,500 feet). Star Marie Prevost. Great mystery picture, with Marie Prevost doing exceptionally fine work. Sunday, yes. Good audience appeal. Better class city of 40,000. Admission 25-30. F. O. Slenker, Spencer Theatre (875 seats), Rock Island, Illinois.

DADDIES. (6,800 feet). Star cast. Good comedy drama from all angles. Pleased almost 100 per cent. Tone, okay. Sunday, yes. Good audience appeal. Small town class, town of 450. Admission 10-30. A. F. Thomas, Pastime Theatre (250 seats), Almyra, Arkansas.

GEORGE WASHINGTON, JR. (6 reels). Star, Wesley Barry. Very good. Wesley Barry getting most too large to be a boy. Tone, okay. Sunday, yes. Good audience appeal. Small town class of 450. Admission

HOW TO EDUCATE A WIFE. (6 reels). Star, Monte Blue. A very good production from every angle, as most all Warner Brothers are. Tone, okay. Small town and country class, town of 450. Admission 10-30. A. F. Thomas, Pastime Theatre (250 seats), Almyra, Arkansas.

MARRIAGE CIRCLE. (8,500 feet). Star cast. This is a wonderful picture. Well acted and good setting. Tone, okay. Sunday, yes. Good audience appeal. Small town and country class, town of 450. Admission 10-30. A. F. Thomas, Pastime Theatre (250 seats), Almyra, Arkansas.

Comedies

ARE BLOND MEN BASHFUL? (Pathe). Fine, just as good as a feature, this fellow is going good. Business and farmlng class town of 2,200. Admission 10-25. A. F. Jenkins, Community Theatre, David City, Nebraska.

BUILT ON BLUFF. (Independent). Just a fair comedy. Others have done the same stunts too often, although it's worth running. Print new. Sunday, yes. All classes in big city. Admission ten cents. Stephen G. Brenner, Eagle Theatre (298 seats), Baltimore, Maryland.

CENTURY COMEDY. Better than they were six or eight months ago. S. H. Borisky, American Theatre, Chattanooga, Tennessee.

GREAT OUTDOORS. (Pathe). Spat Family. As usual a good comedy. They sure do like these comedies here. Print good. Sunday, yes. Audience appeal ninety per cent. All classes in big city. Admission ten cents. Stephen G. Brenner, Eagle Theatre (298 seats), Baltimore, Maryland.

HIGH LIFE. (Mermaid). A very good comedy, laughs galore. Factory class town of 2,800. Admission 15-25. D. W. Strayer, Mt. Joy Theatre (250 seats), Mt. Joy, Pennsylvania.

JACK WHITE PRODUCTIONS. (Educational). The most consistent two reelers on the market today. Everyone a knockout. Speed, action and laughs galore in everyone. Tone, okay. Sunday, yes. Very good audience appeal. Suburban class town of 2,000. Admission 10-30. H. Warren Rible, Mayfield Theatre (210 seats), Mayfield, California.

KID SPEED. (Educational). Star, Larry Semon. A real comedy with more thrills and spills than ever before put in a comedy. We class it as the very best comedy for many moons. James J. Jeffries in the cast helps get 'em in. Buy "Kid Speed." Boost it and it will not fail to please. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Appeals to everyone. Ned Pedigo, Pollard Theatre (800 seats), Guthrie, Oklahoma.

LAUGHING GAS. (Independent) A rather silly comedy, but still you can't get good ones at all times. Tone, none. Not suitable for Sunday. All classes in big city. Admission ten cents. Stephen G. Brenner, Eagle Theatre (298 seats), Baltimore, Maryland.

LOVE'S SWEET PIFFLE. (Pathe). Good, but not as good as some we have had. Farmers and business class town of 2,200. Admission 10-25. A. F. Jenkins, Community Theatre, David City, Nebraska.

As our good friend E. N. Prescott says, "IF YOU FIND SOMETHING GOOD IN ANY PICTURE, DO NOT BE A MISER AND CAN UP THE INFORMATION."

He—like a host of others—derives benefit from these pages of exhibitor information — AND SENDS TIPS IN RETURN. HOW ABOUT YOU?

NAVY BLUES. (Christie). A fairly good comedy. It takes these two-reel comics too long to get funny. Sunday, yes. Factory class town of 2,800. Admission 15-25. D. W. Streyar, Mt. Joy Theatre (250 seats), Mt. Joy, Pennsylvania.

NO FOOLING. (Educational). Star, Cliff Bowes. Not as good as the average Cameo comedy. It really had only one near laugh in it. Hope the others get better. A poorly made splice gave way in this one. Better class, town of 4,500. Admission 10-15. C. A. Anglemire, "Y" Theatre (404 seats), Nazareth, Pennsylvania.

REST. (State Right). An old one, but kids liked it. Sunday, yes. Appeals to kids only. Farm and oil class, town of 508. Admission 10-25. J. A. Herring, Playhouse Theatre (250 seats), Strong, Arkansas.

SMITHY. (Pathe). Star, Stan Laurel. A pretty good slapstick that centers around army life and Laurel's progress as carpenter and boss should go pretty fair with most audiences. Tone, good. Fair audience appeal. General class, town of 1,200. Admission 15-25. E. N. Prescott, Prescott Circuit, Union, Maine.

YANKEE SPIRIT. (Educational). Star, Buddy Messenger. Some good comedy scattered throughout these two reels. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. All classes, town of 2,800. Admission 15-25. David W. Strayer, Mt. Joy Theatre (250 seats), Mt. Joy, Pennsylvania.

Serials

WAY OF A MAN. (Pathe). So far this is a good serial. Played eight episodes. Tone, okay. Good audience appeal. Coal miners, town of 800. Admission 10-20. E. B. Rea, Palace Theatre (468 seats), Velier, Illinois.

Short Subjects

FIGHT AND WIN. (Universal). Star, Jack Dempsey. Not as good as "Fighting Blood" or "Telephone Girl." Has not got the comedy or kick. Worth about as much as "Leatherpushers." I bought them high and got stung. Tone, okay. Sunday, no. Fair audience appeal. Coal miners, town of 800. Admission 10-20. E. B. Rea, Palace Theatre (468 seats), Velier, Illinois.

HERMAN THE GREAT MOUSE. (Pathe-Aesophs Fables). Gave a few laughs, but they don't take with anyone but the youngsters. Sunday, yes. All classes, town of 2,800. Admission 15-25. D. W. Strayer, Mt. Joy Theatre (250 seats), Mt. Joy, Pennsylvania.

JOLLY JAIL GUARDS. (Aesops Fables-Pathe). One of the fair ones. Not like here very well. Sunday, yes. All classes, town of 2,800. Admission 15-25. D. W. Strayer, Mt. Joy Theatre (250 seats), Mt. Joy, Pennsylvania.

KINOGRAMS. (Educational). About the best news I have ever shown. Tone, good. General audience appeal. Town and country class, town of 700. Admission 10-25, 15-35. J. B. Carter, Electric Theatre (250 seats), Browning, Missouri.

Miscellaneous

BLOOD AND STEEL. (State Right). Star, William Desmond. A pleasing program picture. Story of the building of a railroad; lots of action and should please any type of patronage. Print new. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Audience appeal, eighty-five per cent. All classes in big city. Admission ten cents. Stephen G. Brenner, Eagle Theatre (298 seats), Baltimore, Maryland.

BROKEN HEARTS OF BROADWAY. (Irving Cummings). Star cast. Just a fair picture; no kicks or comments of any kind; film in good shape. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. No audience appeal. Small town class and farmers town of 600. Admission 10-20, 10-30. H. W. Batchelder, Galt Theatre (175 seats), Galt, California.

DANGER AHEAD. (State Right). Star, Richard Talmadge. Here is what I call a real gem in five reels with a star that has all the elements any action fan could care for. Oh, boy, but Rich surely makes them move when he gets in action. Great photography. Tone, good. Good audience appeal. General class town of 1,200. Admission 15-25. E. N. Prescott, Prescott Circuit Theatre (250-700 seats), Union, Maine.

HELLION. (State Right). Star cast. Very good western for Saturday night. All liked it. Tone, good. Sunday, no. Good audience appeal. Farmers and business class town of 2,200. Admission 10-25. A. F. Jenkins, Community Theatre, David City, Nebraska.

MARRIAGE MARKET. (C. B. C.). Star, Pauline Garon. (6,297 feet). This is a photoplay you can take some feller's sister to see and not have to apologize afterward. And in spite of the suggestive title it is a clean picture and highly entertaining. Pauline Garon is just a charming little commedienne, and, of course, you know Jack Mulhall. He's always good. If you want something that everyone will like, get this one. City and country class town of 3,000. Admission 10-30. George W. Walther, Dixie Theatre, Kerrville, Texas.

NICK OF TIME BABY. (Tristone). Star, Bobby Vernon. Played this one some two years ago but got back again through another concern. However, it was in good condition and is a real good comedy that will please most of them. Tone, good. Good audience appeal. General class town of 1,200. Admission 15-25. E. N. Prescott, Prescott Circuit (250-700 seats), Union, Maine.

POWDER RIVER. (State Right). A wonderful record of the A. E. F. in the World War. Drawing power here was light. Tone, okay. Not suitable for Sunday. Fair audience appeal. Town and rural class town of 1,028. Admission 10-25. W. C. Geer, Princess Theatre (175 seats), Vermont, Illinois.

RAINBOW RANGERS. (State Right). Star, Pete Morrison. Star in this one has very little to do. Supporting cast consists of Milburn Moranti and three others, which keeps 'em laughing from start to finish. Print good. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Good audience appeal. All classes in big city. Admission, ten cents. Stephen G. Brenner, Eagle Theatre (298 seats), Baltimore, Maryland.

Sennett Studios Working Full Blast on 1925 List

ACCORDING to reports from the West Coast the Mack Sennett Studios have started in full blast on a program for this year that will outdo any of the efforts made in the past by this pioneer producer of screen comedies for Pathe.

The big studio lot is a veritable beehive of activity. Scenario, production and all other departments are working to deliver their full quota of pictures for the coming year well in advance of release dates.

In the directorial field Eddie Cline who directs Ralph Graves has lined up his scripts for the coming season and has already completed the actual shooting on his first comedy for 1925.

Harry Edwards, director of the Harry Langdon comedies has outlined a production campaign that promises to outdo even the past successful efforts of this popular screen comedian. Mr. Edwards has been Langdon's director since the production of "The First Hundred Years."

Perhaps one of the most picturesque directors on the Mack Sennett lot is Del Lord. He started with the Sennett organization as the Sennett comedy patrol wagon driver. Later he became a director and has made twenty pictures on the Mack Sennett lot.

Ralph Cedar and Reggie Morris, two other well known comedy directors, have their plans of production all laid out for the coming season.

One of the newcomers on the Sennett lot is Director Lloyd Bacon. Bacon enters the Sennett fold as one of the best known and most successful comedy directors in the screen world. For many years he directed Lloyd Hamilton, and is responsible for many of the successes of this comedian.

The scenario department, under Arthur Ripley, is running at full swing with a staff of ten writers busy on new scripts. Ripley will be remembered for his many successes in the cutting and editing field of the industry. One of his greatest successes outside of the Sennett comedy lot was the cutting and titling of Von Stroheim's "Foolish Wives."

Felix Adler, formerly a well known single act artist in vaudeville, has charge of the gag men. All the above mentioned departments are running under the direct supervision of John Waldron, General Production Manager. Mr. Waldron personally supervises the titling and cutting of every production that leaves the studio.

Part of the Mack Sennett stock company consists of Harry Langdon, Ben Turpin, Sid Smith, Vernon Dent, Ralph Graves, Madeline Hurlock, Alice Day, Natalie Kingston, Thelma Hill, Virginia Gilbert, Billy Bevan, Leo Sulkey, Tiny Ward, Gala Pasha, Andy Clyde and Peggy Pierce. In addition to these there are the famous Mack Sennett bathing girls.

Nellie Savage in Leading Role

Nellie Savage, beautiful former "Follies" girl and the beautiful Governess of Lowell Sherman's production of "Casanova" has been engaged by Burton King, the director of Jans Pictures, to enact the leading role of the Princess in "The Mad Dancer" the picture he is now producing at the Tec-art Studios, with Johnny Walker and Ann Pennington featured. Miss Savage is under the personal management of Ramon Romeo.

"On the Threshold"

Renaud Hoffman's Production for Producers Distributing Corporation Has Review

Renaud Hoffman, one of the youngest and most progressive of the West coast producers, arrived in New York this week with a print of "On The Threshold," the first of the new series of human interest productions that he will release through Producers Distributing Corporation during the coming year.

On his way East, Hoffman stopped off at Cleveland, where the Producers Distributing Corporation was holding its Central Division Sales Convention, and after seeing "On The Threshold" at a special screening, the Central Division managers went on record in predicting that the picture is destined as a big success in the coming season.

"On The Threshold" features Gladys Hulette, supported by Henry B. Walthal, Robert, Gordon, Willis Marks, Sam de Grasse, Charles Sellon and Margaret Seddon. It will be released by Producers Distributing Corporation on February 23rd.

Has Paris Fashion Pictures

Educational Film Exchanges, Inc. has secured for distribution, two subjects of unusual box-office merit. These subjects are two reels of Paris fashion, displayed by the popular motion picture star, Hope Hampton.

The reels are in full color, made by the new Eastman Color process.

"A box-office film. Is certain to prove a box-office hit in any theatre, for it possesses all the essentials of a good audience picture."

"The Plumber" and "Our Gang" In Pathe List for January 11th

A DIVERSIFIED program of short-subject releases has been arranged by Pathe for the week of January 11. Prominent comedy numbers of the schedule include "The Plumber," featuring Ralph Graves, and the newest "Our Gang" offering, "The Big Town." The January 11th program will also make available the fourth chapter of the current serial release, "Galloping Hoofs," and the Grantland Rice "Sportlight," titled "Rough and Tumbling."

"The Plumber" is the sixth release of the first series of the Mack Sennett Star Comedies. Ralph Graves is the featured player, supported by a strong cast of comedy screen players, including Alice Day, Eugenia Gilbert, Marvin Lobach and Elsie Tarron. The story of the picture concerns a young, good looking plumber who becomes mixed up in a social riot while calling at a home to repair a leak. The picture was directed by Eddie Cline, with titles by Felix Adler and A. H. Giebler.

In "The Big Town" the famous members of "Our Gang" visit New York on the screen for the first time. One of the "Gang" has moved to the big city and has written back to the rest of the "bunch" giving his impression of Brooklyn Bridge, the Woolworth Building and various other points of interest in Manhattan. "Piling" into a box car "Our Gang" sally forth to see the world and with the assistance of the Fifth Avenue bus, the elevated lines and street cars of New York they manage to get a glimpse of everything in "The Big Town." This is the fourth release of the sixth series of these pictures and Director "Bob" McGowan seems to be making each one better than the last.

The fourth chapter of the pathe serial, "Galloping Hoofs," is also scheduled for release on this date. The title of the chapter is "The Duplicate Box." The story of this serial concerns the attempt of sinister forces to get the mysterious sealed box that governs the future of Carol Page. This is one of the most exciting chapters in the story and furnishes an unusually well directed "suspense finish." In addition to Allene Ray and Johnnie Walker, the cast in this chapter consists of Ernest Hilliard, J. Barney Sherry, Armand Cortes, William Nally and Bert Crawford. The production was directed by George B. Seitz from a story written by Frank Leon Smith.

"Rough and Tumbling" is the title of the Grantland Rice "Sportlight," scheduled for January 11. "Building the body as well as the brain" for the combat of life is the underlying theme cleverly developed in this picture.

Pathe Review No. 2 for the week leads with an interesting subject based on "The Siren of the South Seas" under the title of "well-known Nobodies." The second subject is the Pathecolor "Visiting Our Own America" series. The city visited is Honolulu, the Pearl of the mid-Pacific. The Pathe Review for the week finshes with an installment of the "Keep Fit" series. This installment shows the proper way and the wrong way to stand.

"Topic of the Day" No. 2, "One Game Pup," the animated Aesop's Fables film cartoon, and Pathe News Nos. 6 and 7 complete the Pathe program for the week.

Langdon Has Phenomenal Rise in Public Favor

IT was not a circumstance which brought Harry Langdon to the screen, rather was it the result of years of hard and consistent work and the surmounting of real hardship. His early schooling in the art of which he is now one of the representative leaders, was a long and tedious job, replete with hard knocks, few words of encouragement and very little money for his efforts until he created a niche in the professional ranks for himself, due to none other than his own genius.

True to the type he portrays so effectively, Langdon is a comedian at heart, though to meet him off the screen one would not suspect it. His is a quality of humor not acquired. It is inborn. He has laughed his way around and past privation to affluence, and his jovial disposition, it has been claimed, is more contagious than a malignant fever.

As a kid in school Langdon drew funny pictures and impersonated comedy stage types. When he left school he made his living drawing cartoons, but quit that to become an actor. He could not be funny enough on the stage, so he worked a few seasons with the Hamburg and Wallace circus as a clown, before returning to the stage again in an act of his own creation.

But even in this the scope for his natural humor was limited, and the screen appealed to him as the only medium through and by which he could accomplish that which he aspired to, which the stage would not permit; i.e., a series of characterizations in stories of his own construction, and enacted in the natural locale called for in the script, with nothing but the skyline and horizon for a boundary line.

Like any other boy with an innate desire to become a doctor, lawyer or a jockey, Langdon's whole heart was set on his some day being a clown, just so he could make people laugh, and not only has he not been denied his wish, but the scientific thought he has continued to hold, has greatly helped to make of him one of the most popular comedians of the day.

Harry Langdon's rapid rise in public favor is phenomenal. He has proven beyond question that he is justly entitled to the position he now enjoys, although in the opinion of those qualified to judge, he will yet reach heights which have been attained by but a very few. In less than a year and a half he has risen from an unknown screen quantity to one of the most prominent comedy stars on the Pathe program. It has been claimed for Mr. Langdon that ere another twelve months have passed, he will enjoy still another distinction, that of being classed as one of the three greatest artists, in the multiple reel feature productions of the screen.

Smaller and Better Productions Needed, Says Maurice Tourneur

IT is inevitable that the close of each year in the picture industry shall bring to mind expectations and predictions for the coming year. It is therefore only proper that every producer shall become a prophet and each great director a seer.

Maurice Tourneur, considers the year of 1925 significant enough to picture makers to express a few opinions of his own.

A logic of no small and familiar proportions seems to have penerated the industry, judging by the condensed prognostications offered by Tourneur, and his study and knowledge of pictures for many years and from many angles is well nigh invaluable.

Large may be the number of picture makers who have delivered themselves of might perorations on the likes and dislikes of the public. But Tourneur, with no attempt at evasiveness, merely states that it is hard to predict what that public taste for 1925 will be. His only suggestion in that direction is to adopt the almost infallible system of discovery by trial; to produce the best pictures of which each is capable and then to see what happens. Those who make the greatest efforts to produce the best pictures will have the least to fear of public disapproval.

Tourneur has often said and now repeats it more emphatically that there is no such thing as directing for the rabble. Writing for the rabble has been charged to Shakespeare, yet today Shakespeare is among the classics while his so-called highbrow contemporaries are obsolete. "The good remains good," says Tourneur.

"Maeterlinck, when told to write of love only for the screen, replied that it is impossible to do so without salacious misinterpretation creeping in.

"Yet today the director can convey the most convincing love scenes without as much as the necessity of the well known kiss or embrace. What the public will or will not like depends entirely upon the intellect of the director.

"If, in 1925, a director tells you he is not successful because he is artistic, you will be privileged to laugh at him, a thing which used to be considered bad taste. At one time the reputation of being 'artistic' used to be injurious to a director, but in 1925—miracle of miracles—it will actually be an asset. Why? Because the public wants artistic pictures. The same answer goes for the statement that in 1925 artistic successes will no longer be box office failures.

"The 'strictly business' angle is slowly going out and the artistic appraisal of pictures rapidly creeping in.

"The picture industry's greatest present need is 'smaller and better' or 'shorter and sweeter' pictures, and that need will be supplied."

Three January Releases Announced By Warners

THREE releases are announced by Warner Bros. for January. These include a stirring melodrama, a Broadway drama of the bright lights, and a business drama with a hectic domestic background.

They are "The Bridge of Sighs" by Charles K. Harris; "A Broadway Butterfly" by Darryl Francis Zanuck, and "The Man Without a Conscience" from the novel by Max Kretzer, famous Austrian writer.

"The Bridge of Sighs" was directed by Phil Rosen, who made "Abraham Lincoln," and was adapted for the screen by Hope Loring and Louis Leighton. It is from the famous song by Mr. Harris, written around the famous "bridge of sighs" in New York City crossing from the Tombs prison to the criminal courts building, around which has been written many a story. Dorothy Mackail is featured and she is supported by Creighton Hale, Richard Tucker, Alec B. Francis and Ralph Lewis.

"A Broadway Butterfly" was directed by William Beaudine and is adapted from the story by Mr. Zanuck. It is a high-speed drama of life along New York's famous Broadway, with several scenes laid back stage at the theatres, and in and about the White Light district. Willard Louis and Louise Fazenda are featured with Dorothy Devore, Cullen Landis, Lilyan Tashman, John Roche and Wilfred Lucas.

"The Man Without a Conscience" was originally bought by the Ufa Company, of Germany, for the great Continental actor, Emil Jannings, but the Ufa people were persuaded to part with it to Warner Bros. when Ernst Lubitsch recommended it as an ideal vehicle for Willard Louis. It tells the story of a man who rides rough-shod and ruthlessly to success over others, laughing at the heart-aches he causes until he is brought up with a round-turn and has everything he gained through selfishness, stripped from him. James Flood directed it.

Supporting Mr. Louis are Irene Rich, June Marlowe, John Patrick, Helen Dunbar, Robert Agnew and William Orlamond.

Christie Assembling Cast

Wanda Hawley has been signed by Al Christie to play one of the big roles in his next big feature comedy, "Stop Flirting," which will go into production early in January and follow "Charley's Aunt" on the Producers Distributing Corporation program. Ethel Shannon, who recently signed a Christie contract, will also be seen in this picture, and one of the prominent male stars in Hollywood will be signed.

"Up the Ladder"

Edward Sloman is directing Virginia Valli in "Up The Ladder," for Universal.

New Emblem for "Fox News"; Cameramen's College Opens

FOX NEWS begins the new year with a new emblem—a new leader and trailer of striking design and execution.

As seen on the screen this year Fox News is prefaced and concluded with twin emblems of an artistic standard never seen in news reels and seldom approached in film productions of any kind. The new leader carries the name Fox News in great bold lettering on a shield surmounted by an eagle. Across the bottom is the Fox News slogan, "Mightiest of All" On the trailer stands in relief the personfication of what makes Fox News what it is—the cameraman.

The year 1924 witnessed the building of Fox News to its high peak by Edwin C. Hill and the taking over of this production unit by Truman Talley when Mr. Hill was called to the greater field of production at the Fox Film Corporation West Coast Studios.

One of the outstanding achievements of the year by Fox News was the formation of Fox News Cameramen's College. As is obvious to all, the management and editorial control of the news reel is only half the problem; the high standards must be set and maintained among the cameramen, the scource of supply of the material which makes the reel. There is only one way to acquire camermen and that is to train them. Hence, the Camermen's College.

Fox News in the past has maintained its own little school of training, acquiring young men of promise and ability, but the Cameramen's College magnifies a hundred-fold the scope and effect of this central idea.

Some of the 1924 Fox News outstanding exclusive items were: "Armistice Day at the Front," "The life of Man-O'-War," "Air Films of British Fleet," "King of Spain Playing Polo," "Tiger Hunting in India," "Evacuation of the Ruhr," "The Grand Prix in Paris," "At the Front in Chinese War," "'Red' Grange—Football Superman," "Forest Fires That Swept the East," "Reindeer Industry in Alaska," "Holy Week in Old Seville," "Tunnelling Under the Hudson," "Chilean 'Quake and Hurricane," "Laying Ocean Cables to Italy," "Spain's Great Bull Fighters in Action," "Oldest Movies—Bismarck in Life," "Great Slides in Panama Canal," "Latest Fashions—Paris and New York," "Sinking of Submarine O-5," "Battle With School of Sharks," "Eruption of Volcano Stromboli," "Texas' Greatest Oil Fire," "Life of General Pershing," "American Federation of Labor in Convention," and "Last Pictures of Samuel Gompers."

Laura LaPlante to be Star of U's "Winnie O'Wynn" Series

THE home office of the Universal Pictures Corporation announced this week that moving picture rights had been purchased by that company for the "Winnie O'Wynn" series of stories, by Bertram Atkey in the Saturday Evening Post.

This is considered by Universal to be one of the most important story purchases ever made by that company.

The stories will be used for a series of pictures starring Laura La Plante. Universal executives see in Miss La Plante an exact prototype of the "Winnie" of Atkey's stories. There are twenty "Winnie O'Wynn" stories. Nineteen have appeared in the Saturday Evening Post, and the twentieth is to follow shortly. The most recent one appeared in the issue of November 18th. A number of the stories have been collected in books with success. Others have been dramatized.

Carl Laemmle, president of Universal, is very enthusiastic over the stories. "They are the most popular series the Saturday Evening Post has ever published. They are known all over the world," he said in a recent interview. "In the first of the stories, entitled, 'Winnie and the Wolves,' Atkey introduced a character to fiction. The heroine has since become the best known character in present day magazine fiction.

"Winnie is a penniless English girl whose father had warned her that all men are wolves. She has an angelic face, blue eyes, golden hair and an air of youthful innocence that charms and disarms. She likes to call herself 'a little, lone, unprotected girl' but she has more cards up her sleeves than any of her wolfish tempters, every time. She looks like a lamb but she skins every wolf she meets.

"With equal ease Winnie extracts from the would-be wolves expensive hats, lovely coats and even race horses, Atkey portrays her so dexterously, with her tricks and manners, that one is almost sorry for the poor wolves.

"As the stories progress, a more human note is struck. Winnie meets real kindness and wins real friends. She exposes a gang of crooks and finally winds up with a sweetheart. She is a wonder, through and through, and I am sure that Laura La Plante can make Winnie an outstanding character on the screen."

"By Hook or Crook"

One of the most interesting numbers of the Grantland Rice "Sportlight" series, distributed by Pathe, will be released in the near future under the title of "By Hook or Crook." It is based on a fishing trip taken into the north woods by Fred Stone, the celebrated stage comedian and Rex Beach the author. The photography is unusually good while the subject of the lucky beginner will appeal to every true lover of the field and the stream.

Charley Chase and Martha Sleeper in Hal Roach's "The Rat's Knuckles."

Warners' Franchise Holders to Get All Lubitsch Films

ACCORDING to Sam E. Morris, of Warner Bros., reports recently printed to the effect that future Warner productions directed by Ernst Lubitsch would be released through United Artists, or some other distributing organization, are utterly without foundation of fact.

In denying that these Lubitsch productions, made under the Warner trade mark, would find an avenue of outlet other than that now employed by the Warners, Mr. Morris points to the fact that the pictures now being made by Lubitsch are part of this year's group of "twenty," now pledged to exhibitors and all Warner franchise holders, and states emphatically that this procedure will be adhered to in the future the same as in the past.

"It is true," said the Warner Bros. official, "that United Artists and other large releasing organizations, have endeavored to secure the releasing rights to our pictures produced by Ernst Lubitsch. It is generally known that Lubitsch is tied to the Warner organization under a long-term contract, and numerous attractive offers have reached us from releasing organizations who seek the distribution rights to this product.

"These pictures are of such high calibre that any distributor would be glad to secure them. Both 'The Marriage Circle' and 'Three Women' have met with tremendous box-office success and we are confident that his next production will go over even bigger than his previous Warner pictures.

"Consequently, Mr. Lubitsch's next picture in this season's product will be released as heretofore—through our own franchise holders, and so will all other pictures made by Lubitsch under his long-term contract with us."

Doris Kenyon Features On First National Program

FIRST NATIONAL officials have within the past ten days seen finished prints of two forthcoming releases in which Doris Kenyon, recently signed up by the company for a term of years, in featured roles, her work in each of which proves that the foresight of Richard A. Rowland, general manager, in signing her up has been justified.

Miss Kenyon is one of the trio of featured players in Samuel Goldwyn and George Fitzmaurice's production of "A Thief in Paradise," from Leonard Merrick's novel, "The Worldings." Ronald Colman and Aileen Pringle are the other members of the trio. First National is featuring Miss Kenyon in its own production of "If I Marry Again," the other production just shown at the company's home office. Both productions are listed by First National as being among its best releases. The work of Miss Kenyon in each picture is said to have charm, dramatic fire and the appealing personality which assures a big and loyal following to a screen star.

Miss Kenyon is just completing her role in another First National production, "I Want My Man," in which she is co-featured with Milton Sills. This is the picture which Lambert Hillyer has directed, under the supervision of Earl Hudson, at the company's New York studios, and in which First National expects her to take another big step towards screen stardom. Her next featured role will be in "The Half-Way Girl," from Ferdinand Beyher's story, "The Eternal Lamps," which is soon to go into production at the company's New York studios.

She is also slated for a co-featured role with Milton Sills in the new special, "United States Flavor," an epic of the steel industry, which will be made under the supervision of Earl Hudson.

Fine in Comedy Roles

Edward Gribbon a Splendid Specimen of Outdoor Type of He-Man

In the past year Edward Gribbon has come to the front very fast. He is recognized by producers and casting directors as a splendid specimen of the big-fisted, outdoor type of he-man. In his Famous-Players-Lasky productions, "The Border Legion," "Lord Chumley" and "The Code of the West," Mr. Gribbon acquitted himself very handsomely in the comedy character roles allotted to him.

Edward Gribbon is a graduate of two-reel comedies, in which he created an enviable place for himself as a comedy heavy, before deserting the short reel subjects for feature productions.

His services of late have been very much in demand, and he has been prominently cast with most of the leading players, filling engagements on practically every moving picture lot in Hollywood.

At the present time arrangements are being made through which, if plans do not go astray, Edward Gribbon will be featured in a special series of pictures, in stories to be written for him by one of the well known writers of the screen.

Record for Openings

Initial Attractions Supplied for Five Los Angeles Houses

A record achievement in the honor of supplying the opening attractions for new theatres has been registered by Joe Stout, branch manager for Producers Distributing Corporation in Los Angeles, who closed contracts for the initial presentations at five new theatres opening within the past three weeks, in the Los Angeles territory.

The new Mission Theatre at San Diego opened with 'The Chorus Lady," starring Margaret Livingston, the new Bakersfield Theatre at Bakersfield, opened with "Barbara Frietchie," starring Florence Vidor, the new Tulaine Theatre at El Centro, Calif., opened with "The Siren of Seville," starring Priscilla Dean, and both the new Link Theatre at Belvedere Gardens, Los Angeles, and the new Colonial Theatre at South Pasadena opened with the Al. Story by Richard Connell

"Lighthouse by the Sea" "Shown" to Blind by Warner Bros. at the N. Y. Piccadilly

THE Associated Press and most of the New York daily newspapers gave credit to Warner Bros. a few days ago for a distinctly novel exploitation idea in connection with their latest release, Rin-Tin-Tin in "The Lighthouse by the Sea."

Warner Bros. tried to make an audience of approximately 1,000 blind people "see" the picture—and succeeded so admirably that telegraphic news dispatches sent out of New York carried lines to the effect that "the producing company (Warner Bros.) were contemplating the production of a number of special photoplay productions especially for the blind."

The special showing was held Friday morning, December 27th, in the Piccadilly Theatre where the picture began its New York premiere the following day. The affair was promoted in a dignified way as a "scientific experiment" and, as such, won the co-operation of a number of important agencies outside the motion picture business which would not have been interested in any mere "exploitation stunt."

Back of the plan were a number of well-established truths. The first of these is the generally accepted belief that a great deal of the enjoyment which comes from photoplay entertainment is the result of the "atmosphere" which is created by what is shown on the screen—and not merely the photoplay itself. Every good photoplay stirs the imagination of those who see it, and sends their thoughts far afield to paint a lot of pictures which supplement, in an individual manner, what is presented in motion pictures before them.

A second generally accepted truth is that media usually associated with motion picture presentations, notably carefully arranged music and studied surroundings of quiet and contentment, are almost equally as important in the creation of this "atmosphere" as the picture itself. A third accepted truth, with no specific motion picture application, is that Nature's law of compensation provides that when any human being is deprived of any one sense, all the other remaining senses are sharpened to make up to the individual, insofar as is possible, the loss of the one sense; people who are deaf usually have wonderful eyesight and a marvelous sense of touch—and people who are blind usually hear particularly well and also have a wonderful sense of touch. And it is outstandingly true that blind people have imaginations infinitely more vivid than those who can see.

For the purposes of the "scientific experiment" conducted by Warner Bros. in association with the Piccadilly Theatre management, it was determined to use every means of intensifying photoplay appeal by the greater development of things which could be associated with the picture to the end that the more vivid imaginations of the blind people in the audience might build mentally the situations which their sightless eyes could not comprehend.

The Ziegler Magazine for the Blind, a publication in the Braille raised letter system, was approached and heartily endorsed the idea of the experiment. The Ziegler people circularized the blind in the metropolitan area and delivered to the theatre at the appointed time an audience which comfortably filled the theatre. The few "sighted" people there were the guides who had brought their blind companions through New York's streets from homes miles away.

John Hammond, musical director of the Piccadilly orchestra, had prepared a special musical score, written from a viewpoint unusual from that generally used in motion picture theatres. The score—like the big classic overtures—was planned to "originate" thought—not to supplement thought originated by something else. Mr. Hammond, himself, at the big organ of which he is such a master, assumed the big share of the burden of interpreting this score, although the entire Piccadilly orchestra was in the pit to help when called upon.

Edward S. Colling, dramatic critic of the New York Evening Post—who was an actor before he turned to the business of writing—had prepared for the occasion what those interested chose to describe an "atmospheric narrative" which was dramatically read while the photoplay was being projected This narrative—which was in no sense mere description of what was being shown on the silver sheet, but was rather the story of "The Lighthouse by the Sea," in novel form—had been carefully synchronized, first with the action of the picture and secondly, with the musical score so that the human voice was heard while the music was low and subdued, and was logically swallowed up in the volume of the score as situations on the screen and in the score developed which called for crescendos.

While the showing was promoted entirely as a "scientific experiment," the fact that there were present in the audience many people who are rarely entertained at theatrical performances, influenced those in charge to do everything within their power to provide a morning of exceptional entertainment. An added feature of note was the appearance of Mme. Louise Hunter, of the Metropolitan Grand Opera Company, who sang four selections in manner calculated to make all those who heard her watch and wait for the brilliant career which they are sure must be the reward of her unusual talents of voice, personality, and dramatic ability. Mme. Hunter attended the performance through the courtesy of Gatti Cazzazza, director of the Metropolitan company. Another added feature was the appearance of Alfred A. Robyn, one-time feature organist at the Capitol Theatre, whose personal interest in the blind has made him develop a special interpretative piano specialty which is of exceptional interest and merit.

The enthusiastic applause accorded the picture by the blind folks—applause which oftentimes threw the narrative entirely out of synchronization—is proof of the success of the experiment from one angle at least; those present thoroughly enjoyed being there. Whether they "saw" the picture—and just what they saw—remains to be checked up. And it is being checked up in this way: The Ziegler magazine people have offered a cash prize for the best "review" of the picture written by a blind person. This best "review" and other written comment on the experiment will be available within a week or ten days.

In conjunction with the showing—for the first time in the history of the motion picture business—there was printed a three-thousand word synopsis of the photoplay's story in two systems of raised-letter text, the Braille and New York Point. Copies of this synopsis were distributed to the blind as they left the Piccadilly auditorium.

New York Reviewers Like Barthelmess in "Classmates"

FIRST NATIONAL reports from all cities where Richard Barthelmess' new Inspiration picture has been shown are that "Classmates" is going to rank right along with "Tol'able David" in popularity.

"Classmates" had its first New York showing at the Strand Theatre last week and the New York reviewers fell in line with those from other cities who have pronounced this production one of Barthelmess' best.

F. Mordaunt Hall, of the New York Times: "The most stirring chapters in Richard Barthelmess' latest vehicle, 'Classmates,' are those that were photographed at West Point. They are sincere and informing, revealing the disciplinary mill through which the young men from all walks of life pass before they become officers of the United States Army. One gains a vivid impression of the glories and traditions of the military institution. The life of the budding officers is cleverly traced from the day they enter the academy to the time when they graduate."

Louella O. Parsons, of the New York American: "I never fully realized what a good showman Richard Barthelmess is until I sat down to write my review of 'Classmates.' The scenes in the Barthelmess picture at West Point are done with real military truth. The settings in the picture are exceptionally good and the adaptation is one of Josephine Lovett's best. 'Classmates' is the kind of picture Dad can be sure Mother and the girls will enjoy and even young Bob, simply because it is nice and clean and wholesome. It is an honest to goodness box office attraction."

Edward D. Pearson, New York Bulletin: "If there is a red-blooded kid in New York City who can't get a kick out of a thrilling story about a youngster's life at West Point, he doesn't want to go to the Strand this week. It is a picture that has a real bang to it. The scenes at West Point, with the historic backgrounds, are as good as anything we have seen in some time."

Dorothy Herzog, of the Daily Mirror: "Richard Barthelmess scores the biggest hit of his career. You will gasp from sheer delight at the perfect drilling of the cadets. Woven through these fascinating scenes is a gripping action story, with Dick as the perfect hero."

Goes Big in England

"Covered Wagon" Making New Box-Office Records in Europe

"The Covered Wagon" continues to be the sensation of the British film trade, following its general release several weeks ago. Cables received by E. E. Shauer, director of the foreign department of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, from John C. Graham, managing director of Paramount's British companies, tell of a long string of new box-office records which have done much to improve business conditions in many cities. Exploitation methods used so successfully in this country have been quite generally adapted, even in the smaller cities, and bookings originally made for one week very often have been extended to cover a second week.

The British troops stationed at Aldershot, the great military depot, were so enthusiastic over the Paramount special, arrangements were made for a two weeks engagement. Members of the theatre staff were dressed up as Indians and gave a brief prologue similar to the one used in the picture's premier at the London Pavilion. Indians and covered wagons were quite generally used by many exhibitors, and it is declared that "The Covered Wagon" has given a great impetus to the movement for better exploitation.

Increases Organization

Hunt Stromberg has renewed his contract with Harvey Gates, scenario writer, and Sol Polito, chief cinematographer. He has increased his staff by the addition of E. Richard Schayer as special title writer and William S. Heywood as production manager, who will be directly in charge of the Priscilla Dean unit.

Other members of the Stromberg staff who continue during the ensuing year are Doris Dorn, associate scenario editor; Harry L. Decker, film editor-in-chief; Robert DeLacey and Harry Marker, film editors; Edward Withers, art director; John Rohmlfs, business manager, and Phil Gersdorf, director of publicity and advertising. Tom Forman, who was signed under a long-term contract several weeks ago, will head the directorial staff.

"Holds the interest. Good audience stuff. The kind you don't often go wrong on. Should make a thoroughly good box-office bet."

Levee Says Picture Hoodoos and Witches are Only Bad Pictures

THIS may be the twentieth century, but the motion pictures still have their hoodoos, witches and hobgoblins. According to M. C. Levee, president of the United Studios, they are, as a matter of simple statement, Bad Pictures!

With the largest winter production schedule in the history of the United Studios practically assured, M. C. Levee does not hesitate to predict the maximum amount of activity for the coming year—and a maximum amount of quality.

"In the past, production had either been curtailed at this time of the year or discontinued entirely in a number of studios," said Mr. Levee. "But, if other studios are to judged by United, it is exactly the opposite this year and promises to continue along these lines into next year.

"It argues particularly well for West Coast picture production that in a number of specific instances producers who were bent on making pictures in New York have returned without even shooting a scene there. A number of prominent producers at the United plant who have investigated the New York producing facilities with an eye to more expedient production in that metropolis have declared that conditions there are no better today than they were a year ago or more.

"In pointing out that maximum production will be reached at the United Studios, I have failed to call attention to the greatest factor which makes such a thing possible. It is the minimum cost.

"I also have reason to believe that the choice of malleable screen material will not hinge very much on the type or personality of the star. The story will come first, for therein lie the basic elements from which the magnet of sustained interest must be welded.

"In this connection I might mention that the forthcoming year will see many radical steps taken to develop new acting personalities. There is a great demand for them and at present this demand is seemingly met with more than one established star in a single production. This is a direct misinterpretation of the public wish.

"Limiting the field to a comparatively few stars is stifling the much needed introduction of new faces on the screen. It also unduly raises the earning capacities of those few.

"The time has yet to come when the world's greatest histrionic talent is not obscure. There is always a new 'find' to be made if the search is instituted. In some quarters, however, the delusion has run riot that stars can be made by producers. Retrospect supplies the refutation in that it is only the public that is empowered to act in the appointment to stardom. Producers who have tried to make stars have failed miserably. A star is a star only because he or she has been accepted by public grace on the strength of personality. The public is fickle, but that's another story.

"The producer can know which personality will 'take' with the public only by giving the young bloods a chance, infusing new acting corpuscles into the arteries of picture production. The public body is strong enough to assimilate or reject it.

"Speaking for my own producing company, I shall endeavor to make the coming year one of the most prolific in the presentation of new stars. Let the old stars shine where they may—new ones are ever so much more interesting, and sometimes better!"

"Greater Than Marriage"

Genevieve Harris, of the "Chicago Post," Praises Vitagraph Production

In the opinion of Genevieve Harris, motion picture expert of the Chicago Post, Vitagraph's "Greater Than Marriage," produced by Victor Hugo Halperin, "is a skillfully made picture, generous with scenes that will thrill those to whom 'back stage' is as unfamiliar but as fascinating as fairyland."

In the course of her review, written just after the start of the run of "Greater Than Marriage" at the Randolph Theatre, Chicago, Miss Harris said also, "Louis Joseph Vance's 'Joan Thursday,' upon which this photoplay is based, has a double appeal, for it takes place in the always alluring atmosphere of the theatre. Since the desire to go on the stage is almost universal, at least in feminine hearts, a story of the stage is in itself always of interest. This picture sets forth its story in a direct, pleasing fashion.

"Marjorie Daw is, in this writer's opinion, always a good reason for seeing the picture she plays in, and her work in this is quite up to her standard. It is a more emotional role than those which usually fall to her lot, and she goes through it with quiet naturalness and sincerity.

"In the role opposite is Lou Tellegen, as the husband who doesn't wish his wife to continue her work in the theatre. His role is sympathetic or not, according to your agreement with his ideas in the story. At any rate you will enjoy watching this couple work out their difficulties."

"Some of the finest humor seen on the screen in a long time. Enough thrills to satisfy the craving of the most ardent seeker of the 'step on it' type."

Work Starts on "Boomerang," Schulberg-Belasco Special

H. P. SCHULBERG'S most important production undertaking for this year was begun recently when camera work on David Belasco's famous play, "The Boomerang," commenced. The film version of this widely known stage success will be released early in 1925 as a Preferred Special.

Coincident with the starting of production, Mr. Schulberg announced a cast of unusual strength, headed by Anita Stewart and Bert Lytell. This is the first time that either of these players has ever been featured in a production for release on the independent market. In signing them Mr. Schulberg believes that he has taken another step toward securing the best there is, for the independent field. Miss Stewart's former screen activities have been fostered exclusively by Vitagraph, First National and Cosmopolitan Productions while Lytell has appeared only for Metro, Paramount and First National.

Both players are receiving extensive publicity for their work in "Never the Twain Shall Meet," another special that has been many months in the making.

For the supporting cast of "The Boomerang," Mr. Schulberg has signed Arthur Edmund Carewe, Philo McCullough, Ruth Dwyer, Francis Feeney and Winter Hall.

The direction is in the hands of Gasnier and while it marks somewhat of a departure from the usual type of story with which he works, he anticipates a picture of greater box-office power than he has ever made. The adaptation has been written by Eve Unsell from the stage manuscript by Winchell Smith and Victor Mapes.

In bringing "The Boomerang" to the screen, Mr. Schulberg states that he is filling a long-felt want for a superior sort of comedy drama. It is his belief that this valuable stage property will be unique among the material at the disposal of theatre owners this year.

Big Belasco Success

The screen rights to "The Boomerang" were secured at a record price due to the fact that this is the most successful play ever produced on Broadway under the Belasco auspices. It holds one of the three long-run records in the American theatre, having exceeded six hundred consecutive performances. After its withdrawal from New York, the original company played a season and a half in Chicago and established new records in other large cities. It has been presented in every sizeable town of the country during recent years when it has been available to stock companies.

"By presenting 'The Boomerang,'" said Mr. Schulberg, "I am carrying out my theory that its rare combination of good comedy and fine drama can be blended into an entirely new sort of picture. It will be a real innovation in screen entertainment."

Virginia Valli's Rapid Rise

From an Unknown Player in 1921 to Star of the Silver Sheet Four Years Later

What a difference four years can make. At the beginning of 1921, Virginia Valli was practically an unknown player on the silversheet, but during the months that have passed she has through no other medium than her own determination, consistent effort, and study, attaind the coveted position in the cinema world which she started out to reach.

Today Universal is starring Miss Valli in every production in which she appears. She has five of these starring vehicles to her credit already, while work on the sixth, an adaptation of Samuel Hopkins Adams novel, "The Siege," has just begun. Eugene O'Brien is being featured in this new picture play, which Svend Gade will direct.

That Virginia Valli's versatile talents are recognized by other than her own producers, is best evidenced by the fact that arrangements were made whereby her services were loaned to the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer and First National Pictures recently, that she might play the title feminine roles in "Wild Oranges," for the former, and "In Every Woman's Life," for the latter, after which she returned to the Universal studios to star in "Up the Ladder," a screen version of Owen Davis's stage play, directed by Edward Sloman.

First National Bookings

Box Office Success of Previous Group Speeds Sales of Leader Group

Exhibitors in key city points and in smaller towns are closing up rapidly for First National's new Leader group of pictures for this winter, the coming spring and early summer, according to a statement emanating from E. A. Eschmann, head of the company's distribution department.

"Our Pace Maker releases for the fall and winter of 1924-25 have demonstrated such artistic quality and box office 'drag' that exhibitors have no hesitancy in taking the full group of Leader releases for distribution between February 1 and August 31, 1925," said Mr. Eschmann. "This is not only a tribute to our selling organization, but primarily to the quality and box office magnetism of First National product. If we hadn't made and procured excellent pictures during the season just closing we could not have sold them to more exhibitors than had ever before booked First National pictures, nor could we have started the new season with such a remarkable showing for the Leader group of pictures.

"The seller must have something to sell that the buyer wants or he doesn't sell. And what the exhibitor-buyer wants is pictures that will draw paying business to his theatre. The Pace Makers have done, and are doing, that, and the Leaders hold every promise of exceeding them in public popularity and hence in box office value."

The January Program

Century Announces Four Two-Reel Comedies for That Month

Abe Stern, vice-president of Century Comedies, announces that his company will release four two-reel comedies for January through the Universal exchanges. They are "Looking Down," "The Aggravatin' Kid," "Her Daily Dozen" and "Taming the East."

"Looking Down" stars Wanda Wiley and is a combination thrill-comedy production written by Georges Fouret. "The Aggravating Kid" and "Taming the West" are Buddy Messinger pictures. "Her Daily Dozen" is Edna Marian's third starring vehicle for Century. Her second picture, "My Baby Doll," made especially for Christmas week, is making records for itself and Century comedies all over the country.

Pickford-Fairbanks

After more than six months of inactivity, Mary Pickford and Douglas Fairbanks will both plunge into production shortly after the new year dawns, according to a statement from the studio recently.

Mary will probably be the first to start, and her first offering of the new season is expected to be an original story by Marion Jackson, which Marshall Neilan will direct.

The Josef von Sternberg story, which she had planned to do, with von Sternberg directing, has been laid on the shelf until Spring. In the meantime, von Sternberg will direct one film for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

Josef von Sternberg is the young director who recently sprang into prominence with his phenomenal production, "Salvation Hunters." It was this picture that won him the coveted privilege of directing Miss Pickford.

Doug says he will start soon after January 1. At present he is working on a story with a Spanish setting which gives promise of being his first 1925 vehicle.

Mildred Harris Signed

Will Play Feminine Lead Opposite Harry Carey in "Beyond the Border"

Announcement was made this week that Hunt Stromberg has signed Mildred Harris as leading lady for Harry Carey in his forthcoming production, "Beyond the Border."

From this announcement it would seem that the Chaplin family past and present are drifting into the fold of Producers Distributing Corporation. Mildred Harris is the former Mrs. Charles Chaplin and as previously announced, Syd. Chaplin will be seen in the coming Al. Christie feature "Charley's Aunt."

"Beyond the Border" will be the first of the new series of Harry Carey westerns to be released by Producers Distributing Corporation during the coming season.

Johnston Back from Trip

Announces Completion of Third of Metropolitan Melodramas

W. Ray Johnston, president of Rayart Pictures, on his return from a three week's sojourn in California, announces the completion of the third of the series of fast-action stories known as Metropolitan Melodramas starring George Larkin, the well-known "stunt" actor, which are made for Rayart release. This third picture is called "The Right Man," and is from an original story by Harry P. Crist. Jack Harvey produced it under the supervision of George Blaisdell. Featured in support of George Larkin are Milburn Morante, the comedian, Mary Beth Milburn, Jerome La Gasse and Olive Kirby.

Another picture completed during Mr. Johnston's stay in the West was "Super Speed," the third of the series of six Harry J. Brown Productions for Rayart release starring Reed Howes, the "Arrow Collar Boy," "Super Speed," as its name implies, is an auto racing story. It was directed by Albert Rogell. Mildred Harris is featured in support of young Howes.

Mr. Johnston signed for twenty-four new productions for the 1925-1926 Rayart program, details of which will be announced at an early date.

Completed in January

Last Three of Producers Distributing's Current Program

The current program of Producers Distributing Corporation will be concluded in January with the release of the three final numbers, "Let Women Alone," "Soft Shoes" and "Off The Highway."

The January schedule of releases is headed by the Frank Woods production, "Let Women Alone," a unique comedy-drama produced under the direction of Paul Powell, with Wanda Hawley, Pat O'Malley and Wallace Beery in the leading roles, supported by Ethel Wales, J. Farrel MacDonald, Harris Gordon, Betty Jane Snowden, Lee Wilard and Marjorie Morton.

The second release of the month will see Harry Carey presented by Hunt Stromberg in "Soft Shoes." This is a San Francisco underworld story that furnishes an odd background for the western character playd by Carey.

The final release of the month, that completes the program for the current season, will be "Off the Highway," starring Jacqueline Logan. This production, originally scheduled as a Regal Picture, will come to the screen as a Hunt Stromberg Production, made under the producer's personal supervision.

"Married Flirts" a Big Hit

A crowded house of approximately 1,700 persons welcomed the showing of "Married Flirts" at the National Theatre in Louisville, Ky., recently, on the occasion of its opening there, and gave the picture an exceptionally hearty reception. Mr. Libson, owner of the National, also reports that a very satisfactory showing of this photoplay has taken place at the Palace Theatre in Cincinnati, Ohio, and adds that he is "more than pleased" with the showing made by Metro-Goldwyn pictures to date.

"Delightful, wholesome romance .. A fine production and an all star cast."

Metro Film Breaks Record

Plays to Capacity Business in Hendersonville and Pittsburgh, Wire Showmen

Congratulations from exhibitors on having released so popular a picture as Victor Seastrom's "He Who Gets Slapped" are stamping this Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production as one of the biggest box office "bets" of the season. Among the most recent is an unsolicited telegram from Ray Beall of the Rex Theatre in Hendersonville, N. C.

"Played 'He Who Gets Slapped' Monday to wonderful business," wired Mr. Beall, "in spite of continuous downpour of rain. Let no exhibitor say that it is essentially a highbrow or a big town picture. It will go over big in either hamlet or city. Unquestionably one of the year's best. This also voices audience's opinion. Chaney gives his greatest performance as 'He'."

This message corroborates the testimony of other exhibitors throughout the country. L. K. Sidney of Loew's Aldine Theatre in Pittsburgh, Pa., recently wired Metro-Goldwyn as follows:

"'He Who Gets Slapped' a positive knockout. Broke all box office records at Loew's Aldine Theatre, Pittsburgh."

Del Ruth to Direct Features

Well Known West Coast Comedy Director to Work on Longer Length Productions

For many years rated as one of the best comedy directors on the Coast, Roy Del Ruth is about to leave the two-reelers to cast his lot with directors of the more serious and longer length productions.

There are two Del Ruth brothers, both directors. One is Hampton, the elder, but the one we are talking about is Roy, who left the Sennett lot the early part of last year to accept a proposition to take over one of William Fox's comedy troupes, and for whom he has just completed his sixth Imperial.

Mr. Del Ruth has been identified with the direction of short length comedies for a period of eight years, four years of which he directed Mack Sennett Comedies, including the first three which Harry Langdon made on that lot, namely: "Look Pleasant," "Shanghaied Lovers," and "The Cat's Meow."

Mr. Del Ruth has had several offers of late to direct comedy drama productions, and it looks as though he will very shortly desert the short reel subjects for those of longer length.

Beban Picture Schedule

"The Greatest Love Of All" Listed For Associated Exhibitors Release in January

An announcement has been received from the Associated Exhibitors home office to the effect that the George Beban feature production, "The Greatest Love of All," which was produced at the Tec Art Studios, New York, has been scheduled for January 11 release.

"The Greatest Love of All" was adapted for screen presentation by Harrison Carter from an original story written by George Beban, entitled "His Sweetheart." The prominent actor is also accredited with the direction.

Mr. Beban, who appears in the leading characterization, has surrounded himself with a highly competent cast, including J. W. Johnston, Wanda Lyon, Maria Di Benedetta, H. Henry Gordon, Tammany Young, Helen Holcomb, Charles Slattery, Arthur Earle, "Bull" Sharkey, Nettie Belle Darby, C. Zangrilli and Baby Evelyn.

Smith's Wire to Rock

Albert E. Smith, president of Vitagraph, arrives in New York January 4. Mr. Smith telegraphed Mr. Rock upon leaving the Coast:

"I am coming East to celebrate our anniversary with you. At our convention, last year, when you assumed the office of general manager, I promised you and your sales organization great pictures for 1924-25. The production department has delivered in 'Captain Blood,' 'The Clean Heart' or 'The Cruelties of Life,' 'The Beloved Brute,' 'The Redeeming Sin,' 'Greater Than Marriage,' and I am bringing with me a print of 'Pampered Youth,' which I consider one of the most thrilling modern stories ever filmed.

"Let every member of the Vitagraph organization release that this company goes into its twenty-eighth year armed with the biggest and best pictures it has ever made. Vitagraph has kept its pledge to exhibitors and public. It has made clean, wholesome, action pictures with a real entertainment punch."

Films for Prisoners

Western Warden Writes Vitagraph Regarding Effect on Quarters of San Quentin

Warm praise of high class motion pictures for their beneficial influence on prison inmates is contained in a letter received by W. C. Wheeler, Vitagraph's branch manager in San Francisco, from James A. Johnston, retiring warden of the California State Prison, at San Quentin. Mr. Johnston probably has made greater use of films than the head of any other penal institution in the country, and in thus serving the California convicts he has received much aid from Vitagraph. In his letter to Mr. Wheeler, he says:

"After more than eleven years of service as warden of the state prison at San Quentin, I have resigned my position in order to take up other work. I will be leaving here January 1st. Before I go I want to thank you for your courteous cooperation and generous help in furnishing films.

"Part of my plan of treating and training inmates of the prison so as to fit them for better living when they again have liberty has been the occasional showing of motion pictures whenever it was possible to secure films calculated to make the right impressions and to teach the needed lesson. In the endeavor to carry out this plan I have been helped considerably by your generous co-operation, and I take this opportunity of recording my appreciation of the kindness extended so many times by yourself and Mr. Skinner, your booker."

"Hot Water" Upsets "Girl Shy"

According to a wire received at the Pathe home office, Harold Lloyd in "Hot Water" has broken all previous records on "Girl Shy" at the Liberty Theatre, Seattle, Washington.

The telegram reads as follows:

Lines all day Saturday and Sunday opening day of Harold Lloyd in "Hot Water" at the Liberty Theatre. Attendance grows each day better by one thousand dollars than corresponding days of "Girl Shy." Looks as though "Hot Water" is best Lloyd audience picture to date and results indicate biggest of Lloyd's engagements at this theatre.

Now Weber and Fields

Famous Stage Stars to Appear in Picture Theatres

In addition to the publicity and world-wide popularity gained by Weber and Fields during their fifty years before the public on the speaking stage, the famous stars will go into the picture theatres following extensive and valuable free publicity.

For several months the Saturday Evening Post has published a series of articles, each covering several pages and profusely illustrated, dealing with the lives of Joe Weber and Lew Fields and the picturesque events and reminiscences of their long career on the stage. This series of articles occupy a total of over thirty-five pages.

Following the serial publication of this biographical story in the Saturday Evening Post, arrangements have been made to publish it in book form, and this will be issued in time to be used in the exploitation of "Friendly Enemies," which will be released by Producers Distributing Corporation on March 16.

Pathe's "Etiquette" Series

What is expected to prove one of the most interesting feature subjects yet released by Pathe Review has just been put into production and deals with the subject of "Etiquette." The production will be released in six installments, and while humorous devices will frequently be resorted to so that the principles of modern etiquette can be imparted without giving offense, every angle of this important subject will be covered authoritatively.

Selections of "Best Pictures" for 1924 Include Three First National "Specials"

HONORS of a critical, popular and box-office nature continue to be showered upon three of the "specials" distributed during the year just closing by First National Pictures, Inc. The three productions are Frank Lloyd's picturization of Rafael Sabatini's novel, "The Sea Hawk," Al and Ray Rockett's production, "The Dramatic Life of Abraham Lincoln," and Joseph M. Schenck's Norma Talmadge picture, "Secrets," from the stage play of that name.

The publishers of Film Daily selected for its "Film Year Book," the "ten best pictures" of the year. The poll on these was taken from selections of motion picture reviewers on eighty leading newspapers, trade and fan publications. "The Sea Hawk" stood second on this list with fifty-one votes, as against fifty-two for the picture standing first, "The Thief of Bagdad." "Secrets" stood fifth on the list with thirty-three votes, and "Abraham Lincoln" ninth with thirty votes.

In the Motion Picture News Box-Office Honor Roll for 1924, in which are listed the fifty-two outstanding pictures of the year as told by its "Check-Up," made wholly by exhibitors from the box-office angle, occur the same three "specials" along with other First National releases. The check-up rating of "The Sea Hawk" was 94, with 97 as the highest rating. "Secrets" had a rating of 93 and "Abraham Lincoln" 87. Other First National releases in this group of fifty-two are "Flirting With Love," "Boy of Mine," "When a Man's a Man," "In Hollywood with Potash and Perlmutter," "Lilies of the Field," "Black Oxen," "The Love Master" and Richard Barthelmess' latest release, "Classmates."

The three First National "specials" were among the seventeen pictures for the year declared the best from which one was selected for the Adolph Zukor $10,000 award, by a committee of judges made up of George Barr Baker, chairman of the First International Congress of Motion Picture Arts; Ellis Parker Butler, president of the Authors' League of America, Inc., through which the award was made; Edward Childs Carpenter, president of the American Dramatists; Allan Dwan, director of "Robin Hood"; Charles Dana Gibson, the artist; Frederick Roy Martin, general manager of the Associated Press; Mary Roberts Rinehart, novelist; Elmer Rice, playwright and scenario writer; and Robert Sherwood, motion picture critic on Life.

Ronald Colman, Doris Kenyon and Claude Gillingwater in a scene from "A Thief in Paradise," a First National picture.

When the list of productions for the $10,000 award had narrowed down to seventeen, announced by the committee along with the publication of its award, as possessing "marked excellence," "The Sea Hawk," "Abraham Lincoln" and "Secrets" were in the list.

"That three of our 'specials' should appear in the honor list of three such selections of the year's outstanding productions speaks volumes for the ability and the skill which goes into their making," said E. A. Eschmann in commenting on the matter. "These pictures were selected as 'specials' in advance of production, on the merit and screenability of their stories, were given every care to make them big in story, in human appeal and in box-office attractiveness throughout their filming. When it came to distribution they were marketed on a special plan and given a type of exploitation that was both new and very effective.

"Coming on top of the great business done by 'The Sea Hawk,' 'Secrets' and 'Abraham Lincoln,' and the very large list of bookings still to be played, First National has cause to feel it has gauged public taste quite correctly in the making of its 1924 'specials' and to feel even greater confidence that its list of 'specials' for 1925 will surpass them in artistic worth and in box-office drawing power.

"Certainly no picture could hold out more promise than 'The Lost World,' now rapidly nearing completion and soon to have its initial showing. I have seen it screened and am convinced that it is going to be a sensation in the industry, for its novelty, its dramatic worth and the excellence of cast and production.

"Colleen Moore's 'Sally,' from the Ziegfeld musical comedy success of three seasons, was selected as 'special' even before the scenario had been prepared, as was 'United States Flavor,' an epic of the steel industry, to be produced under the supervision of Earl Hudson with Milton Sills and Doris Kenyon featured. Norma Talmadge's new picture, 'The Lady,' recently completed, is classed with these productions and was made as a special.

"Other forthcoming 'specials' are being prepared for in the same way and they will be marketed in a manner befitting their worth."

"Charley's Aunt" Completed; Critic Lauds Feature Comedy

THE filming of the historic comedy classic, "Charley's Aunt," was completed at the Christie studio last week and the first print will be a sort of New Year's present to the Producers Distributing Corporation when it arrives in New York this week.

Al Christie credits his director, Scott Sydney, with turning out "the funniest feature comedy ever made." This, according to Christie, is not an exaggerated statement when it is considered that Charley's Aunt" is one of the most celebrated pieces of stage farce material ever written, with a record of earning upward of $3,000,000 for its author. The play holds many records in the comedy line and is rivalled as a classic only by plays such as "Uncle Tom's Cabin" and "East Lynne."

Nothing is definite as to the length in which "Charley's Aunt" will be released, but it is likely that it will be between seven and eight reels when it reaches the screen. It was previewed before regular motion picture audiences in Los Angeles and suburban towns while the preliminary cutting was done in this length and also in slightly shorter form, and a committee of exhibitors who were at the preview with the Christie staff favored the length at which the sample print stands at present.

Monroe Lathrop, Los Angeles dramatic critic, attended one of the cutting previews of the picture and stated in his columns in the Los Angeles Express a few days ago that "Charley's Aunt" in its film form is what "the Rialto speaks of as a knockout."

"It has been done so well that it will achieve three positive things on the professional side," he wrote. "It will establish its leading figure, Syd Chaplin, as a star in his own right; it will place Al Christie in the select circle of feature comedy producers, and it will give the director, Scott Sydney, a reputation in the foremost rank for creation in this field that has been too long withheld."

The Producers Distributing Corporation has scheduled "Charley's Aunt" for release on February 2 as the first offering on the coming season's program.

Ormiston to Manage Theatres

Harry Ormiston, assistant publicity man to Paul Gulick and director of publicity for Century Comedies, has been engaged to direct the publicity and advertising of a chain of theatres through Florida. Ormiston, through his many years in the film business, has built up a splendid reputation as a leading writer and advertiser. Lately he had been assisting Paul Gulick with the editing of the Universal Weekly.

Ormiston's new duties commence early in January, but prior to his joining the Florida organization he will spend several days at Palm Beach with his wife and baby daughter.

"Crimson Runner" Completed

Stromberg-Priscilla Dean Picture is Now Being Edited

"The Crimson Runner," Hunt Stromberg's picture of chaotic social life in Vienna, in which Priscilla Dean is starred, was completed this week and turned over to the film editors for final cutting.

This story was especially written for the star by Harvey Gates, and Hunt Stromberg has given it an exceptionally elaborate production with a cast including Taylor Holmes, Ward Crane, Alan Hale, Mitchell Lewis, Bernard Siegel, James Neill, Charles H. Mailes, Elsa deLindt and Arthur Millette.

Tom Forman directed, with Sol. Polito in personal charge of the camera work. It will be released by Producers Distributing Corporation on March 2.

Weiss Bros. Sign to Handle Scott's New Western Series

LOUIS WEISS, executive head of Weiss Brothers' Artclass Pictures Corporation, announced this week that contracts had been signed between the Weiss Brothers organization and Lester F. Scott, Jr., producer of the popular Buddy Roosevelt and Buffalo Bill, Jr., series of thrillo-stunt features, to produce a third series of similar high class Westerns for distribution by Weiss Brothers.

The name of the star and the title of the new series will be announced later, Mr. Weiss stated, several well known Western names being under consideration for the featured role in the series.

Mr. Scott, who came East before the holidays to discuss plans with Weiss Brothers, relative to the 1925 series of features starring Buddy Roosevelt and Buffalo Bill, Jr., returned to the Coast on Tuesday, December 30th, and immediately upon his arrival there will begin work on the initial production of the new series.

He expressed himself as being much pleased with the results of his trip and particularly the arrangements made for the new series, which will be put out on an elaborate scale in advertising, accessories and exploitation aids, as well as increased production costs, in order to maintain a standard of box office quality equal to the forthcoming 1925 Buddy Roosevelt and Buffalo Bill, Jr., series.

Mr. Scott stated that he hoped to have the first number of the new series ready by March 1st, 1925, and the initial feature of the Buffalo Bill, Jr., 1925, series will also be in the laboratory by April 1st, Mr. Scott said. The first feature of the new Buddy Roosevelt series is scheduled for March 15.

During his stay in New York, Mr. Scott secured several stories, both for the new series and for Buddy Roosevelt and Buffalo Bill, Jr., and he expects to plot those for immediate production, while enroute for Hollywood, so that no delays will occur in beginning production after his arrival at the studio.

"Good light-hearted humor with a lot of human interest. A nice balance of pathos plus a pretty little romance. Smiles and a tug at the heart strings."

"Fashions for Men"

Exceptional Cast for John M. Stahl's Louis B. Mayer-First National Picture

Lewis Stone, Percy Marmont, Alma Rubens, Raymond Griffith and William V. Mong have been signed to head the cast of "Fashions for Men," John M. Stahl's next production for Louis B. Mayer, which First National will release. Stahl plans to begin production Thursday, and says several other well-known players will be added to the cast soon. The director has been collaborating with Benjamin Glaser, playwright and adapter, on the continuity for this brilliant play by Ferenc Holnar. The story is expected to give the director many opportunities to display the same directorial brilliance shown in "Husbands and Lovers" now at Loew's State Theatre.

"Fashions for Men" will be the third consecutive picture Lewis Stone has played in at the M.-G.-M. studios. He stepped from "Cheaper to Marry" to "Kings in Exile," and now will begin Stahl's picture as soon as he finishes his role with Victor Seastrom. He has recently appeared in Stahl's "Husbands and Lovers," Sam Rork's "Inez from Hollywood," both First National releases, and will soon be seen in First National's special "The Lost World." Marmont recently finished the lead in Frank Borzage's "A Man's World" at the same studio.

The picture also will mark the return of Raymond Griffith, clever screen comedian, to the big studio in Culver City, after a period of more than a year. He was under contract to the old Goldwyn company for a time, and made big strides in his screen career with "Red Lights," "The Eternal Three" and other pictures.

Roy Del Ruth With Warners

Roy Del Ruth, considered one of the best comedy directors on the west coast, has just been signed by Warner Bros. His first picture for the firm will be announced right after the first of the year. It was Mr. Del Ruth who was responsible for the rapid rise of Harry Langdon on the screen. He directed the popular comedian's first six pictures, which made him one of the outstanding comedy successes of last year. John Patrick, who has made quite a hit in several of the latest Warner Bros. pictures, has been signed to a long term contract by the firm. Mr. Patrick's performance in "The Dark Swan" was particularly effective.

Irene Rich, George Fawcett and John Roche in Warners' "A Lost Lady."

Title Changes

First National Pictures, Inc., Announces Four New Names

In addition to changing the title of Struthers Burt's "Interpreter's House" which Lambert Hillyer is now completing at the First National studio in New York City, under the supervision of Earl Hudson, to "I Want My Man" First National has also changed the title of three other productions which will go into work in New York very soon.

Ferdinand Reyher's story "Eternal Lamps" has been changed to "The Half-Way Girl." Doris Kenyon will be featured in this production according to present plans.

Stephen Vincent Benet's story, "Uriah's Son," in which Ben Lyon will have the featured role, has been changed to "Every Woman's Desire."

Peter B. Kyne's story, "The Making of O'Malley," has been changed to "Woman-Handled."

Samuel Goldwyn and George Fitzmaurice recently announced the changing of the title of the picture now in the making based upon May Edginton's "World Without End" to "His Supreme Moment."

Frank Lloyd has changed the title of his latest First National picture from "Judgment," the title by which May Edginton designated her story, to "Her Husband's Secret."

Warner Brothers Studios

The calm after the storm prevailed this week at Warner Bros. Hollywood studio. Last week production activity was at its height with four pictures under way. This week only one is active at the studio. Mal St. Clair finished "On Thin Ice," James Flood completed "The Man Without a Conscience" and Harry Beaumont and his "Recompense" Company left for Banning, Cal., leaving only Herman Raymaker, directing Rin-Tin-Tin in "Tracked In The Snow Country" to hold the plant. The lull will only last for a few days. Mal St. Clair will soon be directing "How Baxter Butted In," and after the holidays work will be started on "The Eleventh Virgin."

Miss Faire in Recompense"

Virginia Browne Faire, who has played in many recent pictures calling for charm and personality, has been selected by Warner Bros. to play Angelica in "Recompense."

Exploitation Campaign and Advertising Aids on "Speed"

IN line with the progressive policy announced by Banner officials for 1925, George H. Davis and Samuel J. Briskin, directing heads of Banner Productions, Inc., have determined to extend their advertising and exploitation facilities still further during the coming season so that exhibitors showing Banner pictures may have every possible aid in putting over each feature released by them in a way commensurate with its full box office value.

To this end, it is stated, they plan to present their forthcoming all-star attraction, "Speed," produced by Ben Verschleiser, under the direction of Edward J. Le Saint from Grace Sartwell Mason's Saturday Evening Post story, on a scale more elaborate than any previous feature on the Banner list.

They will do this, not only because they believe that "Speed" marks the apex of the high entertainment quality maintained by Banner features up to date, but also as an evidence to the industry of the policy they propose to pursue during the coming year on all their attractions.

A new type of press book, striking in design and most distinctive in character is to be prepared on "Speed," which will contain exploitation and advertising aids in the greatest variety and "stunts" and novelties of many different kinds adaptable to the special needs and requirements of all classes of theatres.

National "tie-ups" of various kinds are also being arranged, which will enable the exhibitor to profit to the fullest extent at a minimum of expense and trouble. Further and more detailed announcement concerning these "tie ups" will be made shortly.

West Coast Critics Praise Vitagraph's "Captain Blood"

"ONE of the greatest films of the country."

"One hundred per cent. entertainment."

These sentences are extracts from reviews of "Captain Blood," the David Smith production, in two Sacramento newspapers, when this Vitagraph special opened its run at Godard's Theatre.

In the course of his review in the "Sacramento Bee," Roy V. Bailey said:

"This reviewer went to the theatre feeling some very serious qualms about the result. Sometimes the films do justice to a book, but more often they do not, many a good story being distorted or vulgarized out of all resemblance to itself at the hands of some so-called smart scenario writer. But in this case not only has full justice been done to Sabatini's romance, but Vitagraph has made a film which is 100 per cent. entertainment from the opening scene to the closing fade-out. Both interest and attention are caught under a spell which seldom or ever relaxes. The leading roles are splendidly handled by J. Warren Kerrigan and Jean Paige and the supporting cast throughout has been well chosen."

Said the "Sacramento Union": "In one of the greatest films of the century, 'Captain Blood' has brought to life stirring scenes of buccaneer days on the Spanish Main, blending into the story a love romance which is gripping from start to finish. In 'Captain Blood' Kerrigan has reached the height of stardom, and no film player could have outdone him in the lead work of the entire feature."

Said the "Kansas City Post" when "Captain Blood" opened at the Mainstreet Theatre in that city: "It's a corking good picture and will no doubt have its place among the best of the year. Kerrigan makes the sort of hero that appeals to both sexes. Jean Paige is a charming little movie heroine. Put 'Captain Blood' down as a Christmas gift to yourself."

The Oakland, Cal., "Tribune" said: "'Captain Blood' is one of the best dramatic tales of sea life that has been filmed. Intensive action is the dominating feature. J. Warren Kerrigan and Jean Paige give remarkably fine characterizations."

Mae Murray and Gilbert Head Cast of "The Merry Widow"

ERICH VON STROHEIM has completed the cast of "The Merry Widow," headed by Mae Murray and John Gilbert. Twenty-five players have been signed for characters in the big production. Director von Stroheim is directing for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer from the famous operetta by Franz Lehar. Included in these twenty-five are well-known players and also players who have never appeared on the screen before. Von Stroheim, no respecter of "names," has filled the roles with types rather than with favorites.

Opposite Mae Murray, as previously announced, is John Gilbert, in the role of the gallant Prince Danilo. Roy Giusti is the villainous Crown Prince; George Fawcett the Montenegrin King, and Josephine Crowell is his dowager queen.

Tully Marshall is cast as Baron Sadoja, the aged roue. Don Ryan, newspaper and magazine writer, is the adjutant to the Crown Prince, and Count Roger Conti is Danilo's adjutant.

Other players, with their parts, are Danilo's footman, Sidney Bracy; innkeeper, Hughie Mack; innkeeper's wife, Ida Moore; Flo Epstein, Charles Magolis; Harvey Karols as Jimmy Watson; Edna Tichenor as Dopey Marie; Gertrude Bennet as Hardboiled Virginia; Zala Zorana as Christine; D'Arcy Corrigan as Horatio; Zack Williams as George Washington White; Francis Primm and Clara Wallacks as the Hanson Sisters, chorus girls, Louise Hughes, Anna Maynard, Helen Howard Beaumont and Beatrice O'Brien.

Director von Stroheim, who adapted the story to the screen with the aid of Benjamin Glazer, has this Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production well under way, filming having begun two weeks ago.

Goodside Crashes Through

For the first time in the history of Springfield, Mass., an exhibitor has booked a picture to play both his houses in first and second run. The Capitol and Bijou Theatres, operated by Abe Goodside, are running Pathe's "Into the Net." The second run house, the Bijou, has booked the feature length version of the picture, while Goodside's first run house, the Capitol, two blocks up the street, is running the production in serial form.

McKenna Novel for Warners

"Thou Shalt Not," is Tentative Title to Stephen McKenna Story

Negotiations were completed this week by Warner Bros. for one of the novels of Stephen McKenna which will be made in next year's program under the title of "Thou Shalt Not." Just what its final title will be depends largely on the treatment given the story.

Stephen McKenna is one of the most popular writers of the modern school. His "Sonia" and "Vindication" had a tremendous flare when they appeared.

The novel bought by Warner Bros. is from the press of Little, Brown & Co., and is done in Mr. McKenna's best style. It is, first of all, the story of a woman, a superfluous woman, and her unsatisfied emotions. It is full of dramatic intensity and varied emotions, all making for excellent picture material.

"Lots of audience appeal . . They're going to like this picture because it keeps close to everyday folks."

Hatrick of International Sees News Reel Demand

THE most striking development in the newsreel business during the last twelve months, according to Edgar B. Hatrick, general manager of the International Newsreel Corporation, has been the growth of a keen discrimination on the part of the moving picture public as regards real news in its newsreels. Not only does the average movie fan now demand pictures of important events, but he demands them while the news is fresh in his mind from the newspapers. No stale or second hand news pictures will satisfy the new model, supercritical newsreel enthusiast, Hatrick asserts. His findings are based upon a careful study of the newsreel situation.

"The newsreel game has undergone a decided change during the last year," said Hatrick, discussing that phase of the moving picture industry in a recent interview. "The public has been very discriminating. It wants news in its newsreels. It has come to look upon the newsreel as a necessary supplement to its morning paper. Today the average movie fan demands news pictures of all important events. Many go to the theatre especially to see these pictured events. Also, they want these news pictures right away.

"Of course, the newsreels themselves have educated the public to this state of affairs. Where newsreels formerly were about half news and half novelties, today newsreels contain more than 90 per cent news pictures. This change has meant energy and enterprise of the most spirited kind on the part of the newsreels, and will continue to mean more and more in the future.

"Speaking for the International Newsreel, which is distributed by Universal, I want to pledge a year of unprecedented efficiency and endeavor for 1925. This means that International will extend its facilities and go to far greater lengths in order to get all the news first, and get its newsreels to the screen first.

"The newsreel game has developed into the greatest game in the world for competitive effort. The struggle to beat the other fellow is far more acute than the newspaper game ever was. A newsreel man not only has to get his pictures first but he has to get the negative back to the home office first, and the home office has to get the newsreel to the exhibitor first.

"That is where International has made every effort in the past to be of prime benefit to the exhibitor. That this efficiency bears fruit is to be judged from the vast jump in our accounts during the past year. In fact, we never had such a surprising year. Our first-run business has increased enormously and our general business has mounted steadily skyward. On one hand this increase is due to the general increase in newsreel showings, but on the other hand much of International's 1924 increment has been in accounts transferring from other newsreels to International.

"This is not strange, considering the remarkable record of news 'beats' and exclusives made by International in 1924, not to mention the constantly occurring instances of highly efficient service. Our outstanding feat of the year was in obtaining, exclusively, the only moving pictures made during the trans-Atlantic trip of the ZR-3. As in the case of all International Newsreel service, no matter how costly nor how difficult to obtain, these pictures were included in our regular newsreel release, at no added cost to our exhibitor patrons.

"Another outstanding feat was the release in the United States of the first pictures of the 1924 Olympic Games in Paris, four days ahead of any other newsreel. This feat will go down in newsreel history as an example of enterprise.

There were many other notable International Newsreel achievements in 1924. In all we had 42 news 'beats' and exclusives almost one a week. In the present high pressure status of the newsreel industry this is a noteworthy record. It has had much to do with our sales increase. Exhibitors are studying their newsreels more carefully than ever before. They know that their public demands the best and the quickest, and so they 'shop' for the best and the quickest.

"Watch newsreel first runs in 1925 as compared to second and third runs. You will see more and more theatres demanding newsreels while the news is still in the paper. International is all set to meet this demand. We expect the greatest turnover in the history of the newsreel."

Paramount Signs Harlan

Will Play Opposite Bebe Daniels in "The Crowded Hour."

Kenneth Harlan has been signed to play the leading male role opposite Bebe Daniels in her next picture, "The Crowded Hour," according to an announcement made today by Jesse L. Lasky, first vice-president in charge of production of Famous Players-Lasky Corporation.

"The Crowded Hour," which will be produced in the Paramount Long Island studio, is adapted from the stage play of the same name by Edgar Selwyn and Channing Pollock in which Jane Cowl scored a hit.

Bebe Daniels, who returned to Hollywood for the Christmas season following the completion of "Miss Bluebeard" in the Paramount Long Island studio, will report in New York shortly after the New Year.

Betty Compson's Next Picture

Stage Play, "Moonflower," Selected, and Will Be Titled "Eve's Secret"

"Moonflower," the stage play in which Elsie Ferguson starred on Broadway, will be produced by Paramount under the title of "Eve's Secret," with Betty Compson in the starring role, according to an announcement made by Jesse L. Lasky, first vice-president of Famous Players-Lasky Corp.

Alan Crosland, who recently completed the production, "Contraband," in the Paramount West Coast studio, will direct "Eve's Secret."

Miss Compson is now engaged in making "New Lives for Old," under the direction of Clarence Badger.

C. B. C. Release Schedule Moved Ahead, to Meet Conditions

ACTIVITY in the line of production having been greater than was expected earlier in the season, C. B. C. has been forced to advance its schedule for some time. As their pictures now stand they have released in the Columbia Series "The Foolish Virgin," "The Price She Paid," "The Midnight Express" and "One Glorious Night."

On January 1 they will release "A Fool and His Money," the film version of George Barr McCutcheon's novel, featuring Madge Bellamy and William Haines, with Stuart Holmes and Alma Bennett.

February 1 they will release the film version of Cosmo Hamilton's social drama, "Who Cares," with William Haines, Dorothy Devore, Wanda Hawley, Beverly Bayne, Lloyd Whitlock, Vera Lewis, Charlie Murray, William Austin, Vola Vale and Carrie Clark Ward.

March 1 is the date set for "Fighting the Flames," a story of a fire-fighter's rise and triumph, and April 1 is the scheduled time for "After Business Hours," which will be a social drama.

In the Perfection Series there has been remarkable progress. "The Battling Fool," "The Beautiful Sinner," "Women First," "Tainted Money," "The Fatal Mistake," "Racing for Life" and "A Fight for Honor" have been completed and released.

The last of the series, all of which featured William Fairbanks and Eva Novak, will be released February 1 under the title of "The Fearless Lover."

This will clear the production decks for the next Perfection Series, of which there will be at least six.

Sigrid Holmquist Signed

Sigrid Holmquist, who was prominently cast in C. C. Burr's "Youth for Sale," and who more recently appeared as the feminine lead to Johnny Hines in "The Early Bird," has just affixed her signature to a contract with East Coast Films, Inc., of which C. C. Burr is managing director, to portray the leading feminine role in Johnny Hines' next feature, "The Cracker Jack," which goes into production next week at Miami, Fla.

The complete cast, aside from Johnny Hines and Sigrid Holmquist, includes J. Barney Sherry, Henry West and Bradley Barker.

The "Big Five," Warner Bros. to Meet and Select Stories

ALL of the Warner Brothers will gather in the New York office the week of January 10, when a conference will be held by members of the firm and company officials to act on suggestions from franchise holders on the production program for next year.

H. M. Warner, president of the company, will arrive from Hollywood January 2, and Jack Warner, in charge of production at the West Coast studio, is due on January 10. Production of this year's output will be substantially completed by that time.

While several books for the new "Screen Classics of 1925-26" have been bought, negotiations are pending for a number of other best sellers, and it is to decide on the pick of their options, the final complete lineup of the new program, and the order of production that the Warners are getting together.

Franchise holders of the company have been meeting in New York on and off for the last month, discussing their ideas of what next season's product should be, and Warner Bros. will be guided largely, the firm states, in selecting the rest of their stories by suggestions from the men who sell the output.

After the meeting, and announcement of next year's plans, Jack Warner will go to Europe to look over the market conditions where the firm's product is sold, and H. M. Warner will return to Hollywood to complete this season's program.

Negotiations were completed this week by Warner Bros. whereby they secure the screen rights to "Compromise," by Mrs. Jay Gelzer, a book that, when published last summer, caught on to popular fancy to such an extent both here and in England that it has since run into several editions. It was published in England under the title of "Jane Trevor" and created a furore. A novel of morals, manners and standards of the day, it has quite a vital love story. Its theme is that all life is a compromise.

Warner Bros. also made another big buy this week when they obtained "Rose of the World," by Kathleen Norris, which will be made in the early part of next season with William Beaumont, who directed "Beau Brummel" and is now making "Recompense," handling the megaphone.

Mrs. Norris is one of three or four most popular women novelists in America. She has a vast and appreciative audience, and "Rose of the World" is one of her long list of successes.

Novel Under-Sea Dance In "A Thief In Paradise"

GEORGE FITZMAURICE has introduced in his latest production, "A Thief in Paradise," an exotic dance novelty staged on the bottom of the sea, reported by those who have seen the photoplay screened privately to be one of the outstanding screen novelties of the year.

New and striking photographic effects evolved by Arthur Miller, veteran cinematographer, and unique stage settings designed by Anton Grote, make this under-sea replica one of the most novel and beautiful screen fantasies ever photographed.

By a combination of photography and set design, gigantic fish swim about among the coral trees and huge sea shells. Even the human participants in the under-sea dance make their entrance as divers swimming down from the surface to the immense shell on the ocean's floor which serves as the hiding place of the stellar feminine dancer who is clad in a symbolic costume of pearls.

In order to enhance the brilliancy of the picture, the entire set, including coral, shells and floor of the sea, was finished in bright silver and the costumes of the dancers were made entirely of especially constructed luminous silver and gold cloth. Even the natural flicker of light and shadow which characterizes scenes actually filmed under water was reproduced by the technicians.

The marine dance tableau constitutes a play within a play in "A Thief in Paradise." It is the entertainment provided by the host at a lavish engagement party given in honor of two of the principals and also has an important dramatic value in developing one of the many dramatic moments of the story.

Doris Kenyon, Ronald Colman and Aileen Pringle are featured in this First National picture.

"Our Hospitality" in Paris

Buster Keaton in "Our Hospitality" at the Madeleine Theatre, Paris, drew over 111,000 francs to the box-office the first week of its engagement (instead of the 11,000 francs previously reported). This amount broke all existing records at the Madeleine.

In one day "Our Hospitality" drew 24,000 francs to the theatre.

Lige Has a Georgia Peach

Lige Conley of Educational-Mermaid Comedies, has picked a Georgia Peach for his new leading lady in Estelle Bradley of Atlanta. Miss Bradley won the Atlanta Constitution Beauty Prize over five hundred contestants and represented Atlanta at the Atlantic City Beauty Pageant held last summer, at which she won first prize for the southern division.

Gen. Charles King Is Author

Inadvertently the name of General Henry King was credited as the author of a series of Frontier Days stories to be produced for Clifford S. Elfelt distribution, in a recent advertisement in this publication. The name should have been Gen. Charles King, famous military authority and novelist.

"Under Fire," the first of the King series of pictures, featuring William "Bill" Patton and produced by Albert I. Smith has been completed and prints are now at the various independent exchanges.

How to Use This Chart

First—Booking! Get accurate footage and look up date review appeared in Moving Picture World. Then you can decide if the picture will suit your audience.

Second—Play date! When you set your play date, consult this Chart to set the picture on a date that will not conflict with preceding and following pictures; avoid a sequence of similar type of story; space out your specials.

Third—Laying Out Program! This chart shows star and kind of story as well as accurate length; you can lay out a balanced program easily, avoid over—and under-length program.

Fourth—Exploitation! Through this chart find the review in Moving Picture World; this will give a good synopsis, the all-important cast and a fine line on exploitation possibilities as well as the things you'll want to soft-pedal.

Always! Turn to this Chart when you want accurate information in simple form and easy to get at a glance. AND—for Your Time

Many exhibitors tell us that Moving Picture World Guide to Releases is the most accurate available to them. We know it is the most complete in that it is the only chart containing names of stars, type of picture, and all necessary information to the exhibitor.

We want it to be absolutely accurate—Moving Picture World recognizes the importance of accurate footage information, etc.

If you notice an error in FEATURE footage, or any other major error, we will pay you $1 for the effort on your part of writing us a letter telling us the correct facts.

In many territories local censorship cuts alter the footage to a minor extent. Don't write to tell us of these unimportant variations. But in any case where you feel that our figures will work a real hardship on the exhibitor following them—shoot us the word and we will shoot the dollar for your trouble.

Moving Picture World is willing to back up its complete confidence in the accuracy of its chart with its money.

We can't do more. No one else does as much. We thank you.

PROJECTION

EDITED BY F. H. RICHARDSON

Unreasonable

In a letter from a projectionist down in New Jersey the following occurs:

The manager in the theatre where I held my third position as projectionist was a solid ivory top who had the impression that all I had to do was trim the carbons, splice film and start the projectors going. He further expected me to repair the films which came from the exchange in a miserable condition. Most theatre managers in this vicinity cannot be made to understand that the character of reflection from a screen, or projector intermittent speed and things of that sort really mean anything at all to them. About all that interests them in projection is to have a projectionist who is able to drag or jam through anywhere from eight to a dozen reels of film in a given schedule time. "Series type generator" or some other sort, means absolutely nothing whatsoever in their young lives. So long as the generator pumps juice with a fair degree of regularity, they should worry.

He Still Exists

That this type of manager still exists and is, we all very well know. He pays for films from an exchange. Just as a plain matter of the commonest kind of common sense, the price paid presumes films in condition to project, since films unfit for projection are NOT A SHOW because they cannot be used to put on a show when received. HE IS PAYING FOR FILM INSPECTION AND REPAIR, WHICH THE EXCHANGE HAS TACITLY AGREED TO PROVIDE. Still he insists that his projectionist DO THE WORK HE HAS PAID THE EXCHANGE TO DO, AND DO IT FOR NOTHING. IS THAT COMMON SENSE OR IS IT FAIR????

This type of Manager can see nothing in expert knowledge of screen surfaces, which means that he is AN EASY MARK FOR THE SCREEN SALESMAN, who can, and very often does sell him a screen totally unfitted for use in his auditorium. This means that the box office values of the productions he has paid good money for will be and are reduced exactly in proportion to the lack of proper reflection value of the screen in his theatre. He answers all protests of the projectionists with: "The screen salesman knows his business, I guess." And he is right, too. The screen salesman does know his business—but his business is to SELL SCREENS, and very, very many excellent SALESMEN don't either know or care Adam whether the screen surface they sell to a theatre fits the conditions in that auditorium or not. THEY ARE THERE TO SELL A SCREEN. I have had a case under consideration very recently where a manager of this type had just paid a very respectable sum for a rather highly polished metallic screen. For a house say twenty feet wide by 125 feet deep it would have been a splendid surface, and would give corking results. It is installed in an auditorium fifty-two feet square, with the front row of seats only fifteen feet from the screen.

Fade-Away Fierce

The fade-away is, of course, nothing short of fierce. The projectionist, who really was merely a machine attendant (Operator) knew nothing at all about such trifling matters as that. After the screen was bought, but before it arrived, he got himself nicely fired, and a real projectionist took his place. When the new screen came this man took one look at it and told the manager it was totally unfit for the work, at which the "manager" merely laughed—until the screen was duly installed and the projectionist got him to start from center back and walk slowly around to the side. Then he woke up, but the screen was in. The projectionist sent for me, it being in an outlying suburb of New York City. What I said to that manager was very much to the point. I don't think he will laugh or sneer when projection problems are again brought to his attention—not right away anyhow. I offered to get the matter straightened out for him, provided he would send for his projectionist and offer a decent apology to him for sneering at the correct information BEFORE THE SCREEN WAS INSTALLED AND PAID FOR. Somewhat to my surprise he did this, whereupon I did as I agreed, though I had quite a row with the maker of the screen before he agreed to take it back—he did not make a surface suitable for that theatre—and refund all the money except enough to cover the expense he had actually been put to. This I regarded as his due, and as just penalty for a manager who did not believe there were any real problems beyond the very simple ones named by the writer of the letter I am commenting on attached to motion picture projection.

The manager who fails to realize the BOX OFFICE VALUE of high grade projection results, and to understand that high grade results may only be had by the application of wide, varied and expert knowledge on the part of the projectionist, LACKS ABILITY AS A MOTION PICTURE THEATRE MANAGER. In the managerial class he ranks with the machine attendant (Operator) in projection, and the results he produces in revenue at the box office will be far below those which might be produced by a wide awake, capable manager.

S. L. Rothafel (Roxie) started managing a "theatre" in a room over a saloon down in a small Pennsylvania town. He did not stay there because he very soon saw the possibilities of and for the application of energy, BRAINS and real ability to ALL things which went to make up perfection in and of the chief thing the motion picture theatre has to sell—the picture upon the screen. Today "Roxie" manages the largest theatre in all New York City and the finest too. "Roxie" built the Rialto, which was then considered the very ne plus ultra of motion picture theatres. He managed it for a long while, until he built the Rivoli, which was even larger and better than its sister, the Rialto. Then he built and has for five years managed the Capitol, which is said to be the largest in seating capacity of any theatre in the world, and certainly is nothing short of magnificent in all its appointments.

The manager who sneers at projection problems ("Roxie" doesn't do anything so foolish), and thinks that screen surface problems don't amount to anything would swallow his Adam's apple whole did he get just one glimpse of "Roxie's" weekly or monthly salary check.

"Roxie" gets those checks very largely because of the fact that he did recognize the box office value of perfection in all that goes to make up the motion picture show. Had he not done so he probably would still be managing a small theatre for a small weekly check.

Question No. 191—What would you consider as the maximum efficient viewing angle of metallic surface screens?

Question No. 192—Describe a mirror screen. Name what you consider as their objectionable features and tell us under what conditions you would recommend the purchase of a mirror screen.

Question No. 193—Would you consider the installation of a concave surface screen as advisable under any conditions? Give us the reasons for your answer, and in detail. We want to know what you know about this whole proposition.

Question No. 194—Give us your views as to the height the screen should be above the floor under various conditions, and why should that be the height.

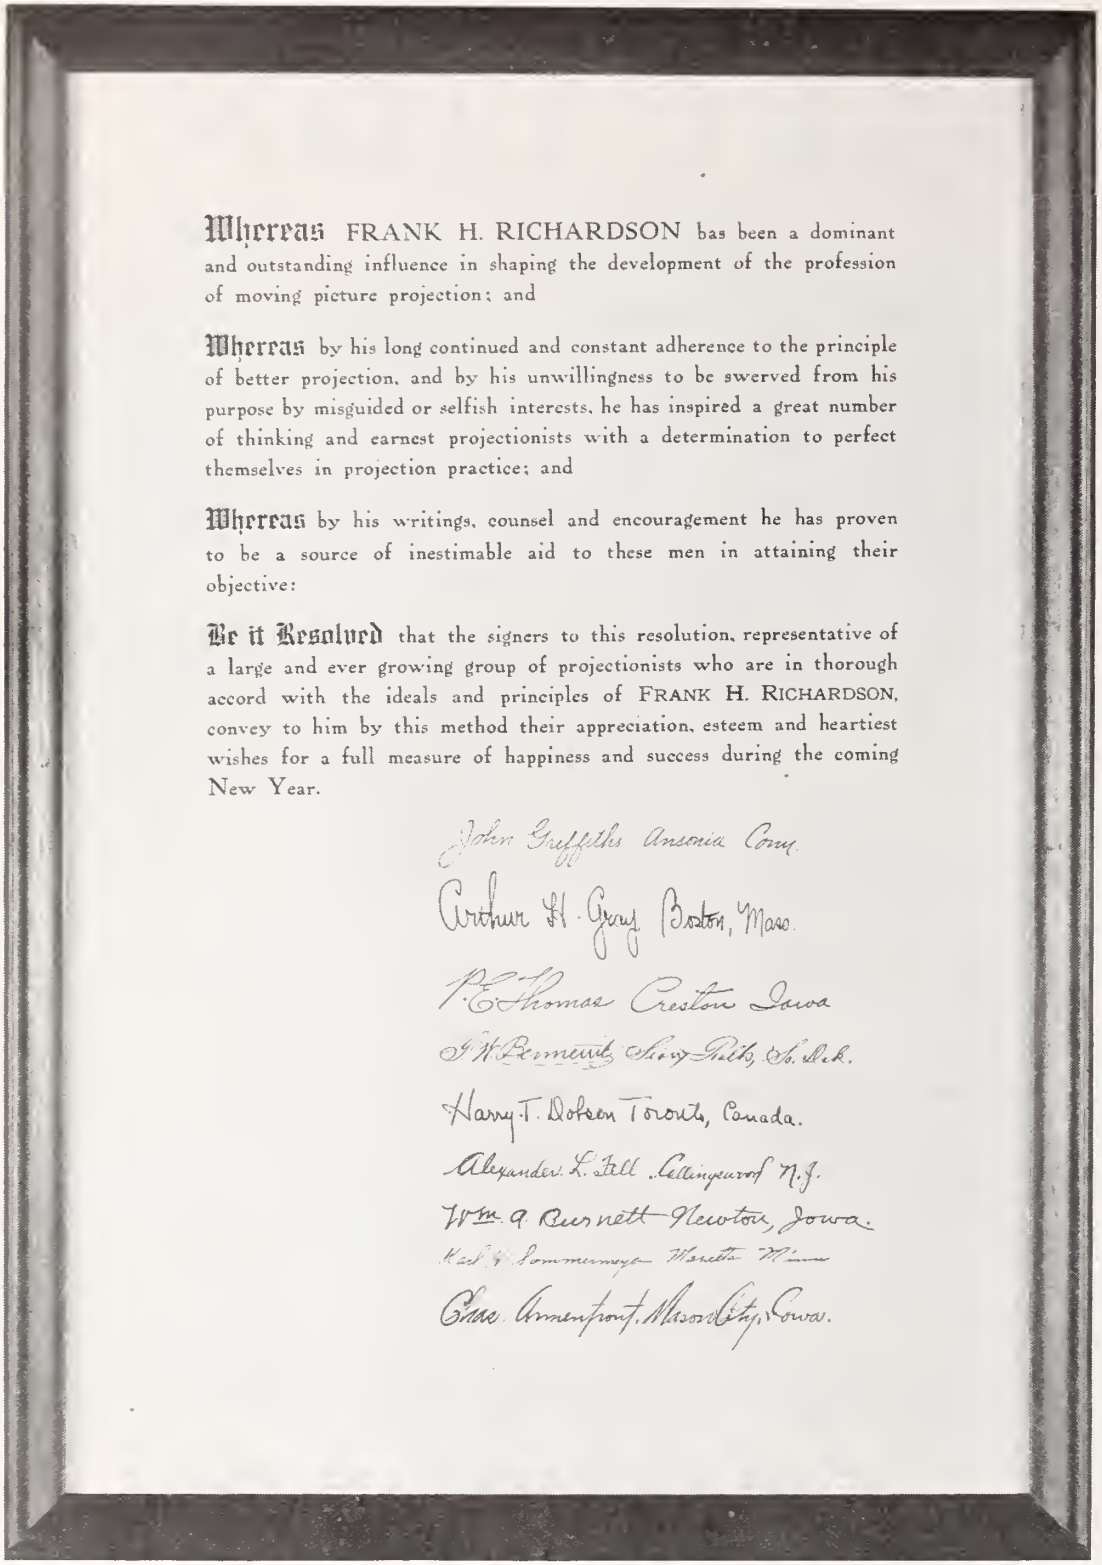
Question No. 195—Give us your views as to what the outline of the picture ought to be, and what considerations should govern the coloring of the various things immediately surrounding it.

New Student

Francis Dinty Moore, City Theatre, Taunton, Mass., joins the Bluebook School at question 171. He apologizes for not having got busy sooner, but remarks that "it is better late than never," which is true, though "better never late" is still gooder. However, we welcome you, Friend Moore—only hoping that Maggie doesn't beat me up, as she does every one who—well, you know the "Bringing Up Father" series.

Bluebook Error

Francis H. Moore, Projectionist City Theatre, Taunton, Mass., calls attention to the fact that "Fig. 93" in last whole line on page 346, should read Fig. 94. Owners of Bluebooks will do well to pencil in this correction. I am indebted to brother Moore for his action. Why not get in on the Bluebook School, friend Moore? It cannot but be of value to you.



Whereas FRANK H. RICHARDSON has been a dominant and outstanding influence in shaping the development of the profession of moving picture projection; and

Whereas by his long continued and constant adherence to the principle of better projection, and by his unwillingness to be swerved from his purpose by misguided or selfish interests, he has inspired a great number of thinking and earnest projectionists with a determination to perfect themselves in projection practice; and

Whereas by his writings, counsel and encouragement he has proven to be a source of inestimable aid to these men in attaining their objective:

Be it Resolved that the signers to this resolution, representative of a large and ever growing group of projectionists who are in thorough accord with the ideals and principles of FRANK H. RICHARDSON, convey to him by this method their appreciation, esteem and heartiest wishes for a full measure of happiness and success during the coming New Year.

The Testimonial to Frank H. Richardson For His Services In Behalf of Projectionists Wherever the Broad Beam Of Light Plays on the Silver Sheet.

CHRISTMAS of this year brought me hundreds of cards from friends scattered all over the United States and Canada, and a few from "foreign countries." I wish to personally thank every one of you who thought enough of me to go to that trouble, and to assure you that the act was keenly appreciated. I have the cards parked all over Kingdom Come at home, where I can look at them, and think to myself: There's a lot of the boys who like me after all. But something beside cards arrived, for right smack out of a clear sky came the neatly framed Resolution, which is pictured herewith, together with a letter from Arthur Gray, Boston, Mass., which I shall treasure as long as life shall last.

Why? Well, because, after reading that letter and looking at the Resolution, which was evidently not prepared without a LOT of trouble, I just KNOW that those who did this thing really do think kindly of rough, old Richardson, and that, as the letter says, deep down in their hearts there lies something very akin to affection, of which I have strived and shall continue to strive hard to be worthy of.

Really, words fail me, men. I just can't tell you how deeply I appreciate your act, or how nearly Brother Gray's letter came to being wet with moisture, which springs not easily to the eyes of men who have reached almost to the three-score point in life, and whose lives have been well filled with hard-fought battles.

I have been honored with many honorary memberships in unions, and other bodies, and such things are, of course, appreciated; BUT this is a thing apart unto itself. Brother Gray's letter reads:

"MY DEAR RICHARDSON: There has been mailed to you, under separate cover, a little token which has been entrusted to me for delivery. I would like to accompany it with these few words:

"'The intrinsic value of the token is small; the spirit which it represents is a strong force for good. It was conceived by no one individual alone; it has been the thought of many.

"'Men are reticent to allow their deeper feelings to appear on the surface, and words, my good friend Richardson, are such feeble things, and so ineffectual when the heart is trying to express itself.

"'I have been granted the privilege of sensing the deep gratitude of these men to you; their friendship, their appreciation and—yes, their downright affection for you. I could read it between the lines of the letters written to me, and feel deeply my limitations in attempting to convey to you a true sense of their wonderful spirit.

"'It is my heartfelt wish that this little token may, at least in some small degree, prove a source of encouragement, and help you—oh, if only

Film Damage!

What's the Real Cause?

By F. H. RICHARDSON

(NOTE: The editor of this department is responsible for everything written in connection with these photographs except for the caption under each picture, marked "Comment by Mr. Dennison.")

The accompanying photographs were made by the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, under the personal supervision of Earl J. Dennison. The lessons they teach should be of large value to the industry, because they should drive home the fact that film damage, which is hugely costly, is usually very largely unnecessary.

Examining the picture you will observe that one side of the film is "crimped," or folded over, the bend coming right square in the line of sprocket holes. This form of damage is sufficiently common, I think, that you have all seen examples of it. It is due to nothing in this wide world but rank carelessness and inattention on the part of the projectionist or machine operator. Hence it is utterly without any possible legitimate excuse.

The section of the film subjected to such abuse is, of course, utterly ruined, because such bending cannot but strain the edges of the sprocket holes, upon the absolute accuracy of which we must depend for steadiness of the picture upon the screen, out of shape, to some extent at least. The damaged section must therefore be cut out, and unless it be replaced there is likely to be a very bad jump in the action at that point, since damage of this sort usually runs for several feet, and sometimes for a very great many feet.

The form of damage so well illustrated in plate 11 is, as Mr. Dennison says, very common; also it is without legitimate excuse. As a rule it is caused primarily by a poorly made splice, which (often by reason of a too heavy take-up pull) causes the film to climb the sprocket. As Mr. Dennison remarks, it invariably (I would myself say almost invariably) occurs at the lower, or take-up sprocket. This is because the pull of the take-up will or may cause a poorly made splice which "gets by" the other sprockets, to climb the lower one. A poorly made splice will usually negotiate the upper sprocket because there is nothing pulling it over the sprocket, hence it can adjust itself, to a large extent, to the fault. The same is true of the intermittent, even though there be a pull by the sprocket itself; also the intermittent idler roller or shoe just simply MUST be kept somewhere near in proper adjustment, else the projector will give notice of the failure, and usually does it pretty pronto, too.

But with the lower sprocket it is different. The take-up tension is pulling the film over the sprocket, and if there be a splice which has been made crookedly by the "finger-film-press process," then the pull against the sprocket teeth is crooked, and since that condition always means more or less poorly matched sprocket holes, the tendency to climb is very great indeed.

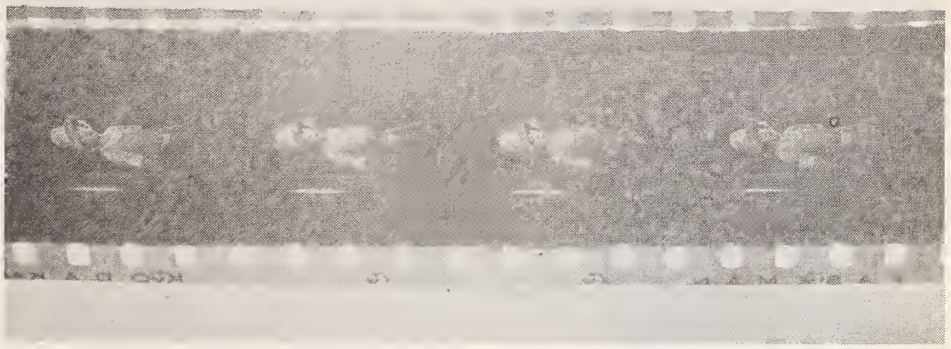

Plate 10.

Comment by Mr. Dennison: The form of damage illustrated in plate No. 10 is caused by the lower, or take-up sprocket idler flange of the projector being out of line with the sprocket. Under this condition the chance of damage is greatly increased if the take-up tension be excessive

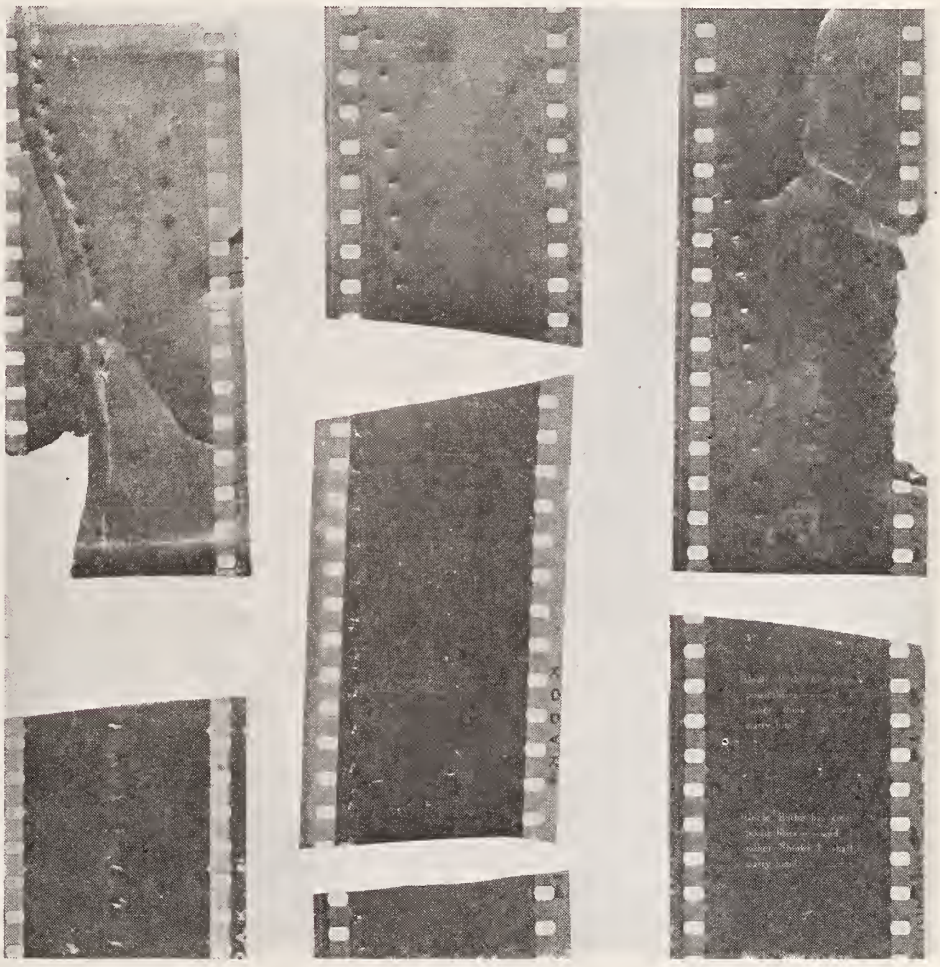

Plate 11

Comment by Mr. Dennison: This form of damage is very common. It usually starts as a poorly made splice, and invariably happens at the lower, or take-up sprocket

The moral is (A) Make your film splices VERY CAREFULLY AND ACCURATELY, eliminating the finger work cross word puzzle by installing a good film splicer, which may now be had at a very reasonable figure —see page 277 of the Bluebook of Projection. (B) Eliminate "Jimmie the Usher" entirely in the matter of film splicing. (C) Keep your lower sprocket idlers very carefully and accurately adjusted—see page 606 of the Bluebook — and be sure the sprocket idler bracket spring is strong enough. (D) Don't have more take-up tension than is necessary to rewind the film. Excessive take-up tension is a breeder of trouble and the cause of much film damage. See page 595 of the Bluebook.

West Coast

What is the matter with the West Coast men? I personally know there are a great many very capable projectionists out there, yet of all the replies to Bluebook School questions sent from there—and there have been quite some few, too—hardly any have been nearly enough correct to receive serious consideration. Are all you chaps in Seattle, Portland, Frisco, Santa Ana, San Jose, San Diego and the rest dead or calmly sleeping; are you afraid to tackle the questions, or are you just cribbing the answers and giving nothing in return? Or don't you give Adam about educational matters of that sort? What is the answer? I'm curious.

Bluebook School—Answers 161 to 165

Question No. 161—Were the exhibitor or manager to ask you what effect an increase in size of picture would be as to emphasizing the defects in the film, such as "rain" etc., what would you say?

Daniel Constantino, Easton, Pa.; W. R. Gwynn, Longmont, Colo.; Karl Sommermeyer, Marrietta, Minn.; Arthur H. Gray, Boston, Mass.; G. W. Bennewitz, Sioux Falls, So. Dakota; C. H. Hanover, Burlington, Ia., and A. L. Fell, Collingswood, N. J. all made good, though none of them completely, as I shall show by publication of parts of several answers.

Fell follows Bluebook wording and says:

* * *If the actual scratch in the film be .015625 (1/64) of an inch wide, it will appear as a mark approximately 2.5 inches wide in a 12 foot picture, or about four inches wide in a 20 foot picture; also every movement of the film in the aperture will be magnified on the screen in the same proportions.

Bennewitz says:

I would tell him that to increase the size of the picture it will be necessary to magnify the film photograph a greater number of times, and the greater the number of times the film photograph is magnified at the screen image, the greater will be the magnification of "rain," etc. Also the greater the magnification of defects such as "rain," the more noticeable they will be to the audience.

Gray says:

Blemishes on the surface of the film become emphasized in the screen image through increase in magnification; the granular construction of the film stock itself becomes visible; any existing "jump" or "sway" in the film at the aperture, hence in the screen image as a whole appears to be accentuated; any unevenness in the reflecting properties of the different areas of the screen surface are more readily visible in the larger picture. Very naturally all "blemishes" in the film image are made more visible as the picture size is increased, or the viewing distance decreased.

Gwynn says:

Enlargement of the projected picture beyond ordinary requirements would unnecessarily enlarge all blemishes, such as "rain," hence make them more visible to the audience. Aside from the above disadvantage of unnecessary enlargement, it is inadvisable because more light is required to produce a a given screen brilliancy; also if the enlargement be very great, there would be added, unnecessary eye strain for those seated near the screen.

But here is an angle to make you sit up and take notice. Sommermeyer says:

I would, first of all, invite him to view the picture, as now projected, with a good opera glass. Then I would set my conversation mill going something like this: Notice how all defects in the film, such as rain, are made more noticeable by increase in apparent size of the picture when viewed through the glass? Were we to increase the picture size to what it appears to be as you view it through the glass, your audiences would see the defects as you now see them. However, since you doubtless would not consider increasing the size so greatly, you must consider the opera glass test as something of an exaggeration.

Not such a bad idea, I'll instruct the world. Just keep that idea under your hat, and pull it when friend manager gets gay with the big picture bug. Only take him pretty well "down front" to do it.

Question No. 162—Suppose your employer had two theatres, one a wide, but not a deep one; the other a narrow, but very deep auditorium—say one 50 feet square and the other 25 feet wide by 130 feet, screen to rear row of seats. He asks your advice about screens for the two theatres. Let us hear just what you will say to him.

All those who made correct reply to question 161 also made acceptable answer to this

Karl Sommermeyer resorts to Chart Fig 76, page 262 of the Bluebook to illustrate the reasons for his recommendations in this matter, which is an entirely correct procedure. Gwynn, in part, says:

I would recommend a plain white screen for the auditorium fifty feet square, because of the high diffusive qualities of such a surface. A kalsomined surface should give good results.

Bennewitz says:

I would ascertain the distance from screen to front row of seats in each theatre. Assuming it to be 20 feet in each case, and the seat rows to run straight across the auditorium, I would recommend the following: The 50 x 50 theatre would have an extreme viewing angle of 51 degrees. Referring to page 266 of Bluebook, we find this to be one degree in excess of maximum angle for class B screen surfaces, but if we measure from the second row of seats we find the angle to be within that allowable for Class B screen surfaces. This means that only the extreme seat on either end of the front row is outside the viewing limits allowed for class B screens, hence a class B screen is best suited for the theatre under the condition named.

In table No. 16, page 266, we find that surfaces 26, 29, 25, 32 and 27 have a mean average reflecting power over the entire angle which does not exceed the limiting value 4 for reflecting power ratio.

Still assuming the twenty-feet-front-row-to-screen distance in the theatre 25 feet wide by 130 feet, screen to rear row of seats, we find we have an extreme viewing angle of 32 degrees. This is two (2) degrees in excess of the maximum angle for Class A screen surfaces, see page 265 of Bluebook. If we again measure from screen to front row of seats we will find the maximum angle for that row is within that allowable for Class A screens, hence while the extreme seat on either end of the front row will lie outside the angle, still Class A surfaces are best for this theatre. Referring to table No. 15, page 265 of Bluebook, we will find that surfaces No. 11, 16, 36, 30, 17 and 18 have a mean average reflecting power over the entire angle which does not exceed the limiting value of 4 for reflecting power ratio.

The final selection would, in both cases, depend upon which surface has the greatest reflecting power, and the most even distribution of light over the entire viewing angle, quality of goods used for backing, guarantee——the reputation of the screen among those who have actually used it of course to have due consideration.

There, gentlemen, is an answer which shows the man who made it to have studied his Bluebook to good purpose. I don't believe a reply has been received to any question up to this time which has better illustrated the possibilities for practical application of data contained in the Bluebook. The reply serves two purposes. It tells you how to solve a problem, and shows you the actual practical value of the Bluebook to YOU, provided you get right down to brass tacks and STUDY it until you understand it thoroughly.

Brother Fell's reply is essentially the same as that of Brother Bennewitz. Both men are to be especially complimented.

Brother Gray says:

There are two factors here for consideration. First the size of picture and, second, the type of screen surface. Picture size to be the smallest that will give good visibility from maximum viewing distance and surface to be of a type which will most efficiently reflect and diffuse the light in such manner as will cause the picture to appear of the same, or approximately the same brilliancy from all seats. In the case of the wider house the picture will of course be the smaller of the two, which will be to our advantage. There will be a greater general side angle at which the picture must be viewed, and the smaller picture will tend to make less the apparent distortion due to foreshortening of objects which occurs under side viewing angle.

sure equal and even distribution of the reflected light, a higher value of film illumination will be necessary than would be the case with a screen of high and semi-direct reflecting properties. The smaller screen, and consequent lower ratio of magnification again aids us in conserving electric energy at the light source.

The picture in the longer house must of necessity be the larger of the two in order to compensate for the greater distance from which it will be viewed from the rear seats of the auditorium. In this case, however, there is a relatively small side angle of view, hence we may use a screen surface of higher and more direct reflecting power, thus affecting a higher ratio of utilization of the light incident upon the screen.

Now it is seen that a considerable difference may exist in the picture size in the two theatres, and yet, with the same intensity of aperture illumination we may obtain the same screen foot candle power in both cases, notwithstanding the difference in magnification. Furthermore, Sir Boss (friend Gray is talking to the boss, as per question. —Ed.) we're going to get a clearer, softer, better defined and more pleasing picture with the screen of high diffusing power in the broad, shallow house, than we will get in the other where the screen of higher and more direct reflective power is used.

The foreging answer shows Brother Gray to have a comprehensive knowledge of those fundamentals with which the question concerns itself. Gray discusses generalities. Bennewitz gets right down to "cases" and deals in exact facts. Both answers are excellent, and both serve a good purpose. I have quoted them, together with the others, because this is an important matter and I have hopes that these replies will show you the possibilities for the projectionist to offer his employer exact, concise information, and offer in in a manner which will cause him, Friend Boss, to sit up and take decided notice.

What manner of answer could YOU have made to such a question, if it were propounded by your employer, before you read these replies—or after, for that matter, unless you get busy, as Bennewitz and Gray have done, and accumulate to yourself a real UNDERSTANDING of such matters, which are fundamentally germain to high class results in motion picture projection?

Question No. 163—What is meant by "Picture Light," as distinguished from other light?

All those who were named as correctly answering question No. 161 made good on this one.

All replies were to the effect that picture light is the light projected by the projection lens to the screen. Gray puts it rather better than the rest. He says:

Picture light is the light which passes through the film, and, being directed by the projection lens, forms an image upon the screen which, when reflected by the screen surface, takes the form of an enlarged, visible image reproduction of the photograph illuminated in the projector aperture.

Question No. 164—What is the function of a screen surface, and (this is hard) what would you regard as its principal characteristics when viewed from the standpoint of effectiveness?

Only Sommermeyer, Bennewitz and Gray 'came through' more or less well on this one. Bennewitz says:

The function of the screen surface is to receive the picture light and reflect it to the eyes of the audience. The principal characteristic of a screen surface, viewed from the standpoint of effectiveness, is to reflect and distribute evenly over the entire viewing angle of the auditorium the greatest possible percentage of the light incident does not exceed the limiting value of 4 for the reflecting power ratio.

Gray says:

The function of the screen surface is to receive the image of a photograph projected to it by a lens, and by reflecting this image, cause it to become visible to the eyes, usually of an audience. To be effective it must reflect the greatest possible percentage of light incident upon its surface, and absorb a minimum percentage. It must possess diffusing characteristics which will effect the greatest possible concentration of the light, together with evenness of distribution over the area from which it is to be viewed. (Read that last over several times. It tells a big story. —Ed.) Thus, a screen which is impervious to the light rays, which faithfully reproduces the image projected to it, and which reproduces it with the same degree of accuracy and brilliancy to the greatest number of people within the viewing angle is, to my way of thinking, the most effective screen surface.

Not so bad though there was room for elaboration on some points; also nothing was said of the possibility of color addition for light toning—if you think it practicable or advisable. Anyhow it should have been argued. There was ample room for considerable discussion of relative reflection powers, too. It was barely touched upon, yet it is of VERY great importance. There is, too, the element of "harsh" light some screens introduce, and the lack of clarity of the images they reflect. Screen surfaces, gentlemen, form a HUGELY important topic for discussion. I think I will ask this question again, later on.

Question No. 165—Explain why it is impracticable to compare screen surfaces and form an intelligent opinion as to their respective merits, by looking at screens in different theatres.

All who answered question 161 made good on this one, plus G. L. Oliver, Spokane, Washington.

Fell says:

It is impracticable to compare screen surface and form an intelligent opinion as to their merits by looking at their performance in different theatres, because it almost never happens that there are screens in different theatres where the various factors which may affect results are of equal value, and the working conditions exactly alike. The brilliancy of the projected light may have different values, due to varying arc amperage, varying crater angles, crater distances not the same, condensers not equally efficient, rotating shutters not the same, or differences in adjustment of the optical system of the projectors in general. Results may also be affected by theatre decorations, auditorium lighting, by screen surroundings, size of picture, angle of projection, height and shape of auditorium, and so on through a long list of things which may affect the apparent screen brilliancy in different theatres. Such an endeavor would be utterly futile.

NOTE: Bennewitz appends this note to the last question—or his answer to it, rather: "It is true, F. H., I might have answered that last question in considerable detail, but I do not see the advantage of wasting good space in the department."

Wrong! Space used in dealing FULLY and COMPLETELY with these questions is NOT wasted. It may seem a waste to you, Brother Bennewitz, to whom such a question appears very simple and the answer quite obvious, but the fact remains that there are THOUSANDS of projectionists who are not answering these questions (though absorbing the answers, alrighty right) simply because they DON'T understand them, excepting in a very hazy way. It is becoming more and more my purpose in this matter to consume ample space to go thoroughly into all details covered by the questions. In the end I believe even such men as yourself will find themselves benefited by that procedure.

Rank Nonsense

What seems a bit of rank nonsense has been sprung in the little city of Ofordville, Wisconsin. Citizens of the town insisted upon Mazda being installed, instead of the usual arc lamps, for projection in a new 350 seat theatre A. J. Fuller is preparing for opening there.

If it were not for the helpless position friend Fuller is placed in, it would be distinctly funny, but, of course, if he installs arc lamps after the dire threat citizens of that town have handed him that if he does use arc lamps and they interfere with radio, then his patronage will suffer, anything—static or even an aerial falling down—would instantly be laid to those darted theatre arc lamps.

The ridiculousness of the thing is shown by the fact that radio sets are in use in many projection rooms in large city theatres where arc lamps are used, where they function perfectly. I am NOT defending the installation of such sets in projection rooms, mind you, but they are there, and that fact proves to us all that the protest of Ofordville citizens represents nothing but rank foolishness.

How About New York?

Why, Heavenly days, there must be at least six hundred theatre projection arc lamps, some of them using up to 120 amperes, operating every night right here in New York City, yet radio doesn't seem to suffer, and the good Lord only knows how many THOUSANDS of other arc lamps burn each night in New York City.

I venture the assertion that the good, but apparently easily excited, citizens of Ofordville can place an arc lamp before, behind, to each side of, on top of and under one of their radio sets, and still get their programme just the same. However, as I said, just let Fuller install those lamps, and the good citizens will forget static and everything else. "It's those darted theatre lamps, gol ding it!" Raus mit 'em!

See the Big Things

A brother recently sent in the results of tests he had very carefully made showing what sort of carbon was cheapest, viewed merely from the standpoint of carbon consumption cost. The conclusions as to which carbons were cheapest were very clear, but the resultant comparative screen illumination was dismissed with merely the remark that neither the projectionist nor manager could see any difference in the screen illumination.

This might seem very conclusive, but as a matter of fact it is not. The comparison as to light was made while different reels were being projected, on different projectors, and that is not exactly convincing proof that the light was essentially equal as to brilliancy. And that brings me to the point of this little article.

While I do not in any degree criticize the projectionist for looking carefully toward the suppression of small expense waste, still his figures only showed a possible saving of, as I remember it, about twelve cents per day. Of course twelve cents is twelve cents, and Mr. Manager can actually SEE that small saving. He will therefore appreciate it. BUT suppose the higher cost carbon actually gave a sufficiently improved light (I'm not saying they did, mind you, but merely supposing they did) to cause an average of two more patrons to step up to friend box office each day and deposit the price of a ticket. You you see that the "saving" would really be a poor one, because while you would save money on carbons, you would lose two or three times the amount "saved" at the box office.

Bigger Things

What I am getting at, rather blunderingly I think, is the fact that the projectionist, while he should stop small leaks, should not concentrate so much on savings of that sort, as on improvement in the screen image, to the end that more of those idle seats be filled.

One may, for instance, save ten amperes of current and lose ten times the saving at the box office by reason of injury to the thing the public pays to see. Saving twelve cents per day is at the most saving 84 cents per week. If it is a genuine stoppage of waste, it is important, but it is very much more important to get those vacant seats filled—and in very many theatres they are vacant wholly and solely because too MUCH economy. Friend Manager concentrates too much on small savings—paring the expense bill—at the expense of large losses at the box office.

Difficult Problem

From upstate (New York) comes the following:

Will you kindly advise us how to solve the following problem, preferably by letter: We want to place a screen in "one," in a theatre playing vaudeville and pictures, but there is not sufficient height above the stage to "fly" it, nor is there room enough to take it off at the side.

The projection distance is 128 feet 5 inches. The Gold Fibre screen is now fifteen feet from the foot and five feet from the back stage wall. If we place the screen in "one" the projection distance will be about 117 feet 11 inches. The projectors are now at top of balcony, and the screen is tilted considerably. It is now about fifteen inches from the floor (The screen or bottom of picture?—Ed.) Will we have to tilt the screen if it is placed in "one"?

The picture is now—well, you can tell from the tables. Haven't the measurements handy. Can we get a 350 muslin—meaning 3½ pounds to the yard—like "Black Rock," give it a coat of aluminum paint, put it on a roller and make it work? The top of the arc (presumably meaning the proscenium arch. —Ed.) is 18 feet from the floor, hence the stage has to be trimmed to 18 feet to keep the draperies out of the picture. Above this arc (Arch.—Ed.) there is 13 feet.

Some years ago you were here and helped me on some problems. I shall anxiously await your reply to this one. What kind of preparation will we coat it with?

Can I?

You say, "I can tell from the tables what the picture is." Inasmuch as I don't know what tables you have in mind, or any tables which would give me anything worth while from the information you have supplied, I'm stuck on that one. Very apparently you don't understand the UNDERLYING PRINCIPLES involved in such matters. If you haven't a Bluebook, why not get one? If you have one, then, for goodness sake, STUDY IT.

I can't tell what the distortion may be unless I know the projection, vertical distance from screen center to lens and size of picture, only ONE of which you have supplied.

The screen is tilted now to avoid, or to neutralize distortion caused by a too-steep projection angle. If you place the screen in "one" you will either have to raise it higher (the picture, I mean) or else have a still steeper projection angle, with increased distortion, and with the screen in "one" you cannot tilt it sufficiently, I think, to avoid distortion to the extent you have with screen at back of stage, without making it look like the devil to the audience.

Moreover, whereas it would be possible to tilt a movable cloth screen, it would NOT be a practical thing to do on a stage where vaudeville is used, because it would involve the use of an incline for the bottom roller to travel on.

So far as I can see, the only thing you CAN do is to make a screen which will roll up. No, aluminum paint won't do. It would be too smooth, and would produce a haze due to an admixture of direct and diffused reflection, and a terrific "fade-way" at the side seats—see page 225 of Bluebook, also see "Haze," page 223.

If I were you I would, I think, present your problem to one of the screen companies. You can make a painted screen by securing a rather heavy muslin, which may, I think, be had three or more yards wide, attaching its upper edge firmly to a rigid strip—a strip which won't sag in the middle—in a perfectly straight line, and to a roller of generous diameter at the bottom. When you have it thus attached, coat the cloth with a glue sizing made from high grade, flexible glue. Let dry thoroughly, and then coat with paint made from half white zinc and half white lead, mixed half boiled linseed oil and half turpentine, with just a little ultramarine or prussian blue in it to "whiten" it. Let dry thoroughly, and then add one, or if necessary, two coats of "flat" white made entirely from white zinc. By flat white, I mean use turpentine, with barely enough oil (about three of turpentine to one of boiled linseed oil) to keep the zinc from rubbing off. Use a little blue in this, too.

Now, I won't guarantee that this surface will not crack, but I don't believe it will, though of course repeated rollings will tend to roughen the surface some, I presume. If I were doing it I would line the back of such a screen with some soft, rather thick white cloth, so that the surface would not come into direct contact with the harsh back of the screen when rolling. If this be done I think this surface would work all right and be at least fairly satisfactory.

I will be glad to hear from any of our readers who feel able to offer suggestions for a screen to be used under these circumstances.

Postscript

P. S. By the way, it has occurred to me that you have thirteen feet above the proscenium arch—or so I understand you. Why could you not make such a screen surface as I have described and mount it on a light but rigid frame —a frame made from say one inch 1 x 6 white pine braced straight across and diagonally with one inch 1 x 4 white pine. Make this twelve feet high by sufficient width, and arrange a top border drape to drop down to outline the picture top. The screen can be made wide enough to carry the side outlining border. The bottom of the screen may rest on the floor and the bottom of the picture meet the floor. The hoisting ropes can be attached a quarter of the way down the side of the screen and the whole thing can be hoisted straight up—can be "flyed." Objections? Certainly. There are several, BUT in a situation of this sort you can't have everything. The main objection, as I see it, is that the projection angle will be increased. Anyhow, I believe the plan is practical, therefore you might think it over.

Atta Boy!

S. F. Cooley, Lyric Theatre, Manchester, N. H., says:

Rather late to start in the Bluebook School answers, but what you said in December 13 issue is all true. We have all been following the questions, but few have sent in answers.

Here is one who wants the school to continue. I can appreciate exactly how you feel in the matter. Conducting the school is somewhat like holding office in a local union. The only compensation you receive for a lot of hard work is the satisfaction of knowing you have aided your fellow man, and the profession of motion picture projection as a whole.

Don't get discouraged. Let's see it through, for I am sure it is doing many men a world of good.

Brother Cooley begins at question 171. Yes, it is discouraging sometimes, when I crowd out lots and lots of valuable matter to make room for the "school," and do the very considerable amount of work the school entails, and then have only a scant half dozen take pains enough to send in replies which can be given any consideration at all. And the worst of it, from my viewpoint, is the fact that I have every evidence that hundreds upon hundreds, if not thousands, of men who are perfectly capable of putting their shoulders to the wheel and sending in really excellent replies to the questions which they DO follow, and reap benefits from the school by NOT missing one single ANSWER, don't do one solitary thing. That's discouraging.

Rowell Leaving Heywood-Wakefield Co., Seating Specialists, As Ad. Dept. Head

GEORGE W. ROWELL, Jr., advertising manager for Heywood-Wakefield, has resigned to accept a position as advertising and sales counsellor for Henri, Hurst and McDonald, one of the foremost advertising agencies of Chicago. His resignation becomes effective January 1. Mr. Rowell's duties with Heywood-Wakefield will be divided between Raymond Reed, the new advertising manager, and Winfred Lent, sales service manager.

Mr. Rowell was formerly advertising manager for the Lloyd Manufacturing Company in Menominee, Michigan, manufacturers of baby carriages. At the time when Marshall B. Lloyd perfected a loom for weaving baby carriage bodies thirty times faster than by hand, Mr. Rowell began the organization of an advertisng department. The entry of the Lloyd Manufacturing Company into the national advertising field was the first instance of its kind in the industry. Within three years after the national advertising policy was adopted, the Lloyd Company had become the largest manufacturing concern of its kind in the world.

Wide Experience

Shortly after the merging of the Lloyd Company with Heywood-Wakefield, Mr. Rowell was called to the executive offices at Boston to organize an advertising department for the parent corporation. Although Heywood-Wakefield dates its origin back to 1826, up to Mr. Rowell's arrival the corporation had not yet made its debut in the national advertising field.

In 1922 Heywood-Wakefield products were advertised in a nation-wide campaign through the various trade papers of the furniture and other industries. This magazine was selected in the motion picture field to carry Heywood-Wakefield advertising during the first year, and recently was scheduled for the 1925 campaign. Proof of the effectiveness of trade paper advertising is the fact that Heywood-Wakefield now ranks among America's leaders in theatre chair manufacture, due in a large measure to the advertising campaign.

Trade Papers Aid

"We found trade papers to be of the greatest assistance to us in making Lloyd Loom Woven products popular," Mr. Rowell declared, "and it followed naturally that we should select trade papers to tell the theatre world about our opera chairs and rest room furnture. Much of our growth in theatre chair manufacturing during the last two years is due to the pulling power of the theatre trade papers. To them we owe also our admiration for the broad viewpoint we encountered in our relations with them."

Previous to his entry into advertising work, Mr. Rowell was a newspaper man. His early training was received on the Milwaukee daily newspapers, where he began as a reporter and elevated himself to the position of city editor. Here also he received his early theatrical experience, serving as press agent for the Saxe Amusement enterprises. In his new work Mr. Rowell will continue to be identified with problems affecting the theatrical world.

American Theatre, Spokane, Renovated from Top to Bottom, Opened to Public

TRANSFORMING an old house into a brand new one by means of new drapes, scenery, carpets, stage curtains, paint, etc., etc., and a large crew of workmen, within 2 weeks time, was the task accomplished under the personal direction of M. H. "Mike" Newman, who has invaded Spokane, and in very short order, given that city something to talk about. Mr. Newman signed the lease on the old American theatre, a legitimate house, which had long been in the market, and on which Ray Grombacher had held an option he failed to exercise, on November 25. He got into action a few days later, and two weeks later, on December 13, opened to an eager public, that had to be turned away in hundreds over the entire week end; a new house, warmly appealing in its rich scarlet tones. The house has been described by members of the trade as "a knockout."

The foyer decorations are enhanced by an art frieze, in warm tones, with scarlet drapes, and here and there an art mirror to lend distinction. The foyer was so banked with flowers, the expression of Spokane's leading citizens and business houses, that it was difficult to get its detail:

Within the interior the red tones are again evident, giving a colorful appeal that extends even to the lighting effect, except for a fringe of pale blue lights high up in the ceiling. A wonderful drop curtain of silver cloth, upon which were played innumerable lighting effects, is a feature of the house.

Royal purple is combined most effectively with this swinging curtain, which is used during overtures, musical numbers, etc. The curtain alone brought many congratulations. It is the second one of its kind to make its appearance in the Northwest, the first being installed by John Danz in his New Capitol Theatre, Seattle.

Stanley Company to Build Big Picture Theatre in Frankford

ANNOUNCEMENT has been made by Jules E. Mastbaum, president of the Stanley Company of America, of a new theatre which is to be erected in Frankford, Pa., at a total cost of nearly $2,000,000, including the price paid for ground. The new structure will occupy the site of ten buildings on a plot at Frankford avenue, Griscom and Overington streets. Negotiations for the purchase of the buildings have been completed.

The new theatre will be devoted to Keith vaudeville and photoplays. Work will be commenced on the operation soon. The old buildings will be demolished rapidly to make way for the modern theatre building. This will be not only one of the handsomest and most luxuriously furnished amusement places in that city, but it will be perhaps as elaborate as any in the United States.

The cost of the site alone is more than half a million dollars. The lot has a frontage of 106 feet on Frankford avenue and extends 245 feet in depth to Griscom street, with 25 feet on Overington street. Plans for the structure call for a seating capacity of 3,000 persons.

The interior will include a spacious lobby of ornate architecture and furnished elaborately. Paintings and statuary will be placed in the lobby and mezzanine floors of the new theatre.

There will be rest rooms and smoking rooms. Music will be furnished by a $75,000 Kimball organ. An orchestra also will be organized.

With the razing of the old structure one of the amusement landmarks of Frankford must be destroyed. The Empire Theatre, long known to residents of this section, now occupies a portion of the site.

In announcing the project, Mr. Mastbaum said the need for such a theatre long had been felt. He said he had received a number of communications from citizens of Frankford requesting a theatre to compare favorably with the Earle and Stanley in the centre of the city.

Ready in March

Work is going forward nicely on Walter Graham's new theatre, Shelton, Wash. He is planning on an early March opening. The house will seat 732, including 72 loges across the balcony front. An original name will be given the house, but at present it is a deep, dark mystery. Drapes, carpets, stage equipment, Stafford chairs, and equipment consisting of two Powers 6-B projectors with roller pin intermittent movement and governor speed controls will be furnished by the Theatre Equipment Co., Seattle, Wash.

"PETER PAN" A Triumph!

Variety's Reports from the Whole Country:

NATIONALLY

The figures that the picture achieved at the box offices in the 257 odd theatres where it played last week are startling in their magnitude. There were but three points in the entire country where the picture did not come up to expectations in the point of receipts: Kansas City, Mo.; Providence, R. I., and Cleveland. At other points the picture either broke house records or came within a few dollars of the old record.

NEW YORK

The outstanding wallop of the street was the simultaneous presentation of the screen production of "Peter Pan" at the Rialto and Rivoli, the two regular change of bill Famous Player houses. The two theatres, with a combined seating capacity of 4,160, played to $59,503 with the picture. The Rivoli got $30,213, while the Rialto showed $29,290.

PHILADELPHIA

"Peter Pan" easily led the way, grossing $36,000 for the week at the Stanley, which comes close to being a record for Philly's biggest house, and is at least $10,000 above the average week's gross here.

LOS ANGELES

Million Dollar—"Peter Pan" (Paramount) (2,200; 25-85). Push over for this Barrie cinemazation. Matinees very heavy, with trade turned away at evening. $28,000.

WASHINGTON

"Peter Pan" was at the Columbia, where a matinee trade seldom equalled was run up. Picture was only given one week, according to Mark Gates, manager of the house, due to a booking jam.

BOSTON

At the Fenway "Peter Pan" did $12,500, with the house playing to 28,000 persons for the week. It was the biggest business the house has ever done. On the last day (last Friday) the personal appearance of Betty Bronson was enough to put the picture over for a big finish. The house remained scaled at regular prices during the week, with New Year's day being the biggest single day the house has ever had.

Downtown at the Modern and Beacon, where the same picture was also running last week, the business was also record-breaking, the house doing a gross of $6,500 for the week. It meant that the house was packed all the time, this house being scaled low and having a very limited capacity.

CHICAGO

The record was established by McVickers with "Peter Pan." Business was so tremendous here that the house was forced to give two morning performances, opening at nine. The morning matinees were given Friday and Saturday with capacity for both shows. Last week without the aid of a super presentation and with no extra publicity accorded the feature the house shattered all records for receipts, getting $35,773. The latter record will stand as long as the house continues playing the present policy.

BUFFALO

Hip (2,400; 50)—"Peter Pan." Started excellently, despite opening Sunday marked by heaviest blizzard of season. Matinees to standing room and turnaway with night business almost to capacity. Between $20,000 and $21,000.

BALTIMORE

Century (3,300; 30-75)—"Peter Pan" slipped one over on skeptics by drawing heavily at Baltimore's biggest film house. With handicap turned in about $14,000.

EVERYBODY PAYS IN VARYING COIN IN "THE PRICE OF A PARTY"

By MILDRED SPAIN.

Title: "THE PRICE OF A PARTY."
Type: DRAMA.
Directed by CHARLES CIBLYN.
Produced by HOWARD ESTABROOK.
Presented in the CAMEO THEATRE.

The price of a party, including cover charge.
Item: One murder—charged to the account of Dagmar Godowsky.
Item: One suicide—paid by Dagmar Godowsky.
Item: One broken heart—paid in full by Hope Hampton.

Dagmar Godowsky

Everybody pays and pays and pays along Broadway in this piece of celluloid sophistication that travels from cabaret to cabaret, with Hope Hampton doing a snaky dance in crystals and diamonds, and Dagmar Godowsky having a perfectly wonderful time tracking her man.

Even demure little Mary Astor, shingles her hair, smokes a satin-tipped cigarette and believes that nice men give girls apartments for being pretty and having a Boston pedigree.

The director has followed the beaten path of the Great White Way drama without adding anything new, but weaving a plausible story and making his cast do some quick work.

This is by far Hope Hampton's best picture. She gets better with every picture, as it follows her latest is always her best. Her clothes are something to gaze upon and the only quarrel to pick with her is overbowed lips and a wig that remains a wig throughout long reels.

Mary Astor, Hope Hampton and Harrison Ford

Hope is cast as Grace Barrow who is both wise and wise, but like all girls sent upon leading what is known as the virtuous life, she insists upon dancing in a cabaret that's lined with fat men and fatter bank rolls.

Why she keeps herself within sight of temptation isn't told. She does consent to pose as the wealthy Bellwood (Arthur Carew) so that he can keep a business rival (Harrison Ford) in New York when he should be in Chicago.

Ford falls. He would.

But Grace's little sister comes to the spacious apartment and is overcome with her sister's success. Bellwood starts her on the same ladder—or is it downgrade?—that he sent Evelyn Dolores (Dagmar Godowsky). Evelyn resents Grace—and resents her little sister.

Evelyn has seen sister acts before.

Little sister is found in Bellwood's apartment after Grace and Evelyn have been there to look for her. Bellwood is dead. Grace frantically gives herself up, saying that it was she. When Evelyn Dolores is found in a gracious pose with a bullet burrowed through her temple and a thoughtful note in her hand telling that she had killed the only man she ever loved.

A richly mounted picture, jazzy and peppy with glimpses of Florence Richmond and dancery Harrison Ford is very good as the gullible boy who thinks Broadway is all for welcoming the stranger.

Tomorrow Miss Spain will review "The Silent Accuser" at the Capitol theatre.

Another movie heroine comes to the big town to seek fame and fortune, dances in a cabaret attired in beads and ballist slippers, gets herself involved in a questionable scheme because she needs the money for her sick mother, and emotes "The Price of a Party," at the Cameo Theatre.

Although there is no part in the photoplay is good entertainment, and Hope Hampton in the leading role is beautiful. Arthur Edmund Carew plans to double-cross Harrison Ford in some South American deal or other, and gets Hope to vamp him, installing her in an apartment formerly occupied by Dagmar Godowsky. Everything works out well until her little sister, Mary Astor, arrives from Boston, bobs her hair and learns the new dances, and Hope, realizing she loves Harrison, refuses to go on with it any longer. That's what love does to you.

There are cabaret scenes, subtitles showing how hard is the struggle for a career, and the climax when Dagmar, becoming jealous, glides out in a decollete gown and shoots Carew. Every one is blamed, the suspense is something awful. Hope does better work in this picture than she ever did before, and, finally, a note is found that gives the answer to everything but the title.

REEL REVIEWS

By George Gerhard

"The Price of a Party," at the Cameo, has a fair story and it has its excellent moments, but there are other moments in it which make it appear a trifle amateurish. And our main reaction to it was a wish that Hope Hampton had not made herself so slim.

It tells a story of intrigue in which a Broadway cabaret dancer is paid by a scheming promoter to hold a rival business man in New York so that his South American contracts will be abrogated. Of course the dancer ultimately falls in love with the victim and prevents the swindle. But before she does there are some entertaining moments.

Naturally, being a Broadway story, the picture is replete with cabarets and night life. It will be a hit in the sticks if for this reason only, as there are some very good shots of the Statue of Liberty and Times Square at night with all its lights twinkling. Hope Hampton plays the part of an impecunious cabaret dancer, but her dressing room is discovered to be fit for a Queen. And when she dances long shots are put on and a regular dancer goes through the motions for her. But, at that, Miss Hampton manages to hug the camera.

Dagmar Godowsky plays the vamp in this picture. This seems like tautology, for Dagmar manages to appear in several at the same time. And it is our humble opinion that she is better in this one than she is in the Valentino picture at the Strand. Certainly, she is given more chance to strut her stuff and she merely strengthens our belief that she has an envious future before her. But there is one piece of direction which is not so good. In this scene Dagmar shoots the villain, and she does it at a distance of more than twenty feet while he is struggling with Hope Hampton. All we can say of this is that Dagmar must be a wonderful marksewoman.

Harrison Ford is very good as the victim of the plot, and Arthur Edmund Carew is convincing as the villain and, of course, Mary Astor always is good to our way of thinking.

They have drawn up just a little this side of Limehouse and clothed their devils in black silk and linens to make "The Price of a Party." It is Broadway, the magnificent and the flaming; the treachery which lurks beneath the surface of the Great White Way. Mr. Burke would have done something like this had he roomed a while in 47th Street.

Into the turmoil of New York's wickedness there is thrown the somewhat pathetic figure of a beautiful girl who dances in a cabaret for her livelihood and a sick mamma. I liked it. And I thought Miss Hope Hampton came away with the most spirited and telling emotional acting of her career.

The picture at the Cameo is a good example of what may be done with pure fiction and improbability if only the writer strike a given tone and stick closely to it to the end. Coherency of sequence, even in the face of basic implausibility, will go a long way toward holding one in his chair. And although you feel certain that Grace Barrow, good and clear-witted girl that she was, never would have been led into the frame-up in which she took so leading a part, it is by no means unpleasant to watch her work out of the tangle.

Grace was the dancer and a pretty one too. From the far South a handsome buyer had come to New York. A group of the big town crooks wished the handsome lad to remain here a certain length of time for financial reasons. So they engaged Grace, who already had seen the chap and been not a little smitten upon him, to detain him.

They were paying her for her services but she suspected practically nothing. Moreover, she needed the money. Her mamma was sick.

It finally dawned upon Grace that there was something unholy about the alliance, but just as she was about to tell all, her younger sister entered into the plot and became engaged in a dangerous flirtation with the master mind of the blikers. There was, toward the end, a slaying in an elegant apartment, which looked bad for Grace. But Dagmar Godowsky, a vampire, was on the scene in time to clear up the tragedy.

Miss Hampton was beautiful, and she acted the star part with grace and precision. Out where the geese go quackle-quack, this picture of Broadway will be simply grand.

Hope Hampton at Cameo.

The photoplay at R. S. Moss' Cameo Theatre is "The Price of a Party," with a cast including Hope Hampton, Harrison Ford, Mary Astor, Arthur Edmund Carew and Dagmar Godowsky. Broadway, with its night life, is the background for the story about a young girl who comes to New York seeking fame. She finds only a job as a cabaret dancer. An unscrupulous broker, who is trying to keep Robert Casson, a young engineer, in New York while he cheats him out of some valuable concessions in Brazil, persuades the girl to entertain the engineer in a lavish apartment that he has provided for the purpose. She learns of the broker's infamy and threatens to tell, but, with her sister, is locked in the apartment. Just as the broker is about to force her to carry out his plans he is murdered by an unidentified person. A thrilling climax solves all complications.

A new comedy, Aesop's Fables and especially arranged musical selections complete the program.

Plotting Made Easy.

THE PRICE OF A PARTY, with Hope Hampton, Harrison Ford, Arthur Edmund Carew, Mary Astor, Dagmar Godowsky, Florence Richmond, Edna Richmond, Mary Penney, Fred Hadley and Edward Lawrence; directed by Charles Giblyn; from the story by William MacHarg; presented by Howard Estabrook. At the Cameo.

Hope Hampton's first picture before her fans is little more than a year is a mildly entertaining, if not exactly original, melodrama, equipped with adequate settings, brilliant costumes and helped along by a competent cast. This feature is called "The Price of a Party," and is the new offering at the Cameo. In the beginning Charles Giblyn, the director, appears to have a penchant for eliminating suspense, and therefore one is interested without being unduly excited.

For the first few hundred feet one sees little more than men and women chattering, and according to the subtitles they are plotting to lay a trap for Robert Casson due from South America [illegible] time. The director, with [illegible] jumps from a scene [illegible] dancing flock to a scene [illegible] entering New York and [illegible] of all there is of a [illegible] Of course Casson, ignorant of what is going to happen in the next set for him, plunges into the net set for him by Kenneth Bellwood, who would rather make money by villainy than by honest means. He arranges that Casson shall be [illegible] Harrow (Miss Hampton), and she, after [illegible] has been crossed with gold [illegible] Casson forget all about Brazil and [illegible] to be unusually subdued. Finally she is not as bad as one might think, for she has an old mother who must undergo an operation, and therefore part of the money advanced to her by Bellwood is used for this charitable purpose.

Casson is painted as a hero, until he meets Grace. One woman tries to flirt with him in a cabaret, and observing that there is no reciprocal wink, she promptly makes grimaces at him.

THE SUN, WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 26, 1924.

At the Cameo.

"The Price of a Party" is billed on the Cameo's screen this week. Hope Hampton of recent musical comedy mention is the party and Harrison Ford pays the price. The film is unique in that it is a melodrama in which the man pays and pays and pays—instead of the woman. In this case Harrison, a wealthy lad, pays by nearly marrying Hope, a cabaret girl, who first meets him with the connivance of a "badger game" decoy. He learns to love the carefree youth and woman-like saves him from the wiles she was preparing him for.

Dagmar Godowsky, of course, played the part of a deep dyed lady villain who would have wronged both Hope and Harrison, if the scenario writer and [illegible] Mr. Art [illegible] hadn't had a hand in the affair. The picture was adapted from a story by William MacHarg and was directed by Charles Giblyn.

THE MORNING TELEGRAPH,

Price of a Party" With Hope Hampton At B. S. Moss's Cameo

Howard Estabrook's first [illegible] producer on his own, "The Price of a Party," released by Associated Exhibitors, and now at the Cameo, displays elaborate production on the part of the producer, intelligent direction by Charles Giblyn, the director, and a very capable all-star cast headed by Hope Hampton.

In support of Miss Hampton are Harrison Ford, Arthur Edmund Carew, Mary Astor, Dagmar Godowsky and numerous others.

Unfortunately, the basic ingredient of this story by William McHarg, which ran in the Cosmopolitan Magazine, is not up to the standard set by the other elements of the production. The yarn is one of those things undoubtedly picked by the distribution experts as "sure-fire box office stuff." It is a story in which the pure girl is enmeshed in the life of the Flippant Forties and the Flaccid Fifties. In the end virtue triumphs as of yore, and our sweet, pure lily of the cabaret retains her sweetness despite all the temptations of the great, glittering glamour.

To the theatre owner who likes jazz stuff, "The Price of a Party" supplies that type of entertainment in good measure. Which, I presume, is about all any one need ask of those who are in the business of making box office motion picture productions.

Hope Hampton "Price of Party" Is Melodrama Without Hokum

Hope Hampton's latest picture, "The Price of a Party," is at the Cameo now. It is a good picture—a melodrame without hokum. Charles Giblyn directed it, and, while we are not as familiar with Mr. Giblyn's work as with some of the others, we should like to see more of him. None of his people overacts and none of his points is overstressed. In fact, he seems a director with good taste and good sense. Miss Hampton does the best work we ever have seen her do on the screen and she flits through the story a lovely, slender, graceful figure.

"The Price of a Party" isn't a pretentious production, but it is amusing. William MacHarg wrote the story about a cabaret dancer who was used as a decoy to ruin an unsuspecting youth of finance. Of course she falls in love with him and saves him instead. Miss Hampton plays the heroine and Harrison Ford is the hero. Dagmar Godowsky is again a vampire. One can hardly go to the theater now without witnessing this picturesque lady in the throes of jealous despair. Some day, perhaps, some producer will decide to make an honest woman of her.

Mary Astor is the spoiled little sister, and Arthur Edward Carew is the villain. So, you see, Howard Esterbrook knew how to pick an all-star cast. Charles Forrest Roebuck made the adaptation.

MORENCI, ARIZ.

Racing Luck, with Monty Banks.—This is a first class feature comedy. Action, stunts, and comedy that brings down the house. Six reels.—F. E. Schulz, Y. M. C. A. theatre, Morenci, Ariz.

NORTH LOUP, NEBR

RACING LUCK, with Monty Banks.—This is a dandy six reel comedy. It will keep the audience in an uproar. Many liked it better than Lloyd's "Safety Last." Six reels.—R. W. Hudson, Strand theatre, North Loup, Nebr.

ALEXANDRIA, MINN.

Racing Luck, with Monte Banks.—This is one of the best comedy thrillers ever released. Harold Lloyd never made a better one. Monte Banks sure arrived and made Lloyd look like as if he were standing still. This will stand all you can pay for it. Six reels.—H. J. Longaker, Howard theatre, Alexandria, Minn.

PITTSBURG, PA

Racing Luck, with Monty Banks.—Plenty of action in this feature and, judging from comment of patrons, it gave satisfaction. An excellent card to please the kids. Numerous scraps and a crazy auto race that keeps 'em on the edge of their seats. Six reels.—Henry W. Gauding, Lincoln theatre, Pittsburgh, Pa.

GUTHRIE, OKLA.

Racing Luck, with Monte Banks.—Here is a picture that is way above the ordinary. I consider it in a class with "Safety Last." It has plenty of thrills and lots of comedy. Pleased a fairly good crowd. Increased business second day. Six reels.—Al Powell, Highland theatre, Guthrie, Okla.

ARCHER CITY, TEXAS

Racing Luck, with Monte Banks.—Sure a good comedy. Didn't have a big audience, but an average, and they seemed to enjoy it.—W. F. Jones, Archer theatre, Archer City, Texas.—Small town patronage.

PLATTSBURG, MO.

Racing Luck, with Monty Banks.—A real picture and one that should please any house patronage, large or small. Certainly enjoyed it. Has all elements for clean entertainment. Two days; second night the best for the box office. Six reels.—C. H. Thompson, Opera House, Plattsburg, Mo.—Country patronage.

HART, MICH.

RACING LUCK, with Monty Banks.—Here is another one that was a dandy. Well liked and all that like automobile racing will come and see it. Get it. All like it.—Amuse theatre, Hart, Mich.—General patronage.

GRAND HAVEN, MICH

Racing Luck, with Monty Banks.—Very fine little picture and pleased a good crowd on Friday and Saturday. If you can get them in, it will please immensely. Producers should be congratulated on their paper for this, as the six-sheet is a fine ballyhoo.—H. S. Robbins, Robinhood theatre, Grand Haven, Mich.—Small town patronage.

GRAND HAVEN, MICH.

Racing Luck, with Monty Banks.—Fine little picture and paper on same will certainly sell it. Buy this and encourage this star. A bright clean comedy-drama that pleased 99 per cent.—H. S. Robbins, Robinhood theatre, Grand Haven, Mich.

STANFORD, MONT.

Racing Luck, with Monty Banks.—Very good. Not the drawing card that Lloyd is, but as a comedian I think him superior. Story well told and characterization exceptionally good for a picture of this nature. Six reels.—Hollywood theatre, Stanford, Mont.—Small town patronage.

With

MONTY BANKS

The most laughs for a drama, the most thrills for a comedy, you ever saw.

AMUSEMENTS

RACING LUCK, starring Monte Banks (six reels). With lots of thrills, as well as a dandy plot, this is an excellent farce comedy. Monty Banks has Harold Lloyd beat a mile in this one. Better step on this, as it's there. Film condition, new.—H. J. Longaker, Howard, Alexandria, Minn. (Pop. 3,388)

Encore Pictures

RACING LUCK, starring Monty Banks (six reels). As good as any Lloyd ever made, this is a fine comedy. It will build up if they like comedy and action. Type, comedy. Played, Sun. and Mon. Good for Sunday. Rating, 90 per cent. Film condition, good.—W. M. Miller, Leb, Cloquet, Minn. (Pop. 5,127).

AMUSEMENTS

RACING LUCK.—September 8th. Very good business. Picture pleased everybody. Monty Banks' first full length feature proved a great attraction. —C. C. Spink, Fay's Theatre, Philadelphia, Pa.

WORLD
Founded in 1907 by J. P. Chalmers

The Editor's Views

NOW we are to have an exhibitor gathering, representing a nation-wide viewpoint if possible, to discuss the problem of booking combines, chain theatre control, and the like.

The Theatre Owners' Chamber of Commerce, New York's efficient body of exhibitors, is sponsoring the movement.

Discussion will help. Meetings representing scattered experiences and differing opinions have their value. But without attempting to discount the T. O. C. C.'s effort, it is difficult to see in what definite direction the proposed conference will aim.

"Booking combines" as a phrase, presents a problem. But it is a problem varying in its significance and its effects as the geography of the country varies.

In New York it is an exhibitor's problem. The T. O. C. C., no matter what its motives, will feel well satisfied if the meeting in some way or other proves the means of smoking out Marcus Loew.

Hiding the facts in a maze of talk cannot cover the main point that the New Yorkers find their chief problem in Loew buying competition and will make their chief target, Marcus Loew.

BUT with few exceptions that is a strictly local issue. When you mention "booking combines" out over the country you will find that in most sections you are not mentioning anything that has the exhibitor worried.

You are touching on a subject that is of vital concern to all but three or four of the bigger distributing organizations.

And there is the real danger in the booking combine menace.

The danger that, eventually, it will starve out real competition in production and distribution. That is a worry for producer and distributor today. Tomorrow it may well become an exhibitor worry.

But, at the moment, in most sections the independent exhibitor is sitting very pretty. His chain or combine competition can buy only a certain number of pictures a year. The calendar has three hundred and sixty-five days—and rarely only one more.

The big fellow buys his product from about three sources. The balance of the field is left to the independent exhibitor. There is quality product in that balance, too. Plenty of it.

In many cases the independent exhibitor is fair enough to pay quality prices for quality product. In most cases he can't, for his house is the "also-ran" of the town. While it may, through this accident, become the "first run" for the independent distributor—that doesn't automatically give a smaller house first run box office receipts.

And then we come to the most serious phase of the problem: The independent exhibitor who takes advantage of the fact that he is in the driver's seat to pay far less than he could, or should.

That is the situation that has a lot outside the "Big Three" worrying. Only the more efficient selling, the more sound financing, the more improved production of the past year, has enabled them to cope with it thus far.

ONE more phase deserves discussion. We have heard the consistent rumble that there are sections where the strong combines are entering towns with the statement, "You may as well sell out to us—if you don't we'll build against you and run you out."

It's an oft-repeated story. But we hear no names of towns or exhibitors. The T. O. C. C. meeting will serve a good purpose if it will bring this story out of the shadows of gossip. If these things are happening, let's hear about them from the men concerned. If they are not happening, let the silence tell us so.

This aspect, and the New York fear of Loew, present exhibitor problems.

But aside from these points, when you say "booking combines" you are stepping on the corn that is causing heavy grief to a large number of distributors.

Perhaps the T. O. C. C. will hold an overflow meeting for the benefit of those distributors.

Speaking Freely

While it is still "New Year's"—and we are talking about records, lists, and accomplishments, put this in the book. The most remarkable campaign to bring an unknown from obscurity to the rays of the spotlight that the screen has ever known. And we might include the stage. And even Barnum. For we are talking about the well-conceived, miraculously-executed campaign that took a likeable young miss, Betty Bronson, and placed her in the front rank of luminaries. Accepted without question. And by her own charm and work, on top of the publicity, already cinching that place.

What a campaign! Every step in it legitimate and in good taste. Never a false step. Never a circus stunt that would have clashed with the dainty character of "Peter Pan." When you put it in your record book write across the top of the page, "A Model Campaign."

Then, at the bottom of the page, give the credit where credit is due.

To Charles McCarthy "and his gang." The New York "gang," and the Hollywood "gang." The publicity organization that has been functioning quietly and efficiently under the heavy demands of Paramount's routine—and then showed its ability to meet an extraordinary demand and meet it squarely.

It will be a long day before anyone does a better job.

Gosh! Wish we had the space to acknowledge the Christmas and New Year's cards. And the telegrams, and good wishes of all sorts. Not to forget Sidney Olcott's fluent message. Nor that of Charlie Giegerich. The good will is certainly appreciated by one and all of The World organization. We started to set the appreciation up in type, listing the names. When the eight point bold began to run over the confines of one page we stopped. Realizing that it would be a pretty "constant reader" who would ever find his own name in the list. So this way is just as good. To all the good fellows—boys and girls—we thank you!

There must be something in that California air that affects William Randolph Hearst. For many years now almost every extended stay of the publisher on the coast has brought its rumors.

One time we hear that W. R. is going to quit producing entirely; the next time he is going to merge activities with one of the other producing organizations.

Then he returns to New York and the rumors are forgotten in a new burst of activity at three or four studios simultaneously.

The leasing of the Cosmopolitan Theatre to Flo Ziegfeld gives the boys something to put their teeth into, though.

Always like to pass on the good news. This time it's about that triumvirate control of sales up at Universal. A lot of the fellows looked upon it as an experiment. Mebbe they did at the home office, too. But we hear, from the talkative birdies, that the experimental days are long past. The boys in the field are happy, the weekly gross figures are cheerful, the number of new towns that the White List is getting into is steadily mounting. So everybody's happy. This also we hear: That Fred McConnell has the short subject figures climbing. At first slowly. Always surely. And now rapidly. Oodles of good news, eh?

John McCormack assured us personally that this radio business is not so bad. Said it didn't hurt his prestige any, nor affect his dignity in the slightest, and did help business a lot. Lucrezia Bori echoed his sentiments. So we have succumbed to the importunities of the vast army of broadcasting managers. And for some unknown reason we are going to take the air. Probably a week from Saturday, at WOR. Somewhere along in the evening hour chosen by the celebrities. Which will make it pretty tough on John McCormack should he decide to give an encore performance that evening. Yessir!

Reminding us that the announcements say, "Carl Laemmle spoke from WOR on Monday, January 5th, his subject being, 'The Phantom of the Opera.'"

Our own subject is, "The Whichness of the Future of Motion Pictures," or, "Whereas."

Many a bedtime story is told in jest.

Looks like the doom of censorship in New York. The Republicans aren't all het up about it any more. And Governor Smith sticks consistently to his position that it should be abolished. And if consistency in face of a chance to fill a couple of much-sought jobs isn't a jewel then Tiffany is in the butcher business. There is a vacancy on the board now; in another year there would be another for the Governor to fill. And you may be sure that the line of applicants long ago formed at the right and overflowed. All of which is just another mark to the credit of Al under the heading "Statesmanship."

Had an interesting visitor to the office this week in the person of Eric Clark, manager of George Eastman's theatre up in Rochester. And heard the real story of the Eastman—of the millionaire philanthropist's sincere desire to make it an actual experimental station for the entire industry.

Lots of good work they are doing up there. In scenic work, in presentations, in music. New ideas, new devices. All intended for the eventual benefit and use of all the industry.

A likeable chap, this Eric Clark. Comparatively new to the business. Knows it. But is gathering around him an earnest organization of specialists. Working hard, studying hard—and you'll hear more of him.

Had another interesting visitor. Wilfred Noy. A veteran English director, who stole quietly into this field a year ago—and who is already making a place for himself. They'll soon be calling him an "American director"—and someone will have to remind you that he was in England once.

His "Lost Chord," made for Dr. Shallenberger, shows that he has the "spark." We'll tell you more about him later—for his is an interesting story.

They do funny things in this business. Someone up at F. B. O. must have decided it was foolish to advertise in Moving Picture World when it was cheaper to use our "Straight From the Shoulder" pages to reach the same readers. So "Van" is being deluged with enthusiastic reports—all on a standard post card form. From several sections. Which is a great idea. Except that we might be pardoned for preferring to get our own reports, in our own way, direct from exhibitors. And publishing only those. —R. E. W.

Vitagraph Endures Through 27 Years of Kaleidoscopic Business War

Smith and Blackton, Pioneers, Still Rule, Aided by Chip of Old Rock

By SUMNER SMITH

VITAGRAPH will enter upon its twenty-eighth year of continuous motion picture production in February and—just think of it!—the three biggest names associated with the organization are the three which were uppermost when it was founded. They are Smith, Rock and Blackton. Smith and Blackton were two of the pioneers and Rock is the son of the third pioneer. How unusual, when one considers the chaotic history of the motion picture! As Will Hays likes to say, in the early days the motion picture game was as rough-and-ready as the Klondike gold rush. The Almighty Dollar was pursued by the gambling type of citizen. It was success to the nerviest and the devil take the hindmost. Executives appeared and vanished like leaves on the trees. Stability was unknown, friendships meant little. But, despite the commercial throat-cutting, Smith and Blackton and a chip of the old Rock still hold sway over Vitagraph's destinies. Twenty-eight years in a business admittedly built upon shifting sands, though now secure. Boy, it's hardly believable!

Growth Due to Teamwork

The great triumvirate of earlier days was Albert A. Smith, William T. Rock and J. Stuart Blackton. The trio of the present day is Albert A. Smith, J. Stuart Blackton and John B. Rock. This coming month of February marks the end of John B. Rock's first year as general manager.

Vitagraph's growth was due to the teamwork of those three pioneers. Smith and Blackton were making pictures even before they helped to form Vitagraph. They started by touring New York City with a tent, with pictures that nowadays would seem extremely crude, so different were they from the triumphs, artistic and mechanical, of the present.

The two pioneers had not been exhibiting long when Mr. Smith perfected a device which removed the flicker that marred the earliest films. This contrivance did much to make action pictures practical and ensure for them a boundless future development.

Up to that time Thomas A. Edison had made all the films and projectors. When William T. Rock, coming to New York from New Orleans, linked his fortunes with those of Mr. Smith and Mr. Blackton, the three determined to be independent of the New Jersey wizard. Accordingly, Vitagraph, having been organized in February, 1897, rented a loft building in Nassau Street, New York, and started to manufacture pictures for itself, the first enterprise in the world to devote itself to that product exclusively.

Larger Quarters Needed

It was not long before larger quarters, these also in lower Manhattan, were procured, and in the fullness of time Vitagraph built a commodious plant, with studios attached, over in the Flatbush section of Brooklyn. It was several years later that studios in Hollywood were acquired and production work was transferred to the West Coast.

ALBERT E. SMITH
President of Vitagraph

Vitagraph was the first company to make and distribute a picture with an actual plot and the first to produce a news reel. Mr. Smith himself "shot" the photographs from which the latter was evolved, scenes in Galveston, Texas, following the visitation of the destructive tidal wave. Likewise, he startled the world by personally obtaining shots of the Jeffries-Sharkey championship fight at Coney Island in 1899, the first boxing bout ever so pictured. This was an achievement requiring the exercise of much ingenuity and a display of physical courage by the photographer-producer, for arrangements for the photography had not been made with the promoters of the contest.

The first of all story pictures, "The Spanish Flag Pulled Down," appeared in 1898 and was inspired by the growing threat of war between the United States and Spain. It was only forty-eight feet long but it created a deep sensation and marked an epoch, besides stirring audiences to great patriotic fervor. Even in that day the founders of the industry had visions of the super-specials which they were later to bring into being.

Photographed Train Wreck

Yet another Vitagraph "first" was the picturizing of an actual train smash. This was done at a bridge across the historic Raritan river in New Jersey. The engine and some of the cars plunged into the stream, while the remainder of the train hung suspended from the broken trestle.

Vitagraph is believed also to have been the first company ever to recruit screen actors from the stage. It was with this organization that many leading stage players had their first picture experience. E. H. Sothern played his masterpiece, "An Enemy of the King," in Vitagraph studios, and there too Barney Bernard, Frank Daniels and a large number of other dramatic stars produced screen successes.

Sidney Drew's comedies were launched at the Brooklyn studios. Florence Turner, "the Vitagraph Girl," Flora Finch, John Bunny, Little Bobby Connelly, Mother Mary Maurice and Maurice Costello were among the early stars under this banner. Norma and Constance Talmadge made their debuts under the same auspices, and a host of others, favorites now as well as then, proudly acknowledge Vitagraph as their alma mater. It was Vitagraph, moreover, that opened the first exclusive motion picture house on Broadway, another item in its long list of innovations.

Clean Pictures Always

Cleanliness in pictures has been the corner-stone of Vitagraph policy from the very beginning. Throughout, there has been insistence not only upon casts of superior excellence and directorship of the highest order, but upon thoroughly worth-while stories. The founders believed that sheer entertainment should carry also an ap-

A GROUP OF VITAGRAPH'S BROOKLYN STUDIOS, NEARLY 20 YEARS AGO, JUST AFTER THE ANNUAL CHRISTMAS TURKEY DISTRIBUTION HAD TAKEN PLACE.

In foreground of picture, seated, is Florence Turner, "the Vitagraph Girl," and almost directly behind her is her mother.

Behind Mrs. Turner, in a cap, is St. Loue, a director. The tall young man at the left end of the row beind him is the actor, John Hartigan, while Julia Swayne Gordon, an early day star, smiling and wearing a bright gray hat, is the second person to Hartigan's right.

peal to the intelligence and to the higher emotions of the public.

Accordingly, it has long been the Vitagraph plan to go directly to well known and successful authors for story material. The list of popular writers whose works have been picturized by this company includes, among many others, Rafael Sabatini, Robert W. Chambers, George Barr McCutcheon, James Oliver Curwood, Wallace Irwin, Booth Tarkington, Louis Joseph Vance, Donn Byrne, Edith Ellis, Sir Arthur W. Pinero, O. Henry, Alfred Henry Lewis, A. S. M. Hutchinson, Cyrus Townsend, Leonard Merrick, E. Phillips Oppenheim, Frank Upham Adams, George Randolph Chester, Will E. Ingersoll, Basil King, Mary E. Wilkins Freeman, Florence Morse Kingsley, Hamlin Garland, Mollie Elliott Sewell, Earl Derr Biggers and Harold McGrath.

It is Vitagraph's boast that it has earned the right to use the adjective, "first," in each of the senses of the adjective—not first merely in point of time, but first also in quality of product and in service. Its organizers were trail-blazers as well as pioneers. Innovation after innovation which they introduced have been adopted by all other picture organizations until they have become fixed, component features of the industry.

JOHN B. ROCK
General Manager of Vitagraph.

The projectors and officials have had the satisfaction of seeing the wisdom of Vitagraph policy fully vindicated. Their early visions have become realities. There are four reasons why this is so—Albert A. Smith, William T. Rock, J. Stuart Blackton and John B. Rock; Smith, W. T. Rock and Blackton the organizers, J. B. Rock the present general manager and Blackton, producer of a long line of outstanding successes, including, among others, on the current schedule, "The Clean Heart" or "The Cruelties of "Life," from A. S. M. Hutchinson's novel; Kenneth Perkin's "The Beloved Brute," and "The Redeeming Sin," from L. V. Jefferson's "The Pearls of the Madonna," in which Nazimova makes her debut as a Vitagraph star.

Times flies. Once it was John Bunny; now Nazimova holds the spotlight. But Vitagraph endures.

Mr. Exhibitor! Absorb This Legal Angle on Contracts by H. M. Richey

Arm Yourself with This Knowledge to Counteract Boomerang

Nowadays the theatre owner has many things on his mind. Not least of them is the contract. Too often, in the stress of business, he takes verbal instead of written promises. Then something goes wrong and his cry rises up to high heaven. "But it wasn't in the contract," says the Arbitration Board.

Have exhibitors got to become lawyers as well? H. M. Richey, secretary of the M. P. T. O. of Michigan, insists they must know something about law, so he recently wrote the following article for the Michigan Film Review. Here's a "first lesson" on contracts. Anyhow, it's so valuable a bit of information that Moving Picture World herewith passes it along to exhibitors everywhere. You can't go wrong if you live up to its instructions.—The Editor.

"IT'S getting so you have to be a lawyer to be able to get along in the film business these days," remarked an exhibitor recently. While that statement is not entirely true, still it is a fact that with the progress of the industry more and more it is necessary for exhibitors to have a thorough understanding of their contractual relations with exchanges.

For the next few weeks this office is going to attempt to point out some of the important things incidental to the signing of a contract, and the completion of that contract, and the suggestion is made that these pages in "The Film Review" be clipped out for future reference.

Making the Contract

Because of the fact that the majority of film contracts are quite lengthy few exhibitors can take the time to read them. Therefore, the following points should be noted:

1. There are no cancellation clauses in the standard or uniform contracts as used by the various exchanges UNLESS SUCH CLAUSES ARE WRITTEN IN OR ADDED TO THE CONTRACT.

2. Verbal agreements will not be considered.

3. The exhibitor is responsible for the film from the time it leaves the exchange until he delivers it to a common carrier AND RECEIVES FROM THAT COMMON CARRIER A RECEIPT. The sending or returning of a film parcel post, special delivery, does not give you a receipt. The insuring of the film for a small amount, sufficient to get a receipt, relieves the exhibitor from responsibility. You must have and be able to show if necessary a receipt.

It follows, therefore, that you must preserve these receipts for a few weeks.

4 If your application for contract is not approved within ten days it is considered rejected except in the case of Film Classics, who allow themselves fifteen days, and Standard, who have a provision in their contract that states "that unless disapproved within 21 days it is considered approved." Just what interpretation the Arbitration Board would place on the latter clause is at this time unknown.

5. If an exhibitor holds a film over for extra days he is liable for damages for such a violation of his contract.

6. All contracts carry the clause whereby the exhibitor agrees to arbitration before taking any court action.

Using the above points as the high spots of the contract, the exhibitor in preparing to make an application for contract has the following things to remember: That he must see that the contract is specific as to

1. Price.

2. Number of days to be used.

3. Protection. This must be made specific and understandable, so that a third party can readily grasp what both the exhibitor and salesman meant when such a protection clause was written.

4. Name of productions bought. Never buy productions under production numbers. When it is made, it may be a picture wholly unsuitable for your theatre. But if you have signed the contract, you must play it.

Initial each and every additional clause incorporated by either yourself or the salesman and have him do the same.

5. BE SURE AND SAVE A COPY OF YOUR APPLICATION FOR CONTRACT AND COMPARE IT WITH THE APPROVED COPY WHEN IT IS MAILED TO YOU. If they are the same, you can then destroy the application. If they differ, notify the exchange, for neither party can change the terms or conditions of a written contract, once it is signed.

6. A number of the state right exchanges do not use the uniform contract, namely Frank Beecher, Exclusive Pictures, A. H. C. Booking Office, Rex Film, etc. These contracts do not carry the clause "none of the above pictures are reissues from any company who does not use the uniform contract." If you want to make sure that the picture you bought is not a reissue, write it in or add to the contract.

Protection

This is a very important matter. Take nothing for granted. The Arbitration Board, who in the case of a dispute will have to enforce the contract, cannot consider evidence to show that you never run a picture behind this or that house.

If you sign a contract with this protection "after the Tivola Theatre" all the exchange has to do is to see that you get it after that theatre, no matter how many theatres in your vicinity play it ahead of the Tivola Theatre.

If you write "first run in Highland Park," find out what the exchange considers Highland Park and how soon after the first run, second run or third run the picture will be available for Highland Park. Find out if there are other theatres demanding protection on your theatre and safeguard yourself against this theatre setting it back and back and back.

Remember you will get as protection only what is written in the contract, regardless of what you thought or understood with the salesman or exchange before.

A good form of protection for neighborhood theatres is "the above pictures to be available for the exhibitor's use .....days after first run and ahead of the ..... theatres." It is best to ascertain from the salesman whether the first run has been sold and if it has, specify where it is to be run first run. It is a dangerous practice to buy pictures before first runs are set, otherwise you have no way of knowing where the picture will be run and it might be the exchange would not get a first run and might release it first run in a theatre that you could not follow.

REMEMBER THIS. When your contract is completed and before you sign your name, read over the price, name of pictures, number of days to be shown, protection, and whether or not the pictures are reissues. Have a complete understanding of the contract IN WRITING before you sign it.

Play Dates

If the contract specifies play dates DO NOT put the play dates in your book until you have received an approval of the contract or A WRITTEN CONFIRMATION OF THE PLAY DATES.

This is extremely important.

If you are in the habit of going to the booker and asking him if such and such a date is open and then putting it in your book without receiving by mail a WRITTEN CONFIRMATION, you are walking on dangerous ground. What are you going to do if when the play date arrives the exchange says they have no record of such a booking, despite the fact that you are certain that the booker agreed with you that the date you put in your book was open. How are you going to prove that you didn't make a mistake?

THERE IS ONLY ONE WAY—Insist and do not recognize any dates that are not in writing. If you don't do this and have a dark house, you are not going to be able to prove that it was the exchange's mistake, although it may be.

Don't ignore these confirmations of play date. Put them in a folder and don't put in your booking book any dates that have not been confirmed in WRITING.

To keep your contracts and confirmation of play dates in a folder for each exchange is a complete method of procedure. It doesn't take half as much time as to carry them around in your pocket and then have to search high and low for them when the time comes. If you are not doing this now, it's going to cost you several hundreds of dollars and a couple of million cusses when the time comes that you want something. Keep your contracts. Keep them for a few months after they are all completed.

If you have a number of contracts, better keep a record of how many pictures on each contract, so you can know at all times how many pictures you have bought and prevent over buying.

Keep some sort of a file of your correspondence. Especially if it refers to pictures under contract. Do not let your mail lie on the desk for several days at a time. There may be something important in that envelope that you thought was an advertisement. Remember that somebody has taken the trouble to sit down and write you a letter. Would you like to see your letter consigned to the waste basket when it only takes five seconds to open it, and if it is an advertisement that you don't want to read, consign it to the waste basket. Maybe it is a letter from the exchange advising that they can't furnish you a picture you have dated. Might be a

Press Sheets Should Not Be Misleading

One of the many testimonials Moving Picture World has received, since its recent and exclusive publication of a series of constructive and instructive articles on press sheets, was submitted this week by Louis C. Shimon, assistant manager of the New Milwaukee Theatre, Milwaukee, Wisconsin. Mr. Shimon writes:

"I have been following with interest your articles on press sheets, and wish to suggest that the right members of the cast be featured, and that it be based on truthfulness.

"In the press sheet of 'The Fire Patrol' Anna Q. Nilsson is featured on every page, as she only appears in the picture but a moment—it is downright misleading if one has not reviewed it in advance. Besides, I had her name up in electric lights—and the policy of the house in all our advertising is 'TRUTH WELL TOLD.'

"I believe that it would be a convenience if every press sheet carried the accurate footage of the picture. The Milwaukee presents a varied program of short subjects in conjunction with the feature, and as the show is run on scheduled time the correct footage appearing on the press sheet would always be on hand and would be doubly useful if the schedule is made out in advance.

"In my estimation the First National press sheet is the best of all. The firms who are putting out 'Pretty Press Sheets' with nothing useful in them would do well to copy their style.

"Good short catchlines that are explanatory are very useful. But there are so many that don't seem to realize that fact.

"Putting more truth and less bunk into the press sheet will do more to improve it than anything I can think of."

Switow Incorporates $600,000 Indiana Theatre Chain

Mitchell Switow, of Louisville, Ky., interested in a string of local theaters, including the Kentucky, and for some years one of the most active exhibitors in the section, has filed papers at Indianapolis, for the Switow Amusement Co., of Indiana, a $600,000 company for operating the Indiana theaters of the Switow chain, and which will have offices at the Le Rose Theater, in Jeffersonville, Ind.

The concern owns ten theaters in Southern Indiana and is being reorganized with the purpose of acquiring others. In its string of playhouses are LeRose and the Dream theaters in Jeffersonville, three motion picture houses in New Albany, three in Bedford, one in Salem and one in Paoli. Stockholders and incorporators are M. Switow, Sam Switow, Harry Switow, Fred Switow, of Louisville; George C. Kopp, Charles F. Antz, W. T. Ingram and John Gienger, of Jeffersonville; Harry E. Jewett, president of the Second National Bank, of New Albany and Earl S. Gwin, president of the Lincoln National Bank, of Louisville.

Officers are: M. Switow, president; George C. Kopp, vice-president and general counsel; Sam Switow, treasurer; Harry Switow, secretary.

New Theatre Chain Formed in Seattle

H. W. Bruen, prominent Seattle suburban exhibitor, has consolidated his interests with those of L. R. Stradley and W. L. Steele, two Queen Anne Hill exhibitors who recently joined forces under the name of the S. S. Amusement Co. The new organization will be known as the Pacific Theatres Co., of Seattle. For the present there will be no change in the active management of the houses. Stradley has his new Cheerio Theatre well along and is preparing to announce his opening date. Steele has operated the Queen Anne for a number of years, and has plans about completed for a new Egyptian theatre on the Hill. Bruen owns the Ridgemont, and is also associated with H. A. Barrows in the Grey Goose on Beacon Hill.

All three managers will be active in the management of the business affairs of the corporation. It is understood that other suburban houses are under consideration in districts not now covered by any of the company's houses.

SUNDAY NIGHT SHOWS IN STAMFORD NOW LEGAL

Sunday motion pictures at last have become a reality in Stamford. Shows now are permitted from 7 o'clock Sunday nights. This was made possible by the action of Mayor Alfred N. Phillips, Jr., in signing a resolution presented to him by a committee which the mayor had appointed to take charge of the situation which resulted when there was presented a petition signed by the theatre owners and patrons.

Despite the start of the Sunday shows, the Ministers' League has voted to continue its opposition to the Sunday shows in Stamford. The first Sunday performances were given on December 28.

Formation of Albany Zone Completes N.Y.M.P.T.O., $14,000 Budget Needed

Session at Capital on Jan. 7 Was Big Success; Many Voluntary Contributions; Senator Walker and Chairman Hays Speak

AMID the greatest enthusiasm, and with many exhibitors voluntarily contributing from five to one hundred dollars each, to meet certain outstanding obligations already existing, the Albany Zone Committee, meeting with exhibitors from the territory covered by exchanges in that city, started to function under most auspicious conditions at a session held at the Hotel Ten Eyck, in Albany, on Tuesday afternoon. Among the speakers were Senator James J. Walker, just back from Europe; Senator Leonard R. Lipowicz, of Buffalo; S. A. Moross, of the Theatre Owners' Chamber of Commerce, of New York City; Walter Hays, president of the New York State M. P. T. O.; Jules Michaels, of Buffalo, president of the Buffalo Zone, and John J. Nolan, of the New York State Typographical Union.

In meeting the expenses of headquarters which the Albany Zone Committee will maintain in the Capital City, each theater in the zone in places with a population not exceeding 2,000 persons, will be assessed $12 a year; theaters in places of from 2,000 to 5,000, will be assessed $15; houses in places from 5,000 to 10,000 population, will pay $20 a year; those in places from 10,000 to 25,000 population the assessment will be $25 a year, while theatres located of from 25,000 to 75,000 population, will be assessed at the rate of five cents a seat, and those in cities over 75,000 will pay 7½ cents a seat.

A $14,000 fund to meet the running expenses of the three zones, the New York City, Buffalo and Albany, is to be created, on the ratio of New York meeting $8,000 of the total; Buffalo, $4,000, leaving the Albany zone contributing $2,000. It is not expected, however, that it will be necessary to spend the entire $14,000.

The meeting opened about 1:30 o'clock with Meyer Schine, of Gloversville, presiding, and with Walter Hays, of Buffalo; Uly S. Hill, of Albany; Louis Buettner, of Cohoes, and William Shirley, of Schenectady, seated about the table, the last named acting as secretary in place of Benjamin Apple, of Troy, who was unable to be present.

Senator Walker came in shortly after the meeting got under way, and was warmly greeted. He was introduced by President Hays. Senator Walker declared that unanimity of opinion was never more necessary than today, among the exhibitors.

"I have always liked the zone idea," said Senator Walker. "A note was struck in Cleveland that will never be forgotten, when the M. P. T. O. was founded there. The theater owner must ever be alert. The M. P. T. O. stopped monopoly in the industry, and accomplished a wonderful work. It is my observation that the theatre owner of today must get back into a genuine whole souled organization. I do not want to be an alarmist, but I do say that the field is being invaded, and that today some of the old forms of coercion are being practiced in an even more subtle manner than in the past.

"While in London and Paris, I went over the picture situation. The exhibitors in these cities are as far behind the American exhibitor today, as the American owner was twenty years ago. They have not learned to bring pictures to the people. They are waiting for the people to find them. They do not know how to sell to the public, or how to put on pictures. They are sending a committee to this country in the spring to investigate conditions in the hopes of improving them in Europe."

During the course of his talk, Senator Walker, paid a particularly high tribute to Michael Walsh, of Yonkers, saying that he had never known a man for whom he had a higher regard.

Senator Lipowicz spoke briefly, stating that he would do everything within his power to help the exhibitor in his capacity as a state senator.

President Hays, of the state association, explaining the nature of the meeting, said that the Albany Zone was founded for the protection of the exhibitors within its boundaries and that the zone would function for the benefit of these exhibitors. Mr. Hays spoke of having conferred with Will Hays and Cortlandt Smith of the national association in New York City on Monday, stating that a censorship bill was being drafted, and that this year the Hays organization would be working hand in hand with the state association, rather than otherwise. Mr. Hays further stated that it had been practically decided to introduce a children's bill in the New York State Legislature this year. There was a short talk by Mr. Moross during which he outlined the work being done by the New York City Zone Committee.

There was considerable discussion in regard to the assessment that is to be levied in meeting the running expenses of the Albany Zone. It was stated that the figures had been arrived at by first ascertaining the number of theaters served from the Albany exchanges, and then classifying these by the subdivisions according to population, it being taken for granted that every theater in the zone territory would contribute even though they were not represented at the meeting yesterday. Abe Stone, with houses in Albany, and formerly an owner in Schenectady, took some little exception to the apportionment, declaring that the small houses in some of the larger cities would be forced to pay more than was really their share.

John J. Nolan, of the New York State Typographical Union, spoke briefly.

Louis Buettner, of Cohoes, stated that if there was anyone present who desired to contribute anything for their "initiation," such sums would be gratefully received in order to meet some outstanding indebtedness. It was then that the enthusiasm of the exhibitors was shown. Mr. Buettner, starting off the contributions, with $100; Charles Sesonske, of Johnstown; Walter Hays, of Buffalo; William Smalley, of Cooperstown; and the Schine Theater Company, of Gloversville, quickly contributing like amounts; Harry Hellman, of Albany, contributing $10, and Frank L. Sands, of Pyrites, $5. John Lowell, an actor, present at the meeting, also contributed $100.

The Albany Zone Committee will occupy headquarters in the Mark Strand building in Albany, with Carolyn Goodman as Secretary. Every exhibitor in the Albany territory, who attended the meeting, was asked to urge other exhibitors to join.

Among those present at the meeting were: James Rose, Jacob Rosenthal, Walter Roberts, Uly S. Hill, of Troy; Abe Stone, Harry Hellman, George Roberts, Walter and Noma Suckno, Joseph Weideman, C. L. Gardner, of Albany; Rae Candee, of Utica; C. H. Moyer, Herkimer; Robert Pierce, Ilion; William C. Smalley, Cooperstown; Meyer and Louis Schine, and Ben Davis, Gloversville; Frank X. Shay, W. W. Farley, William Shirley, Meyer Friedman, Betty Feuer, George Dwore, of Schenectady; More Weiss, Watervliet; Charles Sesonske, Johnstown; Julius Berinstein, Troy; Joseph Braff, Albany; Robert Wagner, Little Falls; Harry Lazarus, Kingston; Louis Buettner, Cohoes; Frank L. Sands, Pyrites; L. H. McAllister, Middleburg; Dennis Regan, Greenwich; Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Milligan, Schuylerville; D. H. McLaughlin, Oriskany Falls; C. W. Loomis, Grand Gorge; Walter Hays, Buffalo; Jules Michaels, Buffalo; S. A. Moross, New York City.

Independents Call Senator Walker

It is understood that the I. M. P. P. D. A. is holding an executive meeting at 3 o'clock this afternoon, January 8, to go to the mat on selecting a nationally known leader. Senator James J. Walker will be present at the meeting. Rumor has it that there may be immediate action in this direction while others feel that the session will resolve itself into a give and take conference, relative to problems of the independents. The inducements that could be offered a leader of Senator Walker's calibre and the probable method of operating should an agreement be reached.

Governor Smith Urges Immediate Killing of N. Y. Film Commission

Theatre Commission in Cleveland, Ohio

After a comprehensive survey and study of the amusement situation in Cleveland, Ohio, a theatre commission, composed of leading citizens, has been formed, for the purpose of securing proper plays and attractions for the city. High moral standards for plays and pictures to be offered to the Cleveland public is the ideal which the commission will seek. The Federated Churches, of which Chas. H. Hoffrichter is chairman, is responsible for the movement.

Conferences to bring about cooperation and mutual understanding among the various religious interests, the theatre interests and the city, will be the method employed to accomplish the desired result.

The movement has been indorsed by representatives of the three groups mentioned.

TOM COCHRANE BACK FROM JAPAN

Tom D. Cochrane, manager of the Paramount Japanese organization, at Kobe, arrived in New York on Sunday, December 28, on his annual visit to the home office of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation and to join Mrs. Cochrane, who had preceded him to this country. He will remain in New York for several weeks, conferring with E. E. Shauer, director of the foreign department, regarding matters relating to the distribution of Paramount Pictures in Japan during the coming year and will inspect some of the new product which he expects to release shortly in the Orient. Cochrane believes that 1925 will see considerable improvement in the theatre business in Japan.

Scathing Denunciation of Censorship Emphasized by Empire Chief in Annual Message to Legislature—Wants Action

GOVERNOR ALFRED E. SMITH, in his annual message to the New York State Legislature, at the State Capitol, in Albany, on Wednesday noon, January 7, again committed himself in a most emphatic way as against motion picture censorship, recommending the immediate abolition of the New York State Motion Picture Commission. Outlining certain reasons why the Commission should be abolished, Governor Smith goes further and declares without any mincing of words that the Commission is useless, and, to his way of thinking, is simply using up the people's money and giving them absolutely no return for the same.

Governor Smith, speaking on motion picture censorship, in his annual message, says:

"One Commission, the Parole Board I have already recommended for abolition, and another, I recommend to you for immediate abolition is the Motion Picture Commission.

"Nothing is more abhorrent to the American idea of freedom and liberty than governmental censorship. It is not in keeping with our ideas of freedom of worship, or freedom of speech, or freedom of the press.

"We have time and again declared it to be the right of every citizen to speak freely, to write and to publish his sentiments on all subjects, being responsible for the abuse of that right, and we have prohibited, by our fundamental law, the passage of any act to restrain or abridge liberty of speech or of the press.

"A few years ago, there was a mad scramble to censor everything. The schoolteachers of our public schools were to be subjected to a test as to their loyalty and devotion to the country. The state sought a form of censorship over private schools by a license system. At the same time, it set up a state commission to pass upon exhibitions of motion pictures.

"In 1923, there was an awakening in the public mind, demanding a return to the old ideas of government, which would not countenance any policy of the state to condemn any person before the fact, and censorship of our public school teachers and of our private schools was removed from the statutes. But there still remains the motion picture commission. It should be abolished for all of the above reasons, and for the further reason that it is useless and to my way of thinking is simply using up the money of the people of this state, and giving them no return whatever for it."

The attitude which Governor Smith is taking toward the repeal of the present censorship law in New York state shows above all things that he is consistent. With the expiration of the term of office of Mrs. Helen M. Hosmer, of the Motion Picture Commission, there falls to the lot of Governor Smith the duty of appointing another person to the commission. Naturally enough, Governor Smith might within all reason be expected to name a Democrat. When this appointment is made, the Commission politically will stand Democratic, two to one, George H. Cobb, being the sole Republican member.

But Governor Smith believes that motion picture censorship is accomplishing nothing in New York State, other perhaps than spending tens of thousands of dollars. Time after time, he has openly expressed himself as against the present statute and in his inaugural messages in the past, has always recommended the abolishment of the law under which the commission functions.

Governor Smith's message and that portion of it referring to motion picture censorship, and its recommendation for the repeal of the present statute, becomes the first gun in the opening campaign which will be waged during the next three months to come in the New York State Legislature to do away with motion picture censorship in the Empire State.

Hollywood Organizes Relief Association for All Filmdom

A NATION-WIDE relief association which will include every branch of the motion picture industry was organized in Hollywood this week to take the place of the Motion Picture Branch of the Actors' Fund of America. Among the thirty-one incorporators who will serve as the first Board of Trustees are some of the most prominent names in the film industry.

The name of the new organization is the Motion Picture Relief Fund of America, Inc., and locally it will operate under the Community Chest. It is planned to establish branches in New York and other centers of activity in the picture industry. Anyone engaged in any branch of picture making may become a member for $1.00.

The new movement follows the split with the Actors' Fund which came at the last session of the trustees in New York early in December. The action of the trustees was based on the expressed fear that the relief of picture people might some day swamp the Actors' Fund, although it was pointed out to them that the picture branch has always taken care of its own through funds raised locally by benefits and donations. The Motion Picture Producers' Association, the Directors' Association, the Screen Writers' Guild, Cinematographers' Association and other organizations within the industry have always co-operated with this fund.

For the present it is planned to have the Actors' Fund look after motion picture relief in New York while stage relief in Los Angeles and vicinity is temporarily taken care of by the Motion Picture Relief Fund.

The incorporators of the new relief fund who will act as trustees until the first annual election which is to be preceded by a membership drive, comprise the following: Mary Pickford, Douglas Fairbanks, Mae Murray, William S. Hart, Harold Lloyd, Charles Chaplin, Wedgwood Nowell, Hal E. Roach, Rupert Hughes, I. Thalberg, Mitchell Lewis, Rob Wagner, Ewell D. Moore, Charles H. Christie, and others.

Milwaukee First Runs Drastically Cutting Matinee Admission Prices

Survey Shows Maximum, Except One Theatre, Is 25 Cents—Milwaukee Preparing to Accommodate National Convention

THE price of motion picture entertainment—especially during the daytime—is gradually being cut for the public in Milwaukee.

A reduction in admission prices from 50 cents to 35 cents during the evening and of 25 cents for matinees has been announced by O. J. Wooden for the Garden theatre, downtown showhouse, as the first drastic change in policy since he took over the management of the Garden and Alhambra on Jan. 1.

This move leaves the Alhambra the only Milwaukee motion picture theatre charging more than 25 cents for matinees, the price there being retained at 50 cents.

Other houses have announced cuts during the last few weeks. Saxe's Wisconsin and Strand theatres dropped to 25 cents for matinees during the holidays, and as a result did well during the Christmas shopping period. Evening prices in both those houses have been kept at 50 cents, however.

Prior to the Saxe cuts, Ascher's Merrill announced a reduction to 25 cents.

Simultaneously with these announcements Henry Taylor, manager of Freuler's Butterfly, issued a statement declaring that his house would go from 25 cents to a policy of 15 and 10 cents. Instead of changing programs twice a week, three changes will be in order.

The cut at the Butterfly, it is said, was influenced to a great extent by the fact that the Majestic, vaudeville house across the way, has adopted the policy of presenting a feature picture in addition to its regular program, instead of showing short subjects as was formerly the custom there. The price of the Majestic shows was raised three cents, however, with the switch in policy, the new figure being 25 cents.

An important feature of the slash at the Garden lies in the determination of Wooden to maintain the same high standard programs that the house has boasted in the past. It will be one of the few houses in the country where a twelve piece orchestra and stage novelties will be retained despite an admission of less than 50 cents and will continue to show first runs exclusively. The change becomes effective Jan. 10.

Although it had been expected that with Wooden assuming his new post other changes in the operation of the two houses would be in order, he denies that anything along that line is contemplated at present and insists that both houses will be run along somewhat the same lines as under the regime of his predecessor, Leo. A. Landau.

However, Wooden feels that much can be accomplished by reducing the prices at the Garden in the way of converting that showhouse into a money maker, a feat which has been almost impossible since its opening as one of the finest houses in the city several years ago.

Just why the Garden has not gone over is a puzzle to most showmen, since in construction it has few equals in the city and in the matter of location it is unsurpassed, the corner of Third street and Grand Avenue where it stands being recognized as "the" corner of downtown Milwaukee.

Preparing for Convention

Working in preparation for the national convention of motion picture men has begun in earnest in Milwaukee with the appointment of committees by Fred Seegert, president of the M. P. T. O. of Wisconsin.

George Fischer, of the Milwaukee Theatre, has been appointed chairman of the arrangements committee. Heading the entertainment committee is E. W. Van Norman, of the Parkway, while directing the finance committee is Ernie Langemack, of the Colonial.

All committee chairmen are from Milwaukee, it being contended that greater efficiency could be obtained by such appointments than by distributing them over the state.

Mr. Seegert, as president of the Wisconsin organization, has formally been named convention chairman.

Each of the committees consists of from three to five men who will hold a series of individual meetings within the next few weeks and then gather in a general session to report their progress.

The committees have been assured the whole hearted support of the Association of Commerce.

$1,000,000 THEATRE FOR BUFFALO, IS LATE REPORT

It is reported that a million dollar theatre is to be erected in Delaware avenue, Buffalo, opposite the Hotel Statler, that plans are in the making and that a syndicate is being formed. It is said that John McF. Howie is sponsoring the project. He is manager of the Hotel Touraine. It is also reported that one of the largest theatre owning combines in the East is seeking a site in Buffalo for a theatre to seat 3,500. The Buffalo Real Estate Board has received a letter from a Newark, N. J., realtor asking data and all information on available sites in Buffalo which he wants to place before the combine for consideration. The broker, whose name is withheld at his request, declares he represents one of the largest theatre owning companies in New York. The same request has been received by the Chamber of Commerce.

Chinese Fireworks Scare Box Office

A strange combination of circumstances led to a panic at the Orpheus Theatre, Halifax, N. S., on New Year's Eve, the results of which eventually proved to be more humorous than disastrous. The local Chinese, members of the Chinese Free Masons, secured permission from the civic authorities to celebrate the incoming of the new year with a little fireworks display. The permit was readily granted but the "display" turned out to be the employment of bombs and firecrackers of the cannon type. The Chinese staged their stuff opposite the Orpheus Theatre, which was packed at the time.

With the terrific noise, some rattle-brained man in the audience shouted "Fire" and there was an immediate rush for exits. Fortunately only two or three people were slightly bruised. Practically the whole crowd returned to the theatre after the scare and the midnight show proceeded.

SUNDAY AND INDIANA LEGISLATURE

Indiana exhibitors and theatre managers are now centering their attentions toward the Indiana legislature, which will convene Thursday, January 8. The Ku Klux Klan organization in Indiana is reported to be ready to throw its support back of a legislative program designed to abolish Sunday baseball and provide very heavy penalties for operating theatres and motion picture houses on Sundays. There is to be a drive against commercialized Sunday amusements.

Fifty Burned When Scrap Film in Bag Ignites in Boston Car

Massachusetts Fire Marshal Will Seek Indictments; Film Protected Only by Burlap Container, Report Says

FIFTY persons were burned, twenty-seven of whom so severely that they had to be rushed to hospitals, when a burlap bag, said to have contained scrap film, ignited through combustion on January 3 in a Boston subway car. As the result of an investigation several indictments charging criminal negligence will be sought by the State Fire Marshal of Massachusetts. According to Fire Inspector Frank P. Hardiman an employee of the John F. Bowditch Company, manufacturers of brushes, had obtained the film from the Famous Players-Lasky Boston exchange and was carting it to his company's factory.

That the indictments would be sought was the announcement by Inspector Hardiman. He further stated that the transportation of unprotected film in a common carrier is a direct violation of the law.

A burlap bag, according to reports obtainable after a rigid investigation, was filled with scrap film by Pharos Shirley, aged 70, the Bowditch employe at the exchange. Shirley was on the way to the Bowditch plant when the accident occurred.

According to the reports after the investigation Shirley entered a street car in one of the subways and placed the burlap bag on the floor in front of where he sat. The bag was in front of an electric heater and suddenly there was a roar of flame and blast. The car was crowded and the panic that ensued as sheets of flame swept the car from end to end was the wildest in all the history of the Boston Elevated system.

The Bowditch company had been using scrap motion picture film to make a sort of cement used in the manufacture of its brushes.

George J. Schaeffer, district manager for Famous-Players, was amazed when informed of the accident, the cause of which was attributed to the scrap film obtained from the studio of his company. He and Manager Jordan were positive that no film ever had left the exchange except in authorized and legal containers. The foreman of the storage and shipping department said that some scraps of film had been obtained for the Bowditch company on the morning of the accident. He added that after Shirley had left the studio he phoned the Bowditch office and told whoever he talked with that the company would not get any more film unless its men were more careful. He said that when he returned after lunch he went to the place where the scrap barrel stands and found scraps of film strewn about the room.

When Shirley went to the film company's exchange he was accompanied by John C. Bowditch, son of the head of the brush concern.

Tight as Drum!

A report from Mayfield, Ky., on Dec. 27, stated that the blue laws, made popular in Kansas, would be rigidly enforced at Mayfield, where garages had agreed to close on Sunday and give their employes a day of rest, and where other Sunday operated houses, had also agreed to close, while enforcement would be used if necessary to close picture theatres and all business houses, druggists only being allowed to sell on prescription, or sick room supplies. A revival recently conducted by Howard S. Williams is said to have caused the town to suddenly become quite "sanctimonious."

M. P. T. O. A. Closely Watching Legislation, O'Toole Reports

By Tom Waller

LEGISLATION in all states where there are matters pertaining in any way to the film industry is being carefully watched, it would seem, by the executives of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America. In substantiation of this may be cited as an instance the trip made by President M. J. O'Toole to Harrisburg on Tuesday, January 6.

The Pennsylvania legislature convened, for the first time this season, on that date. O'Toole upon his return to headquarters informed Moving Picture World that he got a very satisfactory perspective on the situation in his home state; that he could learn of little or nothing of embryonic adversity, and that, quite to the contrary, everything foreboded an excellent trend for the industry as far as the Pennsylvania law makers seemed to be concerned.

O'Toole's newspaper career in Pennsylvania has put him on an envious basis with politicians of the biggest and smallest calibre. As a reporter he gained and respected their confidence. As president of the M. P. T. O. A. the reputation which he built up in the past has proven a big asset for him and he is intent upon keeping it so. Thus it is that O'Toole from the reportorial as well as presidential point of view can speak quite authoritatively for Pennsylvania.

In going over his old stamping ground of newspaper days O'Toole ran into many acquaintances. Among them was "Joe" Marcus, leader of the house. Marcus, as is generally known, is counsel for important theatrical interests in Western Pennsylvania. He also had the opportunity of shaking hands with Governor Pinchot.

Another legislator that the M. P. T. O. A. chief met was John P. Harris. The latter is beginning his second term as senator from the western part of the state. Harris is credited with having an interest in a large chain of theatres. Senator Coyne was another lawmaker and friend of exhibitors whom O'Toole ran across.

O'Toole returned to Manhattan jubilant over the fact that his review of the Pennsylvania legislative situation had proven to him that the men back of the government in his state were as friendly as ever in their attitude toward the exhibitor and the film industry in general.

That there will not be any new tax bills introduced this year which would affect motion pictures, O'Toole is confident, since he finds that present sources of revenue for the state are entirely adequate.

Attention is called by O'Toole to R. F. Woodhull and Sydney S. Cohen, both moving factors in the M. P. T. O. A.'s legislative committee. These men and their committees are at the service of all exhibitors.

Stars of All Spheres to Be at T. O. C. C. Ball

That Governor Smith and Mayor Hylan will attend the T. O. C. C. ball at the Hotel Astor, New York, on the night of January 17 is the expectation of William Brandt, chairman of the entertainment committee. Brandt reports that the following have reserved boxes: Carl Laemmle, William Fox, Marcus Loew, Adolph Zukor, Samuel Zierler, Hiram Abrams, Herbert R. Ebenstein, Harry Berman, J. S. Woody, Richard A. Rowland.

The film constellation is expected to be represented by: Thomas Meighan, Richard Dix, William De Mille, Larry Semon, Clara Kimball Young, Bebe Daniels, Johnny Hines, Carol Dempster, Lillian Gish, Anna Q. Nilsson, Ben Lyon, Wallace Beery, Bessie Love, Milton Sills, John Bowers, Marguerite de la Motte, Dagmar Godowsky, Dorothy Gish, Betty Bronson.

FOX ENJOINS CHICAGO CENSORS

The Fox Film Corporation has been granted an injunction by the Circuit Court which restrains the Chicago Censor Board from further interfering with the showing of "The Deadwood Coach," and favorable court action is also expected in regard to two other pictures which the censor board has been holding up.

Butterfield Incorporates New Company for $500,000

WITH the thought of giving to the men who have worked shoulder-to-shoulder with him for the past 10 years an opportunity to secure a financial interest in his circuit of Michigan theatres, W. S. Butterfield, has just completed the formation in Detroit of a new company to be known as the W. S. Butterfield Co., Inc.

The new company is incorporated for $500,000, par value $10 per share, and will open up a field for investment on the part of a number of the veteran employes of the Bijou Theatrical Enterprises, of which Mr. Butterfield is the head.

Officers of the new company are: W. S. Butterfield, president; Edward C. Beatty, vice-president and H. A. Rowles, secretary and treasurer. Offices are to be maintained in the present suite of the Bijou Theatrical Enterprises in the Film Exchange Building. These offices were only completed a few weeks ago, at which time the Bijou Enterprises removed from Battle Creek to make Detroit its headquarters. They form the most luxurious and commodious suite in the building.

The company will be interested in the new million dollar Capitol Theatre, to be erected in Flint. Mr. Butterfield announced at the same time that ground would be broken for this structure early next month.

Chicago Circuits Do S. R. O. Business on New Year's Eve

The Balaban and Katz circuit held New Year midnight shows in all of their houses to capacity business, the Chicago having seven shows for the day, witnessed by at least 30,000 people for the 12 hours. McVickers' theatre, the Randolph and other loop houses held capacity business for the New Year midnight shows while many of the houses in the residential and outlying business districts reported wonderful business for New Years eve and those that held midnight shows did a fine business, most of them combining vaudeville acts with pictures to bring in the crowds that packed their houses. The State Lake had a big standout at midnight waiting to get into the house for the early New Year's morning show.

Lubliner and Trinz circuit put over special New Year midnight shows in four of their houses, the Senate on the west side, the Logan Square on the northwest side and the Covent Garden and Pantheon on the north side and the management reported capacity business for all performances.

Milwaukee Ministers Vote to Boost All Good Pictures

Ministers of Milwaukee stand ready to follow in the footsteps of Wisconsin clubwomen by boosting wholesome films and attempting to kill the bad ones with silence.

This is the assurance that Fred Seegert, president of the motion Picture Theatre Owners of Wisconsin, declares he has received from the Rev. Thomas B. Lyter, an active Milwaukee clergyman.

The Rev. Lyter was especially impressed recently after viewing "The Ten Commandments" at the Davidson Theatre. Commenting upon this film and others including "Abraham Lincoln" and those of a similar type, he pledged himself to interest other ministers in a move to call up their parishioners whenever good photoplays are being shown, according to Mr. Seegert. At the same time, the pastor declared that like the clubwomen, he would ask his fellow ministers to refrain from any activity whenever a picture unworthy of merit is shown, hoping to kill off attendance by silence.

Such Is Life!

Sunday motion pictures were shown in Seneca Falls, N. Y., on Sunday, January 4 for the first time, when both the Fisher and Seneca theatres took advantage of the new ordinance permitting the presentation of pictures on Sunday. The managers of both houses, however, do not believe the Sunday shows will pay, especially in the warm weather when Seneca Falls folk usually motor to Geneva, Auburn and Syracuse to see shows.

Radio and Snow Blamed for Wisconsin Slump by Seegert

AN unprecedented cold wave, setting in earlier than usual and at a time when business already was suffering its customary holiday slump, has combined with the ever growing radio menace to give the theatre business in Wisconsin a staggering blow, a survey indicates.

In the words of Fred Seegert, president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Wisconsin and himself the owner of the Regent in Milwaukee, "The last month of 1924 was the worst December in the history of the business."

"Terrible," is the one descriptive word being received at headquarters of the M. P. T. O. of Wisconsin from members throughout the state reporting on business conditions, according to Mr. Seegert.

"Never before have so many people remained away from the theatre as during the present slump," he declared.

"Radio is becoming a greater menace each day and even those who scoffed at it at first and characterized it as a passing fad are beginning to realize its dangers.

"The first cold spell of the season found the majority of the state's theatre patrons listening to radio programs in warm homes instead of braving the elements to visit the showhouses."

The main hope for improvement in the situation lies in the realization that exhibitors and producers must join hands in making possible a greater variety of program, Mr. Seegert asserts.

"Variety has often been referred to as the spice of life," he declared. "It certainly is coming more and more to be the space of the theatre's life. It is the only effective way of combating the radio and other influences that are tending to weaken the position of the movies.

"Producers must do their share by cutting the length of their features. The public is sick of a diet of feature pictures that are seven, eight or nine reels long. It wants the five or six reeler, with a few novelty reels or stage numbers. The situation at present too often is comparable to a meal consisting entirely of meat with no dessert."

Ideal weather New Year's eve, with record crowds on the street, was the only ray of sunshine of the last four or five weeks.

Except for New Year's eve, when all places were jammed, the only Milwaukee houses which appear to be maintaining healthy attendance are the Alhambra and Saxe's Wisconsin.

The Alhambra, showing Cosmopolitan's "Janice Meredith," played to approximately 35,000 during the week beginning Christmas, the attendance being due in a great measure to the support of Hearst newspaper. Nevertheless, O. J. Wooden, manager of the house, estimates that a drop in temperature which sent the mercury down to 14 below cost him a cool $3,000.

The Wisconsin seems to be drawing mainly because it is Milwaukee's most beautiful house and because a fortune is being spent to provide a variety of stage entertainment in addition to the feature pictures and short subjects.

Among exhibitors who verified the slump were George Fischer, of the Milwaukee, one of the leading outskirt houses, and A. L. Gutenberg, president of the Milwaukee branch of the M. P. T. O. and owner of the Grand Theatre.

S. D. PERKINS GETS SEATTLE POST

S. D. Perkins has been appointed branch manager of the Seattle exchange of Metro-Goldwyn Distributing Corporation. Carl Stearn resigned as manager there.

Illness Causes Estridge to Quit Secretary Job

The resignation of J. A. Estridge as secretary and treasurer of the North Carolina Motion Picture Theatre owners, Mr. Estridge being forced to take this step owing to bad health, has seriously impeded the launching of the organization and membership drive arrangements for which were perfected at the Charlotte mid-winter convention early in December, Moving Picture World learned.

President Varner has named F. A. Abbott, of the Broadway Theatre, Charlotte, as temporary secretary-treasurer and Abbott will immediately take over the official duties of the office. J. J. Enloe has been employed as state organizer and will visit every theatre in the State not actively connected with the organization. It had been hoped to start his tour on January 1 but the illness of Estridge necessitated a postponement.

Meanwhile, with the admitted necessity of raising additional state revenue, the North Carolina general assembly convened Jan. 7, in Raleigh.

CHRISTIE PAYS $250,000 FOR HOLLYWOOD STUDIOS

In a deal involving approximately $250,000, the Christie Film Company has taken over the Hollywood Studios, the Santa Monica boulevard frontage being retained for conversion into a business block by a syndicate headed by C. E. Toberman, realtor, it was announced this week. Four large stages and studio equipment now in use by the J. K. McDonald, Harold Lloyd and Renaud Haufman units are included in the sale. Whether the studio will discontinue its custom of renting to independent production units or will continue operations under a new name has not been determined.

Would Increase Mail Rate

MOVING picture films, paper, etc., transported by mail would be assessed with higher charges under the bill which has been reported to the Senate by the Post Office Committee.

The bill leaves the parcel post zone rates practically without change, the only changes being in the more distant zones, but would add to each parcel, regardless of weight or destination, a flat charge of two cents in addition to the regular postage. The measure, however, makes provision for rapid transit of parcel post packages, providing that, for an additional fee of 25 cents, such parcels may secure "special handling." This would differ from special delivery, now secured by payment of a ten-cent fee, in that the latter calls for expeditious handling only after receipt at the office of delivery, while the new service would include transmission on fast trains carrying first-class mail and expeditious handling from sender to addressee.

In dealing with third-class rates, under which posters are now sent, the committee increased the rate from one-half cent per ounce to one cent, and further limited this rate to matter weighing not more than four ounces. Matter weighing in excess of four ounces would carry the same rates as parcel post.

Merging of Copyright Acts Is Theme of Perkins Bill

ENTRANCE of the United States into the International Copyright Union and consolidation of the various copyright acts is provided for in a bill which has been introduced in the House of Representatives by Congressman Perkins of New Jersey, which is now before the Committee on Patents.

The measure provides that where any person, association, firm or corporation, after the act becomes effective, shall manufacture a motion picture, such producer shall be the first owner of the copyright in such motion picture, but where such motion picture is based in whole or in part upon a work in which copyright subsists, then, during the term of copyright in such work, the copyright in such motion picture shall include only the exclusive right to make, copy, vend and exhibit it, and the copyright in such motion picture shall be held subject to all the rights of the owner or the copyright in any work upon which such motion picture is based.

The bill specifically provides for copyright for motion picture photoplays, motion pictures other than photoplays and scenarios for motion pictures. Copyright to authors gives them the exclusive right, among other things, to reproduce their works in the form of motion pictures, or to convert a copyright motion-picture photoplay which is not based upon a work in which copyright is subsisting into a story or dramatic composition.

Infringement of an undramatized work by means of motion pictures would subject the producer of such pictures to statutory damages not to exceed $100 where he can show that he was not aware that he was infringing and that the infringement could not have been reasonably foreseen; but infringement of a copyrighted dramatic work or dramatico-musical work under such circumstances is penalized by damages of not less than $250, nor more than $5,000. Wilful infringement is punishable by imprisonment for not exceeding one year or fine of not less than $100 nor more than $1,000, or both such fine and imprisonment.

Composers are granted exclusive rights to broadcast or perform publicly their copyrighted musical compositions.

Two High Courts Decide for Music Publishers in Exhibitor Actions

JEROME H. REMICK & CO., New York City music publishers, has won its test case against the Globe Enterprise Company, operators of the Grand Theatre in Boston. The case concerned the playing of the piece, "Barney Google." Judge Lowell in United States District Court handed down a decision which prevents the playing of that popular number in any theatres, restaurants or other public places without the consent of the owners of the copyright of the song, the Remick company.

The theatre company was charged with having permitted the playing of "Barney Google" in the Grand without the consent of the publishers. In rendering his decision Judge Lowell assessed damages of $250 in favor of the Remick company and also ordered the theatrical company to pay counsel fees of $100 and the court costs, which amounted to another $100.

On December 16 the Boston Post used as its page one lead story an article concerning the tax on seats in picture theatres that will benefit the song writers and music composers. The national copyright law of March, 1909, is back of the plan, the article stated.

In Richmond, Va., on December 20 Judge John Rose of the United States Circuit Court of Appeals handed down the decision that motion picture houses and theatres must pay royalties to composers or publishers when they use any portion of a copyrighted song or air during their programs or performances. Judge Rose affirmed the decision of the district court at Charleston, S. C., that the Pastime Amusement Company must pay M. Witmark & Sons, publishers, for the use of a copyrighted song in its motion picture theatre.

N. Schenck Lauds Paramount Chief

Nicholas M. Schenck, vice-president of Loew's, Inc., and of Metro-Goldwyn Distributing Corporation, in a letter this week praises Adolph Zukor, president of Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, and donor of the $10,000 award to the author of the story which made the best motion picture produced in the year ending September 1, 1924. Schenck says in part:

"If the rest of the industry feels as I personally and we of Metro-Goldwyn do, it is indebted to your generosity and to your high ideals and hopes for the future of the art of the motion picture as shown by your magnanimous award to Rafael Sabatini for his novel, 'Scaramouche.'"

Kunsky Makes Known Plans For 5,000-Seat Chicago House

New Theatre Will be Part of 12-Story Office Building; Will be Ready for Occupancy Before 1926, Architects Assert

WHILE large forces of workmen were busy last week in demolishing buildings to make way for the new State Theater, Detroit, John H. Kunsky came forth with the announcement of another new theater in the downtown section, and accompanied his statement with detailed plans and photos of the new project.

The new theater, which will seat 5,000 people and which is expected to exceed in size and elaborateness anything before attempted in this section, will for the present be known as the Kunsky-Balaban and Katz Theater. It comes as an outgrowth of the recent partnership arrangement whereby the Chicago theatrical firm purchased a block of stock in the Detroit concern. The architects for the new theater are Rapp and Rapp, who among other notable achievements, have built for Balaban and Katz in Chicago the great Tivoli, the Reviera and others and who are now supervising the construction of a huge northside playhouse.

Rapp and Rapp announce that the huge Detroit structure will be ready within a year. The site is being kept under cover for a few days and in case of the outside chance that it should not materialize the Kunsky-Balaban and Katz concern has an alternative site ready to fall back upon.

Twelve stories in height, the combined office building and theater will occupy an entire block. Entrance to the theater proper will be gained through a huge lobby, some sixty feet in width, over 200 feet in length and a height of 60 feet. The lobby will be surrounded by a marble colonnade. At the end of the grand lobby, the patron will be led to a magnificent staircase of marble, 20 feet in width and extending to all levels of the auditorium, including the mezzanine and its sumptuous promenade, the intermediate promenade, the balcony promenade, as well as the top portions of the balcony. The entire staircase will be in full view of the main floor.

Wondrous lighting effects are also planned. Large torchiers with standards; a suspended crystal fixture of beautiful design and concealed cove lighting will also be in evidence. The cove lighting will be of a three colored system in which the colors will be controlled independently by an extensive dimmer system. Through motor arrangement a gradual change of color will be at all times in evidence.

The orchestra floor of the huge auditorium will offer much in the theater line. At right angles to the grand lobby will be the grand promenade which will have a width of 20 feet and which will be located directly in the rear of the orchestra floor seats. The central portions of this promenade, located at the main exits of the theatre, will extend to the height of 37 feet. At the end of the lobby there will be located a lounge to which the patron passes to a minor foyer. Off this will be located rooms for women, furnished luxuriously. This latter room will be of large proportions, with panelled walls, silken tapestries and with richly moulded ceilings.

The seating plan of the new playhouse on the orchestra floor is to be laid out in European horseshoe formation, on which the minor promenade will extend to all sides, terminating at the proscenium boxes on either side. The mezzanine box section is planned to be commodious. On the mezzanine floor will also be located the women's parlors, for which so much is planned, as well as general assembly parlors.

By the proscenium boxes will be found huge fountains of marble upon which colored lights will be played at all times, while statuary will extend to a height of some 20 feet or more from the stage level. At the rear of the statuary will be located chambers for the massive organ. The proscenium arch will be in full keeping with the richness of the rest of the playhouse. The stage will be built to accommodate anything up to grand opera, while a special refrigerating system will be installed.

Radio Competition Good, Says Hammons

The recent advent of McCormack and Bori in broadcasting through several powerful eastern radio stations has caused much discussion in theatrical and motion picture circles, many theatrical men regarding the coming of such stars on the air as a real menace to their business future. E. W. Hammons, president of Educational Film Exchanges, Inc. believes that competition of this nature will do more good than harm.

"Just as the coming of the motion picture forced the stage to a higher level of amusement and entertainment," says Hammons, "so the entry of such stars as Bori and McCormack into radio broadcasting will force the motion picture theatre to offer a more attractive bill to their patrons. The motion picture practically forced the ten-twenty-thirty style of melo-drama out of existence and forced producers to seek better material for their plays."

State Rights Sales

Unsold territories on C. C. Burr's series of the three Johnny Hines features, "The Speed Spook," "The Early Bird" and "The Cracker Jack," are rapidly being closed, as evidenced by the sales closed recently when East Coast Films, Inc., closed with Louis Hyman of All-Star Feature Films, Inc., 915 South Olive street, Los Angeles, for the territories of California, Nevada and Arizona. Thus, in the past ten days, C. C. Burr has closed with Harry Grelle, 1014 Forbes street, Pittsburgh, for Western Pennsylvania and West Virginia; Wolverine Exhibitors, Inc., 402 Mack Building, Detroit, for Michigan; and A. H. Blank Enterprises, of Kansas City, for Western Missouri and Kansas. Other territories contracted for include New England States to American Feature Films, 37 Piedmont street, Boston, Mass.; Greater New York and Southern New Jersey to Commonwealth Film Corporation, 729 7th avenue, New York City; Upper New York State to Dependable Pictures Corporation, 729 7th avenue, New York City; Minnesota to F. & R. Film Company, Loeb Arcade Building, Minneapolis; Wisconsin to Ludwig Film Exchanges, 713 Wells street, Milwaukee; Eastern Pennsylvania to Masterpiece Film Attractions, 1329 Vine street, Philadelphia, Pa.; Ohio to Skirboll Gold Seal Productions, 507 Film Exchange Building, Cleveland; District of Columbia and Maryland to Trio Productions, 916 New Jersey avenue, Washington, D. C.; Illinois to Film Classics of Illinois, 831 Wabash avenue, Chicago; Texas and Oklahoma to All-Star Feature Films, Inc., Film Exchange Building, Dallas; Arkansas to Home State Film Company, 1114 West Markham street, Little Rock; Colorado, Wyoming, Utah and New Mexico to De Luxe Feature Film Company, 2020 Stout street, Denver, and complete foreign rights to Simmonds-Kann Enterprises, Inc., 220 West 42nd street, New York City.

Hunt B. Miller, of the Pennsylvania-Ohio Film Corporation, has acquired the territorial rights to the first of the H. F. Jans productions, "Playthings of Desire," for his territory. Miller operates exchanges in Pittsburgh, Cleveland and Cincinnati. The New England States territory on "Playthings of Desire" has been contracted for by Benjamin Rogers of the Superior Picture Corporation.

Rayart announces the sale of the George Larkin series for Ohio to Security Pictures, of Cleveland, and to Louis Films, of New Orleans, for Louisiana and Mississippi; the sale of the Reed Howes series, the "Street of Tears" and "Safeguarded" to First Graphic Exchanges, of Albany and Buffalo, for Upper New York State; and for Western Pennsylvania and West Virginia to Columbia Film Company of Pittsburgh; the Kenneth Harlan picture, "For Another Woman," to Richmount Pictures, for the United Kingdom.

SAXE'S WISCONSIN AIDS POOR

Bushels of food and barrels of wearing apparel were provided for the poor of Milwaukee during the recent holiday season when 3,500 children attended a "vegetable and clothing party" at Saxe's Wisconsin Theatre. Co-operating with one of the leading newspapers and the Salvation Army, the theatre threw open its doors for one morning performance to all the children who brought at least one vegetable or one article of clothing in lieu of admission ticket.

PATHE BOSTON OFFICE CHANGED

Under the supervision of Ross C. Cropper, branch manager for the Boston territory, the Pathe branch-office was moved last week from 13 Stanhope Street to new offices at 39 Church Street.

T. O. C. C. Would Hold Nation-Wide Meet to Combat "Illegal Combines"

"Uncombined" Exhibitors of U. S. Invited to Attend Potential March Conference in Town Hall, N. Y.—Seek Settlement

By TOM WALLER

COMMITTEE conferences extending over the past six weeks materialized at this week's meeting when the Theatre Owners' Chamber of Commerce went on record to battle to a finish what its chairman, Charles O'Reilly, described to Moving Picture World as "illegal combines." For the purpose of determining the best means to combat this exigency, O'Reilly announces a nation-wide meeting of "showmen not in league with such combines" will be held probably early in March in the Town Hall, New York City. The T. O. C. C. head said that under his personal supervision the committees have investigated and accumulated sufficient facts to have, what O'Reilly considers, a case against several of these "combines." Attorney Nathan Burkan is general counsel for the T. O. C. C. in this movement.

"We invite all 'uncombined' exhibitors to attend this open meeting," O'Reilly told Moving Picture World. He defined an "illegal combine" as: "combined strength used against a single unit to prevent it from doing business in a natural and legal way."

The T. O. C. C. will make every effort to "settle outside," O'Reilly said, explaining that the courts would be resorted to if necessary but only as a last resource.

Asked as to the names and the number of the so-termed "illegal combines," O'Reilly replied: "There are enough of them."

O'Reilly refused to be interviewed at length, saying that the revealing of other plans and details at this time might only hinder Attorney Burkan. Efforts by Moving Picture World to reach Burkan following the interview at T. O. C. C. headquarters were futile.

Before terminating the interview O'Reilly intimated that the March meeting will be in the nature of a crisis of other investigations which were aired as being commenced during the past few months.

At the potential March session, it was learned at T. O. C. C. offices on January 7, the following subjects would probably be incorporated in such a program:

(1) "The question of time protection to first runs.

(2) "The question of extent to which a buying combination could attempt to control a territory not immediately adjacent to the active operations of the larger part of the circuit.

(3) "The question of what proportion of a producer's output buying combinations or circuits has a legitimate right to use against the needs of the individual exhibitor."

The above, it is understood, would comprise only a small but highly important part for discussion and consideration at the national meeting.

O'Reilly verified a report on a review of this situation made by Burkan before this week's general meeting of the T. O. C. C. The questions enumerated above were, accordingly, touched upon by the attorney at that session.

Burkan was credited with having included in this address to the organization an expression, as his own belief, that leaders in the producing and distributing end of the industry were eager to co-operate in the settling of this matter. He cited a Passaic exhibitor whom he said lauded Adolph Zukor and Nicholas Schenck for their helpful attitude when, it is said, he was deprived of product through the workings of a buying combination in his city.

In the discussion which prevailed it was suggested that such conditions might be remedied by producers and distributors apportioning about 60 per cent of their product to the bigger buying powers and reserving the remaining 40 per cent for the others.

Bandits Net $7,900 in These 2 Cities

The Grand Central Theatre, Grand Boulevard and Lucas avenue, one of St. Louis' big first run houses, is the latest victim of the kidnapping-safe robbers. On Sunday night, December 28, Spiros Cardas, assistant manager and treasurer of the theatre was captured by five bandits while on his way home, taken to the theatre and forced to open the safe which contained $6500, the receipts for Saturday, Sunday and part of Friday. The money was insured.

Four masked men who entered the offices of the Commodore Theatre 3105 Irving Park Boulevard, Chicago, last week forced the owner, Nathan Gumbiner and his janitor, Peter Weber to surrender the cash box containing $1,400 and escaped in a touring car.

LAEMMLE TALKS FOR RADIO

Interesting information concerning the importance Carl Laemmle, president of the Universal Pictures Corporation, places in the suggestions and criticisms that reach him from the public was given out by him one night last week in his first radio broadcast talk, given through station WGBS, New York City. The Universal chief spoke on the subject of "Clean Pictures" and told how individual movie fans write to him in support of unsullied screen entertainment.

Foreign Theatre Properties Inspire Loew's Trip Abroad

ARTHUR LOEW, manager of the foreign department of Metro-Goldwyn Distributing Corporation, sailed from New York January 7 on the S.S. Paris on his customary twice-a-year European trip to survey film conditions abroad. An official statement issued from the Metro-Goldwyn offices this week also reveals:

"Loew, who will be accompanied by Mrs. Loew, will be in Europe for two months. During his trip, in addition to visiting all Metro-Goldwyn offices abroad, he will confer with exhibitors and will investigate theatre properties in England and on the continent.

"Whether or not this is to be construed that the Loew organization and Metro-Goldwyn would be favorably inclined toward extending its present theatre holdings by acquiring theatre properties abroad, this phase of Arthur Loew's present trip will be watched with considerable interest by the industry in general. It is well known that except in the larger European cities motion picture theatres are inadequate when compared to the majority of film houses over here.

"With Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer embarking on the greatest production program in its history, it is thought that Loew will secure a valuable 'slant' on the particular requirements of the foreign market, which will be helpful to the plans of the Metro-Goldwyn organization.

"Louis B. Mayer, vice-president in charge of production, stated recently that the time is past when distinctly 'American' pictures can hope to dominate the world market, or when pictures from any other country, which are limited to national appeal, will find a universal audience. With this in mind, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer is framing its product for an international market, and the purpose of Arthur Loew's current visit is partly to confer with foreign exhibitors to this end.

"Metro-Goldwyn pictures have met with remarkable success the past year throughout the foreign market, which leads the company to believe that it is on the right track regarding the situation abroad. 'Scaramouche,' 'The White Sister,' 'Our Hospitality' are among the pictures that have broken records in Europe.

"Arthur Loew is probably the American film executive who is closest in touch with conditions influencing the foreign market, and whose current visit is looked upon to influence Metro-Goldwyn policy abroad."

U. S. Fiscal Report Reveals Great Demand for Our Films

AMERICAN-MADE motion pictures encircle the globe, and are shown in practically every country in the world. Less than a dozen countries of minor importance, out of more than a hundred markets, were not on the list of customers to whom America exported direct shipments of motion-picture films during the first nine months of 1924, reveals a statement just made public by the Foreign Commerce Department of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States. Wherever American films are shown—from Norway to South Africa, from Portugal to Japan—American-made motion picture machines are found.

"During the first nine months of 1924," says the statement, "government statistics show that we exported $6,545,000 worth of motion picture films—174,000,000 feet. About three-fourths of this amount was in exposed films—negatives as well as positives—128,000,000 feet, valued at $5,526,000. The quantity is over 17% greater than the 109,000,000 feet exported a year ago.

"The 6,000,000 feet of negatives were valued at $1,070,000, while the 122,000,000 feet of positives were worth $4,456,000.

"Our best markets for the negatives were England, France, Italy, Mexico, Germany, and Argentina, while our best customers for the positives, ready to be exhibited, were Canada, Australia, England, Argentina, Brazil, Japan, Mexico, Cuba, France, New Zealand, Denmark, British South Africa, India, Chile, the Philippines, Sweden and Spain. Some of the out-of-the-way places buying American films included Esthonia, Latvia, Hejaz, Siam, Abyssinia, British East Africa, Portugese East Africa, South Sea Isles, Sumatra, Java and Madura.

"During the nine months of 1924 we exported 795 motion-picture machines, valued at $299,581, an average price per machine of $377.

"The statistics for the same period of 1923 show that 945 machines, valued at $189,198, the average price being $200. Although we exported 150 fewer machines in 1924, a decline in quantity of 16% below 1923, yet the value in 1924 was $110,383 higher, a gain in value of 58%.

"Imports of motion-picture films in 1924 were mostly of unexposed films, with exposed negatives next in value and exposed positives third. We imported during the first nine months of 1924 182,000,000 linear feet of sensitized, unexposed motion-picture films, valued at $2,214,000, larger in both quantity and value than the imports for the entire year 1923. Nearly all these films were supplied by France and Germany.

"Imports of negatives totaled 1,800,000 linear feet, valued at $353,000, for the nine months of 1924, as compared with 1,700,000 feet, valued at $585,000 for the same part of 1923, a 5% gain in quantity, but 40% lower in value. Imports of positives amounted to 3,200,000 linear feet, valued at $175,000, for the three quarters of 1924—44% lower in quantity and 40% lower in value than the 5,800,000 feet, valued at $253,000 imported during the same period of 1923."

MASTBAUM PRESIDENT OF COSMOS

Jules Mastbaum, president of the Stanley Company of America, has been elected president of the Cosmos Theatre Company, which operates the Earle Theatre, Washington, D. C. A. Julian Brylawski was elected vice-president and general manager of the local corporation and also directing head of the activities of the Stanley Company in Washington, which includes the big office building of which the theatre is a part. Alexander Wolf was named secretary and counsel and Robert N. Harper, president of the District National Bank, treasurer. The board of directors elected for the year was Jules Mastbaum, chairman; J. J. McGuirk, A. Sablosky, E. G. Lauder, Roland S. Robbins, Robert N. Harper, Alexander Wolf, A. Brylawski and A. Julian Brylawski. Mr. Lauder is vice-president of the B. F. Keith Company, and Mr. Robbins manager of the Washington Theatre of the Keith circuit.

Pathe News Harnesses Radio in Exhibitor Service Plan

PLANS have been perfected by Pathe News for a national tie-up of radio broadcast stations in conjunction with its semi-weekly news-reel service to exhibitors in all sections of the country. Under the arrangements that have been worked out with important broadcasting stations across the continent, an interesting radio talk based on the current Pathe News release and human-interest phases of the news-reel service will be broadcast twice a week. It is planned in this way to bring the message of the news-reel to millions of radio listeners throughout the country and focus their attention on the presentation of the Pathe News issues at neighboring theatres.

Arrangements already have been definitely made by Pathe News with ten of the most important broadcasting stations, representing every section of the country. Negotiations are under way which assure a large number of additional stations coming in within the next few days. The ten stations already definitely tied up are WEEI at Boston, WHK of Cleveland, WHO at Des Moines, WCK at St. Louis, WLW of Cincinnati, WKY at Oklahoma City, WCBE at New Orleans, KFRC of San Francisco, KFOA at Seattle and WCAY at Milwaukee. This line-up, in view of the tremendous scope of even the average broadcast station, seems to assure the dissemination of the message of Pathe News to every city, town and village of the United States. The additional stations to take part in the national broadcast system will be announced as soon as arrangements are definitely closed.

The first of these radio talks was broadcast by station WLW on January 8, when Pathe News No. 4 furnished the basis for an interesting radio story. WCK of St. Louis will broadcast on January 10.

Interstate Commerce Measure Is Now Before Senate

Moving picture films moving in interstate commerce by motor trucks will be given the same protection from theft as when moving in railroad freight or express cars, under the terms of a bill which is now before the Senate. The measure was passed by the House of Representatives during the last session of Congress.

The bill recognizes motor trucks as instruments of interstate transportation and extends to them the provisions of the Carlin Act, adopted in 1913, providing penalties for the unlawful breaking of seals of freight cars, containers, etc., and the theft of goods. In view of the increasingly important part which the automobile truck is playing in the movement of freight, the adoption of this measure will be of great benefit to shippers, since at the present time it is difficult to obtain convictions for theft because of the requirement that the interstate character of the shipments must be proven. Under the terms of this legislation the way bill would be prima facie evidence of the interstate character of the merchandise.

Milwaukee M. P. T. O. Praises Arbitration

Evidence that the work of the arbitration board is meeting with the hearty approval of exhibitors is contained in a resolution of thanks voted the Milwaukee board by the Milwaukee branch of the M. P. T. O.

"Members of our organization realize that the work of the arbitration board is effecting an enormous saving to exhibitors and exchange men alike and is doing a great deal to maintain a friendly spirit between the two branches of the industry," declared A. L. Gutenberg, president of the Milwaukee branch, in explaining why the resolution was passed.

"Arbitration is the only fair minded way to settle disputes and eliminates needless delays," he declared.

bill for dues from the Association; who knows, such things have happened. But, anyway, whether you do what the letter says or not, it is important that you know what is in it.

If the letter demands an answer, answer it. Ignoring correspondence, if it is important correspondence, means only an admission on your part that you are attempting to evade or ignore, but if you answer it, whether it be in long hand or typewritten, keep a carbon copy of the letter. In this day and age a cheap portable typewriter is almost a necessity.

The above comments are made, not with the idea of dictating to anyone how they shall conduct their business, but based on the experience this office has had during the past four years of having every single point enumerated above come up at some time or other, and they are made for the assistance and protection of theatre owners. The minutes spent reading them may help out sometime. Better keep them for future reference.

SELLING the PICTURE to the PUBLIC

EDITED BY EPES WINTHROP SARGENT

Seel Makes Six Big Local Productions to Get a Record-Making Holiday Business

HENRY SEEL, of the People's Theatre, Greenville, Miss., beat his own record holiday week when he made six different presentations with purely local talent, following the policy recently written of in these columns.

Mr. Seel knows that a local boy or girl will be worth a great deal more money to his box office, and please his audience more than the best professional talent he can afford to hire. He knows that there is magic in the special production, and he uses local talent freely, but even he never put on a show for a week with a nightly change.

Figuring that he would have a better chance with his holiday business if he made presentations, he started in with the Christmas show and ran straight through into the New Year.

And it pulled more money to the box office than the house could hold. He had to send people home with the urge that they come earlier the following night, which most of them did.

How It Ran

For Christmas and the day following he had Valentino in A Sainted Devil, and this naturally suggested an Argentine production. He called it a Serenata Argentina, and used a cast of five, a pair of lovers, a gypsy violinist and a pair of tango dancers. For this he borrowed his set from the Strand Theatre New Orleans, also a part of the Saenger circuit.

Saturday he had Merton of the Movies and with this he staged a one act comedy with three local players, adding a soloist.

Monday he presented Revelation and with it offered a heavy production with five principals and a dancing chorus. This was called "When Dreams Come True" and was under the auspices of the Greenville Garden Club. Evidently it was propaganda for better kept lawns, for it was supplemented by lantern slides of some of the notable local gardens, adding to the local appeal.

Harem Revels, Too

Tuesday he had a seven-number production with an Oriental complexion under the title of Harem Revels, including three dance numbers and four vocal numbers.

Harold Lloyd in Girl Shy was booked for New Year's Eve and New Year's Day. Wednesday he had a midnight show with eight acts, and for the following day he staged a fiddlers' contest, which seems to be extraordinarily popular below the Mason and Dixon line.

There were a few doubles in the principals, but not many, and the presentations offered new faces and fresh ideas, and Mr. Seel writes that he will not take a back seat on production even to Eddie Hyman.

Free Programs

And to keep the extra money all velvet, he got out a large two-color program in which eighteen small adds and a full back page not only paid for the printing but for the mailing of one thousand copies. It was a nice piece of printing, too. About one sixth of each program page was given the advertiser. The remainder was for the house.

Mr. Seel also encloses a display ad for his Christmas books. He used a special cut and not only sold a lot of the books, but gave additional emphasis to the Christmas season.

We have given Mr. Seel rather more than his share of the space lately, but he does the local stuff so much more intelligently than the average manager that we are offering him as an example to the rest. You can make as much money with the local stuff as he does if you will go to the trouble of forming a troupe and training them.

Fast Clocks

Joe Weil tied a drug store in New York to a display of alarm clocks on the plea that you buy an alarm clock today and be a fast worker tomorrow, presumably getting to the office on time. That was all right, but we don't know anyone who wants a clock to be a fast worker. Most people prefer them to be on time. Anyhow, it sold some clocks, and it was right where all the visitors to 729 Seventh avenue could not help seeing it.

New Ideas Help on Secrets Engagement

A number of good ideas helped Norma Talmadge in Secrets to much above the usual business at the Noble theatre, Anniston, Ala.

The most elaborate stunt was a co-operative page in which a letter was dropped from one word in each of the merchant advertisements. These letters had to be inserted and with the words thus corrected a sentence was to be formed, in this instance reading: "The Secret of Happiness is work well done." Passes for six and two weeks and a large number of singles were the prizes, and the number of replies proved the interest taken in the page.

A candy store supplied a number of stock cards, which Mr. Smart had fixed up with stills and lettering. This materially reduced the cost and at the same time gave a better display. Five other windows were obtained in addition to the candy splash.

One of the novel stunts was an enormous red heart painted directly upon the marble of the foyer, with the star, title and play dates lettered in white. This was done four weeks in advance, and persons who did not realize how easily water colors can be washed off were tremendously impressed at the painting over of the marble.

This is a great stunt if you have a fancy lobby, but it is well to reserve it for really big pictures and to use it with two or three months intervals.

THIS ARRABELLA SAILED THE SAN FRANCISCO SEAS

Strand, Syracuse Gets Over First

Credit the Strand Theatre, Syracuse, N. Y., as the first over the bars to report a 1925 toy matinee for the institutional children.

Cliff Lewis found that no special provision had been made for the children in two of the local asylums, so he got his Evening Telegram friends to help him put over a toy matinee, the show being a special and the admission being a discarded but still usable toy.

As the stunt is new in Syracuse, the idea was a big seller and the co-operating paper gave from a third to three quarters of a column a day.

It was not just space-grabbing. What the Strand really is after is good will, and all, or most, of its stunts are based more on general good will than definite publicity for any particular picture. The results are more lasting and can be calitalized for all pictures.

In this connection it is interesting to note that the Hippodrome theatre, New York, now under Keith management, got a new angle this year. It has a midget village called Toytown in the basement as a permanent attraction, and "The Toymaker of Toytown" offered to repair any broken toys brought to him, later giving them to various welfare societies to be given the needy. No tickets were given in return, but a large number of toys were brought in.

Classified Ad Stunt Opens New Approach

Here is a new way to use the classified ad. section of your daily paper. It was first used by W. J. Murray, of the Rialto theatre, Atlanta, Ga. He inserted under five different classifications this notice:

"Wanted for Zane Grey's The Border Legion, 10 Atlanta people who have not yet read the book. Apply Manager Rialto theatre."

It was not anticipated that any women would apply, but thirty or more did show up and all were given passes as were the first ten men. The others were told they were too late, and Murray explained that he advertised for those who had not read the book so they might see the story.

The number of persons responding to the advertisement can be made the basis of a good story the following day, and most papers will be glad to run any story that will testify to the value of their want ads.

This can be worked for any book title, and can be varied by giving a few copies of the book to the earliest comers if you want to make it a little more elaborate, but don't work it more than once. You will be overrun the second time.

Production Hints from Edward L. Hyman

Managing Director, Mark-Strand Theatre, Brooklyn

NINETEEN TWENTY-FIVE was ushered in at the Brooklyn Mark Strand by a musical program of five incidents surrounding the feature photoplay, Corinne Griffith in "Love's Wilderness." The Topical Review filled out the show, making the running time even 2 hours. Of this time, the feature picture took up one hour and sixteen minutes and the Topical Review the usual 8 minutes. This left 36 minutes for the musical numbers.

The most impressive, in the way of settings, of the musical numbers, was the presentation of a male quartette in Bullard's composition "Winter." For this scene 4 mirror mosaic flats were used, one hung upright and one as a ground row. Strips of mirror mosaic representing icicles were attached to all four of the flats. These properties, when lighted by light green floods from the sides and overhead, made a very brilliant winter effect. The back-drop used was neutral blue with transparent sky, through which showed several stars. This drop was lighted by twelve open box lamps of deep blue. The quartette was costumed in red jackets of the Northwest Mounted Police and were standing about a huge sled. There were 2 light blue overhead spots on the quartette, augmented by two orange spots from the sides.

Following this, the Famed Mark Strand Orchestra went into the Suppe overture "Poet and Peasant." The light for this was as follows: two color blend spots on the orchestra from the dome; foots and borders of large stage in blue, 2 color blends crossing on the ceiling, and 4 color blends from the sides, lighting the pleats of the silver draw curtains which were closed over the production stage. Eight minutes for this overture.

An Operatic Potpourri ran for fourteen minutes in the following order: Baritone in fulldress sang aria from Verdi's "Traviata" on the apron of the small stage with the following lights: large stage in blue, two light blue floods from the booth on the musicians and 2 magenta floods from the dome crossing on the ceiling draps; amber spot on the singer from the dome. Second, the Mark Strand Ballet in a suite from Gounod's "Faust" appearing on full stage with a woodland transparency back-drop entirely lighted from behind by open box lamps of white. Members of the ballet wore white dresses with pink rosebuds, the premiere danseuse wore a pink dress with white rosebuds. All dancers wore white silk wigs. From the front two steel blue and two pink spots lighted the number. Third, a tenor in fulldress appeared on the apron of the small stage before the gold draw-curtains and was lighted only by an orange spot from the dome. All other lights were dimmed out. Singer's selection was an aria from "Giocanda."

Estell Carey, soprano, appeared on the apron of the large stage in "Song of Songs." The lights were as follows: two color blend spots on the orchestra from the dome; foots and borders of large stage in blue; 2 color blends from the booth crossing on ceiling draps; 2 violet floods from the booth on side draps, and lemon spot on the singer from the dome. Four minutes for this number.

Six minutes were required for Songs of Old New York by the male quartette, assisted by eight members of the ballet. The setting was a Chinatown back-drop with transparent windows. Quartette and dancers were made up as East Side characters. The songs were a medley of old familiar tunes. An orange flood from the dome lighted the set.

A CLEVER ENGLISH VERSION OF THE TOY TRAIN ON THE SIGNAL TOWER FROM THE LONDON OFFICE

This display was made up in the office of the London headquarters of the European Motion Pictures Co., the English representatives of Universal. Naturally, they could afford to do it up nicely, and they certainly did. If this display sold the English exhibitor on the idea of the toy train it did him a favor, for the train stunt is one of the best and most lasting exploitation devices on record.

Really Put Lloyd in Hot Water Here

Putting Lloyd's head into the neck of a huge hot water bottle was one of the stunts used by Howard Price Kingsmore at the Howard Theatre, Atlanta. In the picture the title does not show because it lacks photographic quality, but this was lettered in what appears to be the vacant space.

A Pathe Release

REAL HOT WATER

A somewhat similar idea was worked at a prominent street intersection, but here the hot water bottle was one borrowed from a rubber company, and was even more convincing. It was suspended over the middle of the street.

A clever idea was the supplying banners to a garage. These were carried on the wrecking wagons and fastened to the cars they towed in. The banners alluded to the fact that the car had been in Hot Water. At filling stations motorists were advised to fill their tanks and avoid getting into hot water, and traffic cards carried the advice to obey the traffic rules and keep out of hot water.

Most large drug stores were tied to a display of hot water bottles, and a cutout of the star was paraded through the streets in a bath tub mounted on an automobile chassis.

Most of the stunts were taken from the special letter of advice sent out by Lem Stewart's office.

Said They Would

Empty Hands was coming to the Palace Theatre, Racine, Wis. Paramounteer Bill Danziger beat the feature into town. He went over to the newspaper office. Presently the paper printed a series of seven short articles by Paramount stars on "What I would do if I had to start Empty Handed." Oddly enough not one of them thought of going over to the Paramount lot and asking for a job. But it made good copy and helped the play.

Canine Pets Were Admission Tickets

Launching Find Your Man at the Mission Theatre, Los Angeles, was accomplished through a novel stunt for the opening matinee when each child coming to the theatre with an adult and a dog was given free admission. The adult paid, but we presume that the dog went in on a "skull" as well as the youngster. All were taken to the stage and introduced to Rin-tin-tin himself, in person. It not only brought a $500 opening, but it ran the week up to about $8,000, or some four times the previous record.

The dogs sat with their owners through the show, but no fights were reported, nor did any of the pups show an inclination to take the screen and help Rin-tin-tin out.

Varied It

C. A. Amos has found a way to vary the we-dare-you-to-hand-this-to-your-wife envelopes.

First of all he bought a bolt of cheap dress goods, solid color, and displayed it in the lobby of the Alhambra Theatre, Charlotte, N. C., labeled as "Worldly Goods."

Then he had it cut into strips and printed "This may be worldly goods but I feel that I owe you a regular treat. Let's go to see Agnes Ayers in Worldly Goods, the last thing in the world you'd want to miss. It's a Paramount." The house and dates followed.

These were enclosed in an envelope printed: "This envelope contains worldly goods. We dare you to give this to a lady unopened."

The distribution was entirely to men, save when some woman fairly demanded an envelope.

Stirred Chicago

Just before election Andy Gump's avowed candidacy for the presidential chair was made the means of booking the Gump cartoons into two of the largest Chicago houses. Blackboards showed the progress of an alleged straw ballot, with Andy an amazingly strong favorite, and it made the cartoon picture a real drawing power.

Allegorical Picture is a Lincoln Appeal

For the run of Abraham Lincoln at Balaban and Katz's Princess Theatre, Springfield, Ill., an allegorical painting by G. W. Murray, said to be a friend of Lincoln, was employed.

This shows the various homes in which he lived from his birthplace to the last long rest under the beautiful Lincoln Memorial.

Reproductions of this painting were shown in a number of store windows about town and heightened the interest in the production, since the central picture is that of his home in Springfield, where he lived at the time of his election to the presidency.

Got Two Papers

Getting two papers on one serialization is some stunt, but it was worked on Wine at the Kings and Rivoli Theatres.

William Goldman sold the Times on the publication of the fiction form and then persuaded them to take 600 lines in the Globe Democrat in addition to the 1,500 lines in their own publication.

That's going some.

Ruth Came

Fifty-nine girls named Ruth attended a performance of Along Came Ruth as guests of the Queen Theatre, Austin, Texas. Both the papers wrote it up as a novelty. It was new there, so it was new.

Dance Programs

Supplying the programs for a dance given by an important civic organization was one of the side angles to the exploitation of His Hour at Loew's Palace Theatre, Memphis.

Howard Waugh supplied strip cards with numbered spaces for the dances. In each space, in red ink, was printed one or more words of the announcement of the play at the Palace. The red ink gave the announcement prominence and at the same time added to the effectiveness of the slips.

The 400

Bad weather hurt the midnight show with which L. H. Guyer, of the Queen Theatre, Austin, Texas, inaugurated the run of Open All Night, but he got out about 400 and they evidently went out and told the rest.

Even if no one had come there was a kick to the idea of the midnight show in connection with the title.

Perambulating Ship Toured the Country

A convincing reproduction of one of the ships used in The Sea Hawk was built for the run of that picture at the Empress Theatre, Owensboro, Ky., and after keeping it in town the Saturday before the opening, Manager R. R. Russell sent it into all the nearby towns to pull in the automobile trade. The ship was mounted upon a stripped chassis and the driver is concealed by the hull of the boat, so that it gave the appearance of a ship moving under its own power. The float was run around town in the evenings and did the country trips through the day.

A cutout from the 24-sheet was placed on the marquise and the front of the house was masked in with compoboard to suggest a red and white tent effect. Large letters in the same design, each a cutout, spelled out the title, but it would seem from the protograph that the lettering too nearly matches the front design. Signal flags were run across the front of the house to give a gala effect and an additional banner was placed on the cornice of the three-story house.

A painting, electrically lighted, was used above the box office for two weeks in advance and was laid off to a drug store, handling copies of the book, during the run.

As a result the business went away beyond the usual, and yet the cost was not very large.

Night Posters

The Albemarle, a Brooklyn locality house, has some of its window cards printed upon thin white paper. These are placed in frames backed by an electric light, and arrangement is made to leave this light turned on after the store is closed, with the result that the sign works all night. Using stores which close early, the display value of this idea is remarkable. You cannot overlook them.

THIS IS NOT A SCENE FROM FLIRTING WITH LOVE

It's just the reverse, which gives the same effect, and the Sacramento furniture dealer urged the onlooker to "compare this peaceful home with scenes from Flirting With Love," telling where the latter could be found, at the Capitol.

Sketch of Home Life for a Colleen Moore

Flirting with love is the reverse of a domestic idyl. It deals with the theatre and the smart set, but that did not stop M. B. Hustler from hooking up with this idyllic scene in the window of a furniture store in Sacramento. He just coppered the bet and wrote a card urging the passer-by to compare the peaceful home with Colleen Moore's tantrums at the Capitol Theatre.

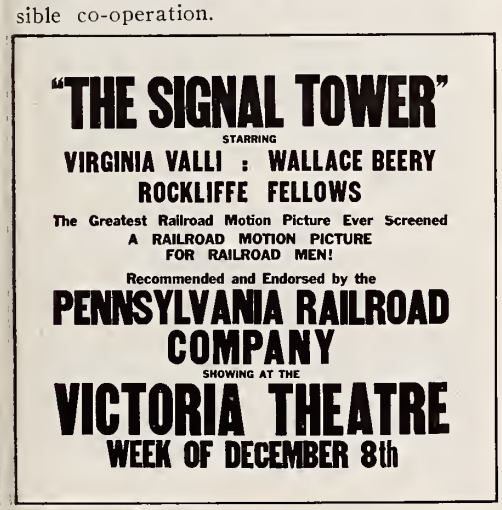
This was the only kind of setting the dealer would supply because he wanted to advertise a new type of stove for the sort of home that Colleen Moore did not live in. The card at the right announces the showing at the Capitol, while that on the left tells you not to flirt with love but to be comfortable at home.

Mr. Hustler took advantage of the Colleen Moore cosmetic hook-up in several drug store windows, but this was a more striking appeal, particularly as the store was in a splendid location.

Pennsylvania R. R. for Signal Tower

Several theatres have profited strongly through the co-operation of the railroad officials in putting over The Signal Tower, but the campaign reported from Harrisburg, Pa., for the run of that Universal at the Victory Theatre is about the best yet sent in and is going to take a lot of beating.

Al Feinman, a Universal exploiteer, laid the foundation by first persuading President Rea and General Manager Massey to permit him to run off the picture for their benefit. This was in Philadelphia. He went up to Harrisburg with letters to the Harrisburg officials asking them to give Feinman all possible co-operation.



A Universal Release

THE RAILROAD CARD

As a first move a letter was sent some 8,000 employes, telling them of the coming of the picture to the Victory and asking them to see it. This was followed by a placard which was posted on all bulletin boards, around the shops and even in the station restaurants. This was done not alone in Harrisburg proper, but in the nearly towns.

Backing this up, Superintendent Dickenson, of the Signal Division, personally looked after the installation of two signal towers and a semaphore at the theatre; all told, about nine tons of apparatus, and loaned ample material for the decoration of the lobby proper.

The result was that a splendid business was done at practically no additional cost to the theatre. The railroad supplied the material free on the proposition that the picture was good railroad propaganda as well as a story its men should see.

Light Literature

Earl Settle used a large compoboard book in a store window for The Border Legion. It had the title cut out and backed by red paper with an electric bulb back of it. This greatly increased the value of the sign even in the daytime, and helped make more business for the Capitol Theatre, Oklahoma City.

Not Wasted

Guy Kenimer, of the Arcade theatre, Jacksonville, did not need the rhymed toast idea to put over Gloria Swanson, but he did not waste it. He just set it aside and dug it out for Valentino in A Sainted Devil.

He had that attraction the week of the State Fair, which is not held in Florida until the middle of November, and with 75 prizes offered, it took almost all night to go over the submissions and select the winners. This stunt was advertised in the newspapers with special spaces and by means of throwaways, and in connection with an unusually strong regular campaign it enabled Kenimer to get above his average in the face of the most depressing competition.

He is back in Eldorado, Ark., at the Mission Theatre, after six months with other houses. This was his first effort after his return. It is done in red, white and blue, with lobby frames to match, and it did a lot to sell the Griffith picture.

Panoramic Painting was a Lobby Puller

One of the notable displays on Sundown comes from the Majestic Theatre, Portland, Oregon, where a panoramic painting was done by the house artist.

The lobby faces on two streets, so that there are but two walls, one of which is broken by the entrance doors. The painting was made to cover even the doors. It depicts the big cattle drive around which the story revolves, with a seemingly countless herd of cattle rounded up by the mounted men, with a background of sunset sky.

Because the light is largely cut off, the photograph does not do the display justice, but it does very clearly show the corner paintings which mask in the supporting post and the cross banner with its setting sun.

The latter gives the excuse for a burst of color that would be garnish without good reason, and it also gives contrast with the more sombre tones of the lobby painting.

Not many managers can afford such a spread of canvas, but a smaller painting around the top of the lobby will carry much the same effect and it need not be very elaborately done since all of the figures are in silhouette. Just lay in a deep blue sky, shading to lighter where it meets the sunset glow. Outline the cows and riders against the yellow of the sun and do the foreground in very deep green shading to black at the bottom. If the lobby is protected from the weather this can be done on a strip of 18 or 24 inch roll paper such as grocers use, and will cost very little.

A NOTABLE DISPLAY ON SUNDOWN FROM THE WEST

The entire wall space of the two-sided lobby of the Majestic Theatre, Portland, Oregon, was a painting of the drive which is the big smash in this Earl Hudson production. It is only faintly suggested in this reproduction, but you get the idea.

Free Prologue

John J. Friedl, of the Palace Theatre, Dallas, Texas, got his prologue to Flirting With Love without cost and a lot of free publicity as well.

A music store supplied the attraction in the shape of a pianist playing his own composition as part of a personal appearance film. The pianist was David Pesetzski, and the composition Sonia's Song. The film told how the young revolutionist, separated from his sweetheart in the Russian uprising, found her through the song. At an appropriate point the film was cut and the composer played the song.

The music store not only brought the pianist to town and gave his services, but it advertised in its windows and in the newspapers.

Live Venuses

Putting over The Temple of Venus, the Elite Theatre, St. Leonards-on-Sea, England, staged a series of tableaux with living models, and they did a record-breaking business with this adaptation of the local talent idea.

THE STRAND THEATRE, SEATTLE, DRESSED FOR THE SEA HAWK

The entrance doors were covered with panels, each complete in itself and yet combining to form a larger marine picture since the waves and sky are carried from one panel to the next. Note the spotlights used to illuminate the banner. Six of them.

Oil "Came In" for Flowing Gold Run

They have been pumping oil in the district around Laredo for two or three years, but mostly from 40 to 100 barrel wells. Then a 5,000 barrel gusher came in, and the town went crazy all over again.

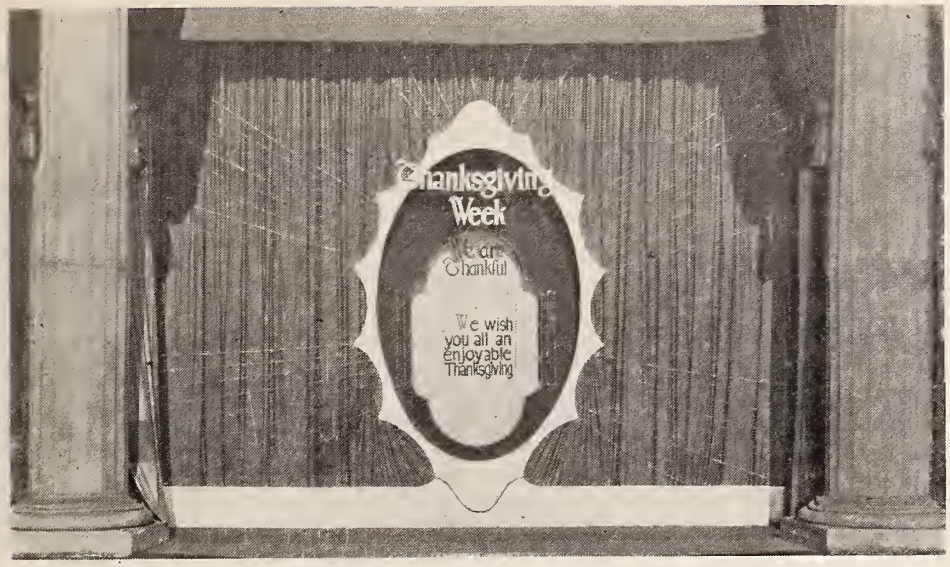
Right away Jack Rowley, of the Strand Theatre, booked in "Flowing Gold" and the day the picture was to open his lobby looked like this:

A First National Release

THE ROWLEY WELL

The well is standing in front of the box office, which is masked in to suggest a brick power house, and there was a dynamo which made just enough noise to get attention without becoming a nuisance.

The well did not pump real oil as some of the earlier Flowing Gold lobby displays did, but it got about as much attention and was not as messy, and the results at the box office were as good as though he were pumping by the barrel. That is Rowley keeping the derrick from falling over, and the chap on the left is the one who built the structure.



HERE IS AN IDEA FOR A SERIAL CARD ANNOUNCEMENT

Pat McGee, of the Criterion, Oklahoma City, has it all over the more costly creeper leaders for his house message. This display can be changed to fit any season, but was used here for Thanksgiving. The card can be changed for a more extended message.

Novel Stock Setting Has Changing Signs

Generally house announcements and greetings are conveyed through creeper leaders or series slides. Pat McGee, of the Criterion Theatre, Oklahoma City, wanted something for Thanksgiving and he devised this curtain.

It is in three parts, the curtain, the backing and the sign. The front curtain includes all up to the oval, and the "Thanksgiving Week" is attached to this, cutout letters being used.

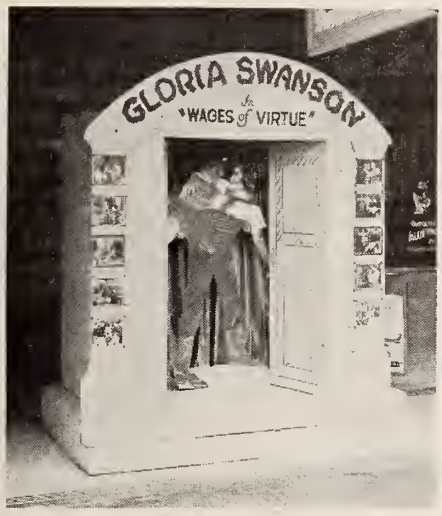
Back of that is the dark colored panel with "We are thankful" lettered on. The lower half is cut to let in a series of cards, which are changed on the usual spacing of one second to a word. Using four cards, the message read: "That we can amuse you by presenting the Movie's greatest Paramount Pictures. That we can truthfully call the Criterion 'the People's Show Place.' That you appreciate our efforts as indicated by your patronage. We wish you all an enjoyable Thanksgiving."

With the exception of the last panel the sections all read in connection with the "We are thankful," which is permanently lettered on the second section.

This can be held for holidays or used regularly to get over the house announcements. For a time, at any rate, it is a change from the slides, and can be run with the lights on, though McGee uses colored spots to get light effects on the curtain and cards.

Useful Structure Built for Swanson

Here's a useful little lobby attractor built by D. Roscoe Faunce, of the Strand Theatre, Birmingham, Ala., for Gloria Swanson. You can get most of the details from the photograph.



A Paramount Release

GLORIA'S HOME

It is not characteristic of any phase of Wages of Virtue, but it does offer an excellent display for any three sheet cutout supplying a clinch, and as about eighty per cent of the three sheets are clinches, you can figure it is pretty generally useful.

It is a two step platform with an arched doorway and a squared entrance, with doors opening in the middle to screen the inside and center attention upon the cutout. What appears to be an inside step is part of the cutout. The backing is grey sateen, but for more or less regular use a set of drapes can be improvised or even borrowed for the week from some merchant.

If you build one of these hinge the side pieces to the front so that when the doors are closed the sides can be folded against the back of the front piece and make a convenient flat for storage. The platform can be used for other displays.

The Wages of Virtue suggested a pay check to Mr. Faunce. It was drawn upon "The Foremost Bank of Entertainment" and paid to the order of the Birmingham Public "Gloria Swanson in a story of the Foreign Legion worth many dollars." The last word was set in display type, as in the usual check. The remainder of that line was imitation typewriter type, and the signature was a cut of Mr. Faunce's own signature and not the unconvincing type script.

Naturally business was unusually good.

For the Female

Here's a line that won an unusually good window for Eddie Collins, of the Queen Theatre, Galveston, Texas. It was used in a department store and read: "The Female can be dressed from head to foot in our ladies' department." It was a hard store to get, too, but this got it.

Olson Rolls His Own

H. G. Olson beat the rest to the regular use of the cross word puzzle on his house programs. He gets out a bi-monthly and has been using puzzles of his own manufacture, with the "hard" words mostly relating to the back of the sheet, where the program is printed and with "The majority of the key words in this twister can be found in the program on the reverse side of this sheet." This is better than using a mat service, but Mr. Olsen needs to be more careful in numbering his spaces or he'll lose all his regular customers to the insane asylum.

AN EFFECTIVE TREATMENT FOR ANY SIMILAR CUTOUT

Devised by Raymond B. Jones, of the Palace Theatre, Dallas. The cutout on Wages of Virtue is draped with metal cloth and set before a fan-shaped cloth of black goods with the ribs outlined in metal (foil) covered paper. It takes light nicely.

Jersey Theatre Finds Own Cut

Evidently the Metro-Goldwyn could not supply the Fulton Theatre, Jersey City, with a cut of the desired size on The Arab, but that did not worry the Fulton in the least. It used a cut from some other production that happened to fit the space. It looks like a holdover from Ashes of Vengeance, but probably few, if any, noticed the discrepancy. It was a cut and it got attention. The rest did not matter. There is no marked resem-

Plan Book Cut Nicely Notched

Most of this four eights from the Strand Theatre, Evansville, Ind., is a straight plan book cut from Metro-Goldwyn, but it has been notched at the lower right hand corner to let in the added attractions and a little about the film itself. The result is a better display than could be had with local facilities. Most plan book cuts can be notched with advantage and sometimes to the decided improvement of the appearance of the display. Here no improvement has been made, but the other house announcements appear in a space that otherwise would be occupied by unnecessary cut material. This seems to be a square bottomed cut, so all of the matter on the right is clear gain.

USING THE CUT

Unusual Placement Helps These Cuts

Frank H. Burns gets a different sort of advertisement for the Beacham Theatre, Orlando, Fla., working with rule and white space around a pair of very ordinary cuts. That square cut was a particularly difficult proposition. It would work as a single with the signature above and the dates below,

A United Artists Release

SOMETHING DIFFERENT

but Burns works it into the space by framing in rule and connecting it with the enclosing panel. The other was less difficult to get in, but it was not easy to make it look like anything in particular. Most of the value of the display comes from the white space, and shows good judgment in handling.

Novel Menus

Hooking to a local restaurant gets Barry Burke nice advertising for the Palace Theatre, Fort Worth, Texas.

The restaurant blue-prints its menus with a sketch in one corner. This is touched up with color by hand, and gives a surprisingly good effect. Burke gets in on these sketches. For example one sketch shows an attractive girl at a table with the opposite chair turned down. The text reads: "I have his meals ready promptly at the Maryland, and I am never too tired to go out with him. Tonight we will take in the show at the Palace, Why Men Leave Home."

Newspaper Ads Beat Press Criticisms

Reproduction of the newspaper criticisms of other cities seldom carry weight, but there is a real kick to this advertisement of the Capitol Theatre, New York, set into the space of Loew's Aldine Theatre, Pittsburgh. Incidentally it is an unusually good space for Pittsburgh, even if it does show up the local composition with its cleaner display. It's about the only way to get a really well-set advertisement into a Pittsburgh paper. The holdover tells more than the most glowing criticism, and the management wisely let this fact speak for itself. This is 140 lines cross four; rather a large space, but it is worth what it costs to get the big idea over. It is one of the prettiest handlings of a reproduction we can recall. It is a pity to cut it down, but we cannot spare the space it would take full size. You can get the idea, and you can do the same thing yourself, if you can get the right sort of advertisement to set in, preferably the $2 display of some big picture which you can offer at regular prices.

Sets Up Display with Heavy Blacks

and still have an advertisement. The Bijou Theatre, New Haven, has only the house name and the date in the black, using the black as a frame for a cut. Apart from the title, all of the talking is done in the mortise in the left-hand corner. This carries both the selling talk and the small features, and almost anyone will stop and read that much. The cut is germane to the title, and the whole thing is effective and pleasing. It is a four-eights, but it looks larger because it is emphatic. It has all of the value of a quarter page with less cost for space.

Makes Good Use of White Space Here

Frank H. Burns, of the Beacham Theatre, Orlando, Fla., handles white space very intelligently in his displays. In this example for The Fast Set he uses a two-column cut in a four-column width and gets an impressive display. Six-point is almost too small for the sales talk, but this is not really essential to a sale and we think he put it in more to dress the space than to be read. You can read it if you want to, but you don't have to read it. Breaking the rule to let in the announcements may try the printer's soul, but it makes for a different effect and was worth the trouble, and probably the argument he had to put up. Since Lem Stewart issued his circular on white space in small displays there has been a very decided improvement in the Southern Enterprises singles. Burns is not with an S. R. house, but he got the idea and is making it work on larger layouts. This is a four-sevens.

A Paramount Release

EFFECTIVE WHITE SPACE

What to Do

Keith's Theatre, Ottawa, got a cooperative page on What Shall I Do? by hooking seven merchants into telling what to do. A plumber started off with "What shall I do when the pipes leak?" and a furrier began his with "What shall I do to keep warm this winter."

To make it more interesting four ticket prizes were offered for the best six or eight line verses on the wares of any advertiser on the page. It helped to put over the Producers Distributing Corporation release.

Puts Minor Reels in Centre of Cut

Using a stock cut for Abraham Lincoln, Tod Browning, of the Olympia Theatre, New Haven, mortised the center of the cut to get a space into which to set his shorts. He has also notched the lower edge to get in two more additions, but he wisely saves the sales talk at the upper left.

This is good stuff which emphasizes the personal angle of the picture. This is a valuable slant. Lincoln is something more than an historical record. It is an effort to humanize the man in the minds of the spectators. It aims to make him as real as George Billings himself, and we think that too much stress cannot be given this fact. It is episodic, but it is real, and the heavier you play on the human side, the better you can sell.

advantages by hatching the background instead of using a solid black. There is further emphasis through the use of a heavy black line about the letter. You do not see it, but it's there and it throws the white into greater prominence. It takes a little more time to hatch the space, but it is well worth the trouble. Getting this down to column width will close the lines up a little, but in the original two-column space this forms one of the best displays Hyman has sent in lately. It not only looks well in a strong black, but it comes up nicely in the newspaper, and that is the real test. It does not matter how it looks on the engraver's copy. It is the press result that counts, and this gets over to the reader in good shape.

Moving Picture World's Special Section "Straight from Exhibitors"

AMID the hectic rush of life in an industry whose history is written in varicolored pages there is no brighter, cleaner, more encouraging chapter than the production of "Peter Pan."

I would be proud to be a member of the organization that can say to the world, "We have given the screen 'Peter Pan.'"

I would be proud to be the exhibitor who can say to his community "I am giving you 'Peter Pan.'"

I am proud—

To present the first special section of a trade paper that is not the product of New York typewriters, but is the clear, ringing expression of unmistakable enthusiasm and hearty good will on the part of exhibitors the country over.

Our part of this section is done when you turn this page.

From then on it is the EXHIBITOR who speaks. The exhibitor, to whose box-office the cheery "Peter Pan" has paid a happy visit, crystalizes in his own words the thought of all the industry:

Here are the reports of a few exhibitors

"Peter Pan" hit me right under the heart. Confirmed our opinion by crashing home with the greatest gross in nearly four years. Former record has stood against the onslaughts of the biggest drawing cards during that time. With a capacity of twenty-two hundred the Vancouver Capitol had 'em hanging on the towel rack day and night trying to get a peep.

—RALPH RUFFNER, Capitol Theatre, Vancouver, B. C.

"Peter Pan" absolutely different; unusual. Most heartily enjoyed by everyone. Business very good.

H. S. WARD, Manager, Rialto Theatre, Clinton, Ia.

"Peter Pan" for seven days had waiting lines a block long. Public here liked it to the limit. Personally, I consider it a masterpiece and feel proud to think I had the privilege of showing it.

—J. C. SCOTT, Manager, Palace Theatre, Long Beach, Cal.

McVickers Theatre, Chicago, broke every record of the house with "Peter Pan," doing $35,775. This surpasses every previous record by $5,000.

—McVICKERS THEATRE, Chicago, Ill.

"Peter Pan" played Dominion Theatre, Victoria. Record business week's run. Old and young alike enthusiastic over picture.

—F. M. ROBERTSON, Manager, Dominion Theatre, Victoria, B. C.

With the exception of "The Covered Wagon," "Peter Pan" played to more people than any attraction of the year. The great number of children necessarily held the gross down but those same children are our adult patrons of tomorrow. The industry needs more pictures like "Peter Pan." It is absolutely perfect.

—ARTHUR R. CUNNINGHAM, Strand Theatre, Omaha, Nebr.

Breaking every record at the Lucas Theatre "Peter Pan" charmed thousands of Savannahians. For the first time since it was built the Lucas was too small this afternoon and we were forced to stop selling tickets for more than an hour. Many stood through the afternoon performances. We grossed ten hundred and sixteen on the day, establishing a new high mark for the Lucas both in money and attendance and at our regular prices, too.

—ARTHUR LUCAS, Lucas, Savannah Ga.

"Peter Pan" has just closed phenomenal week running in two theatres. Here truly is a picture made by men of vision, for it has brought thousands of new recruits to the theatre and sent them away singing praise. Matinee business great and night attendance wonderful. Paramount has given the industry a new classic that makes "Peter Pan" immortal.

It will establish a new record for this theatre, which was recently held by "The White Sister."

—J. REAL NETH, General Manager, James Theatres, Columbus, Ohio.

I believe it is one of the greatest motion pictures ever made. I have yet to hear from the first adult who did not thoroughly enjoy the picture.

—M. A. PAY, Manager, Colonial Theatre, Sioux Falls, S. D.

We are playing to wonderful business, the matinees being especially good. I am prouder of playing "Peter Pan" than any picture I can remember. It is an asset to any theatre, even if they would admit everybody free.

—L. H. CUNNINGHAM, Manager, Quilna Theatre, Lima, Ohio.

"Peter Pan" greeted by large audiences who signified their delight by applauding many times. It is the best picture of its kind I have ever seen.

—J. VICTOR WILSON, Robbins Olympic Theatre, Watertown, N. Y.

In the sixteen years I have been connected with the Strand I do not recall a picture that went over with less effort. "Peter Pan" seemed to be just what the public was waiting for. With the wonderful publicity the producers gave it, it went over with a bang.

"Peter Pan," as produced by the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, is more than just a great picture. It is the keeping of a faith with the American movie fans that will not soon be forgotten. To command genius is asking a lot and expecting much. But a glance at the magnificence of the screen version makes one conscious that genius devised the whole beautiful picture. What a wonderful feeling the producers must experience in this realization. Their work in bestowing the gift has been superb. Belonging to the children makes it belong to the grownups—it makes them all children. Business very good with prospects of making a banner week.

—J. H. WHITEHURST, Century Theatre, Batimore, Md.

We opened with "Peter Pan" yesterday, to the biggest business in the history of the Victory Theatre. Highly pleasing to both adult as well as child. I would class this picture as a record breaker in any town.

—JOHN B. CARROLL, Strand Theatre, Tampa, Fla.

I do not know when a picture has given us such pleasure as "Peter Pan." Indeed it is the wonder picture of the screen. In every sense of the word it is a "family" picture. To everyone—child and adult, there is an hour's keen enjoyment in this picture.

—MRS. BLOOMFIELD MOORE, Indianapolis Indorsers of Photoplays.

If "Peter Pan" does not prove to be one of the really big pictures of the year, or the decade, the calculations of many of the wise men of the industry and the reviewers of the daily papers are all wrong. The consensus of opinion is that it more than lives up to all the good things that have been said of it. Monday morning, at the Rivoli and Rialto, New York, hours before the opening, long lines formed from the box offices and it was seen that many would be unable to secure admission. This was proven true at every performance.

—JOHN SPARGO, in Exhibitors Herald.

"Peter Pan" seems destined to make screen history. It will be taken into the hearts of all of us who possess imagination and contact with the spirit and play of youth.

MOTION PICTURE NEWS.

"Peter Pan" is a picture of unusual wide public appeal. Barrie and Maude Adams provide a background that should carry it far on the road to box office success.

EXHIBITORS TRADE REVIEW.

"Peter Pan" is going to be one of the outstanding pictures of this year and other years to come, in so far as being a film classic, if there ever was one. The patronage was up to the usual satisfactory mark. "Better Movies" will receive a great impetus in the houses that play such attractions as "Peter Pan."

—ALBANY STRAND THEATRE, Mgr. Director, Albany, N. Y.

The production fulfills all advance promises made for it. Held the interest of myself and several other men, which is something unusual for this type of picture. It is technically unique and 100% censor-proof.

—M. ROSENTHAL, Poli's Majestic Theatre, Bridgeport.

"Peter Pan" is in my opinion one of the best pictures produced. A good story for everyone, well made, and a picture that any exhibitor anywhere should not hesitate to show. Betty Bronson is a charming Peter Pan. Nothing prettier has ever appeared in pictures.

—ELMORE D. HEINS, Rialto Theatre, Roanoke, Va.

"Peter Pan" breaks every past, and I dare say, future record in favorable comments received from those who witnessed the picture.

—G. BEPPAS, Rex Theatre, Wheeling, W. Va.

It is a wonderful picture, and we see people at our theatre that have perhaps never been there before. We compliment Famous Players-Lasky on their selection of this story.

—JACK TRUITT, Sedalia Theatre, Sedalia, Mo.

I am very pleased to have played it because the running of that type of picture occasionally brings to the theatre a certain class of people who very seldom go and who are bound naturally to make a few new friends for the theatre, and that character and type of picture is one that has a tendency to cause the better class of people to entertain more kindly feelings toward the theatre and picture industry. I think "Peter Pan" should be played by every theatre in the U. S. if possible for that reason.

—CLAUDE E. CADY, Gladmer Theatre, Lansing, Mich.

If "Peter Pan" is exploited correctly, it should be a success wherever shown.

"Peter Pan" got by far the best press criticism of any picture shown in our city for a long time. A splendid box office attraction.

—J. REAL NETH, James Theatres, Columbus, Ohio.

To my mind, the most perfect example of the picturization of a story and play that the screen has ever known. It is a credit to Mr. Brenon and to Famous Players. It will do more to counteract the hostility to motion pictures than anything that I know of.

—L. H. CUNNINGHAM, Shawnee Amusement Co., Lima, Ohio.

Any exhibitor who personally endorses "Peter Pan" as the type of picture that he is proud to show is raising his individual standing in his community one hundred per cent. Nearly Six Million Persons Pay Two Million Dollars, in America and Canada, to See "Peter Pan"

NEARLY six million persons paying more than $2,000,000 to see a motion picture in the first week of its release!

These statistics are little short of staggering.

"Peter Pan," Sir James M. Barrie's fantasy, produced for Famous Players-Lasky Corporation by Herbert Brenon, with Betty Bronson as Peter Pan, swept the United States and Canada with this record of achievement.

"Peter Pan" opened on December 28, in two hundred and fifty-eight theatres scattered over the country.

From figures compiled at the close of the week, it is authoritatively stated that 5,825,260 persons paid $2,155,346.20 to see "Peter Pan."

As a result of the simultaneous showings, an experiment never before attempted on such a large scale, exhibitors are in a position to obtain, quickly, reports from the houses that played "Peter Pan" on its initial, nation-wide booking.

The preponderance of exhibitor opinion is most enthusiastic. The character of the production, cast, direction, etc., has been praised in exhibitor language that is seldom employed, and the net result (writing within two weeks of the premiere) seems to have exceeded the utmost limits set by either producer or theatre owner, almost without exception.

The editor of Moving Picture World, asking the first run exhibitors for their box-office reports, has received letters and telegrams from a majority of the first run houses. It is impossible to reproduce all of the communications, for lack of space.

Almost at random we give the messages that follow.

"Peter Pan" Keeps the Faith with Movie Fans, Says J. H. Whitehurst, of Baltimore

THE CENTURY THEATRE
OF THE WHITEHURST INTERESTS
LEXINGTON AND CHARLES STREETS

Baltimore, Md., January 2, 1925.

Mr. Robert E. Welsh,
Moving Picture World,
516 Fifth Ave.,
New York City, N. Y.

Dear Mr. Welsh:—

Replying to your letter of December 30th:—

"Peter Pan," as produced by the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, is more than just a great picture. I feel that it is the keeping of a faith with the American movie fans that will not soon be forgotten.

This subject occupies a peculiar place in the hearts of the American public. Peter Pan is Peter Pan. And as such has long worn a halo of love and respect bestowed by loving hearts. Realizing this, one would hesitate to transfers this beautiful story to the screen in any but a masterful manner. The touch of genius must necessarily fashion every detail. To command genius is asking a lot and expecting much. But a glance at the magnificence of the screen version makes one conscious that genius devised the whole beautiful picture.

For the children "Peter Pan" means much—a great deal in a great many ways. It belongs to the children—and what a wonderful feeling the producers must experience in this realization. Their work in bestowing the gift has been superb. Belonging to the children makes it belong to the grownups—it makes them all children.

As I write tonight—Thursday—I am very happy to report business very good with prospects of making a banner week.

In exploiting we used extra newspaper space. Double our regular outdoor showing and a number of merchandise tie-ups.

We felt, and know now, the picture was worth it. It will be one of the nice things our patrons will talk about in their references to our theater.

Very truly yours,
WHITEHURST COMBINED THEATRICAL INTS.

Nation-wide Enthusiasm Shown in "Peter Pan" by First Run Showmen

"Should Be Played by Every House in U. S."

CLAUDE E. CADY—AMUSEMENT ENTERPRISES
Office
204 North Washington Avenue
Lansing, Mich
January 2, 1925.

Dear Mr. Welsh:

In reply to your letter of December 30th with reference to "Peter Pan," beg to reply as follows:

I put over probably the most extensive advertising campaign on this particular subject that I have on anything this season, owing to the fact that there were so many opportunities for tie-ups with various business organizations, and it was not at all difficult to interest the respective merchants in the subject.

In the first place, our biggest tie-up was with one of our clothiers who handles "Peter Pan" clothes. This man bought 1,000 tickets, covering his entire mailing list of boys, and marched them to the theatre, all wearing "Peter Pan" buttons and carrying a banner. He also gave away three suits of clothes. in return for which we give him an elaborate window display.

Another tie-up was with a dry goods merchant handling "Peter Pan" sweaters. Another good tie-up was with a book store selling "Peter Pan" books; another with a drug store selling "Peter Pan" fountain pens.

Then, we made an arrangement with one of our local papers for a "Peter Pan" drawing contest—the subject being Betty Bronson—and gave as prizes suits of clothes, "Peter Pan" books, sweaters, fountain pens, and a few cash prizes, together with complimentary admissions for the smaller prizes. This plan was very successful. We had nearly one hundred drawings submitted in the contest.

So much for the exploitation.

Now, as to the picture itself. Everybody proclaimed it a very beautiful picture, and most of our patrons who could spring their imaginations to a sufficient extent and who could again think of themselves as children were all very much pleased with the picture.

I am very pleased to have played it because that type of people occasionally brings to the theatre a certain class of people who very seldom go and who are bound naturally to make a few new friends for the theatre, and that character and type of picture is one that has a tendency to cause the better class of people to entertain more kindly feelings toward the theatre and picture industry.

I think "Peter Pan" should be played by every theatre in the U. S., if possible, for that reason.

Trusting that I have covered the matter sufficiently so that you may have some idea of my judgment of this production, I am,

Very truly yours,
CLAUDE E. CADY.

Robert E. Welsh,
Moving Picture World, N. Y. City.

Dear Sir: "Peter Pan" had an auspicious opening at Robbins Olympic Theatre and was greeted by large audiences who signified their delight with the picture by applauding many times during its projection. It is a picture which pleases children and grownups alike. The photography is excellent, the cast as near perfect as anyone could wish and much credit is due Mr. Herbert Brenon for the artistic manner in which he has transferred Sir James M. Barrie's immortal fantasy to the screen. It is the best picture of its kind I have seen.

Greatest Gross in Nearly Four Years

(Telegram)
Vancouver, B. C.
Jan. 6, 1925

Peter Pan hit me right under the heart when I saw it at prereview and I left the screen room feeling it was the finest picture I had ever seen. With assistance of newspaper display, billboards and window cards only, Peter Pan confirmed our opinion by crashing home with the greatest gross in nearly four years of operation, which is a real achievement, considering the former record has stood against the onslaughts of the biggest drawing cards during that time. Even with a capacity of twenty-two hundred the Vancouver Capitol had 'em hanging on the towel rack day and night trying to get a peep at Peter, which is just one way of beginning a new year.

"Peter Pan" Fulfills All Promises

THIRD STREET THEATRE CO.
Easton, Pa., Dec. 31, 1924.

New York, N. Y.

Dear Sir: In answer to your letter of yesterday, relative to "Peter Pan," will say that in my opinion the production fulfills all advance promises made for it.

At a preview it held the interest of myself and several other men, which is something unusual for this type of picture. It is technically unique and 100% censor-proof.

As for the business it is doing, matinee business has increased tremendously, while the evenings are just above normal. About 85% of the afternoon crowd is made up of women and children.

We are putting on a prologue to "Peter Pan"—a young dancer dressed in one of the nationally-advertised "Peter Pan" dresses, while a singer off-stage renders "Peter Pan." Several of the local department stores have tied up with us, using effective window displays of "Peter Pan" dresses and "Peter Pan" kids' clothes.

Betty Bronson, star of the picture, lived a part of her youth in our own city of Easton, a factor which helped us greatly in our advertising.

Yours very truly,
HARLAN E. WOEHRLE,
General Manager.

"Peter Pan" a Credit to Famous Players

Mr. Robert E. Welsh,
Editor, Moving Picture World,
New York City, N. Y.

Dear Sir:

In answer to yours of the 30th ult., I first want to pay my tribute to "Peter Pan." To my mind, it is the most perfect example of the picturization of a story or play that the screen has known.

It is a credit to Mr. Brenon, to Famous Players Lasky, and to the whole motion picture industry. It will do more to counteract the growing hostility to motion pictures incited by the sexy, sensational pictures than anything I know of.

We are playing to wonderful business, the matinees being especially good, and it is great to hear the expressions of delight from the children, their mothers and fathers, and the old roosters like myself who haven't forgotten that they were kids once themselves, and can sit and chuckle and wipe the mist from their eyes. I am prouder of playing "Peter Pan" than any picture that I can remember. It is an asset to any theatre even if they would admit everybody free.

For exploitation, we had displays in six stores, the public library, special newspaper contests and stories, extensive display advertising, some of which was linked up with local advertisers and "Peter Pan" buttons for the kids. We also used 12 24-sheets, 30 eight-sheets, 120 three-sheets, special frames with insert cards and 22x28's. At the theatre, we had two immense holly wreaths in our front windows and a fountain at the head of our auditorium was arranged with "Peter Pan" cut-outs and holiday decorations.

Yours truly,
L. H. CUNNINGHAM.

Mr. Robert E. Welsh,
Moving Picture World,
New York City.

Dear Sir:

Today I closed a full week engagement on "Peter Pan." I believe it to be one of the greatest motion pictures ever made.

Every now and then a theatre manager plays a picture on which he does not expect to make money, feeling that it has a certain value in good will advertising.

That is the way I felt relative to "Peter Pan." However, after the first day I realized that I had more than just a wonderful picture, but also a picture that registered big at the box office.

I felt very much like a number of Middle West exhibitors felt that this picture would have only an appeal to children, inasmuch as Maude Adams had never toured this part of the country and the book was all that my patrons had to go by, but I was again wrong and I have yet to hear from the first adult who did not thoroughly enjoy the picture.

On account of a severe cold spell, I refrained from using much outdoor exploitation, but used big advertising space in the newspapers, tied up with the music stores, book stores and ran the "PETER PAN" dress contest giving free as first prize a "PETER PAN" dress. I had a special showing for the orphan children which gained considerable publicity in the newspapers. On the second day of the showing, our local paper had an editorial on "PETER PAN," using it as an example of the way the "movies" had improved under the leadership of Mr. Will Hays.

This letter would be incomplete without giving all the credit for the success of my run to Mr. A. B. Leak, local Famous Players manager and Mr. Jack Hellman, Paramount exploiteer. The co-operation of these two men, who were ever ready to co-operate in any way, and who put aside other important matters to assist me in putting over the picture, was splendid.

Yours very truly,
M. A. PAY, Manager.

Just What the Public Was Waiting for

SUNBURY OFFICE OF THE COMERFORD AMUSEMENT CO.
Of Scranton, Pa.
J. M. Blanchard, Sanbury Representative

January 1, 1925.

Mr. Robert Welsh,
Moving Picture World,
New York City, N. Y.

My dear Mr. Welsh:

It is with great pleasure I give you the small way in which we put over the wonder picture "Peter Pan."

In the sixteen years I have been connected with the Strand Theatre, Sanbury, I do not recall a picture that went over with less effort. Peter Pan seemed to be just what the public was waiting for, and with the wonderful publicity the producers gave it, it simply went over with a bang.

Making it a safe bet, we would say 75% of our patrons liked it; many came three times to see it, while many could not see it from any angle. Our daily papers, which give us very little free stuff, and who bought tickets to see this picture, gave big space, one heading: "'Peter Pan' has taken Sanbury by storm."

The only stunt outside of the usual tie-ups with local merchants on Peter Pan dresses, song, ties and pens, was a large cut-out of Peter Pan out on a dark side of large building with a light worked by mirror from roof of next building. This light ("TINK") would play around the side of building then onto the cut-out. I dare say that very few knew what we were trying to do, but they looked and saw "Peter Pan" which was to be shown at the Strand. We had extra large business, and on extended run, but at usual price. I would surely advise usual prices for this picture where the house can at least break even. Don't think it will please all. No fairy tale will ever do that.

Columbus, Ohio,
January 2, 1925.

"Peter Pan" opened in our Grand Theatre Sunday, December 28, and am very happy to say it is running far ahead of our expectations. It will establish a new record for this theatre, which was recently held by "The White Sister."

Of those who have seen the picture, all praise Betty Bronson's work, the production and lavish stage settings. The press was very enthusiastic and generous in their criticisms. Far the best criticism of any picture shown in our city for some time. A splendid box-office attraction. We put no special efforts forth in any exploitation angles; only used our local newspapers.

Capacity Business in Winnipeg, Canada

Dear Mr. Welsh:

Replying to your favor of the 30th ultimo in regard to how "PETER PAN" did for this theater, beg to advise that we have played to capacity business the entire week. In fact, I think nearly every kiddie in Winnipeg saw the picture.

I think the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation should be congratulated upon giving the Exhibitors of America a picture like "PETER PAN." Every once in a while it takes a good clean story such as "PETER PAN' 'to start new faces coming to the theaters, and everyone who has seen "PETER PAN" is most enthusiastic about it.

I might add the Canadian Famous Players is practically owned by Canadian capital, so I am not forced by any "diplomatic" reasons to boost the Famous Players-Lasky product if I do not think it deserves the boost.

EASTMAN THEATRE
Rochester, N. Y.
Jan. 5th, 1925.

Dear Mr. Welsh:

It is a pleasure for us to co-operate with you in accordance with your letter of Dec. 30th. I think I can best comment on the showing of Peter Pan at this theatre, in the following way:

"Every exhibitor is, or should always be on the lookout for attractions which will draw matinee business. The number of features calculated to attract only adult audiences is so great as to be entirely disproportionate to those suitable for matinee or juvenile audiences. It is not only for this reason that we welcome a feature which promises good matinee business—it is good business to book films that will fill the house at what is usually the duller part of the day. Furthermore, as Danny has remarked in one of his editorials, 'A feature that will attract the children is the best answer to those who question the morals of the movies.'"

Upon screening Peter Pan, it was a delight to see the beauty and fidelity with which this picture was produced. It is a credit to Mr. Brenon and therefore to the Famous Players for giving him the chance to produce such a picture.

Now, as to business done during the one week's showing at this theatre. During the whole of 1923 only seven pictures have played to bigger business. During the whole of 1923 only four pictures played to larger audiences. "Peter Pan" is the first picture we have had which drew more money at the matinees than in the evenings. To be exact, we took in 53% of the receipts at the matinees and 47% at the evening performances. Percentages for attendances were 62% matinees, 38% nights.

In this connection, the comparison with other types of pictures may be interesting:

Box-office receipts show the average of dramas, matinees, 32 per cent; evenings, 68 per cent.

Average of feature comedies, matinees, 38 per cent; evenings, 62 per cent.

"The Covered Wagon," matinee, 48 per cent; evenings, 52 per cent.

"Peter Pan," matinees, 53 per cent; evenings, 47 per cent.

What more need be said?

Yours very truly,
EASTMAN THEATRE,

Gentlemen:

I do not hesitate for one moment to make the following statement in regard to "PETER PAN" now playing at our Modern and Beacon Theatres:

It is the most stupendous production of its kind yet seen on the screen. It is an accomplishment of art that deserves the highest praise. It is a photoplay that delights and thrills young and old, the sophisticated and unsophisticated. In short, it is incomparable.

It has accomplished for our theatres the magnet for an element which we heretofore were unable to draw, and I extend to the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation my sincere congratulations. In Boston, Maude Adams made this story of J. M. Barrie a treasure for the stage and the Famous Players-made it a treasure for the screen.

Very truly yours,
J. LOURIE.

Albany Schools Approve "Peter Pan"

Dear Mr. Welsh:

"Peter Pan" is going to be one of the outstanding pictures of this year and other years to come, in so far as being a film classic, if there ever was one.

The patronage in our Mark Strand, Albany, N. Y., and our Troy Theatre, Troy, N. Y., was up to the usual satisfactory mark and the incentive to bring to our theatres all classes and strange to say it was nearly one hundred per cent enjoyment to them. Very few found fault.

We had the hearty co-operation of the schools, Sunday Schools, the Parent Teachers' Association, the Albany Mother's Club, and the churches as well, showing the great interest this production aroused and received after witnessing it the unanimous approbation of those societies, and organizations that attended.

"Better Movies" will receive a great impetus in the houses that play such attractions as "Peter Pan."

Yours very truly,
ALBANY STRAND THEATRE,
Managing Director.

Dear Mr. Welsh: As per your request, I am sending to you a hurried report of my exploitation on "Peter Pan," now showing here.

I tied up with the L. G. Gilbert store, on "Peter Pan Dresses" and they gave me a nice window together with large newspaper advertising notices, they placed 5,000 heralds like sample in their packages, they also dressed one of my ushers like "Peter Pan" and she gave out data in my theatre on the picture (photo to Bill Johnson, 16 East 42nd St.), she also appeared in the store with my heralds, and I advertised for the kiddies to meet "Peter Pan" in person at the theatre, also, and the store furnished me two beautiful models to display dresses on my stage during the run of picture.

Tied up with Meacham Department Store, on "Peter Pan Kid Clothes" and they used 5,000 heralds in their packages and gave me a nice window and newspaper space in their adv., they also dressed up "Peter Pan Kids" in the clothes and had them in the lobby of the theatre during run of picture.

Tied up with "Peter Pan" books and secured a nice window with newspaper adv., also same thing with the music number, window, newspaper, and I used the number in the theatre for Exit Number.

Tied up with "Piggly-Wiggly" stores (16) and they used 16,000 heralds in their packages the day before my opening.

Had a thermometer cut out from a three sheet, and used the mercury to register the attendance each day, and the diminishing chances to see "Peter Pan." This was placed on the busiest corner downtown. With every good wish for the New Year.

Sincerely yours,
BARRY BURKE,
Palace Theatre,
Forth Worth, Texas.

P. S.—It's a wonderful matinee picture. Mothers and children are splendid "good will" builders.

Dear Sir:

I have your letter of December 30 in hand regarding "Peter Pan," and this is what I have to say about it: "Peter Pan" didn't break any house records at box office, but did do a very satisfactory business, but "Peter Pan" breaks every past, and I dare say, future records in favorable comments received from those who witnessed the picture.

The following are the means of advertising we used:

Plenty of newspaper space, daily and Sunday. Splendid book store displays, about six stores.

Five hundred ones—2,000 buttons—300 window cards—24 6-3 stands and 15,000 screen scrapbooks distributed through the Sunday paper, with a special ad. in the back.

I also had a special lobby display. Am sorry I haven't taken a photograph of it to send to you.

My personal opinion of "Peter Pan" is that it should make money for all exhibitors if the picture is handled right.

Paramount has an excellent music score, and this combined with the picture no better entertainment can be given.

With the best of wishes,

G. BEPPAS, Manager,
Rex Theatre.

McVickers Theatre, Chicago, broke every record of the house with "Peter Pan," doing $35,775. This surpassed every previous record by $5,000.

Dear Mr. Welsh:

"Peter Pan" is a fine example of the great strides made in photography in the past few years. Betty Bronson is destined to be one of the greatest stars of the screen. Brenon's handling of all the details has been remarkable. If "Peter Pan" is exploited correctly, it should be a success wherever shown.

We literally covered the town with rotos, arranged tie-ups with the merchants and induced the Better Films Committee to write a letter of endorsement, which was sent to all the prominent people in the city. I gave it a personal endorsement in the newspapers. We have entertained children from several poor organizations and gotten newspaper mention for this. We used a special lobby display consisting of a girl sitting on the limb of a tree with an enormous dog looking at her. The dog's head was operated mechanically so that it was in motion, and stills were placed in the tree trunk and illuminated from the rear.

Yours very truly,

The showing of "Peter Pan," writes J. J. Reilly, manager of the Princess Theatre, Alton, Ill., was a very satisfactory one, not so much from a financial standpoint, due to very cold and disagreeable weather conditions, but due to the class of patronage it drew and the fact that it pleased practically all who viewed, especially women and children.

Phone Calls Precede New "Faces" in Crowd

POLI'S THEATRICAL ENTERPRISES
Majestic Theatre,

S. Z. Poli, Proprietor.
January 2, 1925.

Dear Mr. Welsh:

I am replying to your favor of the 30th ult. in regard to "Peter Pan." Our campaign was rather more elaborate than usual due to the fact that we wanted to impress our adult patrons that it was not merely a kid picture.

In spite of the fact that this week is rather a bad time of the year to hook up with store merchants, we landed several good tie-ups. I am enclosing tear sheet showing the large space taken exclusively on Peter Pan dresses by one of our largest stores. They also gave us two of their most prominent windows on the main street for dresses and book displays. In addition they donated dresses for us to give away at the theatre.

As to the picture itself, I personally think it is a masterpiece and will live for years to come. It is no doubt true both in this city and others that a good many adults (meaning flappers and flippers) will not care for it, but the married adults come and bring their chidren, or perhaps it is the children bringing their adults. From the phone calls and inquiries it is proving that a new type of theatre-goers are being created by this picture.

The photography and direction are perfect. It might have been better if it were cut to eight reels, but then again that may be a matter of personal opinion.

Very truly yours,
M. ROSENTHAL,
Manager,
MR:MR Poli's Majestic Theatre.

EXHIBITORS' NEWS AND VIEWS

EDITED BY SUMNER SMITH

New Washington Theatre Burns Just Before Dedication Show

B. W. Fey, well known exhibitor and former owner of the Madison Theatre, Seattle, was already to open his new Renton Theatre, Renton, Wash., on Christmas Day. The house was very close to the final touch, when a fire started from an overheated furnace and broke out in the front of the house, destroying everything in its path. All new furnishings, drapes, carpets, projection equipment, etc., were consumed. The chairs had arrived but had not yet been unpacked, and escaped. Part of the organ was damaged. It will take Fey six weeks to restore the theatre, which fortunately was covered by insurance, to say nothing of the disappointment of the delay. Mr. Fey is glad it happened with no danger to the public, rather than after he had opened the house.

Mr. Barney of Arlington, Wash., owner of the buildings housing the American and Gem theatres, has taken over the expired leases from Walter Flint and will close one of the houses, operating the other. Flint recently transferred his interests to Colville, where he has a nice house. Mr. Flint's friends are rejoicing at his convalescence from what might have been a very serious accident. Flint and his small son were fooling with a gun that "wasn't loaded," when it discharged, shooting him through the throat. The accident occurred shortly before Christmas.

F. A. Stewart has renovated and reopened his Stewart Theatre in Puyallup, Wash., formerly operated by D. Constanti, who built a splendid new house last spring.

The M. P. T. O. Legislative Committee met January 2 at the Liberty Theatre, Seattle, to adopt final plans prior to the meeting of the legislature on January 12. Members of the King County legislative committee of the M. P. T. O. of Washington are: J. Von Herberg, chairman; Frank Edwards, vice-chairman; R. W. Bender, John Danz, Joe Gottstein, Charles McKee, J. W. LaVigne, Don Geddes, George Hood, C. E. Bostick, H. J. Carey, H. E. Woolley, Carl Reiter, George Srigley, C. Brown, L. C. Brown, Roy C. Czerny, W. A. Cochran and Marie Connelly.

The Bellingham Theatres Company is remodelling the American Theatre, Bellingham, Wash., at a cost exceeding $11,000. The stage which is an unusually large one, will be remodeled into the most modern stage, properly equipped to handle any kind of road shows in addition to pictures. An entire new system of illumination, controls, dimmers, etc. will be installed. This in addition to extensive redecorating, furnishing etc., throughout the house. Fred Walton is one of the best presentation men on the West Coast, and when he gets all set with the new equipment, and all the trimmings, we predict he will give Northwest exhibitors a mark to shoot at.

Ed Myrick, who recently sold his Myrick Theatre, Billings, Mont., has become manager of a house in San Diego, one of the chain controlled by Pacific Southwest Enterprises.

A new rumor is loose. It is that Jensen & Von Herberg, through the Moore Amusement Co., of Tacoma, are planning a house in Centralia, Wash.

Manager C. W. McKee of the Heilig has put over a publicity campaign, working with Eddie Rivers, his publicity director, on "Captain January" during Holiday Week, that has proven irresistable to large throngs of film fans and packed his big house. The keynote of his editorial ads has been "How Can You Stay Away?" (Under the circumstances and considering what is being offered). Most of 'em couldn't and didn't stay away.

Scene from Paramount's "Too Many Kisses."

Manager Art Hile practically had a double opening, so enthusiastic was the response to the announcement of the installation of his mammoth organ and its formal dedication, a few weeks after the opening of the new Capitol at Third and Pike. The public was quick to appreciate the playing of Williams, the talented young organist who presides at the console.

The John Danz circuit in Seattle, consisting of the Capitol, Colonial, Florence and State theatres, puts out a snappy little four-page weekly paper called Film Fan.

Every tip you send to Straight From the Shoulder Reports is a boost for exhibitor fraternalism.

San Francisco

James Beatty, who recently opened Beatty's Casino Theatre at San Francisco, has disposed of his interests in the Liberty, American and Jose theatres at San Jose, to the National Theatres Syndicate of California, headed by L. R. Crook. He owned 51 per cent. of the stock in the San Jose houses. Harold Neides, former manager of Loew's Warfield Theatre, San Francisco, has been made manager of the new San Jose interests of the National Theatres Syndicate. Mr. Beatty is now devoting his entire attention to the management of his new house in the West Coast metropolis.

Irving Lesser, with his bride of two months, was a recent visitor at San Francisco and announced that West Coast Theatres, Inc., plans the erection of four or five large houses in outlying sections of the city. He stated that Los Angeles had been fully covered and that San Francisco was now to come in for attention.

It is not always the picture that is well advertised and well known that proves the best box office attraction, as Joseph Enos, manager of the Portola Theatre, recently found out when he booked "The Passing of Banditry in Oklahoma," a production he had never heard of. The lobby display met the fancy of the crowd and the Portola Theatre record was closely approached.

Through the efforts of Manager Nat Holt and Director of Publicity Charles E. Kurtzman, the California Theatre, San Francisco, was made a center of attraction on New Year's Eve. Loges and boxes were sold out well in advance and purchasers were given the privilege of coming and going throughout the evening. The screen attraction, "Peter Pan," was an ideal one.

Among the exhibitors who visited San Francisco's Film Row the last of the year were T. C. Reavis, of the Cline and G. & S. Theatres, Santa Rosa; Gus Johnson, of the Star Theatre, Newman; Mrs. G. H. Wilson, of the Liberty Theatre, St. Helena, and R. Weil, of the Novelty Theatre, Martinez.

R. R. Boomer, manager of the Cameo Theatre, San Francisco, offered an unusually complete musical program during the holiday week.

Plans are being prepared for the Monterey Theatres Company for a 1,000-seat picture house to be erected at Monterey, Cal.

Charles Wescott, of the Fortuna Theatre, Fortuna, Cal., has awarded a contract for the erection of a one-story theatre seating 600. The house will have a small balcony.

Christmas Feted in Kansas City

Christmas proved a great day in Kansas City for theatre folk. Employes of the Globe Theatre were guests of the management at a turkey dinner at the Globe cafe, where dinner was arrayed to accommodate forty-five persons. A seven-course dinner and a dance awaited employes and members of the cast at the Orpheum Theatre after the final show.

The fifth annual "get together" banquet was given by Frank L. Newman for employes of the Newman and Royal theatres, Kansas City, Friday night in the ballroom of the Hotel Muehlebach. The big hit of the banquet, as in similar affairs of the past, was the travesties staged by various stage and screen attractions, which had appeared in both theatres in the last year, written and presented by members of the theatres' staffs. An even cleverer satire on one of the big attractions presented, which was rehearsed behind closed doors, was said to be a "knock-out." In addition to the satires staged, there were specialties, staged by individuals, including songs and dances.

Among the out-of-town exhibitors in the Kansas City market last week were: George Pickrell, Ponca City, Okla.; H. Snyder, Forest Theatre, Deep Water, Mo.; Roy Payne, Spring Hill, Kas.; H. McDonald, Majestic and Ashland theatres, Wellington, Kas.; Roy Burford, New Burford Theatre, Arkansas City, Kas.; C. E. Montrey, Park, St. Joseph, Mo.; Herb Welsh, Orpheum, Atchison, Kas.; Lawrence Brenninger, Crystal, Topeka, Kas.; G. L. Rugg, McLouth Theatre, McLouth, Kas.; Charles Sears, Star, Nevada, Mo.; S. E. Wilhoit, Jefferson, Springfield, Mo.

Adolph Eisner, former president of the M. P. T. O. of Kansas City and manager of the Broadmour Theatre, has accepted a position with Vitagraph in charge of special sales work.

Three theatres in the Kansas City territory have changed hands in the last week. The Colonial at Norton, Kas., has been taken over by the Hostettler interests, while the Mozart, Twelfth street and Indiana avenue, Kansas City, has been purchased by Ritter & Kraus from Frank Amos, assistant manager of the Cinema Distributing Corporation of Kansas City. The McLouth Theatre, McLouth, Kas., has been sold by C. L. Rugg to H. Lewis. Mr. Rugg has in turn taken over the management of the Robinson Theatre, Robinson, Kas.

A house organ, "The Stage and Screen," which is being published by the National Theatres Corp., operating the Grand, Orpheum and Isis Theatres of Topeka, Kas., is proving even more profitable than at first was anticipated, according to J. H. Plumb, an official of the company. A recent issue contained 24 pages of publicity of coming attractions, and also included enough advertising to defray expenses.

Cincinnati

Rumors current throughout Ohio for several weeks have been set at rest by a definite announcement that Walter Reade of Reade's Hippodrome, Cleveland, will build a combination vaudeville and picture house within a year, an option having been taken on a large piece of ground on Euclid avenue in that city. The new building will seat 5,000.

S. Spicer, manager of the Miami Theatre, Franklin, Ohio, is authority for the statement that the stork occasionally works overtime. He bases his statement on the fact that the aforesaid bird left a pair of twins at his house a short time ago.

Fire in the projection room of the Fountain Theatre, located on East 55th street, Cleveland, destroyed the entire room and all contents, which included some ten reels of film.

Among the theatres that have closed within the past few weeks are the Tawa, Ottawa, Ohio; Tivoli, Cincinnati; New Palace, Cleveland; Main Theatre, Cleveland; Opera House, Green Springs, and the Cosmos, DeGraff.

Manager Tom Weir of the Strand Theatre, Cincinnati, announces a change in matinee admission prices, which hereafter will be 25 cents for the entire house up to 6 p. m. The present scale of 25 and 40 cents will continue for night performances, as well as all day on Sunday and holidays.

George Zegiob, manager of the Dreamland Theatre, Lorain, Ohio, is spending several weeks with his wife and family in Albuquerque, N. M.

Contracts for the new Keith Theatre, Akron, Ohio, have been awarded to Carmichael Construction Co., on its bid of approximately $700,000. The house, which will be located on South Howard street, will consist of two floors and will seat 2,000 persons. Work will be started immediately. It is estimated that the total cost of the house, including alterations, will run more than $1,000,000.

Louisville

James H. Porter, 62 years of age, for some years owner and manager of the Globe Theatre, Louisville, who has been living at Elizabeth, Ind., for two years, died on December 24, as members of his family were conducting him to an automobile to return to Louisville for a holiday re-union with his five daughters and three sons. Mr. Porter was in the roofing business, entered the show business and continued both lines.

Chicago

Lew Goldberg, managing director of the new Jeffrey Theatre, Chicago, says that the house will open about February 1 and will show pictures, presentations and vaudeville acts. The house will have 2,000 seats, a large orchestra pit and a fully equipped stage. Vernon Seaver, Jr., will be house manager.

The Majestic Theatre, Balaban & Katz Midwest Theatre Corporation's house at Kankakee, is having extensive improvements made which involve enlargement and reconstruction of the balcony and the installation of a new organ, new curtain, elaborate scenic effects for the stage and a new electric sign and canopy. When the improvements are completed the house will be equipped for elaborate stage presentations.

Sam Durchstag, theatre manager, and Miss Ida Kramer of the National Screen Service were married last week and their many friends in the trade extend congratulations.

Billy Lynch of Culver has opened his new Liberty Theatre at Plymouth, Indiana.

T. Vivitania, owner of the Lincoln Theatre in Granite City, Ill., has had plans prepared for a new 1,500-seat theatre for that city. He also plans to conduct an airdome in conjunction with the new theatre.

F. L. Finley has taken over the Rialto Theatre, Jacksonville, Ill., formerly operated by R. W. Weber. Weber has also disposed of his house in Bluff, Ill.

Guy M. Wampler has again taken over the Royal Theatre at Palestine, Ill., and Fred Trosper has purchased the Photoplay Theatre at Bluffs, Ill.

Lou Manges of the State Theatre at East St. Louis, Ill., is recovering from his recent operation and will be back on the job soon. Bob Cluster, exhibitor of Belleville, Ill., also is getting better. He was threatened with pneumonia.

Sam Katz is back at his desk at the Chicago Theatre headquarters of Balaban & Katz after several months spent in Europe.

The Vernon Theatre Building on the northeast corner of 61st and Vernon avenue, Chicago, has been sold by Annie Lubershane to Abraham Liebling for $146,500, subject to a mortgage of $68,000. Cerf & Ehrenhalt handled the deal for both parties.

C. D. Peet, manager of the State-Congress Theatre, Chicago, was robbed of several hundred dollars by a lone bandit who made his escape from the house in the crowd of patrons.

FRANCES HOWARD
Richard Dix's new leading lady in his latest Paramount, "Too Many Kisses."

Richard Barthelmess as he appears in "Clas smates," a First National picture.

Sol Best, owner of the Southport and Blaine theatres, has taken over the Lawndale Theatre at 3679 Grand avenue, Chicago, from James G. Best. Mr. Best is improving the house. He has changed the policy to first-run neighborhood pictures.

Manager Charley Ryan of the Milford Theatre, Chicago, put on a big holiday bill for the patrons of the house on Crawford avenue and the kiddies as well as the grown-ups were remembered by the house staff. On New Year's Eve William Miller, owner of the house, was the host of the house staff at a big celebration.

The members of the Illinois Motion Picture Theatre Owners in the northern part of the state have been invited to meet with the directors of the organization at Peoria, Ill., on January 12, when matters of interest to the exhibitors will be taken up.

One of the most interesting things in connection with the matinees for children at the various Chicago neighborhood houses is the practice of giving the kids candy or some little novelty to get them to come to see the show. One circuit places an order for 1,200 boxes of 24 candy bars each to give away to the juveniles every week, and if the total were known for all the houses the amount of candy used would surprise the trade.

Vic H. Geissler has resigned his connection with the Miller and Spencer Theatre at Sterling, Ill., and is spending the holidays at Manitowoc, Wis.

Indiana

The Royal Theatre, oldest picture house in Marion, Ind., was badly damaged by fire, water and smoke on New Year's Eve, the loss being estimated at more than $25,000. The Royal was established forty years ago and is operated by the Washington Theatres Company, which owns and operates the four other theatres in the city. The fire was discovered a half hour before the afternoon performance was to begin and spread rapidly through the interior of the structure. Announcement is made that the theatre will be rebuilt, enlarged and re-equipped.

The new State Theatre, 1211 State boulevard, Fort Wayne, was formally opened Christmas Day to capacity crowds at each performance. The feature picture was "One Glorious Night." The theatre seats 600. Alphonse Centlivre is the manager.

Articles of incorporation for the Parthenon Theatre Company, of Hammond, were filed this week with the Secretary of State at Indianapolis. The company is capitalized at $100,000 and the incorporators are George H. Fuller and C. J. Kontos of Chicago Heights, Ill., and C. T. Greenias of Chicago.

Billy Connors, genial manager of the Indiana Theatre at Marion, arranged a midnight show for his patrons on New Year's Eve that proved most enjoyable. In addition to an excellent program Connors provided each patron with balloons and various noise-making devices.

Milwaukee

Leo. A. Landau, who resigned on January 1 as director of the Garden and Alhambra theatres in Milwaukee, has announced that he will join the Clinton-Meyers chain shortly as manager of the Lyceum, one of the finest houses in Minneapolis. Mr. Landau, who leaves Milwaukee after years of service as a leading downtown exhibitor, has been succeeded by O. J. Wooden, formerly in charge of the Famous Players-Lasky office in the city.

Announcement of Mr. Landau's plans has led to considerable speculation among Milwaukee exhibitors regarding the disposition of Len S. Brown, who has been managing the Minneapolis house since it was remodeled some time ago at great expense and became one of the showplaces of the northwest.

In the Lyceum Mr. Landau will have a showhouse that boasts two dance halls to which the theatre patrons are admitted without extra charge. The theatre is a 3600-seat house and was formerly known as the Auditorium.

The Clinton-Meyers circuit also operates houses in Duluth and St. Paul.

The summer golfing sharks of the Saxe organization in Milwaukee have become winter bowling demons. Hardly a day passes that "the gang" is not on the alleys. Besides Tom Saxe, those knocking the pins for a row are Louis Orlove, manager of the Saxe workshop; Charles Brewster, electrical wizard of the organization; Harry Davey, in charge of the front of the Wisconsin Theatre; Eddie Weisfeldt, director of production at the Wisconsin; Stan Brown, manager of Saxe's Strand and James Kenough, the film buyer.

St. Louis

Plans for the new Sanford Theatre and apartment building to be erected at Union boulevard and Northland avenue, St. Louis, Mo., have been prepared and will be put on the market for bids from contractors within the next few weeks. The structure, including the site, involves an expenditure of upwards of $500,000. The lot is 123 feet by 705 feet.

The theatre, which will seat 1,800, will be operated by the Sanford Amusement Company, now operators of the Union Theatre, Union boulevard at Easton avenue. The officers of the Sanford Amusement Company are A. Laventhal, Ruby Laventhal, Louis Stahl and Maurice Stahl. The theatre proper will cover a space 123½ feet by 106 feet, and adjoining the theatre there will be an airdome with a capacity of 2,500. Entrance to the latter will be through the same lobby and foyer as into the theatre. In the rear of the airdome will be a public garage to accommodate 1,000 automobiles. Parking space will be free.

The house will be equipped with one of the largest stages in the city. The proscenium opening will be 48 feet wide and the stage 30 feet deep. The lobby and foyer will be 25 feet wide and 75 feet long and will be of Italian Renaissance design.

A $25,000 organ will be installed. The building also will contain four stores and twenty-four three-room efficiency apartments.

Ben Schwartz, manager of the Lowell Theatre, 5039 North Broadway, St. Louis, was held up at Newstead avenue and Delmar boulevard at 2:35 a. m. on January 2 and robbed of $101.90, including some of the receipts of his theatre. Schwartz's automobile was forced to stop in compliance with a boulevard stop sign. Two men in another automobile drove alongside and compelled him to hand over his money.

William Goldman, owner of the Kings, Rivoli and Queens theatres in St. Louis, was the guest of honor at a special testimonial dinner given by his employes and friends at Hotel Chase. He was presented with a handsome loving cup. Al Lichtman of New York City was toastmaster. About 150 attended. Goldman has had a most important part in the growth of the industry in St. Louis and the dinner was a testimonial to his efforts to give the city better picture entertainment.

Dave Nelson is scheduled to manage the new theatre in Maplewood, Mo., which will open about February 15. This house will accommodate 1,400.

George C. Hamilton, well known Marissa, Ill., exhibitor, who also is local territorial manager of the Durant Motor Car Company, has been promoted to western divisional manager for the big motor combination and will have charge of the territory from the Mississippi River to the Pacific Coast. He will make his headquarters in New York, but for the time being at least will retain his motion picture interests in Marissa, Ill., and also in the North.

The Keokuk, Ia., new theatre is scheduled to open on January 20. This house seats 1,100 and cost $250,000.

Pittsburgh

Larry Jacobs, managing director of the Hippodrome and Variety theatres on the North Side, Pittsburgh, has devised a contest known as the "Whattyecallum." It is described as the joining together of photoplay titles into a sentence that makes good sense. In the theatre program it is suggested that patrons use the titles of films that have recently played the theatres, or films that are booked for showing in the near future.

Charles E. Smith, for six months publicity director of the Haimovitz theatres at New Kensington, has resigned and has accepted a similar post with Ben Burke's Capitol Theatre at New Castle. Mr. Smith edited the "Movie Gossip" organ of the various Haimovitz theatres.

Mrs. Ada F. Bush, mother of J. Lester Bush, proprietor of the Strand and Grafton theatres at Grafton, W. Va., died on Christmas Day, aged 65 years. She had been ill with heart trouble for thirteen weeks and the end was not wholly unexpected, although it came as a great shock to a very wide circle of friends.

Loew's Aldine, Pittsburgh, has booked "The Thief of Bagdad" for its first local run at popular prices. The engagement will last for one week and probably will take place early in February.

Ben Browarsky, of the Associated Theatres, is attending to his duties once more, after having been confined to his home for a week suffering from the grippe.

The Olympic Theatre, Fifth avenue, downtown Pittsburgh, is presenting its patrons with handsome yearly wall calendars.

Somebody asked George Sidney, 11-year-old son of Louis K. Sidney, manager of the Aldine Theatre, Pittsburgh, who was the greatest showman in the picture theatre business. Young Sidney promptly answered: "My daddy." "But how about Rothafel?" queried the questioner. "Oh, he's good, too," replied the lad.

New Year's Week was Revival Week at Harry Davis' Schenley Theatre in the Oakland district, Pittsburgh. Program was changed each day, the following features being used: "Manslaughter," "The Cheat," "Adam's Rib," "Male and Female," "When Knighthood Was in Flower" and "The Humming Bird."

A new camera study of Clara Bow, who has completed an important role, "Capital Punishment," a Preferred picture presented by B. P. Schulberg.

Sol Samuels Buys Interest in Alpha Theatre, Atlanta

Sol Samuels by a deal which was closed Christmas week acquires a half interest in the Alpha Theatre, Atlanta, until now jointly owned by N. V. Darley and Mr. Samuels' brother, Sig Samuels. The deal was for the half interest of Mr. Darley, who retires from interest in the theatre and has become half owner of the Rivoli Theatre, Tampa, Fla., where he will make his future home, this being considered a much larger interest in a larger proposition than the Alpha, which is a second-run house. He will be active manager of the Tampa house.

With the acquisition of Mr. Darley's interest in the Alpha, Mr. Samuels becomes active manager. He formerly was manager of the leading theatre in Griffin, Fla., later coming to the Atlanta to take over management of the Alamo. Nos. 1 and 2. It is understood that under the new management the Alpha will have extensive improvements and that higher class pictures will be shown, although high-class Westerns will remain in favor.

Airdomes opening in January sounds like somebody's gone looney and reading backwards, but C. A. Hartman, president of the Hartman Amusement Company, St. Petersburg, Fla., visited Atlanta the past week and announced the opening of his new Airdome Theatre in St. Petersburg on January 1, 1925.

With the opening of the State Theatre (legitimate house) with a regular program of pictures, Raleigh, N. C., now has four large theatres in the downtown section besides the Grand, musical comedy house. The State is under the same management as the Superba, picture house, which theatre, at the same time the State was converted to pictures, lowered its admission prices 10 cents both matinee and night. Ralph H. DeBruler, formerly manager of the Howard Theatre, Atlanta, manages these theatres.

C. L. Henry of Charlotte has been appointed general manager of the Howard-Wells theatres, Wilmington, N. C., succeeding D. M. Bain, who left the organization last October to accept a position with the Stevenson Theatres after nine years service in Wilmington.

The Liberty Theatre, one of the Stevenson chain, Henderson, N. C., is open again after being closed since last August.

All employes of the Metropolitan Theatre, Atlanta, were made happy by a benificient Santa Claus in the person of Sig Samuels, who sent to each employe of the theatre having a family a big turkey, twenty-eight birds being thus distributed. Those who were unmarried were given a shiny new five dollar gold piece, the presentations coming three days before Christmas.

C. E. ("Rex") Beach, Jr., Carolina salesman for Progress Pictures, has turned exhibitor in addition to his duties with the Bromberg outfit, having taken over the lease on a theatre in Selma, N. C. It might be added, for his benefit, that he is playing Progress pictures in his house.

Among the exhibitors on Atlanta's film row the past week were: S. L. Castleberry, Belle and Savoy theatres, Gadsden, Ala.; A. R. McRae, Airdome Theatre, Sheffield, Ala.; C. A. Hartman, Hartman Amusement Co. St. Petersburg, Fla.

CONSTANCE BENNETT
A star in Paramount pictures.

Toledo, Ohio

Toledo showmen are unanimous in predicting a prosperous 1925 season. While the picture business in this territory up to the first of November was not up to the standard, since that time it has shown a gradual increase so that all the leading picture houses in this city will show a nice profit for November and December. That this good business will continue is manifested on all sides. The Willys Overland factory, which usually shuts down for at least two weeks or a month for inventory this year, cut their inventory down to a two-day lay-off and now is working both night and day at nearly capacity. Fifteen boats have also put up for the winter here which will furnish employments to hundreds at the Toledo Shipbuilding Yards, while the Toledo Furnace, Mallable Castings, Mather Spring and National Milling plants are all working full force.

With the idea of big business in sight, all of the leading photo playhouses have arranged super bookings for the first three months of the new year, including the big features of the Paramount, First National, Universal, Vitagraph and Fox.

A change in management at the Loew's Valentine was announced for the first of the year. Emil Gertsel, the former popular manager of this house, who recently has been in the East, has been recalled and A. L. Lake will return to his Baltimore interests.

Doc Horater intends to start out the new year with a bang at the Temple with the personal appearance of Warren Kerrigan. Mr. Kerrigan has been making quite a hit with the movie fans in this territory during the past months and capacity crowds are looked for during his Toledo engagement. In connection with Kerrigan Horater will show "The Fast Worker."

CORINNE GRIFFITH
First National star has begun work on "Declasse," in Hollywood.

Detroit

Charles H. Miles of the Miles theatres underwent a slight operation a few days ago but has fully recovered and plans as soon as physically possible to go south for the remainder of the winter. George Guise will be in charge of his interests.

Two theatre robberies occurred in Detroit during the past few days. Four hold-up men entered the Alhambra, one of the Kunsky neighborhood houses, and bound seven men while they rifled the safe of $200. The Castle Theatre lost about $400 when its safe was entered during the night.

M. R. Levy will build a theatre and office building in Lincoln Park, on the outskirts of the city, according to announcement last week. The theatre will seat about 700 and there will be stores on the ground floor. Ground will be broken February 1.

The Southwest

The following theatres changed hands the past ten days in Oklahoma: Strand, Texhoma, J. C. Secord to Ed Rowland; Royal, Nowata, Ray Heffner to Dudley Tucker; Electric, Commerce, Katio Workman to Harry McKee; Cozy, Arnette, A. R. Thompson to W. W. Jewett; Alhambra, Tulsa, J. R. McNally to L. M. Campbell; Favorite, Lindsay, Jess Hale to B. A. Jackson; Majestic, Coalton, Sarah Phelps to Joe Bock; Victory, Pauls Valley, J. S. Jenson to L. E. Brewer; Gordon, Shamrock, George Veil to E. O. Dunbar and Blair Theatre, Sulphur, Tom Blair to A. L. Ramsey.

Massachusetts

The first day of the new year will be a memorable one for the employes of the Elias M. Loew Theatres in New England, who gathered in his Capitol Theatre in Lynn, Mass., after the midnight shows in each of the Loew houses had ended. And the employes had more than to merely work at the midnight shows; they had a big interest in these special New Year's Eve performances. Mr. Loew gave each of his theatres to the house employes and the net receipts were divided among all those whose names are on the payrolls in the respective theatres. Where the business was just fair, and that condition prevailed only at a couple of the theatres, Mr. Loew personally made up the loss and saw to it that each employe received a Christmas—or rather, a New Year's—gift.

Mr. Loew proved a generous host at the Capitol. Every house on his circuit was represented. Breakfast was served and there was entertainment for all and dancing for those who cared to. Mr. Loew, in a speech, declared that he would have no less than six more theatres during this year. Each of his house managers were called upon for brief remarks and they and many other employes wished Mr. Loew good luck in 1925.

George A. Giles, managing director of the St. James Theatre in Boston and owner of a number of other theatres in Massachusetts, has recovered from his serious illness. Mr. Giles was confined to his home for ten weeks.

An attachment for $1,500 against Peter Donnelly, former manager of the Keith Theatre in Campello, has been filed by Metro-Goldwyn. The suit is an action of contract and is returnable in Superior Court in Plymouth.

Loew's Boston Theatres Company has declared a quarterly dividend of 1¼ per cent on the common stock ($25 par), payable February 1 to stock of record January 20. The stock thus is placed on a $1.25 annual basis, as compared with $1 previously.

The Atlantic Film Corporation, Inc., of Boston has been organized with a capital of $100,000. The incorporators are: H. Lang, J. Gray, H. Temple, H. Skinner, J. Callahan and P. Zuver.

Harry Smith, manager of the Victory Theatre in Holyoke, rapidly is recovering from a recent illness.

Emil Gerstle now is the manager of the Strand Theatre in Holyoke. He is well known in film circles in Maine, where he formerly was located.

Charles Ross of the Bijou Theatre in Fall River has a beautiful house. Between that and reviewing pictures before booking them he is a busy man. In fact, he's the same hustler in every way that he was when he had charge of the Lancaster and Fenway theatres in Boston.

The Salamanca Theatre Corporation of Massachusetts has been designated to conduct business in New York State. The capital stock consists of 500 shares of common, no par value.

Bernard Satz keeps on the jump and he has a very good reason for doing so. His theatres in Palmer and Ware get virtually all of his time and you can see it by the way the coins jingle at the box office windows.

Maine

The Star Theatre Building, a brick structure erected six years ago at a cost of $100,000, was destroyed by fire early the morning of December 29. Only the outside walls of the building remain. Steve Michaud of Van Buren and G. G. Vermette of Grand Isle were the owners. The fire, which was discovered at 2:30 a. m. by a policemen, is believed to have started from the furnace.

Rhode Island

Five patrons of the State Theatre in Pawtucket were injured when an eight-foot section of plaster fell from the ceiling during a performance on New Year's Day. They were taken to a hospital where they were treated for cuts, bruises and shock. Prompt action and coolness of the ushers prevented a panic. The State is operated by the Goldstein Brothers Amusement Company of Springfield, Mass.

The Westerly Opera House in Westerly, owned by David Novogrod, prominent Rhode Island exhibitor, was destroyed by fire early on the morning of Saturday, January 3. Mr. Novogrod recently had reopened the theatre after having made an expenditure of approximately $25,000 in improvements and alterations. The fire also destroyed three adjoining residences. The total loss is estimated at $150,000, with $100,000 set as the valuation of the theatre property. The Opera House, which seated 1,700, was erected in 1884 and for many years was known as the Bilven Opera House. Mr. Novogrod had conducted a vaudeville and film policy in the Opera house. Vaudeville performers on the bill at the time of the fire lost whatever of their property they had brought to the theatre, and included in this were musical instruments valued at $2,500.

Alton C. Emery has bought the interest of his brother, Burton A. Emery, in the control of the Emery, Majestic, Rialto and Modern theatres in Providence. Alton C. Emery and William J. Mahoney now are in sole charge of the theatres.

Wm. Benton Opens the Strand; Plattsburg, N. Y.; Seats 1,300

To the many fine picture theatres already in Northern New York another was added last week when the Strand, owned by William Benton of Saratoga Springs, was opened in Plattsburg under most auspicious conditions. The event was not confined to Plattsburg alone, for all Clinton County participated, hundreds driving in from outlying sections. Albany was also represented by several from along Film Row. Mr. Benton was not only the recipient of many expressions of congratulation from those attending the opening, but other exhibitors from all over the state, knowing and liking Mr. Benton, wired their best wishes.

The theatre has been in course of construction for several months. It seats 1,326, the downstairs portion accommodating 790 persons, while the balcony takes care of 536. There are six entrance doors of American walnut leading into the lobby. The general interior effect is of old rose and marble. There are no boxes. The walls are in panel-like effects, with the customary niches draped in old rose silk velours. W. Edgar Best of Albany will conduct the orchestra. The opening feature was "Hot Water," with an "Our Gang" for the comedy. The house will charge 20 cents for matinees, with 20 and 30 cents prevailing for the evening shows.

There is a strong possibility that John J. Walker of Schenectady, who ran the Barcli in that city until about a year ago, when he sold out, may soon re-enter the business. It is said that Mr. Walker plans to take over a theatre in Schenectady, but does not divulge which one.

Well, William Smalley has kept his promise, and according to a well founded rumor has just taken over two more theatres, making fifteen to his chain. He will take possession of one of the two on February 1, and the other one a bit later. The identity of the houses is not yet known.

E. J. Wolfe of Lowville, owner of the Bijeu there, recently offered to buy the Lowville Opera House, owned by the village and for many years a non-paying proposition. The taxpayers soon are going to vote a "Yes" or a "No" to Mr. Wolfe's offer.

The Albany Theatre, being ably handled these days by Noma and Walter Suckno, isn't overlooking any bets. While many of the theatres wished their patrons a "Merry Christmas," the only one that carried a "Happy New Year" in its lobby advertising was the Albany.

Gaspare Battaglia of Troy, who runs a couple of theatres in the Collar City and who has been in the business since 1912, is emphatic in his assertions that radio is hurting the business, and furthermore he doesn't look for any improvement. Mr. Battaglia charges a 10-cent admission to one of his houses and 10 and 15 cents to the other.

Now that the Christmas rush is over at the Rensselaer postoffice, Henry Windekenecht is planning to give more attention to the Bijou, which he is operating along with Jimmy Rose. It has been a pretty busy three weeks for Mr. Windekenecht, but his partner knows the game from A to Z and the house has been going along smoothly. The new draperies have arrived and within another week or so the house will look as spic and span as the best of them. As for Jimmy Rose, his friends remembered him at Christmas time with ties, handkerchiefs and stockings that will last him through the year.

"It is said that it is more blessed to give than to receive," remarked Morris Silverman of the Pearl and Happy Hour in Schenectady the other day as he signed three checks and handed them over to as many different film exchanges on Film Row. After repeating the words once more, Mr. Silverman expressed grave doubts as to their truthfulness, as he departed with a shake of the head.

It is said that the Capitol in Troy may soon reopen. The house closed last week when "Al" Bothner, who has been running it, went to Mohawk to handle the Strand. The theatre, under Mr. Bothner's management, has shown what it can do and now several are anxious to get hold of it.

Claude Fredericks of the Capitol in Pittsfield, Mass., was in town during the past week, driving over despite the storm. Mr. Fredericks is one of the live-wire boys among the exhibitors of this section, always optimistic, with a good word for everyone, and as a result, one of the most welcome visitors to Film Row.

Sam Hochstim of the Star in Hudson did a regular land-office business last week with "North of 36." Mr. Hochstim jumped his prices for the attraction, running it for four days to the biggest matinees and nights in the history of the house.

Bob Wagner of the Gateway in Little Falls and Assistant Manager Foley certainly became the talk of the town last week when they advertised that a "baby" would be given away on Wednesday night. Just before the presentation was made, Mr. Foley wheeled a baby carriage down the aisle where it was lifted to the stage. The "baby" proved to be a little pig.

"Janice Meredith" went over like a house afire at the Leland in Albany last week. Even the elite of the city, arriving at the theatre as early as 7:30 o'clock, were forced to stand or take seats in the second balcony. In fact, the crowds were so great on New Year's Day that Oscar Perrin was at his wits' end trying to accommodate everyone.

Buffalo, N. Y.

Exhibitors downtown and in the community theatres noticed a decided drop in their business New Year's night as a result of the big radio program broadcast from station WEAF when John McCormack and Lucrezia Bori sent their vioces into the quivering ether. The program was relayed to a dozen other stations, including the Federal station atop the Hotel Statler, Buffalo.

Vincent R. McFaul, manager of Shea's Hippodrome, announces that J. Warren Kerrigan is coming to Buffalo for personal appearances the week of January 25 in connection with the presentation of "Captain Blood." Mrs. Wallace Reid, star of "Broken Laws," will be in town in person to appear at Loew's State the week of February 23.

Michael Shea broke ground the past week for his elaborate $1,500,000 picture theatre in Main street, above Chippewa. Contracts have been let after much delay and it now looks as though things are going ahead in shipshape. It will be a year or more before the house will open. It will seat 4000 and have numerous innovations in theatre equipment, a mammoth organ and a 65-piece orchestra.

Betty Bronson, star in Paramount's "Peter Pan," greeted on arrival in New York by Jesse L. Lasky, first vice-president of Famous Players, and a large group of admirers.

News of Canadian Exhibitors

An exceptionally attractive district picture theatre has been opened at Montreal, Quebec, this being the Rialto Theatre on Park avenue, of which the United Amusements, Ltd., of Montreal is the lessee. The Rialto was opened to the public with a special inaugural performance last Saturday evening which was attended by His Worship, Mayor Duquette, who formally dedicated the theatre, and other prominent people. The manager of the Rialto is B. M. Garfield, who had charge of the Gayety Theatre, Montreal, for many years. For a long time Mr. Garfield has been secretary of the Montreal Theatre Managers Association. The Rialto is the latest addition to the group of ten modern picture theatres in Montreal controlled by United Amusements, Ltd. Incidentally, Famous Players Canadian Corporation, Ltd., has a substantial interest in United

When Cecil Cameron quit the Rialto Theatre, Edmonton, to become manager of the Regent Theatre of that city he claimed that the Rialto owed him considerable back salary and instituted suit against his former boss. In a statement of defense the Rialto owner claims that he agreed to pay Mr. Cameron the money only if Mr. Cameron made the Rialto a paying house. The case is to be heard shortly.

George Rotzky, manager of the Palace Theatre, Montreal, has reduced admission prices and decided to change programs twice weekly in future. Prices are cut 5 cents.

The civic officials of Edmonton have made formal application to the Province of Alberta for a share of the provincial amusement tax collected during 1924. The revenue derived by the province during the year through the amusement tax amounted to approximately $200,000, it is stated, as compared with $204,600 during 1923. In Manitoba the provincial amusement tax for 1924 totalled $325,000, this amount being almost identical with the 1923 total, it is announced.

One year after the Opera House had been destroyed at Kenora, in Northern Ontario, a fine new picture theatre was opened on the old site under the name of Palace Theatre, the enterprise being under the ownership and management of J. Derry. For the opening, a few days ago, representatives of practically all film exchanges in Winnipeg made the trip and the journey was enlivened by the presence of a ten-piece orchestra which had been engaged for the formal opening. The new Palace Theatre cost $75,000. It seats 800.

Connecticut

Henry Needles, managing director of the Strand and Princess theatres in Hartford, has been giving free tickets to the children of families listed with the Hartford agent of the Widows' Aid Fund. Approximately 200 children were given an opportunity to enjoy the movies as a result of the kindness of Mr. Needles.

A certificate of incorporation has been filed at the office of the Secretary of State by the United Theatres, Inc., of New Haven. The authorized capital is $50,000. Business will be begun with $9,000. The incorporators are: Samuel Shapiro, Joseph Liebman and Morris Nunes, all of New Haven.

Another certificate of incorporation filed is that of the Wilcox Amusement Company, Inc., of West Haven. The authorized capital is $125,000. Business will be started with $5,000. The incorporators are: Frank Wilcox and Frank S. Terrell of West Haven and Robert J. Woodruff of Orange.

The Fox Film Corporation, Ltd., Toronto, secured a judgment for $572 on its claim before Judge Tytler in the local court against C. A. Verral of the Euclid Theatre. The Fox company sued for $672 as payment due on films shown at the theatre. The defendant counter-claimed for $500 damages and asserted that there had been a breach of contract. The counter-claim was dismissed.

Manager Walter Davis of the Metropolitan Theatre, Winnipeg, Manitoba, has staged two "old clothes matinees" at the theatre in aid of local charities. The response was gratifying.

C. M. C. Brunton, formerly a bank manager at Sarnia, Ontario, became manager of the Auditorium, the big amusement centre of Ottawa, Ontario, on January 1, in succession to T. P. Gorman, who had had charge of the enterprise for the past year. Mr. Gorman is now suffering from a nervous breakdown.

The whole house staff of B. F. Keith's Theatre, Ottawa, Ontario, and various theatre representatives in the city were the guests of Manager J. M. and Mrs. Franklin at a dinner which was held on the stage of the theatre early New Year's Day.

There is a new cross-word puzzle in the issue every week of the souvenir program of twelve pages published by J. M. Franklin, manager of B. F. Keith's Theatre, Ottawa, Ontario. The house magazine also carries the solution for the previous week's puzzle.

Manager Leonard Bishop of the Regent Theatre, Ontario, has booked the "Thief of Bagdad" for the two weeks starting January 10. This is the first run of the Fairbanks fantasy in the Canadian Capital.

STRAIGHT from the SHOULDER REPORTS

A DEPARTMENT FOR THE INFORMATION OF EXHIBITORS

EDITED BY A. VAN BUREN POWELL

Associated Exhibitors

(Includes Selznick)

DAUGHTERS OF TODAY. Star, Patsy Ruth Miller. We had good luck with this picture and it pleased for us. Would advise booking where you have a real live trade. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Good audience appeal. General class town of 3,600. Admission 10-20. William A. Clark, Castle Theatre (400 seats), Havana, Illinois.

DEFYING DESTINY. Star, Monte Blue. Pretty fair program picture. Nothing to boost except two stars and they do fair work in this. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Fair audience appeal. Family and student class town of 4,000. Admission 10-25. R. J. Relf, Star Theatre (600 seats), Decorah, Iowa.

THREE MILES OUT. (5,700 feet). Star, Madge Kennedy. A dismal failure at the box office. Would class as a program picture. Fair tone. Possibly suitable for Sunday. Fair audience appeal. Family and student class town of 4,000. Admission 10-25. R. J. Relf, Star Theatre (600 seats), Decorah, Iowa.

TWENTY DOLLARS A WEEK. Star, George Arliss. This is a wow. For a real entertaining comedy I think it is all there. An Edgar Franklin story with a clever cast of characters who actually interpret it. Any town that can use a comedy drama with good moral tone will succeed on this. Henry W. Nauman, Moose Theatre, Elizabethtown, Pennsylvania.

TWENTY DOLLARS A WEEK. Star, George Arliss. Just fair. Pretty slow and draggy and story not strong enough for an artist like Arliss. Tone, okay. Sunday, yes. Fair audience appeal. Family and student class town of 4,000. Admission 10-25. R. J. Relf, Star Theatre (600 seats), Decorah, Iowa.

TWENTY DOLLARS A WEEK. Star, George Arliss. A show that will please some, but is no show for the action lovers. It did not have any drawing power and with the combination of a rainy night we did poor business. Better class town of 4,500. Admission 10-15. C. A. Anglemire, "Y" Theatre (4,500 seats), Nazareth, Pennsylvania.

F. B. O.

BLOW YOUR OWN HORN. (6,315 feet). Star cast. Just fair, was the general verdict. Not much pulling power. City of 100,000. Admission 10-20. Al C. Werner, Royal Theatre, Reading, Pennsylvania.

FIGHTING COWARD. (6,501 feet). Star, Fred Thomson. This was a good one. We have never run a bad Thomson picture yet. The very thing for a small town. Book him, boost him. Not for Sunday. Audience appeal ninety-five per cent. Admission 10-25. S. A. Hendrix, Princess Theatre (330 seats), Cotton Plant, Arkansas.

GIRL OF THE LIMBERLOST. (6,500 feet). Star cast. A good picture but not as good as our patrons thought it would be. We got a very bad print on this one. Tone good. Suitable for Sunday. Ninety per cent audience appeal. Admission 10-25. S. A. Hendrix, Princess Theatre (330 seats), Cotton Plant, Arkansas.

JUDGMENT OF THE STORM. (6,329 feet). Star cast. Here's a picture with heart interest and action and a thrilling story, and another one of those real all-star casts. If seventy-five per cent of your people don't like this one I'll pay for it. Get it by all means. City and country class, town of 3,000. Admission 10-30. George W. Walther, Dixie Theatre (500 seats), Kerrville, Texas.

LOVE PIRATE. Star cast. Passable program picture, was the verdict on this one. City of 100,000. Admission 10-20. Al. C. Werner, Royal Theatre, Reading, Pennsylvania

MILLIONAIRE COWBOY. Star, Lefty Flynn. Just a little above the average western picture. Would have been better if it had more pep. F. B. O. paper will put the picture over. Tone, good. Sunday, no. Good audience appeal. Small town class town of 300. Admission 10-25. Roy E. Cline, Osage Theatre (200 seats), Osage, Oklahoma.

NORTH OF NEVADA. (5,000 feet). Star, Fred Thomson. One hundred per cent. western. Silver King the horse was great. Mix and Tony will have to step some if they beat this pair, better than lots of specials. Tone, yes. Great attendance. All classes town of 1,000. Admission 10-20. A. E. Rogers, Temple Theatre (250 seats), Dexter, New York.

SILENT STRANGER. (5 reels). Star, Fred Thomson. Another success for this star. Tone okay. Sunday, questionable. Audience appeal fine for western fans. Oil field class and farmers, town of 1,000. Admission 10-25. H. E. Schlichter, Liggett Theatre (600 seats), Madison, Kansas.

SPIRIT OF THE U. S. A. (8,312 feet). Star cast. This pleased one hundred per cent. and proved to be a wonderful picture. Tone, okay. Sunday, yes. Good audience appeal. Small town and country class town of 450. Admission 10-30. A. F. Thomas, Pastime Theatre (250 seats), Almyra, Arkansas.

SWORDS AND THE WOMAN. Star cast. Another foreign made picture that does not amount to much. This kind of stuff does not go in a small town. Tone, doubtful. Sunday, no. No audience appeal. Small town class, town of 300. Admission 10-25. Roy E. Cline, Osage Theatre (200 seats), Osage, Oklahoma.

THELMA. (6 reels). Star, Ethel Clayton. Quite the best picture I have ever seen from F. B. O. Scenery and action well directed and story good to tie to. Almost everyone's read the book. Good attendance with good moral tone. Henry W. Nauman, Moose Theatre, Elizabethtown, Pennsylvania.

THUNDERING HOOFS. (5,015 feet). Star, Fred Thomson. Good western. Thomson is a coming star if they will just keep him in westerns and give him good direction. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Good audience appeal. Coal miners town of 800. Admission 10-20. E. B. Rea, Palace Theatre (468 seats), Velier, Illinois.

THUNDERING HOOFS. (5,015 feet). Star, Fred Thomson. Extra good western and a credit to run. Silver King registers, as usual, a hundred per cent. Appeal and tone fine Draw small town class, town of 250. Admission 10-25. Roy E. Cline, Osage Theatre (200 seats), Osage, Oklahoma.

VANITY'S PRICE. (6,124 feet). Star, Anna Q. Nilsson. This is a corking good picture and lavishly produced. Anna Nilsson is well liked by our patrons. "Vanity's Price" played to good business and was well received. Should prove good box office bet anywhere. Tone fair. Sunday, yes. Good audience appeal. City of 250,000. Admission 10-25-40. Jean Darnell, Capitol Theatre (1,044 seats), Dallas, Texas.

WOMAN WHO SINNED. Star, Mae Busch. An excellent production with strong moral. Well acted and pleased one hundred per cent. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Good audience appeal. Small town and country class town of 450. Admission 10-30. A. F. Thomas, Pastime Theatre (250 seats), Almyra, Arkansas.

First National

BAD MAN. (6,404 feet). Star, Holbrook Blinn. Was voted fair entertainment and all were satisfied. City of 100,000. Admission 10-20. Al C. Werner, Royal Theatre, Reading, Pennsylvania.

CHASTITY. Star, Katherine McDonald. Was voted fair by the majority and a few women went so far as to call it wonderful. Wasn't so wonderful in pulling power. Admission 10-20. Al C. Werner, Royal Theatre, Reading, Pennsylvania.

CYTHEREA. (7,400 feet). Star, Irene Rich. Good picture, but did not draw. Poor title for small town patronage. Story good; picture made for high class audience. Lost money on this one. Fair tone; appeal the same. Sunday, no. Draw all classes, town of 6,000. Admission 10-20-30. Frank H. Watton, Park Theatre (600 seats), Lebanon, New Hampshire.

FLAMING YOUTH. (8,474 feet). Star, Colleen Moore. Everybody seemed anxious to praise this picture and it showed satisfactorily at the box office. City of 100,000. Admission 10-20. Al. C. Werner, Royal Theatre, Reading, Pennsylvania.

FLOWING GOLD. (8,005 feet). Star, Milton Sills. Splendid entertainment. Has good box office value. Milton Sills is rapidly attaining a high place in the esteem of my patrons. His name at the head of the cast is of itself a good box office magnet. Tone good. Sunday, yes. Audience appeal eighty-five per cent. W. J. Powell, Lonet Theatre, Wellington, Ohio.

FLOWING GOLD. (8,005 feet). Star cast. Good. Tone good. City of 10,000. H. V. Smoots, Vine Theatre (600 seats), Mt. Vernon, Ohio.

GOLD FISH. (7,145 feet). Star, Constance Talmadge. About the poorest comedy drama that we have had. Conny was not her usual self in this and did not put over what she had. Better get her some stories or lay her on the shelf with a few of the other old-timers. City of 18,500. Admission 20-40. Ben L. Morris, Temple and Olympic theatres, Bellaire, Ohio.

IN HOLLYWOOD WITH POTASH AND PERLMUTTER. (6,700 feet). Star cast. Just fair. Shown Christmas Day and no business. H. V. Smoots, Vine Theatre (600 seats), Mt. Vernon, Ohio.

ONE CLEAR CALL. (7,450 feet). Star, Milton Sills. A good picture, well acted. More on the solemn type, no great command of fast action, but will please. Fair tone; yes for Sunday. Electric Theatre, Lowry City, Missouri.

POLLY OF THE FOLLIES. Star, Constance Talmadge. A dandy picture. Good story true to life, as it sure hits these cranks on movies. Be sure and play this one. Farm and small town class. Admission 10-20. W. F. Denney, Electric Theatre (250 seats), Lowry City, Missouri.

SON OF THE SAHARA. (8 reels). Star, Bert Lytell. A very good melodrama of the desert; not the "Sheik" kind but a picture teeming with action and thrills galore. Sarewe certainly knows how to handle this type of picture. Tone okay. Sunday, yes. Good audience appeal. Suburban class, town of 2,000. Admission 10-30. H. Warren Ribie, Mayfield Theatre (210 seats), Mayfield, California.

SON OF THE SAHARA. (8 reels). Star, Claire Windsor. Here is a picture which pleased here as much as any picture I have played in a long time. I ran a trailer on it and I guess it drew them out as I had a good house. T. L. Barnett, Finn's Theatre (600 seats), Jewett City, Connecticut.

WHY MEN LEAVE HOME. (8 reels). Star, Lewis Stone. Title is catchy and picture very entertaining. Did more business second night than the first, which is very unusual in this theatre. Picture by picture, I think First National's product ranks higher in entertainment value than the output of any concern during the year 1924. Tone fair. Sunday, no. Audience appeal eighty per cent. W. J. Powell, Lonet Theatre, Wellington, Ohio.

WHY MEN LEAVE HOME. (8 reels). Star cast. They liked this one and said so. A very good cast and nice production, well directed. Tone fair. Sunday, yes. Good audience appeal. Family and student class, town of 4,000. Admission 10-25. R. J. Reif, Star Theatre (600 seats), Decorah, Iowa.

WHY MEN LEAVE HOME. (8 reels). Star, Helene Chadwick. The discriminating said it was a wonderful picture and it was enjoyed immensely. City of 100,000. Admission 10-20. Al. C. Werner, Royal Theatre, Reading, Pennsylvania.

Between Ourselves

A get-together place where we can talk things over

Read our good friend's New Year Resolutions. L. O. Davis sends them in and they're a model.

How about yours? Shoot 'em in, folks. Let's see what you're going to do with your 1925.

Fox

ARIZONA EXPRESS. (6,516 feet). Very good feature, but rented too high for this small town. Good tone and appeal. Sunday, yes, here. Draw farmers and merchants, town of 1,650. Mrs. J. B. Travelle, Elite Theatre, Placerville, California.

EYES OF THE FOREST. (5 reels). Star, Tom Mix. A Mix with lots of action. Mix fans well satisfied. Keep Mix in action pictures like this or westerns and then he need not be afraid of any of them. Tone good. Sunday, no. Audience appeal eighty-five per cent. All classes, town of 2,800. Admission 15-25. David W. Strayer, Mt. Joy Theatre (250 seats), Mt. Joy, Pennsylvania.

VAGABOND TRAIL. (4,302 feet). Star, Buck Jones. Not up to the Jones standard. Very sorry for Jones; Fox ought to put him in something better. Appeal ninety per cent. Admission 10-25. S. A. Hendrix, Princess Theatre (330 seats), Cotton Plant, Arkansas.

YOU CAN'T GET AWAY WITH IT. (6,152 feet). Star, Percy Marmont. A good program picture with a good moral tone. Not a special by any means. Our patrons didn't like the way it ended. Yes for Sunday. Appeal eighty per cent. Admission 10-25. S. A. Hendrix, Princess Theatre (330 seats), Cotton Plant, Arkansas.

Metro-Goldwyn

CORDELIA THE MAGNIFICENT. (6,800 feet). Star, Clara Kimball Young. A very good picture, but with another star it might have been better received. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Audience appeal, seventy-five per cent. All classes town of 2,800. Admission 15-25. David W. Strayer, Mt. Joy Theatre (250 seats), Mt. Joy, Pennsylvania.

DON'T DOUBT YOUR HUSBAND. (5,510 feet). Star, Viola Dana. A nice little program offering, lots of laughs; true to life for some of us married men. Tone good. Sunday, yes. Audience appeal seventy-five per cent. All classes, town of 2,800. Admission 15-25. David W. Strayer, Mt. Joy Theatre (250 seats), Mt. Joy, Pennsylvania.

GREAT WHITE WAY. (10,000 feet). Star cast. A picture that will please almost anyone. Covers such a variety of activities that its audience appeal would rate close to one hundred per cent. The inclusion of celebrities in the sporting, newspaper and theatrical world added greatly to the interest of the production. Tone good. Sunday, yes. Audience appeal ninety per cent. W. J. Powell, Lonet Theatre, Wellington, Ohio.

GREAT WHITE WAY. (10,000 feet). Star cast. A good picture that drew fairly well and pleased most of them who saw it. Wouldn't pay too much for it. Would class a good entertainment. The Cosmopolitan's are always expensively made pictures. Tone, okay. Sunday, yes. Good audience appeal. General class town of 3,600. Admission 10-20. William A. Clark, Sr., Castle Theatre (400 seats), Havana, Illinois.

GREAT WHITE WAY. (10 reels.) Star cast. Everyone praised this one, but talk about other companies putting ads in their picture. This one is all advertisement, but it's good, so why worry except that we have to pay big to advertise some one else. Tone, good. Sunday, no. Audience appeal, one hundred per cent. All classes town of 2,800. Admission 15-25. D. W. Strayer, Mt. Joy Theatre (250 seats), Mt. Joy, Pennsylvania.

HAPPINESS. (7,700 feet). Star, Laurette Taylor. We had no complaints so far on this one; some laughs, that's all. Very few people will be able to practice what this picture preaches. Tone good. Sunday, yes. Audience appeal eighty per cent. All classes, town of 2,800. Admission 15-25. David W. Strayer, Mt. Joy Theatre (250 seats), Mt. Joy, Pennsylvania.

HEART BANDIT. (4,900 feet). Star, Viola Dana. Just an average attraction; didn't amount to a great deal, although no kicks were registered. Some action in the last reel. Attendance poor. Moral tone not bad. Admission 20-30. Henry W. Nauman, Moose Theatre, Elizabethtown, Pennsylvania.

LITTLE OLD NEW YORK. (10,000 feet). Star, Marion Davies. A very fine piece of work, that is a credit to both producer and star. Pleased everyone. A little old, but print was good. Tone okay. Sunday, yes. High appeal. Draw better class, city of 14,000. Admission 10-35. E. W. Collins, Grand Theatre (700 seats), Jonesboro, Arkansas.

MADEMOISELLE MIDNIGHT. (6,778 feet). Star, Mae Murray. After seeing "Fashion Row" and other trash from this factory I must say I was surprised, and not alone, most of the audience agrees with me, I believe, that this is more of the type of picture to appeal in a small town than high and mighty tinsel stuff. Henry W. Nauman, Moose Theatre, Elizabethtown, Pennsylvania.

NAVIGATOR. (5,600 feet). Star, Buster Keaton. The best feature length comedy ever in this house. They laughed as they did years ago just like they were tickled. Sure is a bear and it should go over anywhere in the world. Buster is some coming boy. He is already here. No one has anything on him. He is different. Funny. Active and a live wire. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Appeals to everyone. Best class town of 8,000. Admission 10-30. Ned Pedigo, Pollard Theatre, Guthrie, Oklahoma.

NELLIE THE BEAUTIFUL CLOAK MODEL. (7,000 feet). Star, Mae Busch. After about half the picture was shown the story began to pick up and toward the end didn't actually bore the spectators. However, the mile-a-minute melodrama isn't evident all the way through. Will pass if you boost it. Average house. Tone, good. Suitable for Sunday in spots. Henry W. Nauman, Moose Theatre, Elizabethtown, Pennsylvania.

ONE NIGHT IN ROME. (8,883 feet). Star,

Ned's Note

Dear Van:—I received my World this morning and I want to tell you that it was mighty fine of you to give me the publicity you did in the reports column in fixing that bonehead that I made about the "Covered Wagon," and the "Sea Hawk." "It goes to show that you are for all of us fellows and again I say it was fine of you to give your time and space to help me out, and you did it in the biggest and best way. Thanks, very much."—Ned Pedigo, Pollard Theatre, Guthrie, Oklahoma.

Laurette Taylor. This was a more or less involved affair that somehow didn't hold the interest of most spectators. As usual, the footage was padded. Average attendance, with passable moral tone. Henry W. Nauman, Moose Theatre, Elizabethtown, Pennsylvania.

PLEASURE MAD. (7,547 feet). Star cast. Great picture but no business. No fault of picture. Nothing seems to get them out these days. Good tone. Good audience appeal. All classes, but white only. Admission 10-20-25. W. H. Odom, Pastime Theatre (250 seats), Sandersville, Georgia.

REJECTED WOMAN. (7,761 feet). Star, Conrad Nagel. Well, well, the woman pays. An indiscretion of a woman who don't love her husband, a separation and then the husband forces her to live with the man she has run away to meet, until the final clinch. Some people liked it, others didn't, but a small town won't be likely to rave about it. Poor house. Henry W. Nauman, Moose Theatre, Elizabethtown, Pennsylvania.

THREE WEEKS. (7,500 feet). Star, Aileen Pringle. Patrons said this is the best we have had in some time. It is well done, with plenty of space and everything. Doubtful tone. Small class town of 3,000. Admission 15-30. P. L. Vann, Opera House (600 seats), Greenville, Alabama.

THREE WEEKS. (7,500 feet). Star, Aileen Pringle. This is an Elinor Glyn special. If your audience likes long drawn out shots of a woman who doesn't know what she wants, but wants the wealthy young man to give it to her, give 'em this, and they'll be cured. Some walked out and others snorted while some snored. Might be made interesting if cut down to two reels. Poor attendance. Moral tone not as bad as expected. Henry W. Nauman, Moose Theatre, Elizabethtown, Pennsylvania.

THREE WISE FOOLS. (6,946 feet). Special cast. A delightful picture, perfectly done. Ought to satisfy any audience. Clean, wholesome, exhilarating. Tone fine. Sunday, yes. High appeal. Draw better class, city of 14,000. Admission 10-35. E. W. Collins, Grand Theatre (700 seats), Jonesboro, Arkansas.

TRUE AS STEEL. (7 reels). Star, Aileen Pringle. Only a fair program picture, about thirty per cent. thought it was good. Nothing of interest to anyone. Payed too much for this. Good tone. Sunday, yes. No audience appeal. All classes town of 2,800. Admission 15-25. D. W. Strayer, Mt. Joy Theatre (250 seats), Mt. Joy, Pennsylvania.

UNINVITED GUEST. (6,145 feet). Star cast. Here is one picture that more than pleased everyone. Excellent story. Photography wonderful. Scenes in color were beautiful. Drew well and pleased. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Very good audience appeal. High class city of 350,000. Admission, twenty cents. Louis Markun, Dream Theatre (500 seats), Indianapolis, Indiana.

WILD ORANGES. (7 reels). Star, Virginia Valli. Everybody said isn't it a peculiar picture. To me it was nothing to rave about. This show did not draw enough business to pay expenses for us. Tone, fair. Not a family picture. Fair audience appeal. Better class town of 4,500. Admisison 10-15. C. A. Anglemire, "Y" Theatre (4,500 seats), Nazareth, Pennsylvania.

WILD ORANGES. (7 reels). Star, Frank Mayo. Although somewhat weird, this picture should please as it is a very strange and mysterious story, very exciting at times. The fight between the hero and villain is very thrilling and realistic. Tone okay. Sunday, yes. Audience appeal average. Mixed class, town of 3,000. Admission 20-25. T. L. Barnett, Finn's Theatre (600 seats), Jewett City, Connecticut.

Paramount

BEDROOM WINDOW. (4,550 feet). Star cast. A very clever mystery comedy that pleased everyone. Poorly named for my audience, but pleased those who saw it, and advertised as a detective story with a lot of comedy it will please all who come. Low-brows are apt to anticipate spicy bedroom window stuff and will be disappointed, but majority will enjoy it very much. Sunday, yes. Town of 3,200. Admission 10-20-30. Charles Lee Hyde, Grand Theatre (500 seats), Pierre, South Dakota.

CODE OF THE SEA. (6,308 feet). Star, Jacqueline Logan. They say that this picture has an unusual story, and maybe it has. The best thing I can say about it is that the story is fairly well entertaining all the way through. Don't like Rod LaRocque in this part. Fair attendance and good moral tone. Admission 20-30. Henry W. Nauman, Moose Theatre, Elizabethtown, Pennsylvania.

CODE OF THE SEA. (6,038 feet). Star cast. Nice little program picture. Bought right. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Good audience appeal. Tourist class town of 2,400. Admission 15-25. S. L. Taylor, Kozy Theatre (250 seats), Pass Christian, Mississippi.

CONFIDENCE MAN. (6,500 feet). Star, Thomas Meighan. A good feature which pleased one hundred per cent. Meighan is a favorite in our town and draws well. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Mixed class town of 1,800. Admission twenty-five cents. Fred S. Widenor, Opera House (492 seats), Belvidere, New Jersey.

CONFIDENCE MAN. (6,500 feet). Star, Thomas Meighan. Not up to the usual standard of this popular star. Nevertheless it gave fair satisfaction. Tone, all right. Sunday, yes. Fair audience appeal. Residential and factory class town of 7,000. Admission 15-25. H. W. Gillespie, St. Croix Opera House (800 seats), Calais, Maine.

CONFIDENCE MAN. (6,500 feet). Star, Thomas Meighan. Below the Meighan standard. However, it pleases. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Good audience appeal. Rural class town of 250. J. J. Halley, San Andreas Theatre, San Andreas, California.

COVERED WAGON. Star cast. This is a good picture but it is too high for a small town. Did a poor business on it. Good tone. Sunday, yes. Audience appeal, okay. All classes town of 1,200. Admission 25-50. Palace Theatre (800 seats), Blackwell, Oklahoma.

COVERED WAGON. (9,407 feet). Star cast. No need to comment on this one.

An Error

Last week's Pathe Reports were erroneously allowed to run in after Paramount's, without the distinguishing heading "Pathe."

I am sorry about this and apologize to Pathe and to "Our Gang."

The first Pathe report was on "The Battling Orioles." Please note, so you'll be able to locate the Pathe reports when you look them up in future.

Everyone was more than satisfied. It gained extra prestige for our house. We did not break any records for this town but we were satisfied with results. The people will go to see this more than once. All classes town of 2,800. Admission 15-25. David W. Strayer, Mt. Joy Theatre (250 seats), Mt. Joy, Pennsylvania.

COVERED WAGON. (9,407 feet). Star, J. Warren Kerrigan. Ran this one two days and plugged it quite a bit. First day opened to good sized house, and didn't making running expenses on second day. As far as the picture's concerned, one doesn't need to say anything. Henry W. Nauman, Moose Theatre, Elizabethtown, Pennsylvania.

DANGEROUS MONEY. (6,864 feet). Star, Bebe Daniels. A mighty poor excuse for a picture. Pleased very few and had very little if anything to comment on. Pity such stories are used. Bebe has the talent. All she needs is some capable director and a story worth while. Tone, bad. Not suitable for Sunday. Appeals, to few. Best class town of 800. Admission, 10-30. Ned Pedigo, Pollard Theatre, Guthrie, Oklahoma.

EMPTY HANDS. (6,976 feet). Star, Jack Holt. This is an excellent combination outdoor-society picture. The scenery is especially fine. It is a picture of the north woods and has just the right amount of romantic adventure to appeal to all classes. Norma Shearer in a bath robe and in a bathing suit is adorable. The paper is good. It is easy to advertise. Tone, okay. Good audience appeal. All classes in town of 3,000. Admission 10-30. M. W. Larmour, National Theatre (450 seats), Graham, Texas.

EMPTY HANDS. (6,976 feet). Star, Jack Holt. This is a far fetched entertaining story of a New York City couple stranded in the wilds of the Canadian rockies. The canoe scenes are as well taken as I have ever seen. Love theme well developed and the picture generally satisfactory, though the first reel shows New York high society a little lower than I think it actually is. Tone, poor. Sunday, no. Town of 3,200. Admission 10-20-30. Charles Lee Hyde, Grand Theatre (500 seats), Pierre, South Dakota.

ENEMY SEX. (7,861 feet). Star, Betty Compson. Excellent audience picture for all that like a real jazz picture. Star and support fit their parts to perfection. Very good tone. Not suitable for Sunday. Good audience appeal. Residential and factory class town of 7,000. Admission 15-25. H. W. Gillespie, St. Croix Opera House (800 seats), Calais, Maine.

EXCITERS. (5,939 feet). Star, Bebe Daniels. A very interesting picture. Did not do much business, but not fault of picture. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Good audience appeal. Tourist class town of 2,400. Admission 15-25. S. L. Taylor, Kozy Theatre (250 seats). Pass Christian, Mississippi.

FAIR WEEK. (5 reels). Star, Walter Heirs. This is an entertaining little comedy drama that can be shown in any house and to anyone, and will entertain them. They may not rave over it, but no one will complain, and I enjoyed it. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Universal audience appeal. Town of 3,200. Admission 10-20-30. Charles Lee Hyde, Grand Theatre (500 seats), Pierre, South Dakota.

FAIR WEEK. (5 reels). Star, Walter Hiers. Strange enough the fans seemed to like this. Maybe because of the comedy slants about rubes. Just a program picture that will get by to till in with. Tone, good. Average attendance. Admission 20-30. Henry W. Nauman, Moose Theatre, Elizabethtown, Pennsylvania.

FEET OF CLAY. (9,746 feet). Star cast. Great picture in every respect. Many people went out their way to tell us how wonderful this was. Can highly recommend this feature to any exhibitors who are looking for something extraordinary. Good tone. Sunday, think so. Good audience appeal. All classes, white only. Admission 10-20-25. W. H. Odom, Pastime Theatre (250 seats), Sandersville, Georgia.

FEET OF CLAY. (9,746 feet). Star cast. I consider this picture a masterpiece. Death as pictured by DeMille in the concluding scenes of this picture will be the talk of the town for weeks to come. Based on the receipts, the rental was way too high, but it is worth it even if I did lose money. Tone, okay. Sunday, yes. Good audience appeal. All classes in town of 3,000. Admission 10-30. M. W. Larmour, National Theatre (450 seats), Graham, Texas.

FEMALE. (6,176 feet. Star, Betty Compson. This feature pleased majority, but must say that personally did not think that it was any too good. Tone, fair. Sunday, yes. Mixed class town of 1,800. Admission twenty-five cents. Fred S. Widenor, Opera House (492 seats), Belvidere, New Jersey.

FIGHTING COWARD. (6,501 feet). Star cast. Very good comedy drama. Will please any audience. Tone, fair. Sunday, yes. Good attdience appeal. Rural class town of 250. J. J. Halley, San Andreas Theatre, San Andreas, California.

FLAMING BARRIERS. (5,821 feet). Star cast. Very ordinary picture. Don't see how Paramount puts out such. Tone good. Sunday, yes. No audience appeal. Tourist class town of 2,400. Admission 15-25. S. L. Taylor, Kozy Theatre (250 seats). Pass Christian, Mississippi.

FORBIDDEN PARADISE. (7,000 feet). Star, Pola Negri. Miss Negri's best so far. Not suitable for Sunday. Fine audience appeal. Oil field class and farmers town of 1,000. Admission 10-25. H. E. Schlichter, Liggett Theatre (600 seats), Madison, Kansas.

FORBIDDEN PARADISE. (7,000 feet). Star, Pola Negri. Very good feature. Fine acting. Good tone. Sunday, yes. Good audience appeal. Farmers and merchants town of 1,650. Mrs. J. B. Travelle, Elite Theatre, Placerville, California.

GUILTY ONE. (5,635 feet). Star, Agnes Ayres. A very good mystery drama which remains a mystery to the very end. The plot is the eternal triangle but treated from an entirely different angle from the usual, and is highly entertaining. A splendid cast, excellent scenario, artistic scenes and fine direction by Joseph Henaberry. Something for the folks who can enjoy a real photoplay. City and country class town of 3,000. Admission 10-30. George W. Walther, Dixie Theatre (500 seats), Kerrville, Texas.

HER LOVE STORY. (6,736 feet). Star, Gloria Swanson. Improbable story. Pleases majority, but rental too high to make anything on it. Think that Gloria is too good to waste in such a feature. Good tone. Sunday, yes. Mixed class town of 1,800. Admission twenty-five cents. Fred S. Widenor, Opera House (492 seats), Belvidere, New Jersey.

LAW OF THE LAWLESS. (6,387 feet). Star, Dorothy Dalton. Very good picture. Dorothy Dalton liked here. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Fine audience appeal. Tourist class town of 2,400. Admission 15-25. S. L. Taylor, Kozy Theatre (250 seats). Pass Christian, Mississippi.

MANHANDLED. (6,998 feet). Star, Gloria Swanson. A poor picture. Too high priced. Suitable for rich people only. Don't pay too much for this picture. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Audience appeal, okay. All classes town of 1,200. Admission 25-50. Palace Theatre (800 seats), Blackwell, Oklahoma.

MANHANDLED. (6,998 feet). Star, Gloria Swanson. Hardly up to the standard set by Miss Swanson in her last two, but a good picture. Business just fair, as it seems as though nothing will draw now the way conditions are. We all paid too much for the big forty. Tone, none. Okay for Sunday. Good audience appeal. Small town class town of 5,000. Admission 10-30. L. O. Davis, Virginia Theatre (700 seats), Hazard, Kentucky.

MANHATTAN. (6,415 feet). Star, Richard Dix. A good picture. A little above the program picture. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Good audience appeal. Farmers and merchants town of 1,650. Mrs. J. B. Travelle, Elite Theatre, Placerville, California.

MAN WHO FIGHTS ALONE. (6,337 feet). Star, William Farnum. Probably the classiest production ever given William Farnum, but failed to pull. Showed to sixty people. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Fair audience appeal. Family and student class town of 4,000. Admission 10-25. R. J. Relf, Star Theatre (600 seats), Decorah, Iowa.

MERTON OF THE MOVIES. (7,655 feet). Star, Gdenn Hunter. Was a little disappointed in this picture, although it pleased. To me it seemed cheap looking. It did not do very well on account of the weather, but those who saw it seemed to liked it. All classes in town of 3,000. Admission 10-30. M. W. Larmour, National Theatre (450 seats), Graham, Texas.

MONSIEUR BEAUCAIRE. (9,932 feet). Star, Rudolph Valentino. Positively not a small town picture. I say for the hundredth time that the costume picture has seen its day. Give us Valentino in the type of picture he should have and we will make money, but never on this stuff. Sunday, yes. Audience appeal, very poor. Small town class town of 5,000. Admission 10-30. L. O. Davis, Virginia Theatre (700 seats), Hazard, Kentucky.

NEXT CORNER. (7,081 feet). Star, Lon Chaney. Personally I liked it, but it only pleased about fifty per cent of my patrons. I looked at the tips of you boys and only ran it one day. Town and rural class, town of 2,500. Admission 10-25. S. H. Rich, Rich Theatre (450 seats), Montpelier, Idaho.

NORTH OF 36. (7,908 feet). Star cast. Extra good. Tone good. Sunday, yes. Fine audience appeal. City of 10,000. H. V. Smoots, Vine Theatre (600 seats), Mt. Vernon, Ohio.

SAINTED DEVIL. (8,633 feet). Star, Rudolph Valentino. Rudy back in his role of Spanish love. This is a very good production from most angles. However, where Valentino is not popular it will be a decided flop. There is, of course, some similarity between it and the "Four Horsemen." The picture as a whole lacks action and there is a tendency to hold the close-ups of the star too long. Tone okay. Sunday, yes. Good audience appeal. Suburban class, town of 2,000. Admission 10-30. H. Warren Rible, Mayfield Theatre (210 seats), Mayfield, California.

SAINTED DEVIL. (8,623 feet). Star, Rudolph Valentino. I considered it a fairly good picture, but it failed to draw. All classes in town of 3,000. Admission 10-30.

New Year Resolutions—Make Any?

"Dear Van and Gang:—A new year is here and all we starving exhibitors are making our resolutions for the year, so don't you think it would be a good idea to have a kind of forum for a few issues in the report department for us to express our new resolutions? Am sure a lot of us want to start the new year better and mistakes of one exhibitor in many cases are the mistakes of all of us, so our resolutions expressed through your columns would help many of us.

"I am sending you a copy of mine now. Ask the other fellows for theirs; am sure they would all be interesting in your department.

"And say, I am out of report blanks and I have several interesting pictures to tell what I think of too.

"Here's wishing you and all the staff from Mr. Welch down to the Janitors the very happiest year of your lives."—L. O. DAVIS, Virginia Amusement Co., Hazard, Kentucky.

Mr. Davis' Resolutions

ON THE DAWN OF THIS YEAR, 1925, I DO HEREBY RESOLVE THAT IN THE FUTURE I WILL DO MY BEST TO MAKE A LITTLE MONEY, BE HAPPY AND TRY AND HELP MAKE THE WORLD A LITTLE BETTER PLACE TO LIVE IN.

IN THE CONDUCT OF MY BUSINESS I RESOLVE TO PAY FOR PICTURES ONLY WHAT THEY ARE WORTH TO ME, SETTING A FAIR AND EQUITABLE PRICE ON EVERY ONE I BUY, USING ONLY THE PICTURES THAT ARE GOOD AND WILL PLEASE MY PATRONS.

I MARK THIS JANUARY 1 AS A MILESTONE AND STARTING POINT IN MY CAREER AS AN EXHIBITOR, BLOTTING OUT ALL THE UNPLEASANTNESS AND MISTAKES OF THE PAST, LETTING MY EXPERIENCE AND COOL JUDGMENT BE MY ONLY GUIDE IN THE CONDUCT OF MY FUTURE ACTIONS.

I RESOLVE TO LISTEN TO EVERY MAN'S ADVICE, WEIGH IT, ACCEPTING WHAT I THINK IS GOOD BUT ACTING ONLY UPON MY OWN CONCLUSIONS.

I RESOLVE NOT TO INVEST IN ANYTHING BUT MY OWN BUSINESS AND TO LEAVE OUTSIDE PROPOSITIONS ALONE. I WILL PLAY FAIR WITH THE SOURCE OF MY EXISTENCE AND GIVE IT EVERY OUNCE OF MY ENERGY.

I RESOLVE TO KEEP EVERMOST IN MY MIND THAT ALL TRUE AND LASTING SUCCESS IS BUILT UPON A FOUNDATION OF SERVICE AND WITH THIS THOUGHT ALWAYS BEFORE ME GIVE MY PEOPLE THE VERY BEST THE ENTERTAINMENT WORLD HAS TO OFFER. QUALITY AND A VIEW TO SERVICE ONLY WILL BE MY GUIDE IN SELECTING MY PROGRAMS FOR 1925. FINANCIAL REIMBURSEMENT I HOLD AS SECONDARY TO SERVICE AND EXPECT IT TO COME THROUGH THE PROPER CONDUCT OF MY BUSINESS GUIDED WITH THE KNOWLEDGE GAINED THROUGH MY EXPERIENCE OF THE PAST.

I RESOLVE THAT I WILL PROFIT BY ALL THE MISTAKES AND BLUNDERS OF THE PAST AND THAT I WILL DO MY BEST NOT TO MAKE THESE MISTAKES AGAIN.

AND I DO HEREBY RESOLVE THAT WHEN THE END OF THIS YEAR HAS COME TO PASS THAT I WILL AGAIN TAKE STOCK OF MYSELF AND BUSINESS AND THAT I WILL DO MY BEST THROUGHOUT THIS YEAR TO HAVE THAT INVENTORY SHOW THAT SERVICE HAS BEEN THE DOMINATING FACTOR IN MOULDING FOR ME WHAT I HOPE TO BE THE BRIGHTEST YEAR I HAVE YET LIVED AND THAT BY MY HAVING LIVED THIS YEAR I WILL HAVE BEEN ABLE TO SPREAD A LITTLE MORE SUNSHINE ALONG THE BY-WAYS OF LIFE.

AND NOW LET ME, OH LORD! LIVE THIS YEAR, IN MY THEATRE BY THE SIDE OF THE STREET AND GIVE CHEER AND HAPPINESS TO ALL MANKIND.—L. O. DAVIS.

M. W. Larmour, National Theatre (450 seats), Graham, Texas.

SIDE SHOW OF LIFE. (7,511 feet). Star, Ernest Torrence. One of the finest pictures of the year. Poorly named and poor paper. as it leads one to expect a clown comedy while it really is heavy stuff. Advertise it as the story of the returned soldier and not as a circus story and the crowd who come will enjoy it. It is really very fine. Sunday, yes. Appeals to thinkers. Town of 3,200. Admission 10-20-30. Charles Lee Hyde, Grand Theatre (500 seats), Pierre, South Dakota.

SIDE SHOW OF LIFE. (7,511 feet). Star, Ernest Torrence. Many claimed this the biggest piece of cheese ever put on in Greenville. They did not like Torrence as a star at all. This is one of the famous forty, but we didn't say famous for what. Tone, none. Sunday, no. Small town class town of 3,300. Admission 15-30. P. L. Vann, Opera House (600 seats), Greeneville, Alabama.

SINNERS IN HEAVEN. (6,881 feet). Star, Bebe Daniels. Pleased one hundred per cent. This pleased pretty near sixty per cent more than "Monsieur Beaucaire." Sunday, doubtful. Small town class town of 3,300. Admission 15-30. P. L. Vann, Opera House Theatre (600 seats), Greenville, Alabama.

SOCIETY SCANDAL. (6,433 feet). Star Gloria Swanson. So far as society dramas are concerned this one isn't any worse than the rest of 'em. But a small town can't run society stuff and get away with it more than one night a week. Poor attendance. Not very good as to moral tone. Henry W. Nauman, Moose Theatre, Elizabethtown, Pennsylvania.

STRANGER. (6,660 feet). Star cast. Good program picture. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Fair audience appeal. Farmers and merchants town of 1,650. Mrs. J. B. Travelle, Elite Theatre, Placerville, California.

WHILE SATAN SLEEPS. (6,675 feet). Star, Jack Holt. Drew a good house and pleased most all. Would advise any small town exhibitor to run it. Can be bought right. Tone, good. General audience appeal. Town and country class town of 700. Admission 10-25, 15-35. J. B. Carter, Electric Theatre (250 seats), Browning, Missouri.

Pathe

CALL OF THE WILD. (5 reels). Star cast. A picture from every angle. The dog star made a hit here. Well directed. Fine photography. Drew a good house and pleased ninety per cent. Fine tone. Good attendance. All classes town of 1,000. Admission 10-20. A. E. Rogers, Temple Theatre (250 seats), Dexter, New York.

KING OF WILD HORSES. (5 reels). Star, Rex (horse). The posters and title sure drew a lot of kids in to see this show, and pleased them and the grown-ups, too. I would say that it is a good audience picture. Tone, good. Family picture. Good audience appeal. Better class town of 4,500. Admission 10-15. C. A. Anglemire, "Y" Theatre (404 seats). Nazareth, Pennsylvania.

KING OF WILD HORSES. (5 reels). Star, Rex, the horse. A knockout picture. Everybody had to stop to talk about it. Some said the best picture we ever had in our house, but a poor crowd. It's the berries. Can you tell me why I lost money three days? Audience appeal, one hundred per cent. Business class and farmers town of 2,200. Admission 10-25. A. F. Jenkins, Community Theatre, David City, Nebraska.

WAY OF A MAN. (9,000 feet). Star cast. Very good picture, above the average program subject. Pleased the patrons. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Good audience appeal. Farmers and merchants town of 1,650. Mrs. J. B. Travelle, Elite Theatre, Placerville, California.

WHY WORRY? (6 reels). Star, Harold Lloyd. Best one yet of Lloyd; something doing every minute. He kept the crowd laughing most of the time. Pleased one hundred per cent. Nuf sed. Tone, yes. Sunday, yes. Good attendance. All classes town of 1,000. Admission 10-20. A. E. Rogers, Temple Theatre (250 seats), Dexter, New York.

Producers Dist. Corp.

BARBARA FRIETCHIE. (7,179 feet). Star, Florence Vidor. A very good picture of its kind but seems to be a type that fails to pull any more. Tone okay. Sunday, yes. Fair audience appeal. Family and student class, town of 4,000. Admission 10-25. R. J. Relf, Star Theatre (600 seats), Decorah, Iowa.

BARBARA FRIETCHIE. (7,179 feet). Star, Florence Vidor. This is one of the most beautiful pictures we have played, but not a success at the box office. It is evident that the public do not want war stories, whether it is Civil War or World War. Then the atmosphere of this story is pro-South, but a beautiful picture that would go big north of Mason-Dixon Line. Tone beautiful. Sunday, yes. Great audience appeal. City of 250,000. Admission 10-25, 40. Jean Darnell, Capitol Theatre (1,044 seats), Dallas, Texas.

HOOSIER SCHOOLMASTER. (5,536 feet). A very good production. J. C. McKee, Electric Theatre, Bolivar, Missouri.

WELCOME STRANGER. (6,618 feet). Star cast. This is a splendid production, well liked by our patrons, and would be even a great draw where there are more Jewish people. Great moral. Fine comedy, genuine heart appeal. Picture reflected the genius of Ince. Tone excellent. Sunday, yes. Great audience appeal. City of 250,000. Admission 10-25, 40. Jean Darnell, Capitol Theatre (1,044 seats), Dallas, Texas.

Schulberg

DAUGHTERS OF THE RICH. Star cast. A fair program picture that pleased the majority. Not a strong puller. City of 100,000. Admission 10-20. Al. C. Werner, Royal Theatre, Reading, Pennsylvania.

WHITE MAN. (6,370 feet). Star, Alice Joyce. A silly, impossible story that has been so well handled as to give it some semblance of reason. Satisfied a fair portion of our audience, but I can't give it much. Tone okay. Sunday, yes. Fair appeal. Draw better class, city of 14,000. Admission 10-35. E. W. Collins, Grand Theatre (700 seats), Jonesboro, Arkansas.

United Artists

LOVE FLOWER. Star, Carol Dempster. Not a bad picture, but is too slow and draggy. Paper does not appeal to your patrons and they will not turn out. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Audience appeal, not much. Small town class town of 300. Admission 10-25. Roy E. Cline. Osage Theatre (200 seats), Osage, Oklahoma.

ONE EXCITING NIGHT. (11,000 feet). Star, Carol Dempster. An excellent show of its kind. It is not a special but it should prove a good picture where they want suspense. It did not draw enough to pay film rental. Tone, good. Audience appeal, good. Better class town of 4,500. Admission 10-15. C. A. Anglemire, "Y" Theatre (404 seats), Nazareth, Pennsylvania.

THROUGH THE BACK DOOR. Star, Mary Pickford. Old, but draws them in, and what is better satisfies them after you get them. If the later pictures were as good, exhibitors would be doing fine. Sunday, yes. Audience appeal, good. Small town class town of 300. Admission 10-25. Roy E. Cline, Osage Theatre (200 seats), Osage, Oklahoma.

Universal

ACQUITTAL. (6,325 feet). Star cast. Good show. Must be seen from the start. Tone okay. Sunday, yes. Good audience appeal. Family and student class, town of 4,000. Admission 10-25. R. J. Relf, Star Theatre (600 seats), Decorah, Iowa.

ACQUITTAL. (6,325 feet). Star cast. A lemon for me. Did not draw. Good picture of the kind, but not kind my class of people will come out to see. Coal miners town of 800. Admission 10-20. E. P. Rea, Palace Theatre (468 seats), Velier, Illinois.

BIG TIMBER. Star, William Desmond. Only a fair picture. Didn't receive any comedy with it either and that's what hurts here. Universal pictures don't take here for some reason. Tone, good. Poor attendance.

Virginia Valli and her director, Edward Sloman, rehearsing a bit in "Up the Ladder," her next Universal.

All classes, town of 1,000. Admission 10-20. A. E. Rogers, Temple Theatre (250 seats), Dexter, New York.

DARK STAIRWAYS. (5,030 feet). Star, Herbert Rawlinson. A dandy picture with some real action in it. Has a good plot in the story that will please. Tone, fair. Not suitable for Sunday. Farm and small town class. Admission 10-20. W. F. Denney, Electric Theatre (250 seats), Lowry City, Missouri.

EXCITEMENT. (4,912 feet). Star, Laura LaPlante. All right for a novelty. Used it to fill in with vaudeville show. Tone, fair. Possibly suitable for Sunday. Fair audience appeal. Family and student class, town of 4,000. Admission 10-25. R. J. Relf, Star Theatre (600 seats), Decorah, Iowa.

EXCITEMENT. (4,912 feet). Star, Laura LaPlante. A dandy comedy drama that will please most people. Be sure and play this one, as she is a good actress and will please. Tone, fair. Not suitable for Sunday. Farm and small town class. Admission 10-20. W. F. Denney, Electric Theatre (250 seats), Lowry City, Missouri.

FAST WORKER. (6,506 feet). Star, Reginald Denny. This is a snappy, fast-moving, clean comedy drama, reminiscent of the kind of pictures made by the late Wallie Reid. Denny great favorite here. He is handsome, athletic and has great charm for feminine patrons. We did good business with "Fast Worker." It's a great picture for tired business man, too. Tone splendid. Sunday, yes. Audience appeal immense. City of 250,000. Admission 10-25, 40. Jean Darnell, Capitol Theatre (1,044 seats), Dallas, Texas.

FIGHTING FURY. (4,491 feet). Star, Jack Hoxie. Well, it's done. The manager has bought a dozen or so Universals. If they all measure up like this one well, ———. A fair crowd of people assembled to see a fair western drama and were disappointed. The story wasn't bad, but not one in ten would admit the star had any personal appeal. Good house. Tone, good. Henry W. Nauman, Moose Theatre, Elizabethtown, Pennsylvania.

FORTY HORSE HAWKINS. (5,148 feet). Star, Hoot Gibson. A fair picture, but nothing like any of his westerns. He is going back on drawing power by playing the class of picture he's in now, but this is a good program picture. Tone, fair. Not suitable for Sunday. Farm and small town class. Admission 10-20. W. F. Denny, Electric Theatre (250 seats), Lowry City, Missouri.

GAIETY GIRL. (7,419 feet). Star, Mary Philbin. A charming story, sweetly told, but Mary Philbin not particularly popular with Capitol patrons. Production shows much care and money spent in producing, and has fine story. Did a fair business for us. Tone excellent. Sunday, yes. Good audience appeal. City of 250,000. Admission 10-25, 40. Jean Darnell, Capitol Theatre (1,044 seats), Dallas, Texas.

HOOK AND LADDER. (6 reels). Star, Hoot Gibson. A good picture of the kind, good fire scenes and some comedy all through the picture; but not as good as his westerns. Fair tone; no for Sunday. Electric Theatre, Lowry City, Missouri.

K—THE UNKNOWN. (8,146 feet). Star, Virginia Valli. An exceedingly clever picture that will be sure to please your patrons if shown at your theatre. William Noble, Liberty Theatre, Oklahoma City, Oklahoma.

LOVE AND GLORY. (7,084 feet). Star, Madge Bellamy. Pleased women. A little too long. Tone okay. Sunday, okay. Family audience appeal. Family class, city of 300,000. J. Roth, Liberty Theatre, Kansas City, Missouri.

RIDE FOR YOUR LIFE. (5,310 feet). Star, Hoot Gibson. Here is a good western picture that will please, as there is some real good stuff, good scenes in this one and lots of action. Fair tone but no for Sunday. Electric Theatre, Lowry City, Missouri.

RIDERS UP. (4,904 feet). Star cast. A good program picture that will please, quite a bit of action. Tone, fair. Not suitable for Sunday. Farm and small town class. Admission 10-20. W. F. Denney, Electric Theatre (250 seats), Lowry City, Missouri.

RIDING KID FROM POWDER RIVER. (5,727 feet). Star, Hoot Gibson. The bread and butter star in a fast-action western. About doubled the usual day's run on this one and it seemed to please all the many admirers of the famous smiling, riding, shooting Hoot. City of 18,500. Admission 20-40. Ben S. Morris, Temple and Olympic theatres, Bellaire, Ohio.

SIGNAL TOWER. Stars, Beery-Fellows-Valli. A wonderful railroad drama. Packed chock full of tense action and plenty of real thrills. A great picture for all classes and sure to appeal. Did not do business because of bad weather. Excellent paper. Louis Markun, Dream and Tuxedo theatres, Indianapolis, Indiana.

SLANDERERS. A very good program picture. Much better than the title would suppose. Lots of action. Story and print both good. Tone good, and Sunday, yes; appeal good. Draw all classes, town of 6,000. Admission 10-20-30. Frank H. Watton, Park Theatre (600 seats), Lebanon, New Hampshire.

WINE. (6,220 feet). Star, Clara Bow. There is nothing to particularly recommend this picture. Just a jazzy, drunken party from start to finish. Too many pictures like that would not do your house any good. It's great entertainment, especially for the young folks, but in my opinion the less they see of this sort the better. No tone. Sunday, questionable. Audience appeal very good. City of 250,000. Admission 10-25, 40. Jean Darnell, Capitol Theatre (1,044 seats), Dallas, Texas.

YOUNG IDEAS. (4,095 feet). Star, Laura

LaPlante. Here is a dandy program picture, a real comedy drama that should please any audience. You can guarantee this to please. Fair tone. Sunday, no, but good appeal. Electric Theatre, Lowry City, Missouri.

Vitagraph

BORROWED HUSBANDS. (7,000 feet). Star, Rockliffe Fellowes. This should have been a good picture, but something was lacking. Don't know what, but it did not go over and we took it off after first showing. Tone, fair. Sunday, yes. Audience appeal, not much. Best class, town of 8,000. Admission 10-30. Ned Pedigo, Pollard Theatre, Guthrie, Oklahoma.

CAPTAIN BLOOD. (10,680 feet). Star, J. Warren Kerrigan. A costume drama of the sea. Story old English and is most elaborately done. Lots of action and story carries sympathy for the hero all the way. Characters at times are confusing. Story does not please the younger set, particularly the women. Takes lots of exploiting to put it over. Sunday, yes. Fair audience appeal. City of 18,500. Admission 20-40. Ben S. Morris, Temple and Olympic theatres, Bellaire, Ohio.

CAPTAIN BLOOD. (10,680 feet). Star, J. Warren Kerrigan. This production is more than a credit to Vitagraph. It's a mammoth screen spectacle. Went over big for us. Setting and costumes great, and story filled with thrills and love interest that our patrons like. Tone fine. Sunday, yes. Splendid audience appeal. City of 250,000. Admission 10-25, 40. Jean Darnell, Capitol Theatre (1,044 seats), Dallas, Texas.

Warner Bros.

AGE OF INNOCENCE. Star cast. A fine picture but slightly too long. Tone okay. Sunday, okay. Family audience appeal. City of 300,000. J. Roth, Liberty Theatre, Kansas City, Missouri.

BABBITT. (8 reels). Star, Willard Louis. Pretty fair but dragged out on eight long reels. On six would have gone over good. Fair tone. Sunday, yes. Fair audience appeal. Family and student class, town of 4,000. Admission 10-25. R. J. Relf, Star Theatre (600 seats), Decorah, Iowa.

BEING RESPECTABLE. (7,500 feet). Star, Monte Blue. Fairly good. Tone, okay. Sunday, yes. Good audience appeal. Small town class, town of 450. Admission 10-30. A. F. Thomas, Pastime Theatre (250 seats), Almyra, Arkansas.

CORNERED. (7,500 feet). Star, Marie Prevost. Excellent mystery drama that somehow failed to draw, though no fault of picture. Tone, okay. Sunday, no. Fine audience appeal. Oil field and farmer class, town of 1,000. Admission 10-25. H. E. Schlichter, Liggett Theatre (600 seats), Madison, Kansas.

CORNERED. Star cast. A real picture. Buy it right and push. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Audience appeal, 90 per cent. Small town and country class, town of 450. Admission 10-30. A. F. Thomas, Pastime Theatre (250 seats), Almyra, Arkansas.

CORNERED. (7,500 feet). Star cast. Real picture. Pleased them all one hundred per cent. They all come to see Warner Brothers' Classics of the Screen. "Cornered" went over big and I am well pleased. Country and city class, town of 1,800. Admission 10-25, 10-40. G. A. Peterson, Cozy Theatre (502 seats), Hollis, Oklahoma.

GEORGE WASHINGTON, JR. Star, Wesley Barry. No mistake will be made in buying this one. It's a thriller as well as a scream. The audience will be kept in a roar which may drown out the sound of the money falling into the till. William Noble, Folly Theatre, Oklahoma City, Oklahoma.

HER MARRIAGE VOW. (7,100 feet). Star cast. Not much of a picture; as poor as any Warner Brothers have given us. Staging and acting okay, but story is weak and ineffectual. Tone okay. Sunday, yes. Audience appeal not high. Better class, city of 14,000. Admission 10-35. E. W. Collins, Grand Theatre (700 seats), Jonesboro, Arkansas.

"LUMINARY"—4 LETTERS!

Doris Kenyon, though seeming too sweet for cross words, is digging one up. She is First National's newest star.

HER MARRIAGE VOW. (7,100 feet). Star, Monte Blue. A nice little program picture from the best company in the business. Tone fine. Sunday, yes. Audience appeal okay. Oil field class and farmers, town of 1,000. Admission 10-25. H. E. Schlichter, Liggett Theatre (600 seats), Madison, Kansas.

HOW TO EDUCATE A WIFE. (6 reels). Stars, Prevost-Blue. A good picture that pleased the biggest percentage ,but not as good as "Six Days." The title of the picture and the author's name makes it a good drawing card here. Fair tone; yes for Sunday; appeal ninety per cent. Admission 10-25. S. A. Hendrix, Princess Theatre (330 seats), Cotton Plant, Arkansas.

HOW TO EDUCATE A WIFE. (6 reels). Star, Monte Blue. Very interesting drama of married life and full of good comedy. Print was fine. I ran it as part of a double feature program but I think it could be run alone. Tone okay. Sunday, yes. Good audience appeal. Mixed class, town of 3,000. Admission 20-25. T. L. Barnett, Finn's Theatre (600 seats), Jewett City, Connecticut.

MAIN STREET. People were impressed with this show and everybody was pleased. Admission 10-20. Al C. Werner, Royal Theatre, Reading, Pennsylvania.

NARROW STREET. Star cast. A zippy comedy drama. Tone okay. Sunday, okay. Family audience appeal. Family class, city of 300,000. Admission 25-35. J. Roth, Liberty Theatre, Kansas City, Missouri.

TENTH WOMAN. (6,250 feet). Special cast. A fine production of a worthless story, so far as screen purposes are concerned. It will please a great many, due to the intelligent direction and good acting. Tone okay. Sunday, yes. Fair appeal. Draw better class, city of 14,000. Admission 10-35. E. W. Collins, Grand Theatre (700 seats), Jonesboro, Arkansas.

THIS WOMAN. (7,000 feet). Star cast. One of Warner's new releases and it is a dandy. Pleased them one hundred per cent. Seems Warner gets better right along. Don't fail to run "This Woman." It is a real one. Perfect moral tone. Sunday, yes. Audience appeal one hundred per cent. Country and city class, town of 1,800. Admission 10-25, 10-40. G. A. Peterson, Cozy Theatre (502 seats), Hollis, Oklahoma.

Comedies

BABIES WELCOME. (Educational). Star, Dorothy Devore. I can't see why they call this subject a comedy as there isn't a giggle in it, let alone a laugh. Tone, okay. Sunday, no. Rotten audience appeal. Oil field class and farmers, town of 1,000. Admission 10-25. H. E. Schlichter, Liggett Theatre (600 seats), Madison, Kansas.

BONEHEAD. (Educational). A fairly good comedy that pleased almost everybody by the number of laughs it received. Hanneford is good at pulling funny falls and tumbles. Tone, okay. Good audience appeal. Better class, town of 4,500. Admission 10-15. C. A. Anglemire, "Y" Theatre (404 seats), Nazareth, Pennsylvania.

BRONCHO EXPRESS. (Educational). Star, Clyde Cook. Lots of laughs. It must be real old. Not all there. Sunday, yes. All classes, town of 2,800. Admission 15-25. David W. Strayer, Mt. Joy Theatre (250 seats), Mt. Joy, Pennsylvania.

CHEER UP. (Educational). Star, Virginia Vance. An average Cameo one-reel comedy. There were a few gags in this that brought some laughs. They don't seem to make real good one-reel comedies any more. Tone, okay. Fair audience appeal. Better class, town of 4,500. Admission 10-15. C. A. Anglemire, "Y" Theatre (404 seats), Nazareth, Pennsylvania.

DAREDEVIL. (Pathe-Mack Sennett). Star, Ben Turpin. Laughs quite a few and that's saying something for a Turpin, but this one is good. Don't miss it. Two reels. Sunday, yes. All classes, town of 2,800. Admission 15-25. David W. Strayer, Mt. Joy Theatre (250 seats), Mt. Joy, Pennsylvania.

DAREDEVIL. (Pathe). Star, Ben Turpin. Fair comedy, that's all. Will get by. Tone, okay. Sunday, yes. Fair audience appeal. Oil field class and farmers, town of 1,000. Admission 10-25. H. E. Schlichter, Liggett Theatre (600 seats), Madison, Kansas.

DERBY DAY. (Pathe). Our Gang. Our seats are still in the house after showing this side-splitting "Our Gang" comic. You could hear the kinds and grownups laugh a square away. Sunday, yes. Audience appeal, 100 per cent. All classes, town of 2,800. Admission 15-25. D. W. Strayer, Mt. Joy Theatre (250 seats), Mt. Joy, Pennsylvania.

DESERT BLUES. (Educational). Star, Cliff Bowes. One of the new Cameo comedies and it is a good one. The gags pulled off in this one are good. We had many a laugh out of this one. Tone, good. Good audience appeal. Better class, town of 4,500. Admission 10-15. C. A. Anglemire, "Y" Theatre (404 seats), Nazareth, Pennsylvania.

DIZZY DAISY. (Educational). A peach of a comedy with everybody pleased with it. It sure has some good comedy stunts in it. You don't want to miss this one. Tone, okay. Good audience appeal. Better class, town of 4,500. Admission 10-15. C. A. Anglemire, "Y" Theatre (404 seats), Nazareth, Pennsylvania.

DIZZY DAISY. (Educational). A continuous laugh from start to finish. If you want comedy don't overlook this one. One they will howl over and no let ups. All classes, but white only. Admission 10-20-25. W. H. Odom, Pastime Theatre (250 seats), Sandersville, Georgia.

GOING EAST. (Educational). Star, Lloyd Hamilton. Good comedy. Many places for laughs. No one will go wrong on booking Lloyd Hamilton. We like him better every time. Luck to you, old boy, we like your style. All classes, but white only. Admission 10-20-25. W. H. Odom, Pastime Theatre (250 seats), Sandersville, Georgia.

EASTER BONNETS. (Tuxedo). One continuous laugh, all old stuff in this, but oh, boy, how the people did howl. Grab it and listen to them yell. Sunday, yes. All classes, town of 2,800. Admission 15-25. David W. Strayer, Mt. Joy Theatre (250 seats), Mt. Joy, Pennsylvania.

HALFBACK OF NOTRE DAME. (Pathe). Star cast. One of the best comedies in some time. Has everything Sennett can make, from bathing girls to blacksmith shops, flying machines and what not. An excellent comedy that amuses and thrills. General class, town of 1,200. Admission 15-25. E. N. Prescott, Prescott Circuit (250-700 seats), Union, Maine.

HOT AIR. (Educational). Star, Lee Moran. Hot towels. Here is an honest to gosh comedy. It has a laugh in every inch of film. An extra good comedy in every respect. Tone, good. Great audience appeal. Better class, town of 4,500. Admission 10-15. C. A. Anglemire, "Y" Theatre (404 seats), Nazareth, Pennsylvania.

MIDNIGHT BLUES. (Educational). Star, Lige Conley. Do you want to make them laugh? Then book this. The second reel is a knockout. Sunday, yes. All classes, town of 2,800. Admission 15-25. David W. Strayer, Mt. Joy Theatre (250 seats), Mt. Joy, Pennsylvania.

MY BABY DOLL. (Universal). Century comedy. Good holiday. A dandy two-reel comedy. Tone okay. Sunday, okay. Family audience appeal. Family class, city of 300,000. Admission 25-35. J. H. Roth, Liberty Theatre (1,000 seats), Kansas City, Missouri.

NEVER AGAIN. (Pathe). Star, Al St. John. One of the best comedies of the year and no doubt of it. If you fail to laugh at this one call in the family physician, for you are going to need him soon. Tone, good. Ideal for Sunday. Appeals to everyone. Best class, town of 8,000. Admission 10-30. Ned Pedigo, Pollard Theatre, Guthrie, Oklahoma.

PREHISTORIC MAN. (Universal). Hysterical History Comedy. Single reel and a hot one. City of 300,000. J. Roth, Liberty Theatre, Kansas City, Missouri.

SUNDOWN LIMITED. (Pathe). "Our Gang." Just a fair gang comedy. Tone okay. Sunday, yes. Fair audience appeal. Oil field class and farmers, town of 1,000. Admission 10-25. H. E. Schlichter, Liggett Theatre (600 seats), Madison, Kansas.

Serials

GALLOPING HOOFS. (Pathe). Star, Johnnie Walker. A story of old Kentucky and race horses. First chapter starts off very good, ending with a horse race in suspense. Mixed class, town of 3,000. Admission varies. Capitol Theatre, Asheboro, North Carolina.

Short Subjects

GO-GETTERS. (F. B. O.) Star, Alberta Vaughn. The first of this group contained some good fun, a lot of action, and gave every indication of some good heart interest to follow. We consider them better than slap-stick comedies and our people seemed to accept the first one in an agreeable manner. Tone okay. Sunday, yes. Good appeal. E. W. Collins, Grand Theatre (700 seats), Jonesboro, Arkansas.

Independents

AFTER SIX DAYS. (Weiss Brothers). Star cast. This picture brought us the greatest business since we played "The Hunchback of Nothe Dame." Every church, school, parent, teachers society, Club Federation and all civic officials endorsed this picture and supported it, coming in parties of 200 and more. Give us more pictures as good. Wonderful tone. Sunday, yes. Wonderful audience appeal. City of 250,000. Admission 10-25, 40. Jean Darnell, Capitol Theatre (1,044 seats), Dallas, Texas.

AMERICAN TOREADOR. (State Right). Star cast. One lallapaloosa of comedy and romance. Pleased them all. Price right. Print excellent. Photography fine. Acting and action very good. Tone, okay. Sunday, yes. One hundred per cent. audience appeal. Farm and oil class, town of 508. Admission 10-25. J. A. Herring, Playhouse Theatre (250 seats), Strong, Arkansas.

DARING YEARS. (State Right). Star cast. Not so bad, but only in program class. The electric chair closing scenes are depressing. Tone, fair. Sunday, possibly. Fair audience appeal. Family and student class, town of 4,000. Admission 10-25. R. J. Relf, Star Theatre (600 seats), Decorah, Iowa.

DEAD OR ALIVE. (Arrow). Star, Jack Hoxie. A cracking good western. Everything in it that is needed. Pleased everyone. Tone, okay. Fine audience appeal. All classes, town of 900. Admission 10-20. C. E. Robinson, Town Hall Theatre (250 seats), Carmel, Maine.

DRUMS OF JEOPARDY. (Principal). Star, Elaine Hammerstein. Very good mystery or detective story. A little dark in places, but interesting from start to finish. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Fair audience appeal. Small town class and farmers, town of 600. Admission 10-20, 10-30. H. W. Batchelder, Galt Theatre (175 seats), Galt, California.

GALLOPIN' THROUGH. (Arrow). Star, Jack Hoxie. A fair western. Tone, fair. Sunday, yes. Fair audience appeal. Rural class, town of 250. J. J. Halley, San Andreas Theatre, San Andreas, California.

LONE AVENGER. (State Right). Star, William S. Hart. I don't know where this came from, but if you ever want to run a double feature show book this for the comedy half. All the scenes are splathered with big flowered wall paper except the outdoor ones, and they are in keeping with the rest of an old picture. Poor house. Henry W. Nauman, Moose Theatre, Elizabethtown, Pennsylvania.

MIDNIGHT SHADOWS. (Progress). Star, Edmund Cobb. Five reels. Print good. This is a good picture for the masses. Didn't do much with this on account ran it just after a big one. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Fair audience appeal. All classes, town of 806. Admission 10-20. W. C. Herndon, Liberty Theatre (250 seats), Valliant, Oklahoma.

MILE A MINUTE MORGAN. (State Right). Star cast. Photography unexcelled, theme excellent, length right. Price right. One hundred per cent. entertainment of the best moral kind. Full house. S. R. O. Tone, fine. Sunday, yes. Excellent audience appeal. Farm and oil class, town of 500. Admission 10-25. J. A. Herring, Playhouse Theatre (250 seats), Strong, Arkansas.

PROTECT US. (State Right). If you want advertisement book this, but the picture is a lemon. It won't stand. Tone, fair. Sunday, no. Audience appeal, 20 per cent. All classes, town of 806. Admission 10-20. W. C. Herndon, Liberty Theatre (250 seats), Valliant, Oklahoma.

SOME WILD OATS. (State Right). Star cast. This is an education, not an entertainment, and will draw a crowd all right, as it deals with intimate sex problems. Women only matinee and men only at night is the method of presenting it, and if they had left off the doctor's talk would have been a better attraction. No need of calling a spade a dirty, slimy, sloppy dirt shovel just to show that you are not afraid to call a spade a spade. A cheap picture and a cheap talk that will get the money and disgust you with people in general. Town of 3,200. Charles Lee Hyde, Grand Theatre (500 seats), Pierre, South Dakota.

SOUL OF A MAN. (State Right). Star cast. Acting superb. Theme lovely, morally good. Photography excellent. In all patrons say best picture we gave them this year. Tone, okay. Sunday, yes. Excellent audience appeal. Farm and oil class, town of 508. Admission 10-25. J. A. Herring, Playhouse Theatre (250 seats), Strong, Arkansas.

TILLIE'S PUNCTURED ROMANCE. (State Right). Star cast. This is an old one. Extremely old, but it had the gang and there was a gang attending, laughing during almost all the entire show. Didn't like it myself, but if there are fans in your town that like slapstick of the old brand here's your chance to give them the old and the new on one program and play it up that way. Henry W. Nauman, Moose Theatre, Elizabethtown, Pennsylvania.

"Ridin' Pretty"

William Desmond and Ann Forrest in Entertaining Universal Western

Reviewed by Sumner Smith

Universal's "Ridin' Pretty," featuring William Desmond, is the story of a cowboy who left the ranch for a mansion in San Francisco, in order to fulfill the terms of an inheritance, and fell in love with a girl who had been hired to steal it from him but relented because of her regard for him. That constitutes the germ of a heart-interest and reformation story.

But "Ridin' Pretty," through the introduction of a not new but always picturesque angle, has comedy relief that outdoes in appeal the basic idea of its story. The cowboy takes his roughneck companions to live in the mansion with him. They are so excellently acted, especially one of them, and the situations are so good that they rather take the honors away from Desmond. Slim Cole proves the outstanding comedian, bringing a laugh every time he appears. Two of the best comedy touches are where the cowboys "borrow" truck horses from a brewery and try to gallop them, and Cole shoots the gargoyles on the roof of the mansion.

This western, then, possesses a routine love story, a hint at a girl's regeneration and much corking comedy. At the end there is a suggestion of a thrill when the hero races a train, first in a car and then in a motorcycle, and succeeds in climbing on board it while traveling at full speed.

Story

Sky Parker, Arizona cowboy, goes to San Francisco to claim a fortune left him by his uncle. He takes five cowboys with him. The "boys" have a hectic time, among their adventures being a ride through the city on truck horses "borrowed" from a brewery, a stunt for which they are arrested. Sky's cousin persuades a beautiful girl to aid him in preventing Sky from getting his inheritance, but she relents and runs away. Sky boards her train from a speeding motorcycle, wins her consent to marriage and throws out the cousin.

"So Big"

Colleen Moore Gives Remarkably Fine Portrayal of Old Lady in Touching Story of Mother Love

Reviewed by C. S. Sewell

Edna Ferber's most recent novel "So Big," the sale of which has reached enormous proportions, is being offered on the screen by First National with Colleen Moore in the leading role, an unusual one for her as she is called upon to portray youth, middle and old age.

The novel was essentially a character sketch in narrative form, of a woman who met financial reverses, married a stolid Dutch farmer and through years of bitter poverty and hardship toiled that she might give her son, whom she called "So Big," advantages.

The main idea of the story and a lot of the situations have been retained, certain changes have been made in lesser characters that may disappoint the readers, but the dramatic effect of the story has been heightened.

The mother's struggle for her son, whose career is almost wrecked at the moment of success and only saved by her pitiful pleading, is the backbone of the theme, and we doubt if there has been any picture produced that brought out this angle with greater force and human appeal. Miss Moore's work is wonderful and it is truly a revelation and a delight to watch her admirable portrayal of the role of the aged mother and the thoroughly convincing manner in which she contrives to actually look the part. It is a far cry from her role in "Flaming Youth" and a demonstration of unusual versatility and ability, and by far her finest characterization.

The supporting cast contains a strong array of well-known players, practically every one of which has box-office value, and as is to be expected the acting throughout is high-class. Especially noteworthy is the performance of John Bowers as the stolid, poor, thick-witted Dutch farmer, Gladys Brockwell as a farmer's wife and Ben Lyon in the title role.

It is not a light-hearted story that this picture tells, but that of a woman whose life was a drab and colorless one of unusual hardships and disappointments, but through it all runs tremendous heart and human interest and above all the wonderful beauty of mother love, and a satisfactory happy ending brightens the story.

"So Big" may not appeal to the flappers or those who want jazz, pep and honeyed romance, for the romance of the title character is only suggested, but we believe that Miss Moore's wonderful, portrayal and the touching mother-love theme will make this picture popular.

Story

After returning from a tour of Europe with her father and finishing a course at a fashionable finishing school in the year 1888, Selina Peake is shocked to find that her father is a gambler and has been killed by accident in a gambling den. Left penniless, she gets a job as school teacher in the Dutch colony at High Prairie and finally marries Purvis DeJong, a dull-witted and poor farmer, and soon finds that her life is one of drudgery, lightened only by her love for her little son, Dirk, whom she calls So Big. Purvis dies and Selina, in old clothes, reduced to abject poverty, peddles vegetables. The father of her former school friend advances her a little money and by stinting and hard work after eighteen years she has made the farm pay and educated Dirk as an architect, and he wins a competition. Dirk is loved by an artist, Dallas, who has helped him, but he owes much of his success to Mrs. Storm, a discontented wife, who per-

"The No-Gun Man"

Lefty Flynn's Second for F. B. O. Is Entertaining Outdoor Melodrama with Mystery Element

Reviewed by C. S. Sewell

For his second featured released through F. B. O. Maurice "Lefty" Flynn appears in "The No-Gun Man" in which he is cast as a banker who goes to a small town and succeeds in getting evidence to connect a suspicious gang with the robbery of his bank and incidentally finds romance in the person of a girl who runs the village store.

As the hero goes to a small town under an assumed name, there is an element of mystery regarding his real identity which is heightened by the fact that while friendly with the forces of law and order he arouses their suspicion by hobnobbing with the criminals, but the solution is easily guessed by those who have watched the opening titles.

Flynn has a breezy and effective screen personality and is well suited to his role in this picture which is of the dashing alert type. The story moves along at a brisk pace with plenty of action and opportunities for snappy fights and rescues and somewhat out of the ordinary situations. The mystery angle heightens the interest and suspense.

Gloria Grey is appealing as a game little girl who has spunk enough to oppose the villain, Raymond Turner is excellent as a colored chauffeur and furnishes several laughs and W. J. Flynn is capable as the villain.

"The No-Gun Man" gets sufficiently away from the average story of this type to furnish an element of novelty but at the same time contains plenty of vigorous action, fights, stunts etc., villainy and heroism to appeal to the dyed-in-the-wool out-door melodrama fans and it should prove a satisfactory program attraction for the majority.

Story

Following the robbery of a suburban bank, the small town of Red Rock is terrorized by the appearance of a gang led by Bill Kilgore, who, failing to impress Carmen Harroway, who runs a small store, will not allow the townspeople to trade with her. A stranger, Bob Jerome, appears, and wins the friendship of Carmen and shows he does not fear Kilgore. The populace is mystified, however, when he becomes friendly with Kilgore, and even joins his gang. Kilgore finally plans a robbery of a train and goes to kidnap Carmen. Robert saves her, but she does not trust him and makes his task more difficult. The townseople finally rise and defeat Kilgore's gang, and Robert, who is knocked out and left on the track, saves himself and the train. It develops that he is the president of the bank that was robbed and has secured the necessary evidence against Kilgore. Carmen accepts the invitation to become a banker's wife.

"The Narrow Street"

Unusually Amusing Light Comedy, Fine Characterization and Human Interest in Warner Production

Reviewed by C. S. Sewell

A good story to begin with, plus fine characterizations, aided by excellent direction that brings out the greatest possibilities of both story and players, makes Warner Brothers' "The Narrow Street" unusually pleasing entertainment.

Based on a popular novel by Edwin Bateman Morris, this picture, starring Matt Moore and Dorothy Devore, directed by William Beaudine, is light farce comedy; there are no heavy absurdities or slapstick that will cause side-splitting laughter, but it is filled with situations and deft touches of characterization that will keep the great majority smiling and chuckling, with an occasional outburst, from the opening scene to the final flash, and we mean this literally, for two of the most amusing bits are the opening and closing.

The hero is a hard-working but unsystematic, efficient but absent-minded clerk, the butt of the office jokes, a fellow who is so retiring he fears almost his own shadow and is intensely afraid of women. When placed in a situation where a peppy and attractive girl seeks shelter in his home and contrives to stay there several days, naturally being mistaken for his wife, the resultant comedy can easily be imagined.

Obviously, the "plot" is not to be taken seriously, for the main situation is hardly logical, nor is the hero's promotion to an executive position, but it all serves to make the story interesting and provides fine opportunities for real legitimate humor and every one has been utilized.

Matt Moore's characterization of the hero is remarkably well done and unusually convincing; his every move is not only amusing but he puts a lot of human interest in the role and you cannot help but like the chap he portrays. In fact, it is one of the best comedy characterizations we have ever seen. Dorothy Devore, vivacious and attractive, an excellent little comedienne, is an effective foil for Moore, and the supporting cast is entirely satisfactory.

We recommend "The Narrow Street" to all who enjoy an hour of smiles and chuckles.

"Wife of the Centaur"

Entertaining Metro-Goldwyn Production Is Based on Cyril Hume's Popular Novel of Modern Life

Reviewed by C. S. Sewell

With John Gilbert, Eleanor Boardman and Aileen Pringle in the leading roles, Metro-Goldwyn is offering a picturization of Cyril Hume's sensational modern novel, "The Wife of the Centaur."

Like the fabled animal referred to in the last word of the title, that was half beast and half man, the hero of this story is an author with a dual nature, who vacillated between the ideal and manly side that found expression in his marriage to a devoted young woman, and the appeal of passion as exemplified in the fascination for a worldly woman who sought to win him.

While the title would indicate it is a story of the wife of this man, the man himself is the dominant character and the picture depicts the struggle between these two natures, with the better one obviously triumphing in the end.

Here is a rather daring theme, with the sex appeal strongly brought out, but it has been expertly handled and there is nothing that can be classed as offensive. Although the character of the hero is not an entirely sympathetic one, for more footage is devoted to his weakness than his strength, it is a human and interesting type of modern man that is portrayed.

John Gilbert is dashing and romantic and his performance should appeal especially to the women. Eleanor Boardman, though she starts out like a flapper, finds a deeper note and is capable as the loving, trusting wife, while Aileen Pringle handles the role of a worldly woman with strong sex appeal unusually well.

This picture for considerable of its footage gives the impression that it is going to be another round of jazz and wild parties, but with the hero's marriage it narrows down to the three characters and the drama is heightened. There is plenty of dash and action and the plot keeps moving forward at a good pace. There is good drama in the climax and a thrilling journey down a snow-covered mountain by the hero just precedes it. Effort to obtain a letter is the reason for this, and the suspense is well worked up.

Altogether, "Wife of the Centuar" should provide better than the average entertainment for the majority.

Story

Jeffrey Dwyer an author and poet has a conflicting nature, at times he has high ideals but he also feels strongly the appeal of the purely sensual. He is attracted to Joan Converse, a sweet little girl who falls in love with him, but neglects her when he meets the flashing, dashing Inez Martin. Inez finally throws him over and marries Todd but the marriage is a failure. Jeffrey, returning to his senses after a period of debauchery marries Joan and they go to a lodge in the mountains and are happy until Inez takes a house nearby. For months he fights the infatuation, but one night writes a note to Joan and goes to Inez. His better nature makes him realize himself as he really is and he returns to Joan who understands and forgives him.

"The Greatest Love of All"

Associated Exhibitors Offer George Beban in Appealing Characterization of Italian Immigrant

Reviewed by C. S. Sewell

On the dramatic and musical comedy stage, in vaudeville and on the screen, during a period of several years, George Beban has become a familiar figure with his portrayals of a definite character type, that of a voluble, volatile, poorly educated Italian immigrant, with intense love for his immediate family and a well-developed sense of humor.

It is just such a character as this that he portrays in "The Greatest Love of All," which has already been presented in a number of theatres throughout the country as a novelty, with the climax, the trial scene, acted on the stage by Mr. Beban and the original cast, and is now being distributed entirely in film form through Associated Exhibitors.

The story concerns a poor Italian ice dealer who brings his mother to this country. To aid him to buy a small farm she takes in washing and a missing bracelet is found in the basket. She is arrested and sentenced to prison but finally, after the iceman has saved the district attorney's life, her innocence is proved and all ends happily.

This picture is rich in heart interest and sentiment and pathos and depicts the intense love of this man for his mother with unusual intensity. There is also an abundance of comedy relief, the smiles mingling with the tugs at the heartstrings, and certainly George Beban is a past master at handling characterizations of this type. A weakness lies in the fact that it is hardly probable any jury would have convicted the mother on such inconclusive evidence, especially in view of the effective play upon the emotions, and the solution of the robbery is also weak.

Mr. Beban's support is excellent. Especially fine is Marie di Benedetta as his mother. This delightful old lady does not seem to be acting but just to be a real loving, somewhat bewildered Italian mother. Mary Skurkoy is effective as Joe's sweetheart and J. W. Johnston does good work as the district attorney.

At the Rivoli, where the trial scene was acted, the audience liked it, and the film record follows it closely, with the necessary elimination of some of the dialogue, but the most effective parts are retained.

"The Greatest Love of All" compares favorably with Mr. Beban's previous pictures and should abundantly satisfy his fans. It will probably prove a pleasing attraction for patrons who like Italian characterizations and stories with strong emotional appeal.

Story

Joe, a poor Italian iceman, living in a basement, prepares for the coming of his "sweetheart" from Italy, and this makes his friend, Trina, sad, until she discovers it is really his mother. A gangster trying to get away hides in the basement and the police find him. In the scuffle the furniture is destroyed and the cop wants to arrest Joe's mother for aiding the thug. On a picnic Joe aids the district attorney, who is shot by one of the thugs, and Joe's mother secures his laundry on the quiet to help Joe. A diamond bracelet disappears and detectives see Joe's mother just as she finds it in the soiled linen. She is arrested, tried and convicted. Joe is sore, and the thugs plan to use him to "get" the district attorney by "planting" a golf ball filled with explosives. Trina goes to the district attorney's wife for help and she discovers that their little baby is in the habit of taking jewels and throwing them in the clothes basket. Joe almost loses his life in trying to save Trina, who appears just as the district attorney is about to hit the ball. Joe's mother is freed and the two with Trina and her father find happiness in the little home in the country.

"East of Suez"

Pola Negri Appears as English-Chinese Girl in Colorful Paramount Adaptation of Stage Play

Reviewed by C. S. Sewell

In the Paramount adaptation of Somerset Maugham's stage play, "East of Suez," Pola Negri for the first time portrays an Oriental role, that of a girl half English and half Chinese.

The entire action takes place in China, and the story shows the girl as ostracized by the white people because of her Oriental blood. She is sought after by three men, a high-class Englishman who weakly gives her up and then returns to marry her, another Englishman whom she marries in desperation and an intriguing Chinese mandarin.

The outstanding point of this picture is its Oriental atmosphere, and this has been effectively played up. The contrasting psychology of the Orient and the West furnishes much of the drama, the settings and even the subtitling being designed to accent this note.

Changes in the story show the girl as being entirely dominated by her white blood and a victim of seemingly unjust racial prejudice, but the role does not succeed in establishing very strong sympathy, for she shows no force in combating an unkind fate. Also, the hero, while weak-willed, acts as the average man would under such circumstances, and you do not really blame him. A belated display of force of character on his part brings about the desired happy ending when the husband is the victim of poisoned wine taken by accident.

It will be seen that the story is not a pleasant or particularly strong one and in fact the plight of the heroine is tragic until near the end. The theme is melodramatic, and much is made of Oriental intrigue in the wierd character and dark plotting of the sinister Chinese mandarin. There is good drama in some of the situations, especially the climax, with unusually strong and sustained suspense while you are waiting for the husband to carry out his threat and wondering which of the three drank the poison.

Pola Negri does good work but it is not a role that shows her to full advantage, for her opportunities are limited, the men in the story dominating the plot. Edmund Lowe as the hero and Rockliffe Fellowes as the villain are capably cast, while Sojin Kamiyama, who made a personal hit in "The Thief of Bagdad," handles a similar role with uncanny effectiveness.

"East of Suez" will have its greatest appeal for patrons who are fascinated by Oriental atmosphere and intrigue. For the general public we doubt if it will prove altogether satisfying entertainment.

Story

Daisy Forbes returning to China after having grown up in England soon finds her father has just died, and she is socially boycotted. She discovers the reason is because she is half-caste, her mother being a Chinese woman who poses as her nurse. George Tevis who came to take a position in the government service, loves her, but is persuaded by his uncle to renounce her. Lee Tai, a sinister mandarin uses all his oriental cunning, including drugs to get hold of her and succeeds, but she is rescued by an Englishman, Anderson, and she marries him in desparation, but is unhappy as Anderson awakes to the fact that he too is shunned. Tevis finally determines to defy conventions and marry Daisy but finds she is the wife of Anderson who has told Daisy he will kill Tevis if he sees them together. Tevis returns to bid Daisy goodbye. Before Anderson can carry out the threat, he drinks wine poisoned at Lee Tai's orders and intended for Tevis and falls dead. Tevis takes Daisy back to England and Lee Tai is executed according to Chinese law.

"Frivolous Sal"

Western Melodrama with Wonderful Background and Abundance of Thrills Has Good Cast

Reviewed by Tom Waller

A western melodrama of the old school with a wonderful mountainous background and thrills galore should insure First National's "Frivolous Sal" a good reception at the average box office. The success of this picture with sophisticated audiences, however, is a matter for consideration. It would seem that there is a superfluity of sub-titles, of the stereotyped and hackneyed class which over-explain action in the production which in most instances is perfectly obvious.

"Frivolous Sal" boasts an excellent cast. Eugene O'Brien, Mae Busch and Ben Alexander are featured. The performance of the three, however, may not be considered up to their usual standard by some audiences. Their acting in certain parts is conspicuously automatic, as if they were over-directed. This is particularly so of their portrayal of emotional highlights, of which there are many in this picture. The film runs close to eight reels and this condition would probably be less apparent were the shears used, especially in the earlier and later footage.

Nothing is left to the imagination in the presentation of the thrills. A horse and driver are seen to fall in an attempt to cross a chasm. The camera follows them from the time they start to fall until they are dashed on the rocks far below. A fight in a western saloon is most realistically portrayed. Both men are weakened to the point of exhaustion and covered with gore before it is finally terminated.

One scene which will arouse the maximum suspense of any picture patron is a battle in a tram car high over a valley between two great hills. O'Brien and Mitchell Lewis are the contestants, fighting over a bag of stolen gold. They claw at one another's face

"Hooked"

(Educational—Comedy—Two Reels)

In the first reel of Lloyd Hamilton's newest comedy for Educational the action concerns his unsuccessful attempts to catch some fish for his sweetheart, and the second shows his various endeavors to board a ship on which his sweetheart is taking a trip with his rival and her father. Fishing stuff is not new for Hamilton and he is always effective in such scenes. In this comedy he has a lot of new gags along this line that will get laughs. There are a number of amusing scenes in the steamship sequences and most of the situations are new. Especially novel is the ending, where he gives up the chase and eats lunch in a little shack on the pier. The owner in putting up the bill of fare nails it to the ship, which carries it away. Hamilton asks for the menu, the shack tumbles into the water and he saves himself by climbing through a porthole into his sweetheart's room. While not quite as snappy or hilarious as some of this star's vehicles, "Hooked" is amusing slapstick that should prove a laugh-getter in the majority of theatres.—C. S. S.

"The Wild Goose Chaser"

(Pathe—Comedy—Two Reels)

Ben Turpin fans will find that comedian's latest for Mack Sennett, "The Wild Goose Chaser," to be replete with Turpin grimaces and Turpin stunts. It is about as funny a two- reeler as he has ever turned out. In this comedy Turpin is a "great" hunter. He has guns ranging from a popper to a Springfield. One is a double-barrel affair, only the barrells separate when the comedian has "two birds to kill."

Madeline Hurlock, in the role of the hunter's wife, follows Turpin through marshland and heather until a "friend" of her husband suggests that she flee with him. The flight includes a picture show and what they see makes them decide to return and tear up a note to the hunter. The hunter picks up the note and after shooting-up the house in Turpin style he and his wife agree to forget about hunting and estrangement.—T. W.

Instead of Virginia Vance, who only has a small bit, Ruth Hiatt has the leading feminine role in this Educational-Cameo Comedy in support of the principal player, Cliff Bowes, who appears as a chap who is smitten with a pretty nurse and tries all sorts of stunts to become a patient in the hospital, finally succeeds, escapes when he is to be operated upon and as he is rejoicing is knocked down and really injured by an auto. The idea is a familiar one and most of the gags follow along typical lines, with a few original stunts. The comedy keeps moving at a good pace and should prove satisfactory for the average "slapstick" fan.—C. S. S.

Keene's wife dies and he goes West with a theatrical troupe, leaving his young son, Benny, in New York. In Placer Valley Keene meets Sal, owner of a saloon, a heritage from her father. Benny arrives in the Valley just in time to witness his father marrying Sal. Keene takes over the saloon and is being milched by Osner, a professional gambler, when Steve McGregor, friend of Sal, intervenes. After a bloody fight, McGregor whips the gambler. Sal then takes over the place and in order to meet his I. O. U.'s Keene is compelled by Osner to open the safe in the saloon containing McGregor's gold. Keene does, and Benny, looking in the window, sees Osner take the metal. Benny is injured by debris from the building which is blasted by Osner. Benny shields his father when the sheriff investigates and Keene sets out to get Osner and return the gold. Osner flees to a tram car, into which Keene also jumps before it is started from one mountain top to another. In mid-air Keene succeeds in spilling Osner. He loses his own grip but falls on a sandy bank and all ends happily.

Fox Studios Working Fast to Complete Work on Rest of 1924-25 Productions

ALTHOUGH actual production at the Fox Film Corporation Eastern and West Coast studios is at a low ebb, only four dramatic pictures and eight comedies being photographed, the production departments in the two big buildings and annexes of the company are as busy as the proverbial beehives, cutting, editing, titling, writing scripts and putting the finishing touches on any number of pictures to be released shortly as part of the 1924-25 program.

The dramatic productions in work at studios are: "Once in a Lifetime," an Edmund Lowe starring vehicle from the pen of Max Brand: "The Scarlet Honeymoon," starring Shirley Mason, and "Wild Ridin'," Buck Jones' latest western, which will show the celebrated cowboy star doing some of the most daring riding ever screened. The comedy productions being "shot" include a Van Bibber, "The Bullfighter," a "monkey," with Max, Moritz and Pep, a few Imperials and a couple of Sunshines.

Chester Bennett is directing "Once in a Lifetime" while "The Scarlet Honeymoon" is the initial directorial effort of Alan Hale, who was recently made a director by Fox. Edmund Mortimer is wielding the megaphone for Buck Jones in "Wild Ridin'."

The only remaining production "in work" is "The Hunted Woman." The company making this picture is out on location in the Yosemite Valley making the outdoor sequences. Seena Owens and Earl Schenk have the leading roles in this special which is an adaptation from James Oliver Curwood's story of the same name. John Conway is directing this picture.

For the first time this season Tom Mix is getting a breathing space between pictures. He has just finished "Riders of the Purple Sage" an adaptation from Zane Grey's novel of the same name and is resting easy before he starts work on its sequel "The Rainbow Trail." The vacation will not be of long duration because the scenario department has announced that the continuity for the film is completed so the call of "camera" will resound on the Mix lot again in a few days. In this connection it may be noted that "The Rainbow Trail" is the last Mix special for the 1924-25 season, the season that marked Mix's promotion from star series productions to specials.

The script on "Hunting Wild Animals in Hollywood," the last Fox giant special production for this season is now in the course of preparation. The scenario department is also preparing the continuity on "She Wolves," "Everyman's Wife" and "Tainted Souls." These three productions will be put "in work" in a short time and according to advance information regarding them they will maintain the high standard of the other Fox productions of the 1924-25 season.

The cutting room of the Fox West Coast studios is the scene of a lot of activity these days. John Ford, director of the Fox epic film "The Iron Horse," now entering its seventh month at the Lyric Theatre, New York, is one of the Fox megaphone wielders who is putting in a lot of his time in that room. Mr. Ford is giving the finishing touches to his latest special, unnamed as yet, which will be classed as a "giant," and which is a romance of the racetrack. This is a 1925-26 release.

W. S. Van Dyke is also making the cutting room his headquarters. He is selecting the best part of a number of reels "shot" around Buck Jones for "The Trail Rider." With Ford and Van Dyke is J. G. Blystone hard at work finishing up "Dick Turpin," most expensive production in which Tom Mix has ever appeared. Featured in this picture is Kathleen Myers, beautiful new discovery, whom it is claimed is the most stunning looking woman on the screen. Other featured players are Philo McCullough, James Marcus, Lucille Hutton, Alan Hale and Bull Montana. A new thoroughbred mare named "Black Bess," in honor of the original Dick Turpin's horse, has been added to the Mix stable, and plays the role of "Black Bess" in this production.

Plays 12 Weeks in Auckland, N. Z.

What is believed to be a world's record for the presentation of a motion picture in a city of 150,000, or approximately that size, has been established in Auckland, New Zealand, in connection with the premiere engagement of Cecil B. DeMille's Paramount special, "The Ten Commandments."

Managing Director John W. Hicks, Jr., of the Paramount Australian organization, has cabled E. E. Shauer, director of the foreign department of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, that it has been found necessary to extend the engagement of "The Ten Commandments" from six to nine weeks to care for the demand for seats and that another three weeks' extension probably will be required to satisfy the public's demand to see the De Mille masterpiece.

Change in Release Date

Associated Exhibitors announces a change in the release date of its feature production, "Battling Bunyan," starring Wesley Barry. The Wesley Barry picture was originally scheduled for December 28, but due to the importance of its release the production was held over the Christmas season and is finally to be launched January 18.

Home Parties With Films

Motion picture parties at home are getting to be quite a fad with those who can afford them. The thing is to invite your friends to a theatre party and have one of the big pictures of the year to show the guests. The latest affair of this kind was given recently by Albert Wiggin, President of Chase National Bank, who had as his feature picture Warner Bros. "Broadway After Dark."

Metro Buys "You Too"

"You Too," Roger Burlingame's novel of a young man in the advertising business, has been bought by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, it was announced by that company this week.

The novel is a satire on the business world, and as such is expected by Harry Rapf, associate studio executive who arranged the purchase during his stay in New York, to make a motion picture which will find universal response from film audiences.

National Board of Review Praises Vitagraph Pictures

RECOGNITION of the director as the "soul" of the motion picture is paid by "Exceptional Photoplays," the official bulletin of the National Board of Reviews in its current issue..

Taking as its text the responsibility and the importance of the man at the megaphone, not only in handling all the myriad details of a production, but actually breathing into it the breath of life, the Committee on Exceptional Photoplays of the National Board pays David Smith the remarkable compliment of a special appreciation, notably for his work in the production of the Vitagraph special, "Captain Blood," from Rafael Sabatini's novel.

This number of "Exceptional Photoplays" devotes two lengthy reviews, each in enthusiastic praise, to productions of a single company. Vitagraph is the producer-distributor to which this extraordinary tribute is paid, not only "Captain Blood" but "The Clean Heart" or "The Cruelties of Life," J. Stuart Blackton's production of A. S. M. Hutchinson's classic, receiving particular commendation.

"To our mind," says the committee, speaking through "Exceptional Photoplays," "the soul of a motion picture is, or should be, the director. In his hands is the complete control of all the component parts that go to make up a picture. He knows how the actors should best do their parts, what should go into the settings to bring out the air of realism and the much more difficult and evasive 'atmosphere'; it is his omnipotent wisdom that must embrace decisions, from proper casting to the type of hats that the 'mob without' must wear.

Director's Responsibility Heavy

"Long before that ideal producer of the regular stage has come for whom Gordon Craig has so long been crying, who would be wise enough and powerful enough to control every event and detail in a stage production, we motion picture lovers have the motion picture director. This tremendous responsibility of a director is greater, perhaps, or at least more varied in responsibility than of any creator in other forms of art. And in order to perfect himself and reach greater heights he should receive adequate recognition by critics of motion pictures and discriminating applause by the motion picture audience.

"In 'Captain Blood' the director, Mr. David Smith, deserves enthusiastic appreciation for his work.

"The approach to the evaluation of a motion picture in this way—from the angle of the director—does not in any manner belittle the work of the authors, scenario writers, actors or designers of settings. We give them full praise. In 'Captain Blood' much can be said, for instance, of the work of J. Warren Kerrigan in the title part—gentle, alert, crafty, ironic, humorous, gallant, passionate, daring, sometimes fool-hardy—Mr. Kerrigan's interpretation is human and engaging to a superb degree.

"As given in the film version, the actors do not appear as a supporting cast in stage use of that term. Arabella Bishop, Jeremy Pitt, Lord Julian Wade, Don Diego and all the other people of the play appear as definite characters in a narrative, each playing a natural, essential and individual role as the tale unwinds upon the screen. This capability and evenness of effect of the actors in the cast is most commendable, and is one of the outstanding virtues of the film.

"This picture, conceived from the angle of objective picturesqueness, has all of the qualities of interesting entertainment that a motion picture of adventure and romance should have—constantly changing scene, swiftly moving incident, a dramatic suspense of theme and the illusion of reality. 'Captain Blood' is certainly good entertainment."

"The Clean Heart"

In its review of another Vitagraph special, Exceptional Photoplays said: "'The Clean Heart' or 'The Cruelties of Life' is an exceptional picture in the best sense of the word. It is exceptionally good in direction and acting, adding greatly to the laurels of J. Stuart Blackton, the director, and Percy Marmont, who plays the lead. At the same time it represents an experiment in picture making, an attempt to enlarge the scope of the screen beyond the realm of plot and action into the more difficult field of characterization.

"For here is a picture which sets out to portray the subtle psychological problem of a man who suffers a nervous breakdown and hovers on the border of insanity until he finally finds himself again. It accomplishes this to a remarkable extent and at the point where it has perhaps failed of full realization both the critics and the spectators who have the progress of the screen at heart are sure to be lenient.

"To our mind Percy Marmont does the best acting of his career in this picture. He faces the extremely difficult task of portraying a state of mind in terms of the camera and succeeds in holding the attention and sympathy of the audience under circumstances which would ordinarily repel. The picture as a whole greatly adds to the dignity and the seriousness of the screen."

LUCILLE LEE STEWART

Charming screen star will have feminine lead with Weber and Fields in "Friendly Enemies," a Producers Distributing Corporation release.

Title of MacLean's Latest

The fourth of the first series of independent productions made by Douglas MacLean for release by Associated Exhibitors, which was made under the working title "Sky High" will be released as "Introduce Me."

This comedy is said to reach new heights of hilarity, being laid in the Swiss Alps and in Paris. Opposite the star in the leading feminine role is Anne Cornwall, well known for her splendid work in Christie Comedies. Others in the cast are E. J. Ratcliffe, Robert Ober, and L. C. Shumway. "Introduce Me" was made under the direction of George J. Crone, who also directed the star in "Never Say Die."

Three National Tie-Ups for Warner's "Bobbed Hair"

EXHIBITORS who book "Bobbed Hair," the unusual novel written by twenty of the foremost and popular authors of America, which is to be one of the earliest and biggest productions of Warner Bros. in next season's program, are to have the benefit of three great national exploitation, publicity and advertising campaigns, it was announced by the Warner Bros. office.

According to Sam E. Morris, of the Warner firm, three co-operative tie-ups have been arranged between Collier's Weekly, which holds the first serial rights to the story, E. P. Putnam's Sons, who will bring out the novel just about the time the serial finishes, and the American Newspaper Syndicate, which will syndicate the story in several hundred newspapers, all of this to be backed up by Warner's own national campaign.

When the plans of each of the companies mentioned above materialize, "Bobbed Hair," according to Mr. Morris, will be one of the biggest advanced advertised pictures that Warner Bros., or any other firm, ever has offered to an exhibitor.

In the first place, Collier's Weekly will start this week to run the story with opening chapters by Carolyn Wells and Alexander Woollcott. This will run for twenty weeks in the magazine, which has a circulation of more than 1,000,000 weekly, and will be backed by the Collier Company with "ads" running from one-quarter to one-half page, in addition to what already has appeared.

About the time the serial finishes, E. P. Putnam's Sons will bring out the novel and start a national advertising campaign. This will consist of "ads" up to one-quarter page in such nationally known newspapers as the New York Times, Philadelphia Ledger, Chicago News, Boston Transcript and similar papers in the first-class cities. This will be followed by other advertising in second-class cities and such national magazines as the Atlantic Monthly, the Forum, the Bookman and other publications read by book readers.

In addition to this, 4,000 bookstores in the United States and Canada will be circularized, and they, in turn, will circularize their customers, so that everyone in the United States who reads a book will be reached. The publishers' campaign will wind up with publication through the American Newspaper Syndicate of the novel in newspaper serial form, which will reach several million more readers and persons who attend motion pictures.

Back of this, Warner Bros. will put on their own publicity and advertising campaign, of which the above is only a part, arranged by the company to give the exhibitors the benefit of the greatest advance exploitation in the history of motion pictures.

"This," said Mr. Morris, "is part of our general plan for next season—big stories and the biggest advance exploitation possible."

"A Fool and His Money"

Advices from Harry Cohn on the West Coast state that "A Fool and His Money," the film version of George Barr McCutcheon's novel, has been completed, and the first print is now on its way East. This is the fifth of the Columbia series with a cast consisting of Madge Bellamy, William Haines, Stuart Holmes and Alma Bennett, supported by Charles Conklin, Lon Poff, Eugenie Besserer and Carrie Clark Ward. The picture was directed by Erle C. Kenton.

"The Parasite"

J. G. Bachmann, vice-president and general manager of distribution for B. P. Schulberg Productions, announced yesterday that Helen Martin's story, "The Parasite," will be the next Preferred Picture to be released by his organization. The definite date for first showings has been set for January 20th. "The Parasite" is a Gasnier production adapted by Eve Unsell and featuring Owen Moore, Madge Bellamy, Bryant Washburn, Lilyan Tashman, Mary Carr, Bruce Guerin and Dorothy Dwan.

Priscilla Dean Will Make Personal Appearance Tour

ON January 18, at the Main Street Theatre in Kansas City, Priscilla Dean will commence a seven weeks tour of the most elaborately staged personal appearances ever undertaken by a motion picture star.

On this tour Miss Dean will carry a complete set of special scenery and props for a full stage setting that will represent one of the deep, sumptuous Egyptian scenes in the Hunt Stromberg production, "A Care in Cairo." This setting will be dressed with a number of Nubians, beautiful harem girls and soothsayers, and burning incense will create the atmosphere of the East. Miss Dean will make her appearance attired in the ornate harem costume she wears in "A Care in Cairo," and supported by her leading man will play one of the dramatic scenes of the picture.

The act was especially prepared for the star by Hunt Stromberg, and is so constructed that it may be played as a prologue or as a "breakin" when the scene in the picture is reached on the screen.

Miss Dean will be accompanied on the tour by her leading man, and preceded by an advance agent who, in addition to handling the advance publicity, will recruit and costume local talent to fill the parts of the Nubians and harem girls.

Following her appearance in Kansas City she will appear at The Capitol in Detroit, and The Lafayette in Buffalo before playing New York City.

New Title for Dean Feature

Hunt Stromberg's third Priscilla Dean feature for Producers Distributing Corporation will be released as "The Crimson Runner" and final scenes of this production are now being filmed under Tom Forman's direction at the West Coast studio.

Special Exploitation for Colleen Moore in "So Big"

"SO BIG," which is one of First National's Pace Maker group of releases, and incidentally, its first Colleen Moore starring vehicle, will be awarded special treatment in its distribution and exploitation by the company on account of outstanding quality.

A print of the picture has been run off for officials and others of the First National home office and they are more thoroughly convinced than ever that "So Big" is one of the finest productions of the year. There is no question, in their minds, but that it is the best picture Colleen Moore has ever made, not excepting "Flaming Youth," which hitherto has been acknowledged to be her finest photoplay by critics and public alike.

As in the case of "Flaming Youth," "So Big" is founded upon one of the fastest and biggest selling novels of its season; it has a big story, excellent dramatic values and has been given a star cast. The sales of the novel, "Flaming Youth," have passed the 200,000 mark and the publishers of "So Big," Doubleday, Page & Co., are running off one big edition after another of Edna Ferber's novel to keep pace with the demand for it. It is nearing the 200,000 mark and the demand is unabated. Its sales will, it is stated, soon pass the quarter million mark. This means a big, ready-made public for the picture, the readers of the novel being in excess of a million, as each volume sold has had at least five readers, with other millions who have heard about the book, or read of it, and are anxious to know what it is about without taking the time to read it.

Because of the excellence of Miss Moore's work as Selina in "So Big," the fine direction of Charles Brabin; the appeal of the story and the big public awaiting the photoplay, First National will accord it treatment similar in many respects to that accorded to its "specials." It has been decided that the First National staff of exploitation men gathered by Allan S. Glenn, supervisor of exploitation, will cover the important key city runs of "So Big."

"White Mice" in Color Film

Randolph Bartlett is now working on the continuity of "White Mice" by Richard Harding Davis, which E. H. Griffith will direct for the Wilson-Wetherald Productions, Inc. This is the first full length picture in color to be made under the William V. D. Kelley process, controlled by Sering D. Wilson & Company, Inc.

Fox Will Retain Title of "The Man Without a Country"

ANNOUNCEMENT comes from the Fox Film Corporation studios that Mr. Fox has definitely decided not to change the title of his new production, "The Man Without a Country," taken from Edward Everett Hale's immortal classic.

During a pre-release exhibition of the picture at Springfield, Mass., recently a title contest was held to obtain, if possible, a more suitable title. Although there were several thousand suggested, the consensus of opinion of those who saw the picture was that the title should not be changed.

The fact that the Hale classic had been filmed (many years ago) prompted the quest for a new title, but it was decided that since the Fox production is the first adequate picturization of the famous story that the title should not be sacrificed. The Fox version is said to greatly surpass the author's pen portrayal and is considered by Mr. Fox's associates to be the crowning achievement of his film career.

The following editorial comment from the Springfield Republican is the essence of columns of favorable newspaper reviews published in Springfield on the occasion of the premier:

"If William Fox never makes another picture, he will be gratefully remembered by critics and fans alike for his deeply stirring and finely wrought screen version of 'The Man Without a Country.' This photoplay overtops them all."

"Hot Water" Adds To Records

Two Go to Smash in Salt Lake City's Victoria, Manager Says

Harold Lloyd's latest Pathe production "Hot Water" broke two records at the Victory Theatre in Salt Lake City, according to a wire received at the Pathe Home Offices last week.

The telegram, written by the manager of the theatre, reads:

"Opened with 'Hot Water' Saturday and for four days have broken all previous records both for number and admissions and receipts. Last night, in spite of heaviest snow storm of year, unable to take care of patrons wanting to see the best picture Lloyd ever made. My heartiest congratulations to Pathe and Mr. Lloyd. (Signed) "Carl Porter."

"Captain Blood" Thrills on Its Return Baltimore Date

PLAYING a return engagement in Baltimore, Vitagraph's "Captain Blood," the David Smith production, which was a smashing success in its first run, has just repeated the triumph. Writing in the Baltimore Post, the well known reviewer, DeLid said:

"Shown for the second time in Baltimore at the Hippodrome Theatre this week, 'Captain Blood,' Vitagraph's famous story of piracy in days gone by, still has its appeal to local theatregoers, as was evidenced by packed houses Monday and last night. The story is interesting to tell but must be seen to be appreciated. It is indeed a masterpiece."

The Duluth News-Tribune said, following the opening of the Christmas-week run at the Garrick Theatre:

"The romantic drama of buccaneer days, 'Captain Blood,' teems with adventure and action. Rafael Sabatini has scored tremendously. Followers of motion pictures can tell that he knows real adventure and how to write it. Fans can tell, too, that J. Warren Kerrigan is a most capable portrayer of difficult screen characters, for his appearance as 'Captain Blood' is the most brilliant work this popular player has done. He gives a masterful performance."

Chester B. Bahn, Sr., dramatic editor of the Syracuse Telegram and the Sunday American, writing in the former paper, said:

"Odds Blood, but 'tis a jolly piratical week in the Syracuse realm of the cinema. At the Robbins-Eckel, 'Captain Blood,' that gallant buccaneer of those swashbuckling days when the Spanish Main was something else again than a $350 first cabin pleasure cruise, wins the niece of the Governor of Jamaica despite the stigma of the Jolly Roger. If the screen produced no other super-feature than this it could easily be counted wholly successful.

"I have always maintained that there's nothing like a good, old-fashioned love story for entertainment purposes. Let the highbrows (and the lowbrows) have their sex stuff if they must. But for me and the rest of the common herd, give us romance and we'll pay—and pay—and pay. 'Captain Blood' is romance, pure, unadulterated romance. To be sure, it is told with a wealth of colorful incident, and with more action than is customary, but it is essentially romance.

"The realistic battle scenes—the best I've ever seen—the slave market, the flash of the Bloody Assizes, the rebellion of the slaves, the destruction of the French fleet may—as they certainly do—catch the eye. But the love story of 'Captain Blood' and Arabella Bishop goes straight to the heart. And, in the last analysis, that is what is important. And so, while I am giving a still greater measure of praise for the casting of J. Warren Kerrigan and Jean Paige. Kerrigan is as able a romantic actor as the cinema has and his Captain Blood is an admirable stage portrait. Miss Paige fits in nicely as the heroine, and looks charming. The others are cast with an exactness wholly commendable. There is not a poor performance turned in, either by principal or extra."

"Clean Heart" in Quaker City

Unanimous praise was accorded by the newspapers, and a packed house at every performance greeted Vitagraph's "The Clean Heart," the J. Stuart Blackton production, during its run, just closed, at the Karlton Theatre, Philadelphia. The Philadelphia Record said: "Percy Marmont proves once more his ability to interpret a character and give it life. Puddlebox, portrayed by Otis Harlan, would be difficult to improve upon."

"Alice in Slumberland" Novelty Plays to Big Chicago Business

BALABAN AND KATZ have surpassed all previous achievements at their Chicago theater with "Alice in Slumberland," a unique offering presented at their biggest theater Christmas week and at the Tivoli theater the week following. In this number a troupe of baby elephants assist Miss Madge Fuller in relating a story that when finished proves to be one of the finest examples of pantomimic yet revealed to motion picture audiences.

"Alice in Slumberland" was conceived and produced by Billie Burke, a vaudeville producer, who has been responsible for a number of the biggest novelties seen in the Keith theaters. Miss Fuller and her elephants were a sensation with the Sells-Floto Circus the past season and the speed at which she puts these beasts through their routine has been a revelation to motion picture audiences.

Chicago papers spoke in the highest terms of the offering, several of them giving front page publicity to this extraordinary attraction. One paper said, "Alice in Slumberland" is like a Gilbert and Sullivan operetta on a small scale, music and story being of first calibre and every detail carefully worked out presenting a finished offering worthy of an old-time Hippodrome spectacle. That the attraction met with favor from the immense audiences was obvious from the rounds of applause that started soon after Miss Fuller took the stage and were almost continuous throughout the entire number.

To Have Boston Premiere

First National Pictures has decided that its picturization of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's novel, "The Lost World," made in association with Watterson R. Rothacker, shall have its world premiere in Boston. This will be at the Tremont Temple where "Abraham Lincoln" had its ten weeks' run. The showing will open on February 2 and will continue indefinitely at increased admissions, with two performances a day.

New Directors and New Stars for Universal Films in 1925

ANNOUNCEMENT of the engagement of new directors, and the preparation of several notable new stories, for the coming season at Universal City, have been made. The announcement is important in that it lists several important departures in the production schedule of the year.

Charles Brabin, the famous director, signed several days ago by Universal, is to direct Norman Kerry, as his first task at Universal City. "The Prince," an original story, has been purchased as a starring vehicle for Kerry.

William A. Seiter has been assigned to direct "The Teaser," a brilliant new story starring Laura La Plante.

Clarence L. Brown is to do a newspaper story next. "The Goose Woman," Rex Beach's noted Cosmopolitan story, has been purchased for presentation by an all-star cast under Brown's direction. This is a story laid in the offices of a newspaper, and is one of the outstanding fiction hits of the season.

Erle Kenton is to be Reginald Denny's next director. He is now engaged on preparatory work on "I'll Show You the Town," from the story by Elmer J. Davis, in which Denny will be starred. It is a breezy tale of adventure in the hectic whirl of New York life.

Harry Pollard is to direct a Universal's filmization of Chevalier's "My Old Dutch," a romantic story based on the famous old poem. This is a radical departure in picture production, and one that is being watched in its preparatory stages with much interest at the studio.

The engagement of Mary Alden for "Siege," Svend Gade's new production starring Virginia Valli, marks a new type of role for the noted delineator of "mother" parts. She is called upon to play a very old woman, and does it entirely by the application of clever makeup.

"Mine with the Iron Door" Has Splendid Chicago Run

HAROLD BELL WRIGHT'S "The Mine with the Iron Door," a Principal Pictures Corporation attraction, enjoyed a highly successful run at the Randolph Theatre, Chicago. This picture, with a splendid cast, was booked for the Randolph just after Si Griever, of Griever Productions, had taken over the Illinois rights.

Irving M. Lesser, vice-president of Principal Pictures Corporation, conducted a big exploitation campaign in Chicago, sending Ted Malone there to handle it.

"The Mine with the Iron Door" opened to crowded houses and played a heavy business throughout the week. The Chicago critics were highly favorable in their praise of it, particularly Mae Tinee, of the Chicago Tribune. She said:

"'The Mine with the Iron Door' has been amazingly well done under the guidance of Director Sam Wood. There is some beautiful scenery, which the photographer caught effectively. A storm is shown coming up, gaining blackness and velocity and finally sweeping tremendously down the canon. THAT is magnificent.

"I can honestly say that, without a doubt, those who like the books of Harold Bell Wright will be quite enraptured with the film version of what is advertised as his 'newest and greatest' novel. They do say the picture was photographed in the exact locality where the scenes of the story were laid."

The management of the Randolph put out 75 24-sheets, 100 6-sheets, 200 3-sheets and 500 1-sheets. A special bookmark was printed and distributed in the public libraries. Co-operative window displays were effected with more than 200 stores in and outside of the Loop district.

"The Lost World" in Boston; Indefinite Run at Tremont

FIRST NATIONAL PICTURES has completed arrangements for the showing of its big special production, "The Lost World," from Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's novel, at the Tremont Temple Theatre, Boston.

The engagement, of indefinite length, will begin on February 2. It will play at $1 top admission price, with two shows a day. The opening will be preceded by a great advertising and exploitation campaign, which will start eight or ten weeks in advance of the opening.

Hal Olver of the home office exploitation staff is now in Boston on the preliminary arrangements for the show.

Production and editing have now been completed on this production and the finished picture has been run off for the officials of the company and the representatives of Watterson R. Rothacker, in association with whom the production has been made. They are unanimous in proclaiming "The Lost World" to be the greatest novelty and the biggest motion picture ever produced.

The exact date and the place of the New York showing of "The Lost World" will be announced shortly.

Woody Announces Changes

Associated Exhibitors Gives New Titles to Three of Its Productions

In a statement issued this week from the office of J. S. Woody, general manager of Associated Exhibitors, the trade is advised of changes in titles of three forthcoming releases on the Associated schedule.

"The Ultimate Good," produced by the St. Regis Pictures Corporation, will be released under the title of "Bad Company." This feature attraction co-stars Madge Kennedy and Conway Tearle and presents Charles Emmett Mack and Lucille Stewart in the principal supporting roles. E. F. Griffith directed the production.

The Douglas MacLean production, which was made under the title of "Sky High" will be released as "Introduce Me."

"The Great Air Mail Robbery," which is now nearing completion at the Glendale Studios, Long Island, will be released under the title of "The Sky Raider." Gladys Walton and Jacqueline Logan are prominently cast in this feature with Captain Charles Nungesser, the famous French ace. The direction is in charge of T. Hayes Hunter.

"Bad Company" will be made available February 1. "Introduce Me" has been tentatively set for February 22, while "The Sky Raider" will be released March 8.

Svend Gade Starts Work

Production has started on "Siege," adapted from the famous novel by Samuel Hopkins Adams, at Universal City. The new picture marks the first time Virginia Valli and Eugene O'Brien have been co-starred, and it is the first strictly modern production of Svend Gade, the celebrated Danish director, whose first work at Universal was with Mary Philbin making "Fifth Avenue Models."

"The Parasite"

"The Parasite," Helen Martin's novel which will be Gasnier's next production for B. P. Schulberg, has been adapted by Eve Unsell who collaborated on the scripts for "White Man" and "The Breath of Scandal." In the cast of "The Parasite" are Owen Moore, Madge Bellamy, Bryant Washburn, Lilyan Tashman, Mary Carr and Bruce Guerin.

Turpin and Chase Comedies on Pathe's January 18 List

CHARLEY CHASE in a comedy entitled "Hello Baby," Ben Turpin in "The Wild Goose Chaser," and the fifth chapter of "Galloping Hoofs" entitled "The Faithful Jump," lead the Pathe program of releases for the week of January 18.

The Ben Turpin comedy, made by Mack Sennett, deals with one of the hardships that some married women experience when their husbands have acquired the hunting habit. Madeline Hurlock in the role of the huntsman's bride follows her mate through the brush and mire in quest of the festive duck, and in desperation she would elope with her husband's best friend. Jack Cooper portrays the role of the so-called friend who makes a living as a divorce specialist. Eugenia Gilbert plays the role of the vamping actress. The story was written by Frank Capra with titles by Felix Adler and A. B. Giebler. Lloyd Bacon handled the direction of the picture under the supervision of William Hornbeck.

The Hal Roach-Charley Chase one-reel comedy is released under the title of "Hello Baby." The Hal Roach brand of single reel comedies to which this subject belongs has become unusually popular during the past six months and has on a number of occasions merited special approval on the part of the newspaper critics. In "Hello Baby" Charley Chase is ably assisted by Katherine Grant, Al Hallet and The Baby. Leo McCarey directed the production.

This week marks the release of the fifth chapter of the Pathe serial "Galloping Hoofs," featuring Allene Ray and Johnnie Walker in a story written by Frank Leon Smith and produced by Malcolm Strauss. The preceding chapters of this exciting race track serial have met with unusual success and bid fair to equal the returns of some of the most profitable serials released in the past by Pathe, which were also directed by George B. Seitz. The cast in part supporting Allene Ray and Johnnie Walker in this chapter consists of Ernest Hilliard, J. Barney Sherry and Armand Cortes.

Pathe Review No. 3 is notable for the start of a series of beauty pictures under the running title of "The Prettiest Girl I Know." This much advertised series of pictures starts with selections made by Coles Phillips, the famous magazine cover artist. In this installment the secret of the "cover beauties" is explained by the term synthetic. It is shown how, on the ordinary magazine cover, three or four girls are used as models for one subject. One is selected for her beautiful arms, another for her hair, and so forth. The other two subjects of the Review are "The Pride of the Plantation," an interesting scenic story of the pineapple industry of Hawaii and "Visiting Our Own America," a unique Pathecolor series of views of the city of Nashville.

"African Huntsman" is the title under which the funny little Terry cartoons are released for the week in Aesop's Film Fables.

"Topics of the Day" No. 3 and Pathe News Nos. 8 and 9 complete the Pathe program for the week of January 18.

New Paramount Branch Manager

A. B. Leak, formerly manager of the Sioux Falls exchange for Paramount, has been promoted to the management of the Minneapolis exchange, succeeding Jack Raper. A. Mendenhall, formerly salesman in the Des Moines Paramount exchange, has been promoted to fill the vacancy created by Leak's advancement.

New Griffith Film Released

D. W. Griffith's new picture, "Isn't Life Wonderful," which has won so many splendid reviews by the New York daily press, goes into immediate distribution by United Artists Corporation, President Hiram Abrams announces.

Under this arrangement audiences all over the country will see Griffith's highly praised production closely following its Broadway premieres at the Rivoli and the Rialto theatres. The length of the film is 8,600 feet.

Paramount Signs Mary Brian

Mary Brian, who played the role of Wendy in J. M. Barrie's "Peter Pan," has been signed to a long term contract with Paramount, Jesse L. Lasky announced yesterday. "Mary Brian's brilliant personality was charmingly manifested in her portrayal for 'Peter Pan,'" said Mr. Lasky. "Like Betty Bronson, she flashed into the limelight when we began a search for ideal players to appear in J. M. Barrie's fantasy."

Canadians Praise Vitagraph

Newspaper Appreciates the Making of Pictures in the Snow Country

Praise to Vitagraph, for including in its 1924-25 schedule several specials whose scenes are laid largely in Canada, was given by the Winnipeg, Manitoba, Express and Bulletin in a recent issue. As appropriate to Canadian Book Week, the paper published a special article dealing with motion pictures, devoting itself entirely to Vitagraph attractions. The Express and Bulletin said in part:

"Canadian stories, not only of the romantic north, but of the Canadian farm lands, are becoming increasingly popular as screen offerings. In a Canadian Book Week interview with A. S. Clatworthy, branch manager of Vitagraph, pioneer among motion picture companies, it was learned that, in response to the increasing interest in pictures founded on Canadian stories, Vitagraph's current schedule includes the production of four Canadian books, two of which are by members of the Canadian Authors' Association and two by a popular writer who lays all his scenes in the Canadian Northland.

"'Baree, Son of Kazan' is an amazingly good dog story, full of the action which James Oliver Curwood infuses into all his stories.

"'Steele, of the Royal Mounted' is, as its name implies, a story of the Northwest Mounted Police. There is an exciting chase of an outlaw and a thrilling battle in the wilderness, into which the element of chivalry enters."

News or "Filler,"—Which?

Pathe believes that when an exhibitor books a news reel he wants a news reel and not one that's padded out with scenics and other "magazine" material.

If you want scenics and the like, the Pathe Review gives you the best obtainable, but Pathe News is all news all the time.

It's often a lot easier, and it saves money, to pad out a news reel. But when you're through you've got a hybrid thing, neither fish, flesh, fowl nor good red herring.

You can buy cheaper news reels. But you get what you pay for when you book the

PATHE NEWS

Warner Bros. Have Larger Plans for Marie Prevost

AS forecast in these columns it certainly should be a happy New Year for Marie Prevost, as this newly married and popular actress found a fine present awaiting her this week from Warner Bros. in the shape of a new contract. It was a better contract, too, and then just to add to an overflowing measure of happiness, Lady Luck came along and handed Kenneth Harlan, the new husband of Marie, a new contract from his firm. So both stars are bound to do a lot of good work during the coming year.

Anent the renewal of Miss Prevost's contract with Warner Bros., it is interesting to note what J. L. Warner, vice-president of the organization, has to say:

"Judging from the barometer of public opinion which register's a star's popularity unerringly via the box-office, the critical reviews, the exhibitors reports, and the increase in fan mail, we find that Marie Prevost has advanced at an astonishing rapid rate to the point where she must be considered one of the select ot motion picture stardom.

"There is no doubt but that her dramatic portrayals in such pictures as 'The Dark Swan,' 'The Lover of Camille,' 'Cornered,' 'The Marriage Circle,' and several others equally distinctive, justifies the recognition of Miss Prevost not only as a box-office magnet, but as a player fully capable of portraying the most exacting dramatic roles. We have acquired the rights to certain notably successful books and plays in which we intend to feature Marie Prevost during the coming season. The Warner Brothers selected Miss Prevost as a potential star two years ago, and we are happy to be able to exchange Christmas presents in the form of a contract renewal which represents mutual satisfaction and greater benefits to be derived."

At present Miss Prevost is co-featured with Monte Blue in "Recompense," by Robert Keable. This has been one of the most popular novels of the past year. Harry Beaumont, who directed these stars in "The Lover of Camille," adapted from "Deburau," is directing the production.

Miss Lynch With Hoot

Helen Lynch, leading woman with many different stars of the screen and who recently played with Reginald Denny in "Oh, Doctor!" and with Pauline Frederick in "Smouldering Fires," has been chosen to play the leading feminine role for Universal opposite Hoot Gibson in the next Universal-Gibson special production, "Rarin' to Go." Clifford Smith will direct it. The supporting cast also includes Philo McCullough, Emmett King, Tod Brown, Kate Price and Turner Savage.

VAMPS VICE-PRESIDENT

Syd Chaplin, in the character role of "Charley's Aunt," has a little off-stage bit with Mr. John Flinn between scenes of the coming Producers Distributing release.

Samuel Goldwyn to Star Ronald Colman as "Romeo"

SAMUEL GOLDWYN will produce Shakespeare's "Romeo and Juliet" on a tremendous scale in the Fall. Ronald Colman, who is under contract with Mr. Goldwyn for five years, will play the part of Romeo, and a feminine star of first magnitude will enact Juliet.

At the present time Mr. Goldwyn will not divulge the name of the feminine lead. Upon his return from Europe next month, Mr. Goldwyn will know definitely if he has been successful in consummating arrangements for the services of Juliet an American actress of superior ability and popularity.

"It was after we had seen 'A Thief in Paradise,' in completed form," said Mr. Goldwyn, "and noted the splendid love interpretation that Ronald Colman gave to the leading role in the latest George Fitzmaurice production, that we decided to make the greatest of all love dramas, 'Romeo and Juliet,' with Colman as Romeo.

"After his appearance in 'The White Sister,' the name of Ronald Colman flashed throughout the industry as a great romantic find. Again in 'Tarnish' he demonstrated his ability in registering shades of character. In 'Romola' he makes a striking figure in the leading masculine role and in 'A Thief in Paradise' he emerges as a screen lover ably and ideally fitted to play Romeo."

It is understood that no expense will be spared to produce "Romeo and Juliet" in a distinctive manner.

Frances Marion will adapt the classic for the film interpretation.

Doris Kenyon, Claude Gillingwater, Ronald Colman and Alec B. Francis in a scene from First National's "A Thief in Paradise."

Warner's Production Plans

The approach of February 1, when Warner Bros. promised to have this season's output completed, finds eighty per cent. of production finished with the balance of the program either under way or about ready to "shoot." With the exception of "The Easiest Road," an adaptation of "The Eleventh Virgin," "Trapped in the Snow Country," with Rin-Tin-Tin, "Eve's Lover," "My Wife and I," and the new Lubitsch production, the rest of the pictures are either completed or finishing. The balance of the program will be started within the next two weeks and the entire output of this season will be finished about the time scheduled, so that an early start on next year's production may be expected.

BETTY BLYTHE

In the modern garb she will wear in the William Fox photoplay, "Folly of Vanity," in which she is featured.

Vitagraph's "Pampered Youth" Delights Home Office Heads

VITAGRAPH executives in the general offices in Brooklyn had their first view this week of "Pampered Youth," David Smith's latest production, with the result that they declared the adjective, "Happy," written before "New Year," carried a special significance for them.

John B. Rock, general manager, was so enthusiastic that, immediately upon leaving the projection room, he sent this telegram to David Smith:

"Our very heartiest congratulations and warmest thanks. 'Pampered Youth' certainly is destined to take its place among the greatest of productions and to prove for you a memorable personal triumph."

Also, to each of the twenty-nine branch managers of Vitagraph Mr. Rick dispatched a message declaring that this latest attraction is in every way worthy to be in the company of "Captain Blood," "The Clean Heart" or "The Cruelties of Life," and "The Beloved Brute," all outstanding productions on the current schedule.

"Pampered Youth" is a picturization of "The Magnificent Ambersons," the Booth Tarkington novel which created a sensation a few years ago, winning the Pulitzer Prize for the best work of fiction of the year. Like most of Mr. Tarkington's words it has to do with very human, typically American folk, and an engrossing romance, or series of romances is developed. This production, it is pointed out abounds in action, with the most impressive highlight a fire which destroys a large apartment-house, attended by hair-breadth rescues.

Albert E. Smith, president of Vitagraph, who saw "Pampered Youth" at the studio in Hollywood, described it as "The most spectacular picture ever filmed," and Chief Hendricks of the Los Angeles Fire Department, after a pre-view, gave this voluntary testimony to the realism of the big thrill scene:

"It is without doubt the greatest thing in the way of a fire I have ever seen. I never would have believed it possible to make such a picture. Why, it's the same as being right at a fire, except that there is no heat or noise."

The principal roles are filled by Cullen Landis, Alice Calhoun, Allan Forrest and Charlotte Merriam, while the work of the following also entitles the production almost to be described as all-star: Emmett King, Wallace McDonald, Kathryn Adams, Aggie Herring, William J. Irving and Ben Alexander.

Educational Comedy Stars Completing 1924-25 Series

THE first week of the new year finds the units at the Fine Arts Studio, Los Angeles, producing comedies for distribution through Educational Film Exchanges, Inc., working at full speed to complete the series under contract for 1924-25 release. Due to efficient management methods, all of the units are producing on schedule and delivering finished negatives in New York well in advance of release date.

Four companies are at work as the new year begins, one each producing Mermaid, Hamilton, Juvenile and Cameo Comedies. Norman Taurog is directing Lige Conley in a Mermaid Comedy, Arvid Gillstrom has started work on the fourth of the Juvenile series; Steve Roberts is directing Lloyd Hamilton and Al Ray is directing Cliff Bowes, Virginia Vance and Eddie Nelson in Cameo Comedies.

Lige Conley, under the direction of Norman Taurog, is in the midst of a comedy as yet untitled. It is a shipyards comedy. As his leading lady he has chosen Estelle Bradley, a prize winning beauty who won renown when she was chosen as "Miss Atlanta" in the "Atlanta Constitution" beauty prize contest. Miss Bradley entered the great Atlantic City beauty pageant where she won the prize for beauty for the Southern division.

Lloyd Hamilton is working on a two-reel comedy, "Waiting," under the direction of Steve Roberts. Ruth Hiatt is again his leading lady during the illness of Dorothy Seastrom. Others in the cast are Glen Cavender, Otto Fries and Wm. Blaisdell.

Al Ray is directing Cliff Bowes, Virginia Vance and Eddie Nelson in the one-reel Cameo Comedies. Eddie Nelson has just been added to the cast and promises to be a real comedy find. Nelson has never before appeared in pictures but has been playing big time vaudeville circuits and in New York productions for a number of years.

Arvid Gillstrom is directing Jack McHugh and Tommy Hicks in a two-reel Juvenile Comedy.

Scene from "Low Tide," an Educational-Mermaid comedy with Ned Sparks and Peg O'Neill.

New Stunt from "U"

Jewel Production an "Adventure Spectacle" of Wild Animals and Stunt Stuff

Universal is going to produce what is confidently predicted to be the most spectacular and thrilling adventure story of the screen, it was announced this week at the Universal home office, 730 Fifth avenue, New York City.

"Lorraine of the Lions" is the title. The story was written by Isadore Bernstein, supervisor of western and adventure stories, adapted by Carl Krusada and scenarized by Charles Logue. It will be directed by Edward Sedgwick, veteran Universal director, as a Jewel special with an all-star cast, in addition to a circus full of trained wild animals.

"Lorraine of the Lions" is the strangest adventure story ever written, in the opinion of Universal executives. Its central character is a girl who at four years of age has complete mastery, through some subtle psychological bond, over all the animals in her father's circus. A sort of feminine Tarzan. Romance, adventure, psychology, science, mysticism, Yogi philosophy and the "sixth sense" are elements in the tangle of adventure which is spun on two continents and an uncharted island.

Universal is planning to make it one of the most ambitious production ventures of the year. Several prominent players, one circus quota of lions, elephants and monkeys, one yacht, one tramp steamer and one desert island are the first requirements of the production being prepared for by Sedgwick. The cost, it is said, will be much in excess of the usual production ideas.

"Adventure" in Production

Star Cast in Jack London Story of South Sea Island Life

"Adventure," one of the last stories from the pen of the late Jack London, is being produced at the Paramount West Coast studio by Victor Fleming.

The story is one of present-day life in the Solomon Islands of the South Sea. Aside from numerous ship scenes in the production, the entire photoplay takes place on two islands in the Pacific.

Following the filming of several interior sequences, the company will sail to an island in the Pacific Ocean to photograph the South Sea scenes.

Featured in the cast of "Adventure" are Tom Moore, Pauline Starke, Wallace Beery, Raymond Hatton and Walter McGrail. The story was adapted from Jack London's novel by A. P. Younger.

"My Wife and I"

Warner Bros. are soon to put into production a novel by Harriet Beecher Stowe, author of "Uncle Tom's Cabin." This book, which was a best-seller when grandma was a girl, is "My Wife and I," and the oldsters of today will remember it was read by about everybody who could read, along with "Me and My Neighbor" by the same author.

It is a domestic drama, and shows that the same problems that confront the young married people of today, existed in the days of stocks and crinolines. It will be interesting to see just how the scenarist will treat it. John Harron has been engaged to play the son, and production will be underway within a week or so.

WANDA HAWLEY
Signed for Al Christie's "Stop Flirting," to be a Producers Distributing Corp. feature.

To Cuba for Color

Wilson and Wetherald to Make "White Mice" There

Clayton B. Davis, production manager, and Edward H. Griffith, director, of the Wilson-Wetherald Productions, Inc., have returned from Cuba and upon their reports Sering D. Wilson and Royal W. Wetherald have decided that "The White Mice," their first picture in Kelley Color, shall be made in Havana. "The White Mice" is a picturization of Richard Harding Davis' gay adventure story of two American lads in Central America. An inspection of locations in Florida failed to present the screen possibilities in color that Cuba afforded.

Picture production is welcomed by the Cuban officials, according to Mr. Davis. They see in the reproduction of Cuban life on the screen a quickening of interest by all foreign countries, and every possible aid was given to Mr. Davis and Mr. Griffith during their stay on the island.

Fox Directors on Vacation

Two Fox Film Corporation directors have set their megaphones aside for vacations after months of hard work on special productions for the 1924-25 season. They are Lynn Reynolds and Emmett J. Flynn. Mr. Reynolds has finished "Riders of the Purple Sage," starring Tom Mix, and Mr. Flynn, before packing, completed "The Dancers," a Fox giant special which had its Broadway premiere at the Central Theatre January 5. Both of these megaphone wielders are heading toward the California mountains, Flynn with a gun and Reynolds with a camera. The former is after mountain lions and the latter seeks picturesque locations.

"Breed of the Border"

"Breed of the Border" is the third Harry Garson-Lifty Flynn Western production, work on which began this week at the F. B. O. studios in Hollywood. The story is by William D. Hoffman, and ran in the Western Magazine. Mr. Garson will personally direct and supervise the production.

Twelfth Year for Lubitsch

Noted Director for Warner Bros. Rounds Out Eleven Years in Film Art

When Ernst Lubitsch starts the next Warner Bros.' production scheduled to get underway in a week or two, it will mark the beginning of his twelfth year in the industry. For this reason, the director tells Warner Bros., he intends to make his next picture stand out as a sort of a milestone in his career, and is making careful preparations before actually beginning work.

"The Marriage Circle" was made on Mr. Lubitsch's tenth anniversary in the business and it was one of his best. He states he will try and surpass it in his next and fifth production in the United States.

It is not generally known in this country that all of Lubitsch's early years were spent in acting and directing comedies. He began his career in 1913 as a star in one, two and three reel comedies. From acting in them to directing them was the next step, and then came a chance at drama which resulted in "Passion."

Lubitsch is a stickler for types, and it is understood that the delay in getting his new picture underway at Warner's studio is his difficulty in obtaining the types he wants.

Parthenon Pictures

President Oscar A. Price Says Plans Are Rapidly Developing

Oscar A. Price, President of the recently formed Parthenon Pictures Corporation, states that his company's plans are developing rapidly and that they expect to start active distribution of high-class pictures shortly after the first of the year.

Parthenon has already acquired six pictures for independent buyers and now has a representative en route to California to insure its future supply.

"The name Parthenon," says Mr. Price, "has always stood for the acme of perfection in architecture. Goethe once said that the Parthenon was petrified music. We will make the name as significant in the world of pictures as it is in architecture."

Dix Signed by De Mille

Richard Dix, the popular Paramount star, was engaged by William de Mille recently to play a featured role in his next production, "Men and Women," according to an announcement by Jesse L. Lasky, first vice-president of Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, in charge of production. "Men and Women" was adapted to the screen by Clara Beranger from the stage success by Henry C. de Mille, father of the producer-director, and David Belasco.

Charles Ray's "Percy"

George Marion is now at work at the Thomas H. Ince Studios cutting and titling "Percy," the picturization of William H. Hamby's novel, "The Desert Fiddler." "Percy" features Charles Ray and will be a Pathe release.

Lonergan Engaged

Philip Lonergen has been engaged by Warner Bros. to write "Why Girls go Back Home" which will be one of the firm's productions next year. It is a sequel to one of their successes, "Why Girls Leave Home."

Notable Universals Planned

Busy Month Ahead for "U" City Production Staff

The coming month will be a busy one at Universal City, according to reports from the Universal Pictures Corporation. Several important new features are about to go into production. Notable among the productions soon to be gotten under way are "The Goose Woman," Rex Beach's story of newspaper life, which Clarence Brown will direct with an all-star cast; "Lorraine of the Lions," an original story by Isadore Bernstein, which Edward Sedgwick will direct, and "My Old Dutch," a filmization of Chevalier's classic based on the well known old song.

Erle Kenton, who directed the Jack Dempsey pictures recently, will take over Reginald Denny immediately on completion of the production of "California Straight Ahead," and will produce "I'll Show You the Town," from Elmer J. Davis' noted story. William A. Seiter, now directing Laura La Plante in "Dangerous Innocence," will produce "The Teaser" as soon as his present picture is edited.

Several other important pictures will be announced in the next few days, it is stated, and in the meantime final editing is under way on "Up the Ladder," Edward Sloman's production starring Virginia Valli; "Raffles," House Peters' new starring vehicle which King Baggot directed; "Taming the West," Hoot Gibson's new picture, directed by Arthur Rosson, and "The Great Circus Mystery," featuring Joe Bonomo and Louise Lorraine.

"Paradise" to First National

Cosmo Hamilton's Novel to Be Screened, Under New Title

First National has bought the screen rights to Cosmo Hamilton's novel, "Paradise," and will make a picture from it under a different title.

"Paradise" is an English society triangle story with a war episode. The novel has enjoyed great popularity both in England and in the United States.

June Mathis will prepare the continuity on this production and supervise it. The leading part is a male juvenile role.

Fox Changes Title

The title of the Richard Harding Davis Bibber comedy "The Butt Fighter" which has just been finished at the Fox Film Corporation West Coast Studios, has been changed to "A Spanish Romeo," according to an announcement by that company. This is the seventh of the Van Bibber series of two reel comedies to be completed by Fox. George Marshall directed this production with Earle Foxe in the title role of "Van Bibber."

"U" Short Westerns

Ernst Laemmle has completed his third short western feature in a new Universal series which he is making before starting his next full-length feature. It is titled "The Wild West Wallop" and was written by Tenny Wright. In the cast are Edmund Cobb, Lola Todd, Olive Hasbrouck, Howard Truesdell and Frank Newburg.

He will immediately start a fourth with Cobb and Miss Todd in the leading roles.

ANNE CORNWALL

Appearing with George O'Brien in William Fox's "The Roughneck."

"Thundering Romance"

Stampede of Cattle Over Cliff Basis of Buffalo Bill, Jr., Thriller

"Thundering Romance" has been selected as the title for the fifth and latest of the popular Buffalo Bill, Jr., series of thrill-o-action features, distributed by Weiss Brothers' Artclass Pictures Corporation and produced by W. T. Lackey and Lester F. Scott, Jr., according to an announcement by Louis Weiss, head of the Weiss Brothers' organization.

The title was decided upon at a conference this week between Mr. Weiss and Lester F. Scott, Jr., the producer, and will replace the title of the original story, which had been used as a working title. A stampede of a huge herd of cattle over a cliff forms the thrilling effect upon which the title is based.

The story of "Thundering Romance" is from the pen of Ned Nye.

Fairbanks Film to Showmen

United Artists Announces January as "Thief of Bagdad" Release

Douglas Fairbanks in "The Thief of Bagdad" begins its general distribution to motion picture theatres on January 1, according to a statement issued by Hiram Abrams, president of United Artists Corporation. This means that the road show period for this elaborate production has definitely closed and that the picture goes into first run continuous exhibition in all of the key territories almost immediately after the holidays. So far "The Thief of Bagdad" has played only in two-a-day engagements with special route presentation and at $2 and $1.50 reserved seat prices.

While the release date was being determined, intensive preparations were under way for the domestic physical handling of the Fairbanks masterpiece at the United Artists Corporation exchanges in the United States and Canada, this distributor's foreign handling of this film being already in progress in a series of special advance engagements in all countries abroad. Prints, advertising matter and accessories in large volume have been assembled to meet the huge circulation already assured for "The Thief of Bagdad."

Setting a Fast Pace

William Steiner Reports Public Approval Of all His Stars

William Steiner announces that his Edith Thornton Productions have met with instant approval by the trade and reviewers. Leo Maloney Productions are now considered to be sure-fire standard attractions, while Charles Hutchison (Hurricane Hutch) started off his five-reel series with a bang and has set a most vigorous pace both in stunts and fine settings, it is announced.

"Cyclone Pete" Morrison and Neal Hart are reported as going strong.

The five units are all working in Hollywood, and all are looking forward to one of the best years for independent productions.

Johnny Hines Unit at Miami

JOHNNY HINES and members of his cast, as well as a technical staff, arrived in Miami, Florida, Sunday last, on the steamship "Apache" after a rough voyage from New York.

The unit, which is working on the forthcoming Charles C. Burr feature, "The Crackerjack," comprises, beside Johnny Hines; his director, Charles Hines; Sigrid Holmquist, leading lady; Vonda Case, J. Barney Sherry, Bradley Barker, Horace Haines and Henry West, besides a technical force bringing the ensemble up to twenty.

On the trip down, scenes were shot on the boat and also at Charleston, S. C., where a ten-hour stop was made; and in Miami work has been progressing rapidly on previously selected locations.

"The Crackerjack" has a revolutionary flavor, calling for much tropical stuff; the big scenes will be battle stuff, for which many cases of arms and uniforms were taken along; several hundred men will be used in these shots. Interior settings, now under construction at Tec-Art Studios.

The company expects to be busy in Miami for at least three weeks on location in the city and on millionaire estates.

"Red" Kann, who is vacationing down in Miami, and who telegraphed the above information, adds the gratuitous information that "the only kind of snowball down here is the sort you eat."

Warner Bros. Find New Type In Portuguese Girl in Hawaii

WHEN Caroline Deas, of Honolulu, went to bed the night before Christmas, she hung up her stocking as usual, but this time with a fervent prayer that when she woke up the next day, she would find something unusual in it; something she had been wishing to become true. And sure enough, she found what she hoped for but hardly expected.

Caroline found that Santa Claus in the persons of the Warner Bros. had selected her as the prettiest girl in all of Hawaii and the best actress on the islands, which entitled her to a trip to Hollywood and a chance in motion pictures with a possibility of a starring contract if she lived up to her screen tests.

New Type of Beauty Needed

It all came about because Harry Warner decided sometime ago that a new type of feminine beauty was needed in Warner Bros. pictures, and he was willing to go far afield to find it. There were plenty of Nordic, Slavic and Latin types to be had here for the asking, so the firm decided to go over to the Hawaiian Islands, where the great melting pot of the Far East simmers, and see if they could find an entirely new type.

It was a bona-fide effort, so mere beauty alone was not considered. The girl to win the honor had to be able to act as well as look pretty. For this reason a contest was started on the islands that differed from any other contest of its kind. Any girl of any race on the island was eligible. A screen test was taken of each entrant, and the winner was judged first for her screen possibilities, her beauty being a secondary consideration.

Judges Never Saw Originals

The judges were located in the studio of Warner Bros. in Hollywood, and never saw the originals. All they had to go by were the short screen tests. More than 300 of these were submitted. They were taken on theatre stages, on the streets of Honolulu and the beach at Waikikee.

Almost every race on the islands was represented and Harry Warner, who made the final decision, said he never had seen such an array of youthful beauty. There were Chinese, Japanese, Portuguese, half-castes. American girls and native Hawaiians. None of them were more than eighteen years old and the average was between sixteen and seventeen.

The winner finally narrowed down to three girls—a native, Hawaiian, an American-born girl and Miss Caroline Deas, who was finally selected. This girl beside possessing unusual beauty and acting ability is of the perfect athletic type.

Miss Deas Born in Honolulu

Miss Deas is a Portuguese maiden just seventeen years old, and was born in Honolulu where she has resided all her young life. She rides, dances, plays golf and is considered one of the most expert swimmers on the islands. Working in a Honolulu art shop, she spent all her spare time out of doors, and evidently gave considerable of her time to the study of expression as her screen pantomime stood put prominently in addition to her wonderful beauty.

Miss Deas will be the guest at several social affairs given by the people of Honolulu, and will then report at the Warner Bros. studio in Hollywood. Harry Warner hopes he has made a great find. The young woman will be tried out in several small roles, and if she responds to professional direction as well as she did to the contest director, there is a big future for her on the silver screen.

Barnes Signed by Paramount

T. Roy Barnes has arrived at the Paramount Long Island studio to play in Bebe Daniels' next starring vehicle, "The Crowded Hour." Mr. Barnes, who has been added to the cast of supporting players, headed by Kenneth Harlan, Frank Morgan and Helen Lee Worthing, was signed for an important role by Jesse L. Lasky, first vice-president of Famous Players-Lasky Corporation in charge of production.

POLA NEGRI

Paramount star, as she appears in "East of Suez."

Piccadilly Bookings

Three Warner Bros. Pictures Playing Three Consecutive Weeks

Warner Bros. pictures will play three continuous weeks at the Piccadilly Theatre, Broadway and Fifty-first street, New York City, when three of the firm's new attractions go in for a week each.

The pictures are "The Lighthouse By the Sea" which opened Saturday December 27; "The Narrow Street" on January 3, and "A Lost Lady" on January 10.

"The Lighthouse by the Sea" is the latest picture of Rin-Tin-Tin, Warner Bros. dog star, supported by Louise Fazenda and Willian (Buster) Collier.

"The Narrow Street" is from the novel by Edwin Bateman Morris, and has in its cast Matt Moore, David Butler, Dorothy Devore, Russell Simpson, George Pearce and Gertrude Short.

"A Lost Lady" is from the Willa Cather novel and features Irene Rich, supported by Matt Moore, June Marlowe, John Roche and George Fawcett. It was directed by Harry Beaumont.

Scenes from "Pampered Youth," a Vitagraph production directed by David Smith.

Praise for Rin-Tin-Tin

New York Critics Approve Canine Actor in Warner Bros. Picture

Warner Bros. production of "The Lighthouse by the Sea" starring Rin-Tin-Tin, the "wonder dog," had its opening at the Piccadilly Theatre, Broadway and Fifty-first street, New York City, on Saturday December 27.

The following excerpts are taken from the New York newspapers' reviews of the picture:

The Mirror—"It's old fashioned melodrama with the kick of a mule."

Evening Graphic—"This clever canine actor will get all our fan mail. If you care to spend a gala afternoon, visit "The Lighthouse by the Sea."

Evening Journal—"The story is a melodramatic one."

Herald-Tribune—"The Lighthouse by the Sea is one of the most interesting of the dog dramas."

Times—"This film is worth while seeing for the amazing actions of Rin-Tin-Tin."

Evening Post—"Frankly and sincerely a melodrama. Rin-Tin-Tin is the real hero."

American—"If you love old fashioned melodrama—you will adore The Lighthouse by the Sea."

The Palace, New York, Has New Use for "Topics of the Day"

ELMER F. ROGERS, manager of B. F. Keith's New York Palace Theatre, has found a new use for Pathe's film "Topics of the Day." Under the plan of presentation adopted by the manager of the world's leading vaudeville house, it is now possible to have two "full stage" vaudeville acts follow each other without the necessary stage wait while the stage hands are at work on the new setting.

The system Mr. Rogers has put in action is to start the "Topics of the Day" while the stage is being cleared and cut it off the moment the stage is ready for the next act. This, according to Mr. Rogers, is possible because the "Topics" film can be cut anywhere on the reel without destroying its value for entertainment. On last week's bill at this theatre two full stage acts followed each other, and it was necessary to clear the stage after the first act. In the two minute wait Mr. Rogers ran three or four paragraphs of the "Topics of the Day." When it came time on the program for the film the operator merely continued the picture from where he had left off earlier in the performance.

The adaptability of the "Topics of the Day" to the programs of the straight "movie" and vaudeville-movie houses have brought such a stream of letters of praise into the Pathe home office that a short history of this interesting film is now being released.

Good things are so taken for granted that on seeing "The Topics of the Day" screened the average layman would never imagine the infinite care, constant effort and great expense necessary to keep this reel of mirth up to the standard set by the Timely Films, Inc., the producers. The surprising fact connected with this series of pictures is that it requires the combined efforts of twenty-one people to produce this short reel. Some two thousand newspapers and magazines are read in search of suitable material each week. No joke is finally accepted until it has stood several acid tests.

The editors are experts who keep in constant touch with the humor of the day. In order to do this they must attend theatres every night to discover the trend of public humor. The bulk of newspaper jokes are hardly adapted to screen requirements. To get over in the cinema the point must be extremely obvious. It must be clear, concise and in easily understood English. There is a limit of thirty-five words placed on each joke, and often a story must be rewritten to fit a film version.

There is an iron bound rule governing the jokes as they appear in the "Topics of the Day." This rule is that no joke must bear even a suggestion of ridicule toward race, color or creed, nor take sides in politics, the object being not only to satisfy 100 per cent. of an audience but also not to offend one-half of one per cent. of that same audience. After the material is selected and rewritten by the various editors, it is all typed on cards and then once a week these cards, or candidates as they are called, are discussed in conference and about twenty of them are selected as being up to standard. A print of these twenty are made and then taken to several theatres and screened before audiences. That material which, for some reason has failed to register, is eliminated and the negative recut. The subject, as far as the material it contains is concerned, is now ready for distribution.

The checkup, however, does not end here, for Timely Films, Inc., has arranged with some two hundred and fifty theatres throughout the country to send in weekly reports covering each paragraph or joke, and at the regular weekly conference of the editors these reports are analyzed.

So much for the initial preparation. In the technical end of the production probably no big feature is given more care and attention. The producers realize that they are selling ready matter only. They have spent thousands of dollars in research work, experimenting with different kinds and styles of type, different toned backgrounds and various kinds of borders.

New Langdon Comedies

Pathe announces that starting with February 1st, 1925, the company will begin the release of the fourth series of two reel comedies produced by Mack Sennett starring Harry Langdon. The fourth series, which will comprise three pictures, will be released at four week intervals and will start with the recently completed picture "Boobs in the Woods."

New Popular-Price Edition of "Peter Pan" Sells Fast

"PETER PAN," regarding which there is a lot of talk in the motion picture world, is being exploited about effectively, it seems, as could be the case. This Paramount picture particularly is benefiting by the publication, in popular-price edition, of Barrie's world-famous story of Peter and Wendy, and the co-operation of booksellers with window displays and other tie-ups, which are being brought about by Grosset & Dunlap, publishers of the 75-cent edition.

This is the first time that the Barrie novel has been published in a popular-price edition, and reports have it that this bit of initiative on the part of Grosset & Dunlap is meeting very much with the approval of the reading public. There are twenty-seven salesmen on the road "pushing" the edition in every possible way, especially, as said above, persuading booksellers to co-operate with exhibitors in boosting both the picture and the book. Paramount is said to have released 225 prints of "Peter Pan."

While Grosset & Dunlap has published popular-price editions of a number of the works on which Paramount's first and second Famous Forty are based, "Peter Pan" is expected to prove the most remunerative because of its hold on the reading public. Few if any other novels are so well known, though the story of Peter and Wendy was written years ago. The play followed the novel, and this enjoyed a huge success because of the playing of the chief part by Maude Adams. The new edition is illustrated with scenes from the photoplay and very attractively printed.

Among the first Famous Forty to be gotten out in popular-price editions by Grosset & Dunlap were "Monsieur Beaucaire," "The Wanderer of the Wasteland," "North of 36," "Feet of Clay" and "Manhandled." Among the second Famous Forty are "Mme. Sans Gene," "The Top of the World" and "The Border Legion." Still another Grosset & Dunlap book is "The Ten Commandments."

Critics Say "Dixie Handicap" Is Great Race Track Picture

AS good a race track picture as you'll ever see!" This description of Reginald Barker's "The Dixie Handicap," voiced by Mildred Spain in the New York Daily News when this new Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer achievement played at the Capitol Theatre in New York, echoes the general verdict of the Manhattan critics on this stirring picture. Frank Keenan, Claire Windsor and Lloyd Hughes have the featured roles in this production, which was adapted to the screen by Waldemar Young from Gerald Beaumont's story.

"Frank Keenan gives a great picture of the old judge," adds Miss Spain, "and Lloyd Hughes steps right along with him as the Dancing Kid. Claire Windsor is a sweet Kentucky babe with lots of pretty clothes and a good deal of charm."

George Gerhard in the New York Evening World comments: "'The Dixie Handicap' is the type of picture which will have a tremendous appeal throughout the country —the kind your inveterate movie fan loves. And the principal character is enacted by Frank Keenan, that grand old man of the screen."

"'The Dixie Handicap' starts off," observes the New York Bulletin, "in exactly the same way that several million other pictures and twice as many stories have during the past 20 years. But there the similarity ends. The difference is enough to make a darn good picture. Dixie, the filly, wins back the family fortunes in the most thrilling race that anyone has ever seen. Instead of usual display of mad handclapping that usually greets such a bit the audience was dead silent, leaning forward with their hands clutching the arms of their chairs. Frank Keenan gives a splendid performnace as the judge. Claire Windsor as Virginia, the daughter, and the delightful Lloyd Hughes as Johnny Sheridan, her humble admirer, were excellent."

"The audience yesterday liked it," reports the New York Telegraph. "Frank Keenan gives a splendid performance as the old Judge, with the traditional Southern gentleman touch. There are some fine shots in the feature and it is good box office stuff."

Dorothy Herzog in the New York Daily Mirror states that "The Dixie Handicap" is "guaranteed to excite the most blase," and adds: "Claire Windsor is lovely as ever, and Lloyd Hughes shares histrionic honors with Frank Keenan."

"'The Dixie Handicap' has enough sustained interest," declares Louella O. Parsons in the New York American, "to be very good entertainment. The race is exciting, and the cast is fine.

Sells Foreign Rights

Simmons-Kahn Enterprises, Inc., this week purchased the rights from Inedependent Pictures Corporation, to the distribution of the eight William Desmond-Helen Holmes pictures in foreign territory. This excludes Argentine, Chile and Brazil where distribution is being handled by the Argentine American Film Co., and the West Indies where Havana Film Co. holds the rights. The contract was closed by William Goldburg, brother of Jesse.

Jane Novak in Germany

Jane Novak has arrived in Berlin, and has started to work on a picture for which an international cast has been engaged.

BULL MONTANA

Interpreting an 18th century bruiser in the William Fox release, "Dick Turpin," featuring Tom Mix.

Bradley King Adapting "Declasse"

Through an arrangement with the Thomas H. Ince studios, E. M. Asher, of Corinne Griffith Productions, has obtained the services of Bradley King to adapt the forthcoming Corinne Griffith stories. Miss King is now busily engaged on "Declasse," Miss Griffith's next picture.

Metro Engages Gildo Bocci

Gildo Bocci, the famous Italian drama and comedy actor, has been engaged to play the part of Gratus, the Procurator of Jerusalem, in the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production "Ben Hur," which is being filmed in Rome and other cities of the European continent by Director Fred Niblo. Bocci is widely known in Italy and France as an actor of high calibre.

Katherine MacDonald Returns to Screen

B. P. Schulberg made an interesting announcement when he stated that Katherine MacDonald will return to the screen in the forthcoming Preferred Picture, "The Mansion of Aching Hearts" which James P. Hogan is now directing.

This announcement serves as a final denial of the report previously published that Miss MacDonald would make her initial appearance under the auspices of F. B. O.

It is of interest to note that Miss MacDonald's return will be fostered by the same producer who first presented her as a First National star.

In "The Mansion of Aching Hearts," Katherine MacDonald will be one of a featured cast which also includes Clara Bow, another Schulberg screen find.

RAYMOND HATTON

Cross Word Film Novelty

Weiss Brothers to Issue Brain Teaser Puzzles in Series of Half Reels

Always on the look-out for novelties and special attractions, which afford the exhibitor the fullest opportunity to capitalize at the box office, Louis Weiss, vice president and general manager of Weiss Brothers' Artclass Pictures Corporation, announced this week that a series of twelve novel short length features, each of which would be a cross word puzzle in animated cartoon form, would shortly be ready for distribution in the State Right field.

Each feature will be complete in itself, except that the answer to each week's puzzle will be given in the next issue of the series. The length of each issue will be 500 feet.

The words called for in the puzzle will be enacted on the screen in animated cartoon form and will be sufficiently simple in a majority of cases to make a correct guess comparatively easy for the average cross word puzzle fan. There will also be two or three words which will not be so easy.

A plate of the cross word puzzle to be shown the following week, will be furnished the exhibitor, or will be imprinted by the exchange, and can be given out to the patrons of the theatre by the exhibitor, with his next week's program printed on the back.

Zeidman Joins Warner Bros.

Benny Zeidman, former independent producer, and for several months past assistant to Julius Bernheim, general manager of Universal City, has joined the forces of Warner Bros. and hereafter will be located in the company's Hollywood studio as assistant to Jack Warner in charge of production, according to word from the Warner Bros. office.

James McKinney Promoted

James McKinney, formerly one of the Pathe star film salesmen at Dallas, has been promoted to branch manager of the Pathe Oklahoma City branch office, to succeed J. A. Epperson, who has been transferred to the Kansas City territory where he has charge of the Pathe office there.

Four Snappy Century Comedies For "U" Release This Month

AS an auspicious start for the new year, Abe Stern, vice-president of the Century Film Corporation, producers of Century Comedies, has arranged for the January release of four carefully selected two-reel comedies. They are to be released, one a week, beginning this week. Distribution of the Century product is through the Universal exchanges.

The four releases are "Looking Down," starring Wanda Wiley; "The Aggravatin' Kid," starring Buddy Messinger; "Her Daily Dozen," starring Edna Marian, and "Taming the East," another Buddy Messinger picture.

Jess Robbins directed Miss Wiley in "Looking Down," the first release of the month. It is a hilarious two-reeler showing the comedienne as a trick cyclist and also in funny situations high up in the steel framework of a new building. She is supported by Al Alt, Joe Moore and Dorothy Vernon.

The other three January releases were directed by Ed I. Luddy. "The Aggravatin' Kid" is heralded as Buddy Messinger at his best.

"Her Daily Dozen," the third Century release this month, stars the new Century favorite, Edna Marian, who used to appear in support of Buster Keaton. In "Her Daily Dozen," which reveals the antics in a girls' gymnasium and bathing pool, Miss Marian is supported by the Century Follies Girls.

The last release of the month, "Taming the East," is a burlesque "western," with Buddy Messinger and his pals going through all the heroics of western drama in a highly comic vein. In the cast with Buddy Messinger are Hilliard Karr, Joe Bonner, Lois Body and Dolores Brinkman.

Six Units Start Work for Associated During January

ACCORDING to an announcement issued this week by J. S. Woody, general manager of the Associated Exhibitors, six producing units will start to work making pictures during the month of January. Four of these companies will work in Eastern studios, while one unit will produce in Los Angeles and the other at Tacoma, Washington.

Of the four Eastern units the first to begin work will be the company working under the direction of Whitman Bennett in the making of a society drama at the Whitman Bennett studios. The adaptation of a popular story has already been made with operations in progress at the studios for the building of sets. To date the director and cast for the picture have not been settled, but Mr. Bennett expects to announce the names of the principals next week.

The St. Regis Pictures Corporation will also start this month on the production of "The Million Dollar Doll." The director with star and cast will be anounced at a later date. The picture will be produced in or near New York City.

Oscar Price will start to work around the middle of the month on "Manhattan Madness." This is one of the most popular stories ever produced in motion pictures and was one of the first pictures made by Douglas Fairbanks.

The fourth picture to be made this month for the Associated Exhibitors in the East will be Henri Bergere's production of "Fifty Fifty."

At Los Angeles Monty Banks will produce his second picture for the Associated Exhibitors. The title of this production will be "Breakers Ahead."

The H. C. Weaver productions will start work on their first Associated picture this month at Tacoma, Washington. The title of this picture is "Hearts and Fists" and is a screen adaptation of the famous magazine story of the same name.

The Eastern production will be under the direct supervision of J. S. Woody who will okay all stars, directors and other important connections concerning the pictures. Arthur S. Kane, president of the Associated Exhibitors, will supervise production on the West Coast.

To Handle "Back to Life"

Associated Exhibitors to Distribute Bennett's Production Featuring Patsy Ruth Miller

An announcement has been made that Associated Exhibitors has taken over for distribution the Whitman Bennett special production "Back to Life," presenting Patsy Ruth Miller in the featured role. The picture is now being cut and titled at the Whitman Bennett Studios.

"Back to Life" is an H. Clay Miner presentation, and is founded on Andrew Sartou's famous novel entitled "Back from The Dead," which has enjoyed a tremendous nation-wide circulation. "Back to Life" is a dramatic story of a case of mistaken identity and takes its rise from the wonderful progress made in the field of facial surgery during and following the great World War.

Whitman Bennett in choosing Patsy Ruth Miller for the leading characterization also displayed a keen sense of showmanship by surrounding Miss Miller with such important screen names as David Powell, Lawford Davidson, Mary Thurman, George Stewart, Frederick Burton and Frankie Evans.

PROJECTION

EDITED BY F. H. RICHARDSON

It Won't Do

Iver A. Egenes, Grand Theatre, Story, Iowa, wants advice as follows:

Am contemplating the installation of a motor generator set to change the A. C. to D. C. for my motion picture projector arc. Just now I am able to get hold of a Wotton battery charging motor generator. I am curious to know if it will handle one carbon arc sufficiently well for a 60 foot projection distance. The specifications for this particular set are:

30 D. C. volts. 20 D. C. amperes. K 12-20 cells.

110 A. C. volts. 12.5 A. C. amperes. 1 H.P. 1 phase. 60 cycles. 1,750 r.p.m.

Am using 110 volt 60 cycle current.

In the first place, except where projection distance and picture size are such that the use of a very long focal length projection lens is compelled, it is not the projection distance, but the size of picture which counts, because that determines the area of the surface you must spread the available light over, hence what its brilliancy will be.

No, I am sorry to say that this set would not serve your purpose. You could not use a 30 volt D. C. arc for projection. In fact as I remember it you could not strike an arc at all with 30 volts. You could, of course, project with 20 amperes D. C. were the voltage high enough, but I would NOT advise you to attempt such a thing. The results would be a rather dim and decidedly poor picture, which would not be very attractive to patrons. They might come once, but twice—well, maybe. My advice is not to use less than forty amperes D. C. for projection, using the ordinary arc.

Mazda?

While I know nothing at all concerning your conditions, except that your projection distance is 60 feet, I believe you will do better to use Mazda than to invest in a costly motor generator set. At sixty feet the working distance of your projection lens is sufficiently short that you can get very good results. I would suggest Mazda and a twelve or fourteen foot picture, with a good screen. But as I said, this is largely a game of blind man's buff, because you have told me one thing out of several which it is necessary that I know if I am to give advice of real value.

If you want a brilliant picture, using the ordinary arc, you would better get a good motor generator, and to find the best you need not go outside the advertising pages of this paper. Another excellent bet is the new reflector type lamp. Why not get complete information concerning all these various things before you decide what to do?

Wants Information

C. G. Wells, Elkton, Maryland, asks information, as follows:

For seventeen and one half years I was proprietor of the old Opera House in Elkton, Md., but now am employed as manager of the New Theatre, which same was started about two years ago in opposition to me. After going through various vicissitudes, which included the sheriff and a receiver, it was purchased by Elkton people, and placed under my charge.

At the Opera House I used two Simplex projectors, with Mazda equipment, and with but a fifty foot projection distance I had little or no trouble projecting an excellent picture.

In this house I find two Powers projectors, the bases marked six B, the mechanisms No. 6 and their numbers 38760 and 38767. They also use Mazda, but the G. E. type and have Bausch and Lomb Cinephor P M 15 and same 25, with a projection distance of 150 feet. The projection lenses are marked 7½ E. F. From film to first surface of lens (Working distance.—Ed.) is about six inches. The picture does not suit me. It is the intention of my employers to bring the projectors from the other house down here soon.

Can the Simplex equipment be made to take care of the extra projection distance, and should not the projection lens be changed to some other kind? I always had the impression that the distance from film to lens ought to be not to exceed three or four inches.

Enclosed find check for the Bluebook of Projection.

No you cannot use either the same projection lens or the same condensers. You have not told me the size of your picture, therefore I don't know just what your lens is, but if it is six inches from film to lens, then I would recommend that you instal the reflector type arc. With Mazda and a layout like that you will need what is known as a "half size" lens, which doubtless is what you have, but even so, and with cinephor, I don't think much of such a proposition.

At a fifty foot projection distance you would get good results because your projection lens working distance (page 49 of Bluebook) is short and the beam meets the lens before its divergence is so great (See figures 46, 47, 48, 49, 50 and 51 of your Bluebook) that it cannot all enter the lens—as per figure 49 of the Bluebook.

Working distance of the projection lens depends upon its E. F., which in turn depends upon the size of picture and distance of projection. The longer the projection distance the greater the E F of the lens required to project a given size picture. The smaller the picture, at a given projection distance, the longer the focal length of the lens required. The long focal length projection lenses have a long working distance, and vice versa. Your fifty foot projection distance required a short focal length lens, which also had a short working distance. The other condition requires exactly the opposite. And there you are.

Mazda is being used now for projection distances up to 120 feet.

Bluebook School

Question No. 196—Is it advisable to have the picture overlap the border? Give reasons for your answer.

Question No. 197—What various purposes does the picture border serve?

Question No. 198—Where the stage floor extends for a considerable distance in front of the screen, and it is practicable to do so, why should the floor be painted a dead black?

Question No. 199—Give us your views as to the desirability or advisability of using tinted screen surfaces.

Question No. 200—If the screen is to be located on a stage, what advice would you offer the manager with regard to it? Think this over. It will require some space to answer it fully.

As to Condensers

This department is receiving a very great number of inquiries for its opinion as to the relative merits of three new condenser lenses which have appeared lately, viz.: the "Luxalba," the "Pyrex" and the "Quartz."

Up to this time the "Luxalba" is the only one which has been placed at the disposal of the department for tests. These tests I have had made, under very trying conditions, and am able to say that they have stood up very well indeed. One theatre which used to break two rather high priced collector lenses every day, has had Luxalba installed for months, and finally only replaced them because the pitting became pretty bad. They did not break at all. They show pink tint after use, true, but this is a distinct advantage where high intensity is used. I can heartily recommend Luxalba where a medium priced collector lens is wanted.

The Pyrex I have myself had no opportunity to test.

The Quartz I have had no opportunity to test, but such reports as I have, indicate that the lenses are really unbreakable, and that they do not pit at all readily. They will pit some, but reports indicate that they will not need repolishing more than once a year, except perhaps under very bad conditions indeed, and the polishing can be done for from one dollar to one dollar and a quarter, plus transportation charges.

As matters now stand that is about all we can say with regard to the new condensers, except that you need not feel nervous about the apparently high price, because it is quite within the range of possibility that a fifty dollar lens may actually be cheaper, in the long run, than the dollar and a half one. It all depends upon what the fifty dollar lens can and will do, as compared to the low priced one. It, however, is a bit amusing to hear theatre managers who not so long ago roared till the rafters shook about paying a whole seventy-five cents for a condenser lens, calmly discussing the possible advisability of paying fifty dollars each for them.

3 Focal Lengths

The Morelite, and I presume the other makers of reflector type lamps, make three focal length mirrors. They say:

For 25 amperes, and for a long projection distance, we supply the 6½ focal length mirror. For 15 to 20 amperes on medium projection distance, we supply 7½ focal length mirrors, and for 10 to 15 amperes and short projection distances we supply 8½-inch focal length mirrors.

I suppose this is correct practise, but I'm gol dinged if it looks right to me. I will have Griffith examine the cylinder escapement and chronometer balance of this matter and report his findings.

Film Damage?

What's the Real Cause?

By F. H. RICHARDSON

Note: All comments, except those immediately under each photograph, marked "Comment by Mr. Dennison," are by the editor of this department. Photographs by the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, prepared under the direction of Earl J. Dennison.

The photographs published this week show (Plate 12) how accuracy of registration on the screen, and steadiness of the screen image is made impossible by abuse of the sprocket hole edges, and the film stock immediately adjacent thereto, and illustrate (Plate 13) the imperfect manner in which those entrusted with the splicing of film often remove the emulsion from the film stock when preparing to make a splice; also that sometimes the maker of a splice does not even trouble to cut the film end straight across. "Any old way" seems to be good enough for splicing the film.

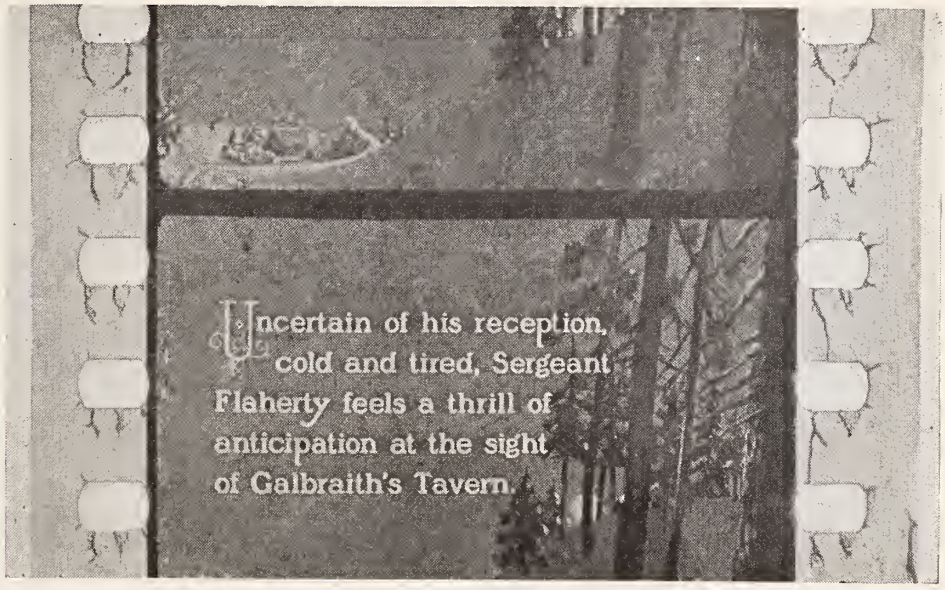
You will notice, plate 13, the excessive width of some of the splices, which evidently are splices which have been made in theatres, which Mr. Dennison has pulled apart to show us. Such splices, especially if made with a poor cement, will be as "stiff as a board." They will inevitably cause the picture to jump on the screen when they reach the intermittent sprocket. Also, particularly if the take-up tension be excessive, or the lower sprocket idler poorly adjusted, or its bracket spring weak, or if there be a combination of these three things, there will be a decided inclination to loose the lower loop, with results as shown in plate 8, or to climb the lower sprocket, with results as per plate 11.

Examples E and I show miserably crude work in scraping the emulsion off. G and H show the same thing, in somewhat lesser degree. Example G is the only one in which the splice is about the correct width, and the line square and fairly straight, but the scraping is poor. In H the line is straight, but not square, as is the case with C. B is straight and square. I and E seem almost too crude to credit, only we have all seen plenty like them.

Ask yourself, brother, if YOU are in any degree guilty of such work as this. If you can honestly say NO, then allow me to congratulate you. If you cannot say no, then DON'T call yourself a projectionist. If you do the I or E stunt, then I think even the machine operators will feel inclined to disown you.

If you cannot say no, then ask yourself if you are acting fairly or justly by the motion picture industry, or to your fellow projectionists who must use the films YOU HAVE SPLICED, or to your employer OR TO YOURSELF.

Certainly, my brother, you cannot afford to abuse the films, or to do your work in any other way than the best way you know how. Respect yourself. Respect your profession, or if you are merely a machine operator, then respect your trade, and above all respect the motion picture industry, by means of which you earn your daily bread.



Uncertain of his reception, cold and tired, Sergeant Flaherty feels a thrill of anticipation at the sight of Galbraith's Tavern.

PLATE 12

Comment by Mr. Dennison: Shows how a sprocket run in perforations, together with excessive take-up pull, will utterly ruin film.

PLATE 13

Comment by Mr. Dennison: Improperly scraped film. This practice is very bad and splice will invariably come apart. Note that emulsion has not been entirely removed from any of these splices. Also note width of some of the splices, and fancy cuts.

Wants to Know

From a small town in South Carolina comes the following:

Just a few questions that I want to ask. I want you to give me full information how to be a union or licensed operator. I was operator for three years, both Simplex and Power machines. I did all of my own repairing and wiring machine. I am operating in a town of two thousand population and give satisfactory work. I have good recommendations.

Now, what should I do? I cannot reply to this well meaning man candidly without hurting his feelings. However, I remember that once a most excellent surgeon operated on me, and hurt me like the de—dickins; also he cured me.

First off, it is evident this man, however well meaning he may be, has absolutely no idea that projection of motion pictures consists of anything under the sun except the "operation of a machine." He says he "does all of his own repairing and wiring," and evidently thinks that is a pretty good recommendation. He tells me he has "operated" three years. Well, the surgeon who cut me open told me he had operated for twenty years; also I personally know a woman on a telephone switchboard here in New York

City who has "operated" for seven years.

First of all, my good brother, merely as a STARTER, let me advise you to come to an understanding of the FACT that the projection of motion pictures is capable of almost limitless possibilities, and that "repairing the machine" is merely a very minor item. As to wiring, if you become a union man you won't be allowed to do it. Your job will be to check up on the work of the electrician and see if the wire sizes, insulation, etc., are correct, and the switches what and where they should be.

In some places you may become a licensed "operator" merely by paying a sum of money, and proving to some official jackass that you know a copper wire from an iron one, or a switch from a badly decayed turnip. In other places you will have to pass a more or less thorough examination.

To become a union "operator" you must apply to the union in the jurisdiction of which you work, which I would imagine to be Charleston, S. C. Write William Canavan, International President I. A. T. S. E. and M. P. M. O., World's Tower Building, 110 West 40th street, New York City, asking the address of the secretary of the local nearest to you, then write the secretary for an application blank.

The local may or may not admit you. If it does you may or may not have to pass an examination as to your ability, and that examination may or may not be a competent one.

My advice to you is (A) send six dollars (if you have not already done so) to the Moving Picture World and get a "Bluebook of Projection." Expend two dollars for a subscription to the Moving Picture World and start immediately in the "Bluebook School." Forget all about that "I have good recommendations" business, and make up your mind to BE YOUR OWN RECOMMENDATION—to do work which will in itself recommend you.

Time? Sure

Time? Sure, all this will take time, and a lot of it, BUT it is the ONLY real way to build a foundation which will insure eventual success. If you propose remaining merely the attendant of a machine—a machine operator—then, frankly, I am not at all interested in you. If you propose to make a motion picture projectionist of yourself, then I'm with you. There are plenty of men whose business it is to "repair machines" and do wiring. There are too few who are real motion picture projectionists, in all that term implies. We have too * * * many "operators." We have too few motion picture projectionists. WHICH DO YOU PROPOSE TO BE?

Why?

J. L. Fullerton, Chicago, Illinois, asks:

Friend Richardson: I read the account of the recent opening of a big theatre in New York. The description was quite elaborate, BUT not a word about the most important thing of it all—the projection room. Why is this? What is the idea of lauding everything from the front to the back door, EXCEPT the very heart of the whole works?

I don't know, Friend Fullerton, but perhaps if you will examine the photographs accompanying the article concerning which you complain, you may be able to answer your own question. But look way up and w-a-y back. If the exhibitor and architect think so little of projection that they build a beautiful theatre, and place its one most important thing just any old place where it will be good and plenty out of the way, I see no good reason why writers should be interested in that part of it either—except that darned crank Richardson, of course.

When the architect starts to plan a theatre he does NOT first plan for perfection in the one and about the only thing it will have to sell. He ignores that totally and entirely. Instead of first planning for perfect screen results, and then building around that plan—which could be done without any considerable sacrifice of any sort, if only the square heads TRIED to do it—they plan the theatre first, and literally let projection take care of itself as best it may.

The theatre in question is a beautiful theatre I guess—at least I have been told it is, but it either has a distorted, and therefore a more or less "flat" picture, or it has a tilted screen. That is just plain statement of perfectly well known fact—facts the architect either knows or should have known before he started his plans. It could just as well have had the same seating capacity, the same beauty, and an undistorted picture of decidedly greater "depth," had the architect known how to and taken the trouble to plan it that way.

Fox Men to Dine

The projectionists of the Fox circuit will give a testimonial dinner to C. W. Johnson, Supervisor of Projection, January 24. I understand it is to be a very classy affair. It will be the second annual dinner Fox projectionists have given. We await the event with much interest.

Dixie Cup Service Also Pays a Profit
If DIXIE Cups and vendors really were an expense the laws prohibiting the common drinking glasses might be a matter of some concern to motion picture theatres.
But since they actually pay a profit there is an added incentive for making available to your audiences this service which they use so constantly and appreciate so much.
The DIXIE penny vendor operates silently — another advantage appreciated by the theatre owner.

Does It Pay?

Charles MacGregor, Projectionist Princess Theatre, Chatham, Ontario, sends a copy of the Chatham Daily News, with a marked half column account of the way "The Covered Wagon" packed them in the third night of its showing at the Princess Theatre of that city. The article also dilated upon the reasons for the aforesaid "packing," aside from the excellence of the production itself. In part it says:

The presentation would do credit to a city much larger than Chatham, and a theatre much larger than the Princess. The stage effects are beautiful, with their purple draperies, and lighting effects. The picture is projected upon the screen in a manner that makes the effect upon the eyes very restful, and at the same time brings out "depth" to the picture, an effect which very few projectionists are successful in obtaining. This part of the presentation is in charge of Mr. Charles MacGregor, a man who is recognized as one of the very best in his profession, by the leading officials of the big corporation which operates the Princess.

Written by Manager

And, mark you well, this was written by the theatre MANAGER, and not by Projectionist MacGregor. It is absolutely the very first time I have ever had a well-worded, correctly-written credit of the work of a projectionist in a daily paper brought to my attention. My compliments to the Manager of the Princess. MacGregor should, and I have no doubt will give him the very best service possible.

MacGregor himself makes this comment: "How is this for a compliment from your Manager? Does 'better projection pay?' I'll say it DOES! And you helped a mighty lot, Richardson. Thanks!"

If my work has "helped a mighty lot" or at all, then I am well pleased. Being told that seems better to me than receiving money, because in so doing I have not only helped MacGregor and his manager, but also I have helped the producer, the "star" and every one of the thousands who attended the Princess, and that puts a feather in the bonnet of any right-thinking man.

Has Helped Him

Ralph W. Boone, Projectionist Grotto Theatre, Constantine, Mich., has the following to say:

I have been reading our department only three months, but it certainly has helped me a lot in even that short time. I am just a small town "Operator"—now, don't think I have not heard the term Projectionist. I just don't feel that I am one—yet. Give me time and I will be, though—but thought I would like to send in answers to some of the Bluebook School questions.

At present I am using one Simplex Mazda outfit and have great trouble with the lamps coming loose in their base. Have every possible means of lamphouse ventilation wide open. Use 900 watt lamps, at 30 volts and 30 amperes. Ammeter does not register quite thirty when I am projecting. Use A. C. juice. All electric connections seem to be in good order and tight.

I don't know whether the ammeter is on the blink, or whether it is something else beyond my knowledge. Will have ammeter tested as soon as possible. Why do the lamps get loose?

Not Quite Clear

Your language is not very clear. If you mean that the lamp comes loose in its base, that is one thing—the glass coming loose from its metal base. If you mean, as you presumably do, that the lamp works loose in its socket, that is something else again. You have a Bluebook. Look at figure 358, page 858, and note thumb screw H under lamp socket. You will see the arrangement diagrammatically illustrated in figure 359, page 860.

You must align your lamp filament according to the directions contained on pages 861 to 865, and then tighten screw H until spring contact strip in figure 359 makes firm contact with the lamp, thus holding the lamp firm and solid in its SOCKET, not "base." Unless this is done the lamp will not be tight in its socket. I think this is the seat of your trouble.

What It Is

From a Chicago projectionist comes the following query, with request that name of inquirer be suppressed:

Say, what's the matter with you Windy City men, anyhow? Are you scared to have your names printed, or just plain afraid to let it be known that you communicate with the pestiferous Richardson?

Well, anyhow, the question is;

I have heard quite a bit about the American Projection Society, and have seen several copies of the American Projectionist, published by them. What is this body, anyhow? You apparently favor it, yet you are a friend of the union. Explanations are in order.

Certainly I am in favor of the American Projection Society; also certainly I am a friend of the I. A. You seem to think the two are antagonistic. Where did you get that idea?

No Antagonism

The A. P. S. is a body, or club of men who must prove themselves to be not only real motion picture projectionists, but also men of good reputation—men whom other men of ability and character will care to associate with. The primary objects of the organization are to promote social intercourse between the best men in the profession, and to elevate the profession itself. It is not an organization which every Tom, Dick and Harry is invited to enter, or can join at all. Candidates must be proposed by members, and are rigidly investigated before they are accepted. They are ballotted upon just as in any secret organization. At one time the admission rules were so strict that one black ball rejected. This was found to be too severe, and has been changed to three, as I remember it.

Honorary Members

The following are honorary members of the organization: William D. Burroughs, Atlanta, Ga.; Thomas A. Edison, Orange, N. J.; J. H. Hallberg, New York City; C. Francis Jenkins, Washington, D. C.; Edwin S. Porter, New York City; F. H. Richardson, New York City; Samuel L. Rothapfel, New York City, and Hugo Risenfield, New York City.

Here in New York City a very excellent club room is maintained in the theatrical district, to which all members have free access. There is a pool table, a library, etc. The club holds educational meetings frequently, at which experts on various apparatus and subjects pertaining to motion picture projection are invited to and do lecture.

Gradually the organization is expanding. It now has several "Chapters" outside New York City, one of which is in Washington, D. C.

The organization is regularly incorporated under the laws of New York, and is several years old. It in no way interferes with the union.

Bluebook School—Answers 166-170

Question No. 166—Is it possible to form a sure judgment as to the relative value of screen surfaces by substituting one surface for another while a picture is being projected?

Daniel Constantino, Easton, Pa.; Karl H. Sommermeyer, Marietta, Minnesota; A. L. Fell, Collingswood, N. J.; Arthur H. Gray, Boston, Mass.; P. E. Thomas, Creston, Iowa; W. G. Gwynn, Longmont, Colorado, and C. H. Hanover, Burlington, Iowa, replied acceptably.

Various ones named the following as possible causes of changes in or apparent changes in screen illumination values. (A) Change in line voltage. (B) Change in crater angle. (C) Change in density of film. (D) Change in auditorium illumination. (E) Changes in number of or position of orchestra lights.

Brother Hanover has the reply best serving the needs of publication, I think. He says:

This really is in the nature of a modification of what is dealt with in question No. 165, but it presents a very different angle of the matter, and an important one, too, because it is no unusual thing for theatre managers and projectionists to have to deal with exactly the conditions set up in this question.

First, let me briefly enumerate those various things which may operate to change the screen brilliancy, or its apparent brilliancy, which are impossible of control by the projectionist. There may be a raise or a drop in line voltage about the time the surfaces are switched. Unlikely, yes, but not at all impossible if there be large, intermittently operated motors on the theatre feed lines, such as, for example, elevator motors. A flaw in the carbons is not at all impossible, and might make itself manifest at just the wrong time. A change in film density—and film density is almost constantly changing. A change in auditorium lighting, or in the number or position of orchestra lights—and musicians are not overly careful about such matters. These and many other things may alter the apparent screen brilliancy, thus making the test under discussion unreliable, if there were no other reasons.

But aside from the foregoing, it seems a very unreliable test where the mind must be depended upon to retain one mental impression, and compare it, even a very short space of time later, with another. It is like the man who measured the width of a window opening for which a pane of glass was to be secured, with his hands, and holding them, his hands, presumable exactly the same distance apart, ran four blocks to get the glass cut according to that measurement. If the glass fit it would, of course, be purely accidental, and so I think it would be with the result if screen surfaces were tested after such a fashion.

Then, too, it must be remembered that whereas such a test might furnish some sort of rough estimate as to comparative reflective values, still that is only one item of two, the other being comparative values from various locations in the auditorium. This latter could not, it seems to me, be judged with any reasonable degree of accuracy.

In addition to this we have to consider the relative "tone" of the light reflected from the two surfaces, which I believe might be done with very satisfactory results.

On the whole my verdict is that the test, taken as a whole, would be thoroughly unsatisfactory and unreliable.

Which seems to me to be a very enlightening and satisfactory answer, though brothers Gray, Fell, Gwynn, Constantino and Thomas each did very well, though none covered all points so well as did Hanover.

Question No. 167—How may a really reliable test of screen surfaces be made?

All the above covered this one acceptably, plus Glenn C. Kalkhoff, Milwaukee. Brother Glenn has, I think, the best general all round answer. He says:

A reliable comparative test of screen surfaces may be made by placing a large sample of the surface to be compared over the old one. The test sample should cover approximately half the old screen. The two surfaces should then be observed from all audience viewing angles of the auditorium, in order that their diffusing properties, or powers, be fairly compared. A small sample of the surface under examination renders this test of slight value, due to nothing else than its lack of adequate size. It cannot be effectively examined for these qualities at a distance.

Such a test as this, where all the essential factors are equal for each screen surface, is the only really reliable, accurate method of making such a comparison of surfaces.

To this A. R. Roberts, St. Louis, Missouri, adds a pertinent remark, which while it really has nothing to do with the question (which Brother Roberts answered by a straight copy of Bluebook text), still shows that Roberts' brain is not idle. He said:

To this I would add that after the test has been made it is well to examine carefully into the probable permanency of the surface, its possibilities for cleaning, and the general structure of the surface which supports the surface.

Question No. 168—Suppose a salesman is trying to sell your manager a screen. He orates expansively upon its superiority as against your own screen—and all other screens, of course. The manager asks your advice. What would you suggest to him as the advisable thing to have the screen salesman do?

All those before named answered correctly. Gray said:

Such a salesman would be treated with the same courtesy and consideration as we would extend to any one else from whom there was the possibility of receiving assistance in improving our projection. He would, however, have to understand the underlying principles of screen performance better than have several salesmen who have tried, unsuccessfully, to interest us in a surface utterly unfitted to our theatre.

However, our ears are attuned to the sound of progress, and our minds receptive, therefore if the gentleman convinced us that his screen surface possessed one or more characteristics which seemed to warrant experimentation or that it possessed the same or better diffusing properties than the one now in use, plus some desirable point or points of refinement, then we would be only too glad to co-operate in arranging a test such as is outlined in the reply to question No. 167. (Note: Gray refers to his own excellent reply to 167, of course, but I think he will be willing to have the application made on the basis of the reply published to that question.—Ed.)

Question No. 169—Tell us what various kinds of reflection is important, insofar as has to do with screen surfaces, and what the practical effect of each one is.

The amount of skidding on this one was a bit surprising. Thomas seems to be the only one who made correct reply, excepting Constantino, who followed the Bluebook text. Most of you stumbled on the mirror. Your reasons why it would not make a good screen certainly left something to be desired. You forgot that the audience, or that portion of it seated right, would have an excellent view of ITSELF; also that the bright spot of the lens would appear. And now here I'm stuck myself. I'm not sure whether or not the mirror would show the picture at all. I don't believe it would. Who can answer with certainty?

Brother Thomas says:

Regular, diffuse and semi-diffuse reflection are the kinds of reflection of importance as regards screen surfaces.

Diffuse reflection is the result of the incident light rays being broken up and scattered in fairly even proportion in all directions. This is caused by the lack of polish—slight roughness or "dead" finish of the surface. The surface which scatters (diffuses) the light with approximate evenness in all directions is what we call a perfect diffusing surface.

Semi-diffuse reflection occurs when the screen surface is of such texture that the greatest amount of light is reflected back in a relatively narrow angle, the intensity of illumination of the field covered by the angle varying. A great majority of present-day commercial screens are of this type, and fairly even diffusion is found only within a very narrow viewing angle.

Regular reflection is the result of light being reflected back without being in any degree scattered or diffused. Certain types of metallic surface screens, having considerable of the elements of polish, give to some extent both regular and diffuse reflection. Such screens have very low diffusing powers, but high reflective characteristics.

Question No. 170—In your opinion has a visible roughness of a screen surface any value? Give us your views with relation to this matter.

Every one before named made good on this one. Thomas says:

Visible roughness in a screen surface has, I think, no advantage over a smooth, diffusing surface—such a surface as white finish plaster. Roughness, as applied to screen surfaces, may range from a very fine grain, or texture, to a coarse texture, though the roughness here meant should not be such as will be visible to the eye, or apparent to the touch.

An ordinary "glazed plaster" wall will, under a magnifying glass of fair power, appear rough, and show peaks and depressions. It appears as of very course texture. Hence, while it appears to the eye as almost a polished surface, or semi-polished at least, it really is not.

Hanover says:

Visible roughness I presume to mean a surface lying in visible ridges, such as we see in rough leatherette used for pocket books. Such roughness was quite some while ago supposed to aid in giving those seated at an angle to the screen a better view of the picture. This idea was exploded by yourself, in the Projection Department of the Moving Picture World, long since. It has no value, unless possibly where the screen is of the semi-diffusing type, and I doubt if it has even then, though it is possible there might be, to some slight extent, a diminution of fade-away, though I personally believe that if this is true, then it would be at the expense of injury to picture definition.

That last raises an interesting question, and one on which I would be well pleased to have an article from such of you as care to discuss the matter. I don't believe there would be such an effect. What do YOU think about it?

By the way, Gray favors the same idea in his reply. He says:

In this connection I might emphasize another factor. It is an important one because it concerns the ability of the screen surface to faithfully reproduce the image; that is to say, reproduce it clearly, with sharpness of definition and general pleasing appearance. Visible roughness of the surface is not a contributing factor in this accomplishment. On the contrary, it is an adverse one, since just as the brilliancy of the picture will depend upon the reflective characteristics of the screen surface, so will the sharpness of outline and reproduction of detail in the image depend largely upon the evenness and smoothness of the screen surface.

Um, well, mebby, brother Gray! Mebby. I'm not disputing you in this. In fact I believe there is something in the contention, but I would like to hear from the rest of you on it just the same. Bennewitz and Dobson ought to have ideas of value on the subject, and so has the rest of the Bluebook School men, as well as our readers in general.

Agrees Strong

C. L. Eleveland (or is it Cleveland?), Projectionist Star Theatre, Davenport, Iowa, says:

Dear Brother Richardson: I agree strongly with Brother H. Y. Ballou, November 29 issue, in the article, "He Disagrees." Universal puts their numbers in the film by impression, in this territory at least. Why would it not be an excellent idea for all exchanges to adopt this plan, and to put the impression about three feet from the end, where it would serve a double purpose, serving as a change-over signal for those who cannot or won't make a cue sheet?

Impression (embossing) of the frame lines for about sixteen frames in film length about two feet from the leader would also be a great help for those who have no framing lights.

Here we change the shows daily, projecting four shows a day, so I use a mechanical device for a change-over signal for the first trip, and cue sheet the rest, as I only use 1,000-foot reels. It is what you would call a float indicator, as per drawing attached hereto.

By the way, how is following line-up? Have Bluebook and lens charts, but may not have doped it out right.

The Line-Up

Quarter size Gundlach projection lenses, 6 inch E. F., on both projectors. Working distance 4½ inches for one and 4⅞ for the other. Y distance 16¾ inches for one and 17 for other. F. D. 1 13/32 for one and 1 15/32 for other. Collector lens 6 inch; converging 8 inch, both plano convex. Sixty degree intermittent movement. Aperture opening 29/32, or .90625 inch. Crater 7/32 inch diameter. Crater distance 3⅛ inches. Carbons, Columbia Cired, ⅝ diameter. Use 40 amperes from 220 volt, 60 cycle lines, through Ft. Wayne A. C. to A. C. Compensarcs, 2-wing rotating shutters; master and interrupter equals 4¾x2⅛ inches. Openings 5⅝x2¼ inches. Gardner Velvet Gold Fibre screen. Projection distance 65 feet 3 inches. Picture 12 feet wide.

When running at the new projection speed approved by S. M. P. E. I get some flicker, but at 68 and 70 I get none. Is this caused by the 60 cycle A. C.? If so, how may I remedy it?

A. C. alternations synchronizing with the A. C. alternations in such way that only the "dead" period of the crater is projected to the screen does not cause a "flicker," but a sort of waving effect in the light. The light dies down and comes up again. This is due to the fact that the shutter will not remain in synchronism with the alternations for any length of time, but gets in and out more or less constantly.

May Be It

If this is what you have, it is a "partial" synchronism only and I have never yet known of an effect of this sort being possible with a 2-wing shutter. However, if the effect is somewhat as I have described, and the thing occurs only at one speed—well, maybe. What do our readers think about it? The remedy is direct current, though John Griffith suggests the possibility of Mazda being used to overcome it. As to that I don't know. Possibly it would, as I believe the Mazda filament would not have its brilliancy perceptibly affected by the dead periods between alternations.

I have submitted your optical line-up to Griffith, who says:

Griffith's Comments

With a small crater, small diameter lens and long working distance the best results can be had with Cinephor parabolic converging lens, because the spot may then be advanced through the aperture without causing ghost on the screen and advancing the spot reduces the diameter at the lens. (I don't like that, John. You don't advance the "spot." The spot is the circle of light on the cooling plate, and it stays there. Don't know just what term should be used to describe what you mean, but certainly it is NOT "spot."—Ed.)

Note: When the correct working distance of the lens cannot be found in the column containing the lens diameter (Lens chart.—Ed.) it means that such a lens should not be used in conjunction with a plano condenser if the best results are desired.

The change-over is merely a variation of a stunt published in this department long ago, and tried, in one form and another, by many. It consists of an arm hinged at one end to the wall of the upper projector magazine. This arm is adjustable as to length, and carries a roller on its other end. Its length is so adjusted that when the film roll is reduced to a certain diameter the arm will drop down, striking the bottom of the magazine, thus giving a warning signal. This good brother has his so arranged that an arm on the outside of the magazine registers on a scale the approximate amount of film remaining on the reel at any point of projection.

Want More Details

To sum up: I am not certain from your description just what your "flicker" is. Describe it more in detail. Your other data are very complete. Griffith's last comment is your answer. You have a very small crater, a rather long working distance, and a small diameter lens. You should have a cinephor condenser. It will pay your manager to equip your projectors with them. True, the parabolic converging lens costs a good deal more than he is used to paying for a condenser, BUT they will last indefinitely and should give you decidedly better results.

Rubin's Clever Stunt

Being advised that, during Christmas week, the Rialto Theatre, New York, would put on a clever stunt, devised by Harry Rubin, Supervisor of Projection for the Rivoli, Rialto and Criterion theatres, and approved by Dr. Hugo Reisenfield, Managing Director of the above named theatres. I "took in" the Rivoli show that week, saw what I saw, and hereby tender to Brother Harry Rubin my compliments and sincere congratulations. In doing what he did he stepped entirely out of the field of merely "operating a moving picture machine" and entered the realms of projection, and he did it with a vengeance, for what he pulled off was distinctly clever. It was, in fact, so clever that I was tickled pink that it was worked out by a projectionist, because it points the way for other projectionists to use their brains and evolve clever stunts in PROJECTION. Don't you ever believe Dr. Reisenfield thinks any less of Rubin because he has done this thing.

What It Was

Well, what is it, you ask? Why in one way nothing very wonderful. Any one of thousands of capable projectionists who read this department might have done it just as well as Rubin, but the point is that you did NOT and Rubin did. Here is what I saw:

At the extreme left of the projection room was a stereopticon, with which Kleigl stage snow effect was projected to cover the entire stage and a portion of the front of the auditorium, its bottom falling over the orchestra pit. The auditorium was made pretty dark, and the effect was very realistic.

Santa Claus

At the extreme left of the projection room was a Simplex projector, loosened to swing freely sidewise on its pedestal. In it was a short, colored scene of Santa Clause and his gift-laden sleigh, pulled by galloping reindeers. After the snow had been falling for perhaps half a minute, and the attention of the audience was centered upon its realism, the projector was started, its lens pointed at the left auditorium wall, as far back as possible, and the projector slowly swung to the left. The effect was that the startled audience saw Santa Claus apparently driving his reindeers at a gallop across the auditorium through a heavy snow storm.

Focus?

Focus not good? Probably, but there was little time for the audience to note defects. The Santa Claus stunt only lasted about 15 to 25 seconds. I am somewhat critical myself, as you all know, but although I was prepared for what was coming by a visit to the projection room, I saw no out-of-focus defects, though it unquestionably was there, except that where it started it was a mere blur of light. However, at that point I think few except myself saw it at all, and to me the effect of the thing evolving into what seemed clearness out of a nebula of light, was distinctly good.

My only criticism, or rather suggestion, is that if the snow effect could be made to cover a wider field it would be better—in fact pretty nearly perfect.

Boys, I'll tell the word it was a great little stunt, and so far as I know is entirely original. This department congratulates Brother Rubin. He and the Rialto put it over on all Broadway that time.

Los Angeles Elks Club to Install $65,000 Robert-Morton Organ

THAT the modern theatre organ is fast becoming accepted as the greatest medium for the all around musical performance, and that California leads in the buying of expensive musical instruments, is again evidenced by the announcement that the B. P. O. E. Lodge No. 99 of Los Angeles have contracted with The Photo Player Company for a Robert-Morton Unit Organ to cost $65,000.

The new organ will represent the very last, final word in a modern pipe organ. In addition to being one of the largest, if not the largest complete unit organ, in the world, this Robert-Morton will include a separate complete "floating" string division, which will reproduce the string section of a large symphony orchestra. It is claimed that the voicing will be entirely superior to anything as yet attempted along this line.

The organ will be manufactured in its entirety at the California factories, the Robert-Morton branch of The Photo Player Company, and will be installed in the new Elks Temple at Park View and Sixth Streets, facing West Lake Park. Many motion picture stars, prominent exhibitors, directors, producers and others well known in the motion picture life of Southern California and the world are members of this famous Los Angeles Elks Lodge No. 99.

"They're Off!"

Any man who has ever visited a race track and heard the thrilling cry of the crowd, "they're off!" knows the spell, the lure, the romance and the pulse-quickening climaxes of horse-racing.

Vast crowds throng the tracks; millions who would like to go can't. Ready made audiences await the lucky exhibitors who book this most novel of all serials, filled as it is with horse races that bring you to the edge of your seat, that glorifies "Gold Blaze," a wonderful horse, and that hasn't a dull moment in it.

If good names in the cast, an alluring title and production that hits the bell mean anything at all, here's a picture that is a certain clean-up.

We urge you to have several episodes screened for you at the nearest Pathe exchange.

Dear Mr. Burr:

I am more than pleased with the EARLY BIRD. Of course, I expected a great deal because of the fact that your letter and wire were so enthusiastic, and knowing you as I do, I concluded that this enthusiasm on your part was not feigned. It is the smoothest picture that Johnny has made from a directorial standpoint. It builds up logically and Johnny himself does the best bit of acting that I have ever seen in any of his pictures. The rest of the cast are admirable, particularly Breese and Standing. Standing fits this picture perfectly. Breese is wonderfully cast and goes through with his part like an artist.

It is seldom one gets such a wonderful mixture of drama, melodrama, comedy and farce in one picture, and I believe, as you do, that it will leave a name for C. C. Burr. Congratulations to you and everyone connected in the making of this picture.

The Editor's Views

WE are talking to an exhibitor about one of the outstanding pictures on the market. "Book it," we say, "and show it if you never make a nickel. Its good-will value is beyond estimate—and good will is something that is going to mean a lot to your theatre in the years to come.

"Get your newspapers interested, work up the support of the clergy, the teachers and all the better element of your community life. They may not be the flappers who pack your house and pay your dividends, but they are going to have a lot to say about your ultimate prosperity and that of the entire industry."

The reply is a stare, and something of a snicker.

"Good will is the bunk," he answers. "What do I care about the future and troubles or advantages that may come years from now? Let me run this theatre my way, and when trouble comes I'LL HAVE MINE.

"Let the other fellow worry then.

"I'LL HAVE MINE."

* * *

THE scene shifts. We are talking to a producer—of sorts. Our argument is that a type of picture he is contemplating is not the best thing for the industry. "You may make money on it—you probably will. But in the long run each picture of that type inflicted upon the industry is piling up a tremendous score that will have to be settled some day."

You have guessed the answer.

"Let the fellow who comes after me worry about settling the score. I'm out to get mine while the getting is good. If there is going to be a day of reckoning I don't care, because by that time I'LL HAVE MINE.

"I'LL HAVE MINE."

SO it goes. The exhibitor who is urged to pay fair prices for film as a necessity to foster better production and a sure and independent future laughs at you. "I'm in control in this town now," he says, "and I'm going to take advantage of it. If the business gets in the hands of two or three big fellows and they begin to take advantage of me, I'll get out. By that time, I'LL HAVE MINE."

The salesman and manager to whom you suggest that there is going to be a great future for the man who builds a solid reputation for integrity and fair dealing, for the man in whom local exhibitors have one hundred per cent. confidence, smiles and replies, "That may be all right for the future, but I'm thinking about the present. When the future comes, I'LL HAVE MINE."

THE "I'LL-HAVE-MINE" boys do not make up the motion picture industry. Not by a big sight. Unfortunately, they are present in goodly numbers.

They always have been. Back in the early days we had lots of them. The golden deluge seemed too good to be true and far too good to allow for any worry about the future.

But there is an object-lesson in the fact that the industry has paid tremendously greater rewards to those who gave it a full share of serious attention than were ever garnered by the short-sighted ones who sought only the pleasure of saying "I've got mine."

And that's that. Maybe the "I'll-have-mine" boy is not one-half so wise as he looks—even when speaking from his cherished dollars-and-cents viewpoint.

First in the Field!

Mr. Big Exhibitor:

"Give a Thought to the GOOD Serial!"

WELL, what's wrong with the heading above? If you are asking me I'll say, "Nothing." What's more, I am out to prove it to you.

But there is a gentleman in the back row who is snickering. He says, "The day of the serial has passed. You can't bring serials back for the better run of theatres."

The gentleman isn't alone in his opinion. There are many exhibitors who believe as he does; there are even salesmen and managers with ideas of the same sort. In fact, the trouble is even deeper. The real crux of the serial problem is that you can't start an ARGUMENT. Veteran salesmen will tell you that you can't sell anything if you can't get the other fellow to argue. Many veteran salesmen are half licked before they start out on the proposition of selling serials to bigger theatres because they know that they won't get an argument, they will merely be met with a blank stare of incredulity. "Why, the idea! to think that I would play a serial in MY theatre!"

I'm going to start my own argument. At worst I can have the fun of arguing with myself. At best, I will start a lot of men thinking. I don't even care whether they agree with me at first thought. If I get them hurling words back at me—or at the film salesmen—I will have half the battle won.

Now let us look at the serial argument. Pro and con. There really isn't much "contra." It is a "taken for granted" situation. You can sum it up in a very few words:

"Don't talk to me about serials. Didn't I run one in my house years ago and hear a lot of kicks from my patrons? They don't want serials."

That tells the whole story.

But now let us look at the other side of the page.

There isn't a month that goes by that the Saturday Evening Post, Cosmopolitan and other of the million-copy national publications don't receive hundreds of letters from subscribers and readers saying, "I wish you would cut out the long, continued stories. They are a nuisance and for weeks and months I have to be certain to buy the magazine if I have started a serial. Why can't you give us all stories complete in one issue? I know it would please thousands of your readers."

Of course, it would please thousands of readers, but have you ever seen any big magazine rush to satisfy this "long-felt want?" Further, have you seen any of the magazines that specialize in complete stories outstripping the ones that publish serials?

There is an interesting story there. Some five or six years ago a number of publication men who had heard and read the continued complaints against serials decided that the road to fortune lay in meeting the demand for stories that were complete in a single issue. A great number were launched—a great many have long since died. A few met moderate success, a few of the survivors hung on through compromising with their own policy by publishing two- and three-part stories.

But all of the complete story magazines were always—and are always—in the same position as the motion picture theatre owner: He may have a packed house this Tuesday night, and not a Corporal's Guard next Tuesday night. HE HAS NO CONTINUAL, CONTINUED DRAW—something to bring them back again and again. He has to start out all over again on each feature and sell from scratch.

I maintain that a basic fact about human nature that builds two-million-circulation magazines is too important to be ignored by any business catering to the desire to be entertained.

Is there an exhibitor in any section of the country that has a Hearst newspaper who hasn't seen the magnetic draw, the sensational pull of "Chickie?" That's serial!

Haven't I the right to start an argument when a bald, plain business fact such as that is being ignored? Shucks, that's just one of the many selling points. There is the appeal of the serial to children—the patrons of the future. And very often the ones whose squawking voices decide the theatre that Ma and Pa will go to tonight.

Right now, I want you to once more read the heading on this page. Notice that I have emphasized the "good" serial. All that I have written has been with that word foremost in mind. There is no more place for the serial that has not kept step with production and story progress in the eleven-hundred-seat house than there is in the hundred and ninety-nine seater. There are good serials. There will be more as fast as opportunity opens for the really worth while serial.

The picture theatre of today needs that mysterious "something" that automatically brings them back again. There is a tremendous overhead loss in being forced to sell them all over again each time you change the bill. We all know that. We try to answer it by means of expensive organs, elaborate orchestras, specialties, and generally attractive house atmosphere. In this way we do answer it to a great extent. But there are more and more houses across the street that can offer the same thing. These one time "attractions" have become necessities.

Now I nominate the serial. The good serial. Give it a thought. Give a thought to the proposition of Saturday morning matinees for children. Give a thought to an idea that has been found successful—that of co-operating with a local newspaper on a free children's showing for the first episode, and then getting a good percentage of them back for fourteen or more weeks for your regular performances. Give consideration to the plan of putting the serial in only at your matinee performances—something that will pull them away from baseball.

Give a brave thought to taking the whole plunge—putting a good serial right in on your bill.

If two thousand people see the first episode and only two hundred and fifty come back next week to see what happened to the girl and for fourteen weeks more a steadily increasing number come back, you've done something, haven't you?

If three or four patrons meet you at the door and say they don't like serials because it is going to be so much trouble to have to follow them, think of the Saturday Evening Post editor who probably says:

"Of course they're peeved. But I give them so much other entertainment they can afford to stand for a serial or two without serious complaint. If I were not certain of getting them back to the newsstand week after week I couldn't afford to give them that other entertainment."

And a final word:

When you give a thought to the serial, think of REAL serials. Don't fool yourself with some mysterious desire for an alleged "class"—or you will finish up with a Billie Burke in "Gloria's Adventure." Then you will have neither serial nor entertainment.

Cabbage Soup, Chill Prison Walls and an Honest Ovation for Hackathorne

Sing Sing Convicts Stage Demonstration Over "Capital Punishment"

By SUMNER SMITH

B. P. SCHULBERG'S Preferred picture, "Capital Punishment," was shown under extraordinary circumstances this week. The place was Sing Sing Prison, Ossining, N. Y., and the audience some 1,600 convicts and thirty representatives of trade papers, newspapers and fan magazines. The occasion was impressive, to say the least. A motion picture projectionist, sentenced to from twenty years to life for murder, was putting on the picture. The twenty-one men in the death house were not there, but they were constantly in the minds of the spectators. The visitors were thinking that before their stories were written, one of the condemned men would have met the fate against which the picture preaches.

The trip was made from New York City in automobiles. The gates swung open in a grim sort of welcome, the throng was taken on a brief tour of inspection by a "trusty" eager to chat with folk from the outside world. A damp chilliness brought regrets that hats and coats had been abandoned in the reception room. Supper—the regular prison supper—in a great majority of cases lay untouched. It consisted of lukewarm tea, without milk or sugar, cabbage soup and unbuttered bread. Only that and nothing more.

This bit of description may seem beside the point in a trade magazine story, but it is of consequence because of what followed. Hungry and cold, the visitors climbed the iron stairs leading to the great room in which the prisoners see the "movies" and listen to the radio. There was some grumbling—motion picture folk are used to better fare than cabbage soup. The room was warmer than the dining hall but there were unpleasant draughts.

So what followed was not the psychology of comfortable theatre chairs, a drowsy warmth, music dispensed by a high-priced orchestra in elaborate regalia. Rather was it psychology with a reverse English—an outburst of genuine, spontaneous applause following the ending of the picture that made the effete visitors forget the draughts and their empty stomachs and thrill indescribably.

GEORGE HACKATHORNE

The round of applause was such as no picture theatre knows. Even the legitimate stage, except on prejudiced first nights, knows little about it. But it was not a suggestion of what was to follow.

J. G. Bachmann, vice-president of Schulberg Productions, mounted the stage and told in his quiet, sympathetic way how the idea of "Capital Punishment" was conceived and something about its development. His talk was accorded rousing applause, but still the dramatic moment had not arrived.

George Hackathorne, leading player in the film, was introduced by the "trusty" and stepped onto the stage. We don't think that any film player has ever received such a reception as that given Hackathorne. The convicts did not leap from their iron stools and shout, as a hysterical audience would have done; they clapped, a steady volume of applause that began with all the vigor of 3,200 muscular hands and swelled, like a rainstorm driving down on a metal roof, until all other sounds were drowned out.

The visitors were amazed. Hackathorne stared. Still the handclapping continued. It lasted at least three minutes. No rehearsed tribute this, like a national convention, but genuine applause. Tears began to fill Hackathorne's eyes. When his opportunity to talk came, he was at first what, under other circumstances, would have amounted to a fiasco. He couldn't get the words out of his mouth. After a struggle he regained his composure and talked production.

There are three reasons for this extraordinary scene. As a review on another page of this issue says, "Capital Punishment" is an exceptionally good picture. Then, Hackathorne does wonderful work in it. Then, the convicts' views are very decided ones.

Warden Lawes has lectured widely against capital punishment, his views coinciding with those of his charges. They want the extreme penalty abolished on the ground that it is impractical, inhumane and against the law of God. Many people will say that they are not entitled to consideration, but one of their well taken points is that of the picture—that innocent boys have gone to their deaths in the electric chair.

Well, it was a remarkable experience, everybody agreed. And the perfect finale came when, two hours later, Mr. Bachmann was host at a Hotel Astor dinner that included everything but cabbage soup. How that bunch did eat!

J. J. BACHMANN

Exhibitors Avert Strike in Chicago

A wire to Moving Picture World reveals that a projectionists' strike in Chicago was averted by exhibitors conceding a five per cent increase for the first year and three and three-fourths per cent additional for the following year. Negotiations all day January 10, following the announcement that a strike would be immediately pending unless demands for a ten per cent increase were considered.

Under the new agreement the minimum salary for projectionists in a 300-seat Chicago theatre is $57.50. The wage scale runs up to the neighborhood of $100 for the largest Loop houses.

The committee of the Exhibitors Association which effected these negotiations is made known as including the following: Jack Midler, Ludwig Siegel, Barney Balaban, Morris Katz, Emil Stern, Nate Ascher, James Plodna, James Coston, Morris Chynoski, Aaron Saperstein, Sam Abrahams, Mort Singer, Vincent Lynch, Louis Marks, Julius Goodman, Fred Cleveland.

Paramount Deal With Balaban-Katz on Loop Situation

Famous Players-Lasky Corporation announces it has consummated a deal with Balaban & Katz of Chicago, whereby the management of McVickers Theatre of Chicago will be in the hands of Balaban & Katz and the theatre will be operated by them as part of their Chicago Theatre organization. Under this agreement Paramount pictures will hereafter be divided among the McVickers, the Chicago, the Roosevelt and the new Randolph Theatre, now under construction, instead of being confined almost exclusively to McVickers, as in the past.

Announcement of the deal was made this week in a joint statement issued by the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation and Balaban & Katz.

The statement made it plain that this new arrangement does not affect the distribution of the Paramount product outside of the loop district of Chicago, and set forth also that the reasons for the new arrangements include: The fact that in view of the present output of Paramount pictures, it was impossible for any single theatre to give them adequate first-run presentation in the downtown district of Chicago, and the efficiency of the Balaban & Katz organization in the operation of high-class theatres.

Detroit - - Not Chicago

In last week's issue of Moving Picture World it was erroneously stated in a headline that John H. Kunsky was planning a new 5,000-seat house for Chicago. The story, however, made very clear that the word Chicago was an inadvertency and that Kunsky has in mind another theatre for Detroit.

O. K. "Blue Sundays" for Another Year in Springfield

Springfield, Mo., a town of 50,000 population, will remain under the yoke of "blue" Sundays for another year at least. At a special election on Sunday closing of theatres recently the vote against Sunday shows was 5,047 against 3,600. The Sunday "lid" has been on in Springfield since 1921.

Vastly different from the election of 1921, in which the exhibitors waged a hot campaign, the battle this year was between the merchants of the town and the church element. The vote was one of the lightest in the history of the town, there being 30,000 registered voters. As there was much adverse sentiment created against exhibitors on the part of the church element as a result of the last election, theatre owners this time decided to remain on the sidelines and watch the fight. The closing of theatres on Sundays practically had nullified business conditions on the Sabbath, so the exhibitors concluded it was the merchants' fight.

That the merchants failed to wage an effective campaign is self-evident by the outcome of the election. Little interest was aroused among the theatre-going public, although a petition requesting the special election received wide circulation.

Albany Realtor Gets Leland; Starts Chain

The biggest deal in Albany motion picture circles in many months took place there last week when C. H. Buckley, a real estate dealer of the city, took over the Leland Theater, which he has been operating jointly with Jacob E. Tarsches of Albany for the past two years or more. In gaining control of the Leland, Buckley also takes over the Clinton Square Theater, which the two have been operating for a year or more, along with the Leland.

In taking over the two theaters, Buckley, it is said, starts the foundation of a chain which will shortly be broadened by the acquisition of other houses in neighboring cities.

Buckley admits that he has several deals under way for other houses. He will make no changes of any sort at either the Leland or the Clinton Square, Oscar Perrin, who has made a remarkable success as manager of the theaters, being retained as manager. Both theaters are down town houses, playing first run pictures.

ARRESTED AFTER THEATRE FIRE

R. E. Jeter, proprietor of a theatre at Sulphur, Okla., was released from the county jail on a bond of $1,000 following his arrest after a fire in the theatre that he managed. Long wicks of cotton, saturated with kerosene, found in the building resulted in Jeter's arrest.

TWO DETROIT EXCHANGES MERGE

The Standard and Film Classics exchanges in Detroit, both under the supervision of Harry Charnas and Jess Fishman, have combined and will hereafter function as one, it is announced. James V. Allan, manager of Film Classics, and Robert Rowan of Standard will divided their territories, handling both products.

Coming and Going

Carl Laemmle is reported to have been a recent visitor in Chicago. It was said in this respect that his visit had mainly to do with his prospective new theatre on Randolph street.

Sol and Irving Lesser returned this week to New York from a trip to the Coast.

James Loughborough has left New York and will make his home in Arkansas.

Herman Rifkin of the Supreme Picture Film Corporation was in New York this week from Boston, Mass.

Arthur Smith, a New Jersey exhibitor, has leased his theatre and he and his wife will leave shortly for a trip around the world.

At the last minute Cecil B. DeMille cancelled sailings for himself and party on the George Washington which left New York for Europe on January 10.

Vivian Moses, publicity and advertising director of the Fox Film Corporation, returned to New York late this week after a business trip of two months in London and Paris.

M. J. O'Toole, head of the M. P. T. O. A., was a visitor in Gloucester, N. J., on January 15, when he spoke at the annual dinner of the local Chamber of Commerce.

B. R. Scott is in New York from the Coast.

Sam Katz and others of the Balaban & Katz organization were in Manhattan this week.

Robert Keable, author, has just returned from Europe and will remain in New York several days before journeying to Hollywood.

Max Goosman of the Fox foreign department is expected to sail for Cuba shortly.

George B. Seitz is expected to go with his company to Miami in a few weeks, it is reported.

Rupert Hughes arrived in New York this week.

Arthur Edeson has returned from the Coast.

Priscilla Dean is scheduled to commence a personal appearance tour on January 15.

R. G. Hill of the R. G. Hill Enterprises, Pittsburgh, was in town to make a special deal with some of the independents. He left New York for his home on January 14.

John C. Ragland and William R. Fraser of the Harold Lloyd Corporation returned on January 10 after spending three months in Europe.

Elmer R. Pearson of Pathe is scheduled to return to New York from the Coast this week.

Mr. and Mrs. Adolph Zukor are slated to sail on their usual mid-winter trip abroad on January 17. It is expected that they will return in March.

D. C. Goodman is expected in New York the latter part of this month.

J. D. Williams has arranged for a trip to the Coast.

Irving Thalberg is now in New York.

NORTHWEST TRADE BOARD ELECTS

The Northwest Film Board of Trade at its regular meeting last week elected officers for 1925. Paul G. Lynch, Pathe, re-elected president; Chas. W. Harden, United Artists, vice-president (re-elected); George P. Endert, Paramount, treasurer (re-elected). New trustees were named.

Contracts with State Organizations Aiding Exhibitor in Music Tax Fuss

Composers' Society Ratifies Tax Rate for M. P. T. O. of Kansas and Missouri; Members Secure 20% Cut from Schedule

WHAT seems to be an important step towards solving a part of the music tax problem is the establishing of contracts between the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers and state exhibitor organizations. The latest of these to be negotiated involves the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Kansas and Missouri.

At the headquarters in New York of the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers, it was said that similar contracts have been effected by the society with exhibitor organizations in New York, South Carolina, Michigan and Minnesota.

An executive here stated that as yet he had received no report from the society's representative in Topeka, Kansas. He declared that for a long time the society has had trouble with exhibitors in Kansas and Missouri and that the effecting of this contract is probably the outcome of a number of cases in which the courts sustained the society.

Moving Picture World's Kansas City correspondent said that the latest contract has been ratified by the society and now awaits the approval of the exhibitors. His report also reveals:

"The revision of a schedule of tax rates was completed at a recent meeting at M. P. T. O. Kansas and Missouri headquarters between William Wallace, music tax representative, and exhibitor officials. The drawing of the schedule, which is subject to change, completed months of work. It now will be submitted to exhibitors, copies and bulletin information to be forwarded to each exhibitor in Kansas and Missouri.

"The contract is different from any other in the country, according to Mr. Wallace, in that a special provision of a 20 per cent. reduction from the schedule is made to members of the exhibitors' organization. As the schedule applies to all exhibitors, whether they are members of the organization or not, it will mean a saving, according to C. E. Cook, business manager of the exhibitors' body, of from 20 to 45 per cent. to non-members, while members of the M. P. T. O. K. and M. will benefit by an additional 20 per cent saving over non-members.

"Credit for the special provision pertaining to members of the exhibitors' organization is extended by exhibitors to Mr. Wallace and his partner, J. W. Newell, both of Topeka, Kas. According to Mr. Wallace, who went to New York on the case, it was a difficult task to obtain the consent of the national music society to the contract, due to the liberality of terms made to exhibitors within the organization.

"The number of seats in a theatre or the size of the town were not the only determining factors in deciding the tax rate. The character, location and various other things had an important bearing on the fixing of the rates.

"The following is a rough estimate of the average annual rate in towns of various sizes: Less than 1,000 population, average $15; 1,000 population, average $20; 2,000 population, average $35; 3,000 population, average $38; 5,000 population, average $40; 7,000 population, average $42; 8,000 population, average $45; 10,000 population, average $47; 11,000 population, average $50; 12,000 population, average $52; 13,000 population, average $54; 15,000 population, average $57; 16,000 population, average $60; 18,000 population, average $62; 23,000 population, average $64; 50,000 population, average $70; 70,000 population, average $75; 100,000 population, average $80.

"There necessarily is a variance in rates on theatres in towns of the same size," said Mr. Cook, "due to the fact that the circumstances in no two cases are alike. The schedule, I believe, is a fair and impartial one, although final approval, of coures, is up to the exhibitors."

Milwaukee Shubert Junked for Stores

In darkness for the past two years, the Shubert Theatre, one time pride of Milwaukee, in which city it was erected as an opera house back in 1864, has just been sold for $100,000. Wrecking crews this week started its demolishment to use for modern stores the site upon which once trod such celebrities as Edwin Booth, Lillian Russell, Sothern and Marlowe and a host of other luminaries.

Its 1,500 seats made it the biggest theatre in the middlewest in the earlier days. It commenced to decline some ten years ago with the shifting of Milwaukee's show center.

MILWAUKEE EXHIBITORS CO-OPERATE WITH CLERGY

Demonstrating their readiness to work hand in hand with the churches, seven neighborhood theatres on the northwest side of Milwaukee joined during the recent holiday season in community singing of religious songs under the direction of representatives of the Federation of Churches. As a result of the success of the move, theatre and church leaders have already laid plans to extend the singing next year to include every showhouse in the city.

Davison Bill Creator Gets Strong Letter from O'Toole

"TO subject theatre owners to promiscuous espionage and make every police officer a potential prosecutor, or persecutor, with a fine, a jail term and a padlocked theatre among the possibilities, is to legally brand them as an inferior class anticipate felonious acts out of reason, needlessly embarrass them in their business, reduce their service powers to the community, seriously impair the utility of the theatre generally and by placing them up as statutory targets invite the attack from all who, through proper or other motives, care to take it."

Above is a quotation, furnishing a summation, of a letter made public by President M. J. O'Toole of the M. P. T. O. A. to F. Trube Davison, assemblyman from the Nassau District, New York. Mr. Davison is the originator of the Davison bill which was presented at the last session of the legislature and which, it is indicated, will shortly again be introduced in substantially the same form.

The courteous treatment which Sydney S. Cohen received while visiting Assemblyman Davison recently and the latter's expression of a desire to be fair in this matter, according to Cohen, inspired O'Toole to write this letter, its opening paragraph reveals.

Copies of this letter are being sent to exhibitors throughout New York State. O'Toole urges them to show it to their state representatives, at the same time making known their opposition to the bill and their desire for the repeal of censorship. In this respect the M. P. T. O. A. chairman states:

"Mr. Davison's purpose, no doubt, is to be entirely fair, but he seems to have received some of his information regarding our business from producer sources and as much of this is erroneous we must correct any false impressions which may have been created."

In the communication to Davison, O'Toole also emphasizes:

"In forty-two other states no state censorship law exists, and in these states the Penal Codes are entirely adequate. This will certainly be true of New York State where the Penal Code is even more comprehensive than in many of the other commonwealths.

"If a rare case should occur where, in the judgment of the city or town officials, the state's Penal Code might not entirely cover the situation, the general police powers conferred upon the cities and towns would be always ample to provide for every necessary remedy."

LONDON EXECUTIVES DINE GOLDWYN

Samuel Goldwyn was the guest of honor and chief speaker at a luncheon tendered to him by a group of representative distributors and exhibitors in London, England, recently. The dinner was in the nature of a testimonial to Goldwyn.

Senator Walker Will Lead Fight for Censorship Repeal in N. Y.

Hays and Exhibitor Bill Likely to Be Only One Introduced—Censorship Now Leading Topic in Albany—Vacancy Unfilled

MOTION picture censorship repeal in New York State will command first attention in the Legislature this year. It is already one of the leading topics of conversation around the State Capitol, in the lobby of hotels, and other places where politicians gather. Forces are already lining up either for or against the bill that will be introduced in the near future, and which will call for the repeal of the present censorship law. It is now expected that there will be but one repeal bill introduced, that one having the solid backing of both the Hays national organization and the New York State association.

It is further expected that this bill will be a non-partisan one, gaining votes from the Republican forces and losing nothing from the Democrats by reason of the fact that Governor Alfred E. Smith has again committed himself openly as being in favor of repealing the law and abolishing the present Commission. Just who will introduce the bill will not be settled until after the bill has been whipped into acceptable shape and leaders have conferred and decided upon the person to sponsor the measure. It is doubtful if Senator Leonard Lipowicz, of Buffalo, will introduce the bill, owing to its importance and likewise to the fact that he is a new man and has little experience, in legislative matters. Lipowicz is a theatre owner and will work hard to secure the passage of the bill in the Upper House, but it will be Senator James J. Walker, of New York, who will lead the fight.

In the meantime it would not be surprising in the least if Governor Smith did not name a successor for some weeks to come to Mrs. Helen M. Hosmer on the New York State Motion Picture Commission. It will be recalled that Governor Smith did not hurry to name a successor to Joseph Levenson a year ago, and that the session was almost over when he appointed Arthur Levy. It may be that he will see what progress the censorship repeal bill makes before deciding on naming someone to Mrs. Hosmer's place.

If the bill manages to pass both houses it is sure to be signed by the Governor, and in this case he would probably make no appointment to the Commission, as it is generally conceded that the repeal bill now being drafted will call for the wiping out of the Commission at the end of the fiscal year, June 30.

Mrs. Sara Friedman, of New York City, former Deputy Secretary of State, is putting up the most aggressive fight of any of the candidates seeking the position. She has secured the endorsement of several organizations and several have already seen the Governor in her behalf.

"Photogenic" — — Boy! Mr. Goldwyn!!

Hailed as another contribution to the film industry's vocabulary is the expression Samuel Goldwyn is credited with using in cabling to Abraham Lehr, Hollywood, when he describes Count Salm von Hoogstraten as "photogenic." In this respect Goldwyn, we take it for granted, explains himself as meaning that the Count has all the essentials to register a pleasing grin or a tempestuous frown. The cable divulges that Goldwyn has tendered Salm a contract and has expectations that it will bear inky fruit.

Hearst, Ziegfeld and Brisbane to Build Stage Theatres

William Randolph Hearst, Florenz Ziegfeld, Jr., and Arthur Brisbane, Hearst's editorial writer, will build two theatres on the southeast and southwest corners of Sixth avenue and Fifty-fourth street, New York City, and probably will later build playhouses in Chicago, Boston and Philadelphia. Mr. Ziegfeld is negotiating for the lease of Mr. Hearst's Cosmopolitan Theatre at Columbus Circle, New York City, and will put one of his own productions in it. This news of a triple alliance is current along Broadway and considered authentic, though not as yet officially confirmed.

The two New York theatres, it is said, will be called the Ziegfeld and the Billie Burke. The first named will be the larger, while the second probably will seat about 1,000 and also be equipped for musical productions. Hearst and Brisbane will build the theatres and lease them to Ziegfeld for long terms.

This marks Mr. Hearst's first step in the legitimate field, but he will be interested only in the real estate end.

News on Every Page

Just one of the many instances as to enterprise and why Moving Picture World is first in the field is shown in that publication's second section on "Peter Pan." This section starting on page 372 is worthy of your attention because it is comprised of hot wire reports from exhibitors on this Betty Bronson picture.

When the steam heating system failed him in a cold snap, Roy Czerny out in Seattle did not close up his theatre. Quite to the contrary, since he installed temporarily electric stoves. Read how they met the emergency on page 357.

The Fitzpatrick-McElroy site in Chicago has just been sold for $95,000. The details surrounding this transaction are presented on page 355.

Lubliner & Trinz Building 22nd Theatre in Chicago

WORK will start at once on the latest addition to the Lubliner & Trinz circuit of moving picture theatres, to be located on the south side of Belmont avenue just east of Lincoln avenue and extending through to Fletcher street, Chicago.

The new house will be called the Belmont Theatre and when completed will represent an investment of $2,000,000. It is planned to have 2,235 seats on the first floor of the house and 1,065 seats in the balcony.

A large stage will be built to accommodate the biggest vaudeville acts as well as stage presentations to accompany the pictures.

The orchestra pit will be a huge elevator that can be lowered and raised at the will of the leader. The Belmont will also have an up-to-date cooling system and one of the best organs that can be secured.

The theatre building will be owned by the Lincoln Belmont Building Company, which is controlled by Harry M. Lubliner and Joseph Trinz and their associates.

S. W. Strauss & Co., mortgage bankers, have underwritten a first mortgage issue of $1,250,000 for the new house and the contracts have been signed for the work. It is expected that the theatre will be ready for business by the first of January, 1926.

This will be the 22nd house of the Lubliner & Trinz circuit, giving them, it is reported, the largest number of theatres under one management in the city.

In addition to the theatre there will be ten stores on the Belmont avenue side and seventy apartments in the building from one to five rooms, which will add materially to the revenue to be derived from the building. The Spanish renaissance design will be used in the Belmont Theatre, with polychrome terra Cotta and pressed brick facing for the new house.

$45,000 NEBRASKA FIRE LOSS

The Crescent Theatre at Holdredge, Neb., was completely destroyed by fire recently. The loss was said to be $45,000. The Crescent was a new building operated by Mr. Garvin.

"Ben Hur" Unit Is Ready to Return

The "Ben Hur" unit in Rome is now packing up and preparing to embark for home. Marcus Loew has authorized Metro-Goldwyn New York headquarters to make known this information. Upon the arrival of this company, a detailed statement as to plans, etc., will be officially issued.

Moving Picture World learned at the headquarters that the "Ben Hur" company has completed most of its important work. It lacks only a few scenes of being totally finished and these, according to present plans, will be taken on the Coast.

CANADIAN PROJECTIONISTS PLAN FOR LOCALS

Motion picture projectionists of Western Canada recently held a special four-day convention at Winnipeg, Manitoba, to study the labor situation and the discussions centered on plans for the building up of the projection machine operators' locals in a number of centers. The general situation was not considered good, it is said, because two of the Winnipeg theatres which formerly specialized with vaudeville were now closed, thus throwing a considerable number of musicians and operators o nthe market. J. Dillabough of Winnipeg presided at the meeting, assisted by V. Armand from the Capitol Theatre, Winnipeg.

N. Y. FOX EXCHANGE PARTY

The New Year party at the New York exchange of the Fox Film Corporation was a big surprise to Fox exhibitors who flocked with their wives and daughters to enjoy the unexpected fun provided by Louis Rosenbluh and his corps of salesmen. The employes of the exchange, numbering over one hundred, joined in the merriment, which started at noon and lasted until late in the evening, amusement being provided in the large reception room and the general sales room with musical numbers, dancing and refreshments.

COPYRIGHT HEARING POSTPONED

Owing to the inability of Representative Perkins, of New Jersey, to be present, because of the necessity of appearing in New York at an aircraft hearing, the public hearing which was to be held on January 13 by the House Committee on Patents on Mr. Perkins' bill for the consolidation and revision of the copyright laws has been postponed. The new date for the hearing has not yet been set, but may be either January 20 or January 27, it was stated by members of the committee.

STAHL WINS RIESENFELD CUP

At the Fourth Annual Frolic of the employees of the Riesenfeld Theatres, New York City, held Tuesday night, January 6, at the Criterion Theatre, Willy Stahl, conductor of the Rialto Orchestra, won the silver loving cup for the best stage presentation of the evening. Stahl's act, one of ten presented by the different departments of the Rivoli, Rialto and Criterion Theatres, was an impersonation of Hugo Riesenfeld, Josiah Zuro, Irvin Talbot and Emanuel Baer conducting.

State Rights Sales

Rayart Pictures this week announce the sale of the George Larkin Series for Ohio to Security Pictures of Cleveland; the sale of the serial, "Battling Brewster," to Exclusive Pictures of Detroit, for Michigan, and the sale of the Reed Howes Series for Michigan to Rex Film Company.

Golden and T. and D., in Frisco, Separate

The Golden State Theatre & Realty Co., of which Robert M. McNeill is president, has separated its interests from those of the T. & D. Jr. Enterprises, Inc., and has opened offices at 86 Golden Gate avenue, San Francisco, where it occupies the entire second floor. Almost $10,000 has been expended in fitting up these offices.

This circuit has taken over the Wigwam, Broadway, Verdi, Washington, Palmer, Excelsior, Sunset and Crescent theatres, of San Francisco; the Broadway, Lincoln, Rialto, Granada, Palace, Fremont, Casino, Fruitvale and Dimond theatres, of Oakland; the Varsity Theatre, of Berkeley; the Best Theatre, of San Leandro, and the Hayward Theatre, of Hayward. It has under construction the New Sunset Theatre, at San Francisco; the Pacific Grove Theatre, at Pacific Grove, Cal., and the Royal, Golden Gate, Boulevard, Parkway and New Fruitvale theatres, at Oakland.

De Mille and F. P.-L. Sever; Future Berth Unannounced

WITH the issuance this week of an official statement by Famous-Players-Lasky that Cecil B. DeMille has terminated his contract with that company by mutual agreement arise the usual rumors that generally accompany such a situation. The rumors concern the noted director's future berth. Two of the most persistent are that Universal and United Artists are the producing companies which would afford such a possibility for DeMille. Of the two, later conjecture was inclined to favor Universal.

Wherever DeMille goes, however, it is generally understood that he will have full power in the supervision of each and every one of his productions. In this respect the statement credits him with saying:

"The new situation permits me to carry out plans for enlarged activities which I have long had in mind. I am now laying out a schedule of stories and stars to appear in them which will offer the most ambitious program I have ever attempted. As the details of this work are naturally arduous it will be some time before anything definite can be said. I feel that the program I have in mind can be best carried out independently."

Earlier in the statement it is announced that nothing definite is yet to be said of De Mille's plans. As to this DeMille is quoted as follows:

"I will produce pictures of the same calibre as my past work. But the details of any new association are a matter for future discussion. Leaving the FamousPlayers-Lasky Corporation after twelve years is a painful thing. I have no better friends anywhere than Adolph Zukor, Jesse L. Lasky and S. R. Kent, and as we now proceed to tread separate business paths I know their best wishes go to me as mine to them."

That the termination of the contract at this time was unexpected by the director is evidenced by the fact that DeMille "cancelled at the last minute because of the conferences made necessary by the new alignment" the sailings for himself and party on the George Washington, which left New York for Europe January 10. DeMille had made all arrangements for this trip weeks in advance, as was also shown by frequent announcements during that time.

With regard to DeMille's severance with Paramount Adolph Zukor stated:

"We are sorry that our negotiations with Mr. DeMille are ended. He has been associated with us for twelve years and in that time has established a position as one of the foremost producers of pictures. He leaves us with our sincere best wishes for a splendid success in any new association he may undertake."

Milwaukee Film Trade Board Elects Officers

Sam Shurman, head of the Metro-Goldwyn office, has been elected president of the Milwaukee Film Board of Trade for 1925, succeeding Harry Hart of F. B. O. Other new officers are: Ed Tunstall, Warner Bros., vice-president; V. F. De Lorenzo, Celebrated Players, secretary and treasurer; Atty. Ben Koenig, counsel, and Max Stahl, Educational, sergeant-at-arms.

The 1925 Board of Arbitration consists of the following: Harold Fitzgerald, First National; G. A. Smith, Famous Players; G. F. Frackman, Progress; Fred Martin, Vitagraph, and Max Stahl, Educational.

MINNEAPOLIS FILM BOARD ELECTION

H. J. Bayley, Pathe, was elected president of the Minneapolis Film Board of Trade at the annual meeting held here last week. Other officers elected were L. O. Lukan, First National, vice-president; E. T. Gomersell, Fox, secretary; Jack Raper, Famous Players-Lasky, treasurer. The permanent arbitration board representing exchanges was named as follows: Lukan, Phil Dunas, Universal; G. R. Branton, Educational. A. H. Fischer, retiring president of the board, and T. H. MacEvoy were named alternate members. Ben Friedman was made a director.

SECECA'S SUNDAYS PAYING

The first two Sunday shows in Seneca, N. Y., have attracted excellent business for the motion picture theatres there, folks coming from the country districts and surrounding towns, where no Sunday exhibitions are permitted.

U. S. Considering Special Bureau to Watch Foreign Film Situation

An Industry Leader Would Head Section; Need for Such Provision Intimated by Hays in Washington Trip, Reporter Also Says

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Plans for the creation of a section in the specialties division of the bureau of foreign and domestic commerce, to deal exclusively with moving pict ure films, are under consideration by officials of the Department of Commerce, it is understood. If sufficient funds to carry out the project are provided by Congress in the annual appropriation bill for the department, which is now being prepared by the Appropriations Committee of the House, the proposed section, under the administration of a man with actual moving picture experience, if possible, will be created about the beginning of the new fiscal year in July.

It has become known that Will Hays, when in Washington recently, discussed with Director Klein the situation abroad with respect to moving picture films and pointed out the need for some provision whereby information regarding markets and, particularly, import restrictions would be secured and transmitted to Americans interested, without delay.

Alarmed by the increasing popularity of American films, a number of European countries, it has been reported to the department, have recently considered the imposition of restrictions upon imports, both as a method of encouraging the production of native pictures and as a measure of retaliation for our failure to import their film productions. England, France and Germany have been prominent in this move, but the matter has been given consideration in a number of other countries.

The keeping of a close watch upon developments along this line would be probably the most important part of the work of the proposed section, which would also devote itself to assisting American film producers in increasing their foreign sales wherever possible.

The creation of the moving picture section, which would be a part of the specialties division in which, now, moving pictures and a number of other commodities are handled, would require an appropriation of approximately $15,000, it is believed, judging from the funds which in the past have been sought for the opening up of new commodity divisions. Whether the annual appropriations for the next fiscal year will permit the additional expense which would be incurred by the opening of the section can not now be learned. The bill is in the hands of the appropriations committee, whose proceedings are executive until the measure is reported in the House, and officials of the department refuse, while the bill is in its present status, to divilge any details of their plans for the coming year.

Exhibitor Contact Asserts Itself

Members of the city council license committee voted to reduce suburban theatre licenses in Minneapolis this week after an investigation started for the purpose of raising the license fees.

The reduction came after members of the committee had made a survey and heard from exhibitors who gave them first hand information on business conditions.

Under the new schedule the suburban license will be $25 instead of $75. This will affect all houses outside the Loop and a few of the smaller ones in the Loop district.

19,888,910 Film Feet Exported in November

Exports of moving picture films continue to maintain the high levels which they attained a few months ago, figures compiled by the Department of Commerce show, shipments for the month of November totaling 19,888,910 linear feet, with a value of $755,154. Exports for the month included 3,834,030 linear feet of raw stock, valued at $76,343; 663,757 feet of negatives, worth $146,039, and 15,421,123 feet of positives, with a value of $532,772.

Exports of positives to England again went above the two-million-foot mark, totaling 2,492,298 feet, valued at $125,893 in November, and that market also absorbed 708,000 feet of raw stock, worth $16,792, and 506,134 feet of negatives, valued at $119,295. Japan was the best customer for raw stock, taking 1,166,150 feet, worth $19,603. Canada's imports of positives totaled 1,783,062 feet, valued at $78,266, and Australia took 1,511,693 feet, valued at $47,339.

BANDITS ARE BUSY IN ST. LOUIS

In St. Louis exhibitors seemed to be "marked men" for bandits. In less than four months five showmen have been held up. The latest was Thomas Curley, manager of William Goldman's Queens Theatre, who parted with $212. On December 28 Spiros Cardas, assistant manager and treasurer of Grand Central Theatre, kidnapped and forced to open theatre. Loss, $6,300. On January 3 Benjamin Schwartz, manager Lowell Theatre, held up by lone bandit at Washington boulevard and Newstead avenue. Robbed of $101. A few days before Christmas a bandit forced the cashier of Loew's State Theatre, Eighth and Washington avenue, to turn over $8.

BATH COMPROMISES ON SUNDAY

The trustees of the town of Bath, N. Y., have reached a compromise on the situation relative to the showing of Sunday motion pictures in the new Babcock Theatre. Recently the local W. C. T. U. protested against the showing of pictures on Sunday. The trustees have decided the theatre must close Sunday afternoons and they have also asked that the evening show be held after the churches have closed.

National Better Films Talk and Luncheon in N. Y. C. Soon

TWO important gatherings are being planned by the National Board of Review of Motion Pictures. The annual luncheon will be held at the Waldorf on January 17. The following will speak: Samuel Rothafel, William de Mille, Adolphe Menjou, Robert Shorwood, Joseph Dannenberg, John Emerson and M. J. O'Toole; Christopher Morley, Everett Dean Martin, Irwin Wheeler, and Dr. James J. Walsh.

As a result of the attendance last year, of a number of people connected with the National Board of Review or its affiliated committee, the National Committee for Better Films, who came long distances to attend the luncheon of the board, the National Committee decided this year to hold a National Better Films Conference especially for the out of town delegates. Accordingly such a Conference has been called preceding the luncheon.

Dr. William B. Tower, chairman of the National Board and of the National Committee, will be the presiding officer. Mrs. Harry Lilly, former motion picture chairman of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, will give a survey of better films development and activity throughout the country. She will be followed by Miss Ruth Rich, state chairman of motion pictures, D. A. R., State of Florida, and former president of the Jacksonville Better Films Committee, who will direct the discussion of problems in better films committee organization and conduct. Mr. Wilton A. Barrett, executive secretary of the National Board, will speak on the review work of the National Board and its relation to the selection of "better films," while Miss Alice B. Evans, secretary of the National Committee for Better Films, will explain the functions of the National Committee and touch upon its possibilities.

Through the courtesy of the Famous Players-Lasky Company the delegates who arrive on Thursday, the 15th, will be taken to visit the Paramount studio, they will also visit at various review committee meetings of the National Board of Review.

DUNKIRK FIRE KILLS MAN

Fire did several thousand dollars' damage to the Empire Theatre in Dunkirk, N. Y., on New Year's Day. Angelo Zeruso, 65 years old and an invalid, trapped in the fire, died from the effects of smoke and exposure.

Industry's Output for 1923 Totals $86,418,170, Census Bureau Reports

$9,000,000 Gain Over 1921 Is Shown, Despite Fewer Establishments and 800 Persons Dropped from Active List

A LATE dispatch from Washington, D. C., reveals that figures just made known by the Census Bureau there total the value of the film industry's output for the year 1923 at $86,418,170. This is an approximate excess of $9,000,000 over such a summary for 1921, which reached $77,397,381. The Bureau report states, however, that the 1923 total accounts for 97 concerns, while the preceding figure included the consideration of 127 establishments.

Various items comprising the 1923 total, according to the report, include: dramatic pictures at a summarized value of $82,719,740; educational films at $1,076,473; advertising films at $931,664; miscellaneous films and other products at $1,670,509 and $20,054, respectively.

The computation used in obtaining these figures is explained by the bureau in its statement which follows in part:

"The basis employed by motion picture companies in determining the value of their output varied considerably. Thirteen establishments, whose combined output formed about 35 per cent of the total for the entire industry, merely reported for value of output the cost of production to the extent of payments for salaries, wages, contract work and cost of materials. Some establishments reported the amounts received for pictures sold outright; some, the amount of rentals or royalties received; others, an estimated value based on rentals or royalties received; and still others, their total receipts during the year."

The report also shows that there are 800 persons less engaged in the film industry than in 1921; also that by the same comparison salaries and wages are nearly $1,000,000 more and the cost of materials slightly under $1,000,000 less.

Oklahoma Senate Expected to Inaugurate State Censorship

STATE censorship of motion pictures was asked in a bill introduced in the Oklahoma State Senate on January 10 by Senators Reed, Calvert, Johnson, Cline, Bobo, Boyer, Looney and Hughes and sponsored by eleven of the forty-four members of the Senate.

The bill would establish a board of three persons who would approve such films, folders, posters and advertising matter as are moral and proper, and disapprove such as exhibit the robbing of banks, trains, stores, or hi-jacking and sex pictures in which notorious people are filmed, and anything cruel, obscene, indecent or immoral or tending to debase or corrupt morals.

Fees up to $2 a film would be authorized to be charged for the previewing and censoring of pictures as they come into the state. Both originals and copies would be charged. Out of this fee, half would pay the salaries and expenses of the board and half would go into the state general fund. Each board member would draw a salary of $2,100 and traveling expenses. A clerk would draw $1,500 a year. One member would be appointed by the governor, another by the secretary of state and the third by the commissioner of charities.

Penalties ranging from $25 for a first offense to from $100 to $500 and thirty days in jail are urged for exhibitors of unapproved films. The bill, it is believed, will become a law, but the exhibitors will fight it tooth and nail.

A. M. P. A. HOST TO BETTY BRONSON

The A. M. P. A. at its meeting this week in New York City entertained Betty Bronson, star of "Peter Pan." The members decided that the attendance at their Naked Truth dinner on February 7 at the Hotel Astor should be limited to 900 persons. President Botsford has issued orders that no outsider be allowed to sell tickets.

MOTHER OF ASCHER BROTHERS DEAD

Mrs. Mathilda Ascher, mother of Nathan, Max, Maurice and Harry Ascher, died recently at the East End Park Hotel, Chicago, where she was making her home, at the age of 67. Mrs. Ascher is survived also by four daughters. She was born in Berlin and came to America when seventeen years old.

LOUGHBOROUGH TO WRITE FICTION

J. M. Loughborough, advertising manager for Principal Pictures Corporation, has resigned from that organization and started South on a motoring tour with his wife. After traveling through the Southern States for several months they will go to Pike County, Ark., and live in a bungalow on the property of the Arkansas Diamond Company, where Loughborough announces he will devote his time to writing fiction.

FROM USHER TO MANAGER

Sidney Dannenberg, formerly assistant to Max Cooper, manager of the Rialto Theatre, New York City, has been made manager of the Criterion Theatre, replacing Herman Grafing, who has resigned to go into business. William Schaefer succeeds Dannenberg as assistant to Cooper. Dannenberg began his career in the Riesenfeld Theatres in July, 1919, as an usher.

New Faces Needed in Films, Zukor Tells Radio Audience

Adolph Zukor, president of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, spoke to 3,000,000 listeners from Station WOR, Newark, N. J., on January 14, expressing the utmost optimism of the motion picture industry's prospects for the future. Among improvements in pictures he mentioned the appearance of new faces on the screen, saying that the public, while loyal to a few stars, still tires of seeing too many familiar faces. He pointed to Betty Bronson, star in "Peter Pan," as an illustration of how new players are being developed.

After discussing forthcoming productions, Mr. Zukor described the Paramount story department. This covers in advance every work of fiction or importance in the United States and England. It has scouts in the big European cities. Everything sent to the main office is catalogued and a digest made. The library, which is comparatively new, now contains about 25,000 books, stories and plays and is being augmented at the rate of over 6,000 pieces of material a year.

Mr. Zukor then talked about the new interest of recognized authors in the screen and how they are studying screen technique.

Clergymen Will Aid Fox to Produce Golden Play

Will H. Hays, President of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc., at a luncheon at the Union League Club on January 15 effected arrangements for leading clergymen to take part in the production of a motion picture. Clergymen of many denominations attended the luncheon, as did representatives of the Fox Film Corporation, which will produce the picture, a screen translation of John Golden's stageplay, "Thank U," which is an expose of conditions besetting the underpaid minister.

Mr. Hays acted as host at the luncheon, and through his organization the clergymen will cooperate in the preparation of the screen "treatment" of the story, the writing of the scenario and the actual work of production, which will be started about Feb. 1. A percentage of the profits from the screen will be turned over to the fund for aged and infirm ministers, it was announced.

Colonel Jason S. Joy executive secretary of the Committee of Public Relations of the Hays organization, and Maurice S. Revnes, production manager of Fox Film Corporation were in attendance.

SELLING the PICTURE to the PUBLIC

EDITED BY EPES WINTHROP SARGENT

Chenoweth Makes a Holiday Cleanup With a Big Boy Scout Talent Night

ONE manager who never complains of poor business is H. A. Chenoweth, now of the Music Hall Theatre, Pawtucket, R. I., but who has managed a number of theatres in southern New England. It doesn't matter where "Chene" may be located, business is good because he makes it good. He has just written in to report an unusual holiday business through a Boy Scout stunt that not only made cash sales on New Year's Day, but which brought the approval of the scoutmasters and parents that will last long beyond the stunt itself, and make some money for him every day for the next year. Goodwill is often more to a house than big attractions, and Chene works his stunts for goodwill.

General Interest

The only thing we do not like about the idea is calling it Amateur Night. That's all right for wherever Mr. Chenoweth may be parked, for he trains his public to regard the billing of Amateur Night as the equivalent of good work, and the titling does not suggest the usual get-the-hook style of show that has come to be associated with this title in most sections. Generally "Boy Scout Test Night" would be a better title.

An any rate Chene put up eight prizes ranging from a medal to various parts of the regulation scout equipment, and it was part of his scheme to have plenty of prizes in order that most of the boys might be rewarded.

And he was careful to seek variety in his program. Anything of this sort is apt to run too much to vocal selections unless you look out, but here harmonica playing, violin music and piano selections were added to the vocal selections and recitations.

And one beauty of the stunts is that it is self-advertising. Most of the local and Providence papers run a department of scout news once a week or oftener, and Chene got the headlines on three different days for his offering, not to mention the immense volume of verbal advertising and the general news mention.

The manager who works stunts such as these in conjunction with the local entertainers idea as exploited by Harry Seel will not have to worry so much about his general program; though this is precisely the sort of manager who does go to extra lengths to make his film program attractive.

There is a gold mine right outside your theatre's doors if only you have the energy to go out and dig into it. You don't even have to think up schemes. Just keep reading this department.

Used the Ash Trays

Distributing the plaster ash trays gotten out by Vitagraph on Captain Blood, the American Theatre, Colorado Springs, had a real advertisement on every restaurant table in places where they had tables. They were also put out to cigar stands.

There was also a radio contest in which the short synopsis of the play was given over the air and a word in code followed. The first ten persons to report reception and give the word were handed passes. The first night the code was Rafael Sabatini, the second was Vitagraph and the third night they handed out J. Warren Kerrigan.

Starting with a single two, they ran the ads up to a twelve eights the day before the opening; they used the telephone stunt, plenty of paper and 2,000 heralds.

Kid Matinee Good Up to Sixty Years

Jack Roth, of the Liberty Theatre, Kansas City, recently started a drive on the Andy Gump series, egged on by Bob Gary, Universal exploiteer. His most original stunt was a "children's matinee" with an age limit of "from six to sixty." He stood back of the offer and everyone came in on ten cents and got a ten-cent box of Andy Gump crackers, as well. On other days of the drive week the crackers were given only to real children.

The cracker deal was put over with Loose-Wiles, makers of the Sunshine products, and they not only supplied the crackers but they helped Roth to windows in every store handling their line of goods.

Roth also tied the Journal-Post, which runs the cartoons, to a daily notice, in exchange for mention of his advertisements, but he had three contests.

One of these was for the best impersonation of Andy, the second was for the best original cartoon and the third was for the best essay on Sunshine biscuits.

It not only gave the Gump pictures the drag of a feature for that week, but it established them in favor for later showings.

Asked a Question

Most of the selling for The Fast Set at the Palace Theatre, Dallas, Texas, was done on a question.

John J. Friedl picked up the "How far should a husband go to retain his wife?" This was used in all newspaper work, made into 1,500 14x36 inch sheets, and sent on postcards to a special mailing list. This was about all that was necessary to back up the use of the names of Menjou, Betty Compson and Elliot Dexter.

Help to the Army Brings Its Rewards

Early in October two officers of the regular army called on Frank Whitbeck, exploitation man for Lowe's Warfield Theatre, San Francisco, to enlist his aid in putting over a flying circus and military tournament for the benefit of The Army Relief Society.

They merely wanted some pointers, but A. M. Bowles, general manager of the Northern Division of the West Coast Theatres, told Whitbeck to go the distance with them.

Whitbeck laid out the billboard campaign, wrote copy for the posters and the newspaper advertisements, helped them to land special stories about the event, looked after the printing of the tickets, persuaded other theatres to join him in showing trailers for the event, and even got them the rock bottom price on an automobile to be used as a gate prize.

Then they wanted a motion picture star to decide the award, and an Army plane took Whitbeck down to Los Angeles, where he landed Renee Adoree and got back in time to dine at home.

As a result the Army more than doubled the receipts of the circus of the year before.

Paid It Back

Then Classmates came to the Warfield, and the commandant told Whitbeck he could have the band of the 30th Infantry if the Musicians Union would consent. This consent was readily procured, and the result was a wonderful prologue to the Barthelmess production.

It opened with Severi and his men, in the pit, playing Light Cavalry. Then the curtain went up revealing the Victor Record Orchestra in West Point uniforms. After they had played a number the drop rose to disclose ten Army buglers in front of a drop showing the insigna of the 30th Infantry. They blew "Attention" and this drop was skied, to reveal the entire band of the regiment pyramided clear to the flies.

It was the most sensational and stirring prologue ever revealed in San Francisco, and by the end of the week they had sold 83,617 tickets and had done more than $5,000 better than any picture ever had done in the town.

The help to the army was purely to repay past favors, but it came back in a hurry and with unusual emphasis.

Production Hints from Edward L. Hyman

Managing Director, Mark-Strand Theatre, Brooklyn

RICHARD BARTHELMESS in "Classmates" was the center of a seven-incident program that ranged all the way from a "Pagliacci" overture to a popular ballad, the whole show running for exactly two hours. Of this time the musical incidents, including the Beethoven music master film, required thirty-five minutes, while the film portion took up one hour and twenty-five minutes.

Selections from Leoncavallo's "Pagliacci" by the Mark Strand Orchestra opened each deluxe performance, being topped off by baritone singing the well known Prologue from the opera. This singer at his cue made his entrance from the center of the gold draw curtains over the production stage, and sang on the apron of that stage, in correct clown costume, while two bridge spots of steel blue picked him out. The lights on the number included two light pink Mestrum floods of 160 amperes on the musicians from the dome; entrance spots of light amber on the ceiling drapes; blue foots and borders on large stage; open box lamps of light blue behind the transparent windows at either side of the musicians, and four straw spots covering the pleats of the gold draw curtains from the sides. Eight minutes for the overture.

Following was Tschaikowsky's "Nutcracker Suite" of dances by premiere dancer and eight members of the ballet. First was "Militons," entirely in silhouette, with four dancers as harlequins and one as Columbine. Back drop was white transparency against which were cut-out trees, a bench, a hillside and a house. No lighting from the front. Second was "Chinese Dance," which at opening showed three Chinese girls kneeling before a set-piece Buddha, backed up by gold draw curtains. As the girls went into their dance, spots of red, green and amber came up from the sides of the set, bringing out the green, black and orange of the dresses very effectively. Front stage was in blue, and there were two light green floods on the orchestra from the booth. Third was the solo dance, "Dance of the Sugar Doll," by premiere dancer. She was in white silk Yama Yama costume. Gold draw curtains were used as back drop, and in front of these, at either side, hung a huge candy stick, from flies nearly to the stage floor. All lights were out except two pure white floods from the dome on the dancer. The fourth and final dance was "Trepak," the background of which was four mirror mosaic flats upon which color wheels from the side were played. The dancers wore Russian costumes, and the same spots used in the Chinese dance were used here. The front lights included blue foots and borders on the large stage, and two light green floods on the orchestra from the booth. These four dances in eight minutes.

Following the Topical Review, which ran its usual eight minutes, an operatic tenor appeared in a rural setting for "The Blind Ploughman" (Clarke). Back drop was a meadow, with sheep in the foreground. Properties included a plough, shocks of wheat, etc. Tenor wore overalls and big sun hat. Orange spots from the sides picked out the stacks of wheat. Steel blue spots from over head and sides were focused on the singer Front lights included blue foots and borders on the large stage; transparent windows light blue; dome floods of deep blue on the musicians. Four minutes for this solo.

"Ludwig Van Beethoven," music master film, ran ten minutes and was specially scored with that composer's compositions. Following it came the stage number preceding the feature picture. It was the duet by lyric tenor and soprano, "When I Was the Dandy and You Were the Belle." For this a transition scene was used, the old couple being seated before a fireplace behind a Colonial mansion exterior front drop. At the chorus the amber spots on the singers dimmed out and the scene faded to the mansion front, as Colonial belles and dandies paraded across the stage. Five minutes for this number.

In Huntington, W. Va., the Advertiser was hooked to the idea of prizes for the best designs for costumes for Mae Murray and it gave six two-column heads. The contest brought in 112 designs, which is a decidedly good showing, since only a few can design. Makes Clever Use of Regular Stills

Harry Eagles has found a new way to break into the windows with his stills. When he hit Lewiston, Idaho, to aid I. M. Binnard in putting over Feet of Clay, he sold the leading handlers of women's wear on a display of stills accompanied by stock gowns as nearly like those in the pictures as they could command.

The stills were mounted and displayed in the window with an effort to make it look like an exhibit and not an advertisement. Then the firm took a two sevens for this announcement:

"An announcement of interest to the fashion lovers of Lewiston and Clarkston. Through the efforts of Mr. I. M. Binnard, manager of the Liberty Theatre, and Mr. E. J. Kincaid, manager of the R. C. Beach Company, portrait photographs of the stars' gowns and wraps used in Cecil B. DeMille's Feet of Clay have been secured from Mr. De Mille's personal representative, who is in this city, and will be on display Saturday and Sunday in the windows of the R. C. Beach Company."

They were just the regulation stills, but because they had been extra-exploited, people crowded about the windows for two days.

Raised Prices

H. D. McBride, a Metro-Goldwyn exploiteer, got Long Beach, Cal., all excited by advertising that the price of bread would go up to 30, 40 and 50 cents the following week. While the people were wondering why, he added, "but you'll admit it is worth it." The third day he tacked on the fact that the bread was from the receipt by Charles Norris, and if that did not tell you the fourth day helped along by saying that it was baked by Victor Schertzinger. Not until the fifth day did he explain that it was a motion picture, but most persons had guessed it by then.

Shirt Contest

Hooking in on the Manhattan shirts for the Richard Dix Manhattan, J. L. Shields, of the Modjeska Theatre, Augusta, Ga., tied the local handlers to a contest in which a shirt and a pair of tickets to the show were offered for the first correct estimate as to the shirt size and sleeve length of the Manhattan shirts worn by Dix.

To give the estimators something to go by, there were plenty of pictures of Dix. All you had to do was figure out that a man of Dix's size would wear a certain size shirt and a certain length of sleeve. Twelve pairs of tickets were the consolation prizes.

Put All He Had on North of 36

Figuring that a man who could not sell a story of the rebirth of Texas in San Antonio should go to the home for feeble minded, and knowing that the production would back him up, Vinton Sholl, of the Empire Theatre, blew the top off for North of 36. It was nothing in his young life that the pre-Christmas slump was on. He went right ahead and played to above all records business.

Naturally the newspapers were with him on this Texas story. One gave him a full page, and they all kicked in with more than the usual space allowance, feeling that the stuff would interest their readers.

One brand new angle was selling a big department store on a loan display of relics of the old days. That part of it is not new, but the store advertised for several days in its regular space. It got enough relics to make a display that had the whole town lined up before its glass front, and that was more newspaper talk that profited both the store and the theatre. Of course the store handled the book, and made a heavy drive on this, both in the windows and in its advertising.

One of the gifts of the gods was a cattlemen's convention, called by the Governor, a week ahead of the play date. Sholl had nothing to do with this, but he did persuade Col. Ike Prior, head of the Association, to tell the members about the production and urge that they see it. As he is a multi-millionaire they figured he was talking from interest and not for a pass.

Fifty 24-sheets were posted, in addition to smaller paper, 3,000 postcard miniatures of the 24-sheet were mailed out, there were paper footprints all over town and book markers in the library a week in advance. All the schools were solicited and the autos carried stars, the state emblem, on their windshields.

Fourteen windows, aside from the department store, were given the attraction, and he had a special short length showing Mrs. Amanda Burke, the original of "Taisie" of the story, on her Texas ranch home.

For a prologue he used a cowboy scene, with a quartet. But in place of the usual Juanita he had A Home on the Range, The Chisholm Trail and Rounded Up in Glory, written by Oscar J. Fox, himself an old cowman. They are handled by Carl Fisher, in case you want to get something really characteristic.

The net result wos a record that is going to stand for a long time, and it was done December 6 at a time when most managers have to go in and sit with the ushers to help them from getting lonesome.

THE MINIATURE TRAIN AGAIN HELPS THE SIGNAL TOWER

This was in the lobby of the Rialto Theatre, Augusta, Ga., and C. F. Creslein got up an elaborate miniature with lights in the train, the station and on the poles. The pole back of the station was the signal tower operated by strings.

A Big Name

Figuring that Harold Lloyd has worth more to the house than Hot Water, Lloyd was used to put over the picture at the Empire Theatre, San Antonio, Texas.

A sign 60 feet by two was suspended over the eight-story electric sign on the corner of the theatre. The letters were yellow on a purple ground with light bulbs to spell out the name at night. It brought such a good business that Manager Vinton H. Sholl did the same thing for Gloria Swanson in Wages of Virtue the following week, and got about the same cleanup.

Selling All Titles Helps Wright Play

Out in Milwaukee the Strand Theatre gave book handlers passes to be given each purchaser of a copy of The Mine With the Iron Door. A Ringer

Many managers have used a chime or a single bell for The Hunchback, but O. L. Meister, of the White House Theatre, Milwaukee, worked his for more than a sound effect.

He placed a wax figure to suggest Chaney in his role of Quasimodo, on top of the box office, with a rope running down from the bell and the figure was animated so that it rang the bell, giving both a sight and sound effect that were the more effective because they were connected.

HERE'S A BETTER ANGLE ON THE FAMILIAR BREAD IDEA

They did not merely hand out sample loaves in the Lyceum Theatre, Minneapolis. They gave out 50,000 full sized loaves, but they made up a really interesting exhibit with the various ingredients, sample loaves and everything.

Made an Exhibit in Bread Distribution

Scores of theatres have given away loaves of bread on Metro-Goldwyn's picturization of the Norris novel of that title, but most of them have been along more or less conventional lines, the mere distribution of sample loaves. Now and then, however, someone has had an inspiration.

In this instance the Lyceum Theatre, Minneapolis, permitted the Occident Baking Company to make an exhibit in its lobby. Glass jars showed the various flours blended to get the right foundation, the sugar, milk, yeast and other ingredients, as well as cross sections of loaves and a complete display of the various loaves and rolls made by the concern.

It was not a hand-out-and-get-out distribution, but a display of real interest that held attention and made for talk, sending other housewives to the theatre. Some 50,000 loaves of bread were distributed, but this was incidential to the display. And in looking at the cut note how both the theatre and the bakers used all of the available space for signs.

In San Francisco another angle was developed. At the Pantages Theatre the women patrons were given tickets each good for a loaf of bread at any grocery handling that particular product. This is less spectacular for the house, but more advantageous for the baking company since it sends the possible patron to the neighborhood store carrying the brand.

Small Donation Won the D. A. R.

Spotted

For Through the Dark at the American Theatre, Evansville, Ind., the house spotlighted four canopies which had been lettered "You can see Through the Dark at the American Theatre next Wednesday, Thursday and Friday." The idea was a big subtle, but it was good advertising whether you caught the big idea or not.

Ran a Menu

An unusual advertisement was run in the house Close-Up by Charles A. McFarland, of the Queen Theatre, Houston, Texas. He took a page for a display of an ideal menu for a Thanksgiving dinner, with turkey cuts in the four corners. It was a nicely designed meal that probably was duplicated on many tables on the festal day.

Below he ran "After this wonderful dinner see a Paramount picture, the best entertainment in the world. You will then have a very happy Thanksgiving Day." The program followed in the shape of second menu, with an organ solo instead of the oysters and The Wages of Virtue for the main dish.

Hellman was Sooner

Commenting to Claud Saunders on the recent comment on the Swanson toast idea, Jack Hellman, Minneapolis exploiteer, points out that he used the toast stunt on Pola Negri some sixteen months ago, to get her over to the Polish population in his territory.

We did not say that the Southern exhibitor invented the toast contest, but that he used it on Her Love Story. If we could dig out the original toast contest it would go back beynd the time when Hellman was wearing rompers. But he used the idea as stated.

Kenimer Gets New Automobile Tags

To fight a state fair (in December), Guy V. Kenimer, of the Arcade Theatre, Jacksonville, got out a new automobile tag. It was just the size of a license plate, but was not intended to cover the plate.

These were given the man who had charge of the cars parked at the fair grounds, and he tabbed every car front, back, or both, and a surprisingly large number of drivers let the signs stay on. Even when the car was in motion you could get the words "Arcade" and "Forbidden Paradise."

As the cars are parked diagonally to the curb in Jax, these signs appealed to both pedestrians and other drivers.

This is the first new stunt in auto tags since the spare tire card was sprung.

Paris Originates a Keaton Novelty

Another Good Cut From the Plan Book

This space from the Princess Theatre, Toledo, might have been drawn for the house, but as a matter of fact it is lifted from the plan book supplied by Paramount. The lower right hand corner has been notched to let in the comedy and the prices, while the top is stripped by the signature and the "Starting Today," but to all intents it might have been a solid drawing. It looks just as well, and it fits the space exactly. And right here is found the reason why these

A Paramount Release

A CONVINCING DISPLAY

Princess advertisements always look as though they were drawn to order. The house selects the cut which it deems most desirable and then builds the space around that cut. It does not first select a size and then seek to jam a cut—any old cut—into the space. It builds to the cut, and so the cut fits the space. This is where many managers make their mistake. They decide upon a size before they select a cut and then complain because the plan book does not supply a cut that will fit well into this space. Cuts are cast on metal, not India rubber, and it is easier to change the proportions of the space than to try and make a three column cut fit into a two column space. If managers would first study the cuts offered by the plan book, and then build around the selected cut, it will be found nearly always that the plan book will yield something worth while. The trouble is that the theatre is not willing to meet the plan book halfway. An intelligently prepared press book offers the cuts that will suit the needs of the greatest number of exhibitor patrons. It cannot undertake to supply such a variety of cuts that any space can be outfitted. The Princess nearly always uses mostly a cut and it nearly always gets a good result. No one can ask for a prettier display than this, and yet it is put up at a minimum of cost for material and uses only fifteen column inches of space.

Newspaper Donates Half Page Spaces

Using the same press book cuts that later were employed for the showing at the theatre, the New Orleans Item started off with half pages to announce the serial publication of The Sea Hawk. Appreciating the circulation building possibilities of the use of the Sabatini story, the Item went to large spaces and later all of this advertising reverted to the house, through the use of the same title and cuts. The serial form is very popular as a help to exploitation, and the value of this form depends largely upon the desirability of the story. Naturally a newspaper will give more space to the announcement of a Sabatini story than a novel less well known, since there is more credit in presenting such a story to its readers, and in serialization of The Sea Hawk the First National gave exhibitors an unusually good exploitation aid. This display is not offered as a novelty but because it is an exceptionally well displayed half page.

Seattle Teasers Help Lincoln Play

ONE OF THE ADVANCES

Strictly speaking they were not teasers, since the title was fully exploited, but they were worked as teasers, though in a dignified fashion that did not detract from the subject. This was a 125 by 3, or about three nines, but they ranged down to single column shorts, but always with the laudation of the play and the addition "Seattle soon will see it." As a result of this careful advance, when it was finally announced that Lincoln would be shown, the suggestion had been created that the engagement was an event and not merely another booking. Lincoln cannot be sold on the sensational appeal that might profit a sex play or a melodrama. The advance must be in keeping with the dignity of the subject, and in all of his work J. W. Sayre has held to a restrained expression that contributes to this suggestion. He wanted to put it over big, and to do this he had to use unusual methods, but even in the typographical display he held to a distinctive style of work, with much open space. Sayre excells in the use of open spaces to gain effects, as has been abundantly demonstrated in the past, but he has never done better work than this. The example shown seems to be a press book adaptation, so far as the cut is concerned, but it looks as though it might have been made to order. He did not merely jam the cut in. He built his talk around to become a part of the cut attractor. In some of the smaller spaces he uses only type, but adheres to the idea of open spaces to give display and dignity. Lincoln should, and probably will, sell itself, but you can make more money if you sell through a strong campaign, provided that the campaign does not cheapen the title with its misguided jazz lines. You cannot do better than to follow Mr. Sayre.

This Space is Good Because Cut Came Out

M. A. Malaney, of the Loew Theatres, Cleveland, took a big chance on this space for the Park and Mall on The Silent Accuser, but he felt reasonably safe, because Cleveland runs a pretty fair average on press work. But even at that it was taking a horrible risk to run a fine screen halftone, but it was such a good picture that we don't blame him for making a try. THE CUT CAME THROUGH space that he now uses for the chief Loew houses. This was around holiday time and we imagine that this cut did much to help steer the juvenile patronage to the two houses offering the feature.

Places Situation Above the Feature

In this display from the Mission Theatre, Los Angeles, the title is given much less attention than the situation depicted in the cut. You are selling Matt Moore and Dorothy Devore rather than The Narrow Street. You can see that Matt is evidently in hot water. The top line tells that "It's a howl." The chances are that the average patron is sold a ticket before he knows what the title is. The situation looks interesting so interest is created in the title. The title conveys little suggestion of comedy. Rather it sounds like a problem play, and so the Mission very wisely emphasizes the comedy angle before it even attempts to sell the title. It knows that merely saying in type that this is a howling comedy will not carry conviction, but that a picture such as is shown will get over the idea with the least argument. This is one of those instances where the picture is not an attractor but the chief salesman. At first glance the transaction is closed. The rest is merely the matter of learning the house and the title. Where a sales cut can be had, it is always better than a type argument. The trouble is that few sales cuts are practical. This one is about as efficient as they come.

A Warner Brothers' Release

Too Much Cut is Hurtful to Space

A rather non-committal cut is too intrusive in this space from the Rivoli Theatre, Baltimore, in Constance Talmadge's latest story. This sketch could have been cropped above the bursting thermometer with good effect. That would have given an interesting and characteristic portrait, and would have eliminated the meaningless clutch above with consequent benefit to title and star name. These are now a part of the supplied cut. With the upper portion of the cut cropped, the name and title can be set in type that will carry many times the distinction, and with a star like Miss Talmadge you cannot advance her name too clearly, for the star sells far better than her title, no matter what the letter may be. The Rivoli seems to hold to the theory that it must have as much cut as possible, and so it gets the largest cut that will fit the space, not seeming to realize that half the cut in the same space often would be appreciably better. As it stands, the upper part of the cut robs the lower section of much of its distinction, since it lacks strength and merely opposes a mass of lines. Without that top portion a better display could have been achieved with a saving of about four column inches.

Hooks One Act Play to His Merton Run

Getting away from cut and dried campaigns, E. B. Roberts put over Merton of the Movies in a different fashion.

He made a deal with the University Curtain Club to present a one act play by Eugene O'Neil, The Rope, feeling that the contrast between this sordidly realistic play and the sprightly humor of Merton would give him a real kick.

Also he was not unaware of the pulling value of the local appeal, but even he did not count upon the fact that the English professors would assign the play as part of the classwork. The presentation cost him $125, but he got the solid business from the University to supplement the local attendance, and he packed his house.

That he figured correctly was demonstrated from the comments made to him by departing patrons. The contrast made Merton seem all the better, and at the same time the patrons felt that the play also was well worth seeing.

A good side line was a display of O'Neil's published works and the photoplay edition of Merton in the largest book store in town

Strong Array of Product in the

INDEPENDENT MARKET

Special Section of Moving Picture World

Look Them Over!

THE second half of the 1924-25 season is under way. The booking is being done that will carry many theatres into the new Fall season.

I have a thought for you. It is an important one.

Don't overlook the wealth of offerings on the independent market!

Go further:

Give a good long look, and real consideration, to the money-making possibilities in independent product.

There are two reasons.

First, and naturally most intimate, because there are pictures there that deserve every consideration you can give them.

Second, and an important reason this is, too, because every exhibitor owes it to himself to do his share toward keeping alive and encouraging independence in picture production and independence in picture distribution.

It is an interesting showing of product that is disclosed on the pages that follow. Moving Picture World is glad of the opportunity of grouping in one special section the independent product that should be given careful consideration in every exhibitor's calculations.

KEEP THIS SECTION ON YOUR DESK. There will be many an occasion during the coming months when you will turn to it with welcome relief to find a picture for a purpose.

There are dollars for exhibitors and hours of entertainment for patrons in the pages that follow.

W. Ray Johnston Sees 1925 a Banner Year

W. RAY JOHNSTON, president of Rayart Pictures, in a statement to Moving Picture World, this week, predicted that 1925 will be the best year in history for independent producers. In his statement Mr. Johnston said:

"It is at this season of the year that the publicity agent for every prominent distributor or producer brings forth his trusty Corona or Underwood and bursts into print with that time-worn movie entitled 'This will be the greatest year in the history of the motion picture.' I believe I have done it myself.

"Facts will bear out the statement, however, that the past year did see a more marked advance in the independent section of the industry than any past year in my recollection—which dates back ten years. If 1924 did nothing else, it developed a stabilization of the independent market, which was needed.

"Never in the history of the independent business was there a better financial tone to the market than at this time. When in the old days there used to be a great many small underfinanced exchanges in each key city, today it has simmered down to five or six strongly financed, larger independent operators in each territory, operating on a scale in many instances much larger than the national branch operating in the same zone.

"The independent operator who had foresight and vision last year laid out his plans along the same lines as the national organizations—he acquired a certain standardized line-up of product of value and that was advertised, and went out with his campaign for the 'Merit 46' or the 'Security 52,' and made a drive to put his complete line of product over on a big scale. That he has been successful cannot be doubted when one looks over the increased staffs, advertising departments and selling forces existing in the leading independent exchanges today.

"Within the last eight weeks I have covered almost every key point in the United States, and on every hand I find that the theatre owner, more than at any time in my recollection, is supporting and consistently patronizing the independent picture. He has come to the realization that he can, if he so desires, secure a complete program for his house by a wise selection of the product of the leading independent exchanges.

"In my opinion it should be so. A wise theatre owner should protect his investment the same as any wise merchant—by supporting the independent manufacturer, at least for a fair per cent of his output, and in this way keep open the channels of competition. Otherwise, it naturally would resolve itself to a point where he would be compelled to purchase his product or program from one or two or three outlets and he would of course then be compelled to pay the price asked of him.

"1925-26 looms ahead as a big year for the live-wire independent exchangeman and theatreman. Already the producing and distributing organizations who form the backbone of the independent section of the industry are at work, purchasing stories, selecting plays, stars and directors to build their 1925-26 program. I venture to say that when the independent lineup is announced this summer it will be the biggest announcement ever made in the film industry, for the average theatre owner has no idea of the remarkable lineup that is in store for him.

"The quality of the product, the number of releases will far exceed anything heretofore offered to the independent theatre owner. And he will have a variety to select from—the finest there is in special attractions, serials, comedies, westerns and novelties. A complete program for the BIG theatre, as well as for the small theatre.

"Another big factor in the development that the new year will bring forward is the benefit that will accrue from the leading independent producer joining hands with the distributor in the new organization which has already progressed far under the leadership of President Chadwick. The selection of a new national leader—a man known nationwide, to assist Mr. Chadwick in his work will be made within a very few days. This cannot help but bring about a big advancement in the open market, not only through the contact of such a leader with the trade in general, but in the consolidation and carrying out of plans already being worked out by the distributors themselves.

"The exhibitor will do well to lay aside the consideration of his product for the new season until the publication this summer of the independent program, for he will find available for his use at that time a most attractive lineup of product.

"I spent a few weeks on the Coast the latter part of the year and everywhere I found a spirit of enthusiasm among the independent units. Optimism seems to be the keynote of all in looking forward to the new year.

"If 1924-25 saw the remarkable advancement that it did in the independent situation, then it naturally follows that with the lineup that has been prepared, with the leadership that is being arranged, and with the cooperation of the theatreman which has been promised, that the new season of 1925-26 will see the fulfillment of the goal for which the independent men who have had faith in the industry have been striving."

New Columbia Released

Columbia Pictures announce that they are releasing their production of "A Fool and His Money" this week.

This picture is the film version of George Barr McCutcheon's popular novel of the same name. The book when published went through a number of editions and was widely heralded by the public. It is not a problem story but a romantic tale.

The cast is headed by Madge Bellamy, William Haines, Stuart Holmes and Alma Bennett. They are supported by Charles Conklin, Lon Poff, Carrie Clark Ward, Eugenie Besserer, Edwards Davis and Baby Billy Jean Phillips. Erle C. Kenton directed.

Cattle Featured in Cody Film

The next Bill Cody, "Cold Nerve," now in production, is to have its locale in a place called Florence, Arizona, a picturesque Western stop-over, where all the elements of cowboy life are still retained. The purpose of traveling to this location is to film, as part of the story, two thousand head of cattle owned by a rangeman named Kellog, who has consented to the use of his herd.

Arrow Pictures Corp. Enters Tenth Year

By W. E. SHALLENBERGER
President, Arrow Pictures Corporation

ARROW is entering its tenth year as an establishment, strongly fortified with product already completed and with plans for future material which are ambitious to a degree.

These plans call for eighteen Special Feature Productions of the high quality of "Lena Rivers," "The Lost Chord" and "The Fast Pace"; eighteen Great Western dramas which I predict will be even better, both from the artistic and box office angles, than those we have offered the independent market during the year just ended.

We have scheduled not less than twenty-six two-reel comedies, with the prospect of at least one more series of thirteen. The demand for really good comedies is a steady one and there is a fine market at all times for this type of product.

Aside from our definite advance schedule we are always on the lookout for individual independent productions which will measure up to a high standard and we will undoubtedly acquire a number of pictures of this class also.

We are thoroughly sold on the stability of the state right market and believe that there will be no difficulty in securing a wide and reasonably lucrative circulation for productions which merit it. There will always be an insistent demand for pictures having good entertainment value.

We have here at Arrow a carefully organized personnel because we realize that success and permanency in the independent field is predicated almost wholly on efficiency and sane economy in operation. Lacking these elements, the function of distribution becomes a mighty costly business. The keynote of our policy is based on this idea and our every move is being carefully conformed to the achievement of maximum results at minimum costs, which automatically enables us to offer our product at a price which provides for a fair profit to producers, exhibitors and ourselves.

"Bill" Steiner Has Some Aces Up His Sleeve

WILLIAM STEINER'S latest addition to his feature stars, Edith Thornton, is gaining in popularity every day. Recently Miss Thornton won in a contest in Brooklyn for the most popular player. The little lady has such a distinct personality and magnetism that it has been a revelation to the independent exchange men, and she is now firmly established. Her productions are splendidly mounted, stories well written and directed, and no expense was spared in casting "On Probation."

Joseph Kilgour, Robert Ellis, Wilfred Lucas, Eddie Phillips, Helen Lynch, Betty Francisco, Charles Cruz, Lincoln Stedman and other prominent artists appear with Miss Thornton, whose third feature is now being cast and will embrace some very well known and popular electric light names. The latter will soon be announced, and "Bill" Steiner says the list will be a complete surprise to the franchise holders. The title of the third production is withheld for the present.

Mr. Steiner has five world famous stars in his list.

Miss Thornton will be presented in a series of four high-class comedy dramas.

Charles Hutchison ("Hurricane Hutch") will be presented in a series of six big "stunt" dramas. "Hutch" is known wherever motion pictures are thrown on a screen.

Leo Maloney (the Nonpareil) will be presented in eight big, wholesome human dramas.

Neil Hart, known as "America's Pal," is to be seen in a series of six westerns.

Pete ("Cyclone Pete") Morrison will be presented in a series of eight comedy dramas in which daring and skill are coupled with splendid action and punch.

New Chadwick Picture

"The Midnight Girl," the sixth production of the Chadwick Nine, went into production this week at the Long Island studios, under the direction of Wilfred Noy. Lila Lee heads the cast, which includes Garreth Hughes, Dolores Canshelli, Charlotte Walker, Frank Andrews and several other well known players who will be announced shortly.

"The Midnight Girl," formerly announced as "The Street Singer," is an original story by Garrett Fort, written especially for Miss Lee, whose brunette beauty is well fitted to the role of the Italian immigrant. This production will mark the return to the screen of Garreth Hughes, star of J. M. Barrie's "Sentimental Tommy."

"Right Man" Is Title Picked

"The Right Man" is the final title selected for the third of the series of six pictures known as Metropolitan Melodramas which star George Larkin, the well-known "stunt" star. "The Right Man" is a newspaper story written by W. P. Crist and directed by Jack Harvey under the personal supervision of George Blaisdell. It is scheduled for March release on the Rayart Program.

Enlarging Rayart East and West

Carpenters and painters have been at work since January 5 remodeling and enlarging the offices of Rayart Pictures Corporation in the F. B. O. Building to take care of an increase in the executive staff.

An enlarged publicity department has been added, headed by Dorothy V. Cleveland, Rayart's director of advertising and publicity. A new film and accessory department has been created which will be under the supervision of Miss Ann Josephthal, formerly with Chadwick Pictures. The enlarged quarters will also mean increased space on the Rayart accounting department.

Rayart, in line with its expansion policy, have also just opened new Western offices in Hollywood at 1442 Beechwood Drive, comprising a handsome suite which will be the headquarters for George Blaisdell, West Coast producing representative for Rayart, and his staff.

Joe Brandt Answers Query in re: "Independents"

UPON being asked what the outlook for the independent producers for the season of 1925-6 is, and what their place in the industry will be, Joe Brandt, president of C. B. C. Film Sales Corporation, advanced an unusual viewpoint, which may be an answer to the question. In part he said:

"A canvass of the first-run theatres throughout the country proves conclusively that the independent is locked out of those theatres which are controlled by the big producer-distributor interests, and that the independent must develop for his first runs the field that he has cultivated this year by catering to the best class suburban theatres, or what was formerly the second-run downtown house.

The New Clientele

"A great many exhibitors have finally realized that they are attracting an entirely different clientele than they have ever had before by advertising first-run pictures which have not been shown downtown. The bugaboo, prevalent for years, that there is an enormous advantage to be gained by following, as a second run, the downtown house, has been dispelled. Wise exhibitors have found from their box office statements that when they run a picture in their houses which has not had a downtown run the returns are much greater in spite of the theoretical advantage of getting in on the publicity and newspaper advertising of a first run in a downtown house.

"As a result the independents this year will concentrate on the development of the neighborhood theatre and the independent exhibitor who is not allied with the bigger interests.

"Those exhibitors who played 'The Midnight Express,' 'A Fool and His Money,' 'The Price She Paid,' 'The Foolish Virgin,' and the Perfection Series, which featured William Fairbanks and Eva Novak, which C. B. C. released, have proved to their own satisfaction that pictures which show on the screen every dollar invested, instead of having to carry the enormous overhead which the large companies are forced to carry on their pictures, have not only pleased their patrons, but have bought at a live-and-let-live price, and can show a profit on their balance sheets.

"Exhibitors who have, heretofore, been doubtful of the independent producers' ability to maintain a steady supply of pictures are now arranging with independent exchanges throughout the country for a supply of independent pictures as the basis of their program, which will make them in turn independent of the demands and the threats of the bigger producing interests. They feel that they are no longer at the mercy of the producing interests and that they can maintain a satisfactory average program with pictures that are made by independent producers.

A High Average

"The output of the independent producers for this year has proved conclusively that they are able to maintain an average standard equal to the big producer-distributor interests, and all signs point to their continuance of the same.

"The plans of the independents and C. B. C. in particular, as outlined for the coming season, show that they are placing greater confidence in the co-operation of the exhibitor than ever before in the history of the industry, and the exhibitor can safely feel that he will be able to get what his patrons want and also that he will be able to get it at a price that will enable him to stay in business."

JOE BRANDT
President of C. B. C. Film Sales Corp., discusses 1925 outlook.

"Full Speed"; Next for Buffalo Bill, Jr.

"Full Speed" has been selected as the title for the sixth issue of the popular Buffalo Bill, Jr., series, it was announced by Louis Weiss, executive head of Weiss Brothers' Artclass Pictures Corporation, following advices from the Coast early this week.

A wire from Lester F. Scott, Jr., the producer, to Weiss Brothers stated that a print of the new feature had been shipped and that this title had been finally decided upon, instead of two or three others that had been under tentative consideration.

"Full Speed" was directed by Richard Thorpe, with Irving Ries at the camera, and will follow "Thundering Romance" in the Artclass schedule of the Buffalo Bill, Jr., series.

Star Cast in "Lena Rivers"

"Lena Rivers," teeming with romance, is the story of a girl who falls in love with a young man who, unknown to her, is her half-brother. The tale is told with great dramatic vigor.

"Lena Rivers" is an Arrow Pictures Corporation production with a distinguished cast, including such well known players as Earle Williams, Johnny Walker, Gladys Hulette, Doris Rankin, Edna Murphy and Irma Harrison. Gladys Hulette has done some excellent work in the past but she has never been cast to better advantage than in this film. Earle Williams is a veteran of the screen and one of its most accomplished actors.

"Lena Rivers" holds every angle of box office appeal—love, thrills, pathos, comedy, sympathy; it runs the full gamut of all the emotions. The plot centers about a girl whose lot is unhappy and she makes the unforgivable mistake of falling in love with a man far above her station in life. To further add to her misery, she learns that her father is the stepfather of her lover. Story and cast make this a winner from the box office angle.

Scenes from "A Fool and His Money," a Columbia Production Released by C. B. C.

I. E. CHADWICK

The president of Arrow Pictures Corp. is also president of the Independent M. P. P. D. Association.

"The Last Chord" An Arrow Special

The most telling appeal in a motion picture is "heart interest," another name for sentiment. When W. E. Shallenberger selected Wilfred Noy's adaptation of "The Lost Chord" for the first Arrow-Whitman Bennett special, he sensed the striking human appeal of the story as well as the splendid value of the world-wide reputation of Sir Arthur Sullivan's greatest song.

The unusual cast chosen for this release proved the unexcelled judgment used in its selection. Alice Lake, David Powell, Dagmar Godowsky, Henry Sedley and Faire Binney reach the highest plane of screen interpretation in this production. Wilfred Noy has realized every bit of intense dramatic value in the direction of the story.

Not a single situation but has its full measure of striking similitude to nature. The choice of sets and locations is a joy to the eye and each fittingly emphasizes the local color of every scene. In "The Lost Chord," Arrow has offered the independent market a record-making special production.

Completing "Chadwick Nine" On 1924-25 Schedule

WITH "The Midnight Girl," starring Lila Lee, sixth of the Chadwick Nine, going into production at the Long Island studios this week, I. E. Chadwick, president of Chadwick Pictures Corporation, is now preparing to complete production on the balance of his schedule for 1924-25. The three remaining subjects of the Chadwick Nine are "The Romance of an Actress," "Sunshine of Paradise Alley" and the third Lionel Barrymore special.

"The Midnight Girl" will be directed by Wilfred Noy, producer of "The Fast Pace" and "The Lost Chord." Lila Lee, who recently completed a production for Famous Players, heads the cast, which includes Gareth Hughes, Delores Cassinelli, Charlotte Walker and Frank Andrews.

"The Midnight Girl," first announced as "The Street Singer," is an original story by Garrett Fort, written especially for Miss Lee, whose brunette beauty is well fitted to the role of the Italian immigrant. This production will mark the return to the screen of Gareth Hughes, star of J. M. Barrie's "Sentimental Tommy."

G. W. (Billy) Bitzer, whose many productions for D. W. Griffith place him in the front rank of cinematographers, has been signed for the camera work, together with Frank Zuker.

"The Romance of an Actress," seventh of the Chadwick Nine, will appeal to those who are condemned by circumstances to the humdrum existence of every-day life. That is the reason that every year thousands of youngsters run away from home to the big cities to seek fortune on the stage. That is the reason why the stage always has appealed and always will appeal to every walk of life.

Chadwick Pictures Corporation has arranged with the Montgomery Circulation Service to put behind this production a publicity and advertising campaign seldom equalled in the exploitation of motion pictures. This campaign calls for advertisements in more than five hundred daily and Sunday newspapers throughout the United States. It will include a campaign conducted by the Montgomery Service to discover new talent for the screen, with a contest conducted throughout the country.

The first ten winners of this contest will be given an opportunity to appear in "The Romance of an Actress." The first two will be given guaranteed parts. The remaining eight will be given parts in this or other pictures. The contest will run until the first of the year and a large amount of advertising and publicity material will be used by the newspapers and magazines in behalf of this contest.

"The Romance of an Actress" is by Langdon McCormack, who made "The Storm."

"Sunshine of Paradise Alley," eighth of the Chadwick Nine, is probably one of the greatest productions from a showman's angle of recent years. It is from the famous play of the same name by Denman Thompson, author of one of the most popular of all American dramas, "The Old Homestead." This author's fame and following alone are enough to insure a production success.

"Sunshine of Paradise Alley" was played as a legitimate stage production more than one hundred thousand times, in practically every nook and corner of the world. It has been counted upon as a production which would bring the money into the box office.

The ninth and last production on the Chadwick program will be the third Lionel Barrymore special, adapted from a famous stage play. The advent of Lionel Barrymore in a new picture is always a matter of interest and makes great newspaper copy.

Lionel Barrymore's name is enough to crowd any motion picture theatre. His record in "The Copperhead," "Enemies of Women," "America" and many, many other screen successes insure this, but Chadwick will surround him with a cast of players who, in themselves, would guarantee the success of any film.

Addition to "Flames" Cast

Columbia Pictures announce that Harry Cohn has signed William Haines to play opposite Dorothy Devore in their forthcoming production of "Fighting the Flames." This picture will be the seventh of the Columbia Series of eight.

This will be the third picture in three months that William Haines will have played in for the same company.

Lew Kennerly to Design Buffalo Bill, Jr., Lithos

TO insure the maximum amount of pulling power in the lithographs advertising the popular Buffalo Bill, Jr., and Buddy Roosevelt series of action-thrillers and in order to guarantee that each article of equipment of horse and man shown in their posters is technically correct in the smallest detail, Weiss Brothers' Artclass Pictures Corporation have engaged the services of Lew Kennerly, one of the most eminent portrayers of western life since Frederic Remington.

Mr. Kennerly has just completed the paper for "Gold and Grit," seventh of the Buddy Roosevelt series, and for "Thundering Romance," the fifth feature of the Buffalo Bill, Jr., attractions, and according to Louis Weiss, executive head of Weiss Brothers' Artclass Pictures Corporation, both set a new high mark in both box office and artistic quality in lithographs furnished for this particular type of western feature.

According to Mr. Weiss, it has been the consistent aim of Artclass Pictures to provide billing for the Buddy Roosevelt and Buffalo Bill, Jr., series, as distinctive artistically and in attraction value, as these popular action-features have proved themselves to be, as compared with the average "western," and the engagement of Mr. Kennerly is the result of a long quest to find the man who possessed just the right combination of artistic talent and technical knowledge to comply with these demands.

Mr. Kennerly is a native of the Texas Panhandle, where his uncle has a large ranch and for several years he was connected with the famous Miller 101 Ranch. He is an authority on the accoutrements worn by the cowboys and their mounts, which differ widely in various sections of the West, and knows exactly where every buckle and strap should be on the huge tapaderos worn by the riders of the cactus country to the peculiar type of chaps sported respectively by the cowboy dandies of Montana and the Rio Grande.

He is noted for the realism of the action he portrays, as well as for his fidelity and accuracy in executing the smaller details, and he has been aptly declared by his fellow artists to be among the foremost exponents of the school of art of which the late Frederic Remington furnished the outstanding example, in depicting the life of the great West. Mr. Kennerly has done much work for Tom Mix, Buck Jones and other well known western stars and with the addition of Buffalo Bill, Jr., and Buddy Roosevelt to his clientele it is expected that he will devote most of his talents and time to producing striking lithos for the motion picture industry.

Acme Lithograph Company will continue to handle the mechanical part of the work for Weiss Brothers' Artclass Pictures Corporation, this company having supplied all previous issues of paper for the Buddy Roosevelt and Buffalo Bill, Jr., series.

C. B. C. Buys Another Story

Columbia Pictures have bought the motion picture rights to a social story which was published in the August number of the Cosmopolitan Magazine. The story is entitled "Everything Money Can Buy." It was written by Ethel Watts Mumford.

Shooting "The Cracker Jack," Johnny Hines Wins Miami

EXCELLENT progress on Johnny Hines' latest, "The Cracker Jack," is reported in a wire from C. C. Burr, who is now at Miami with the star and cast.

According to Mr. Burr, approximately one hundred and fifty exterior scenes have been taken in the South since their arrival, January 4th. Most of these scenes were taken on the outskirts of Miami where the entire facilities of the community have been placed at the disposal of the producing company.

Especially noteworthy is the fact that the complete Orange Brooks factory has been turned over to the company for filming those sequences that call for shots in the interior of a pickle factory. Permission has also been obtained from the executives of the factory to completely re-paint the outside of the building with the script name of "Perkin's Pickles" prominently displayed.

Included also in the list of locations obtained in Miami is the Deering Estate, where the spacious lawns and interiors of this magnificent home have been turned over to Johnny Hines to take such scenes as are necessary to the continuity. In securing this location, Mr. Burr obtained one of the finest homes in the famous winter resort, and according to production plans work on the estate will begin on Friday of this week and continue until next Tuesday.

In conjunction with these locales, permission also has been obtained from the municipal authorities in Miami to film many scenes in the heart of Miami's business section, which augurs well for the realism of "The Cracker Jack."

Rayart Receives "Artist's Blues"

"Artist's Blues," the first of the series of Sherwood-MacDonald Productions for Rayart has been completed and received in the New York office. Pretty little Gloria Joy and Joe Moore, youngest brother of Owen, Tom and Matt, are the featured members of the cast. "Artist's Blues" is the first of a series of twelve comedies for the Rayart program.

Arrow Presents "Winning a Continent"

The threshold of the world's treasure house is the location of Arrow's outstanding dramatic special, "Winning a Continent." Gold and diamonds immediately bring South Africa to mind and "Winning a Continent" is the vivid portrayal of the sacrifice, heroism and bloody baptism of the first pioneer settlers of the Colony of Natal.

Set upon by overwhelming thousands of fierce Zulu warriors, some 600 settlers were massacred after a grim battle at Blood River. This brought swift vengeance from the rest of the South Africans and such heavy toll was exacted from King Dingaan's armies that he was dethroned and a permanent peace made by his successor.

Such a dramatic occurrence forms the basis for the thrilling portrayal made by Harold Shaw in "Winning a Continent." Assisted by such stars as Percy Marmont and Edna Flugrath, he enlisted the aid of the South African government which supplied 10,000 armed Zulu warriors and 300 South African Mounted Police to keep them in order, which was fortunate as the excitement of the battle scenes roused the savages to such a pitch that two actors and thirteen Zulus were killed, besides many lesser casualties.

The independent market rarely has an opportunity to secure such a production.

Banner Promises Eight Features, Beginning May 1

SAMUEL J. BRISKIN, of Banner Productions, Inc., has found that 1924 smoothed the last of the wrinkles out of the independent situation, and to prove his faith in the independent market, Banner officials have completed arrangements for a new series of eight feature photoplays to be released one a month beginning May 1, next.

In a statement to Moving Picture World's inquiring representative, Mr. Briskin expressed himself as "more than merely pleased" with the outlook for this year.

George H. Davis, president of Banner Productions, with whom Mr. Briskin is associated, joined in the sentiments expressed by the latter.

"Something more than a year ago," Mr. Briskin said, "when looking over the situation in the independent field, I felt that there was ample room for an organization which would produce, and produce intelligently, with a view toward future box office receipts, a series of feature photoplays that would be a credit to any organization, and enhance the independent market. Accordingly, with Mr. Davis, who has devoted his life to the show business, we formed Banner Productions, Inc., and during last year we delivered to theatre owners through our franchise holders eight pictures that convinced us that our original thoughts were correct.

"But lest a simple statement of this character may not seem conclusive to everyone, I may be pardoned for pointing out, as an evidence of our success, that the leading circuits in the United States, as well as many of the big first-run houses, have booked our product.

"We found last year that producing pictures that will find their way into the best houses and circuits is not something that is given to any individual or concern. But we also found that well-directed effort, backed by ordinary intelligence, having uppermost in mind at all times the box office of the exhibitor, will produce such a series of pictures. We were quick to note the basic cause for the failure of so many independent producers—the fundamental of good pictures—the story. Without a good story you can't have a good picture. Thus we produced 'The Man Without a Heart,' by Ruby M. Ayres; 'Those Who Judge,' by Margery Land May; 'Three Keys,' by Frederic V. R. Dey; 'Speed,' by Grace Sartwell Mason, and 'Peggy of Beacon Hill,' by Maisie Grieg—all published in book form or in the leading magazines.

"Our producers and directors are among the best in their field. Nothing less would meet the conditions we laid down. The casts, invariably, had to stand up under every test. We were insistent upon the best box office names for our stars and leading players. In this we made no mistake. The comment of the leading reviewers supports us.

"In any discussion of the outstanding need of the great rank and file of theatre owners, we are heartened by the knowledge that the so-called 'big' producer continues to make the 'super length feature,' apparently caring nothing about the inability of the average exhibitor to give his house over to two-hour (or more) pictures. Banner Productions will continue to make feature length photoplays, permitting such other bookings on his program as he finds essential to his needs. The program-length feature can be made sufficiently gripping to hold an audience better than the great, drawn-out features. Banner is building pictures to meet the basic requirements, story, cast, direction, suspense, etc., and our producers, in keeping with our promises to our franchise holders, are making splendid pictures. That, briefly, is our position in the independent field.

"In looking over the situation for the coming season, we feel that the pessimistic attitude adopted by the average independent producer and exchange is wholly unwarranted and absolutely uncalled for. We feel confident that the big first-run exhibitors and circuits will always be in the market for high class product and they are willing, at all times, to assist the independent exchange man and the producer, provided, of course, that the product has merit.

"To prove our faith in this market, we have just completed arrangements for a new series of eight feature photoplays which will be released one a month, beginning May 1, next, and we feel confident that this series of pictures will receive the support so liberally given to our first series."

"Tomorrow's Love"

Paul Bern's Newest for Paramount Starring Agnes Ayres is a Clever and Amusing Comedy Drama

Reviewed by C. S. Sewell

Paul Bern's third directorial effort confirms the impression made by his first two, that he is an adept in handling themes involving domestic complications. With the same leading players that he used in "Worldly Goods," Agnes Ayres and Pat O'Malley, he has produced a thoroughly enjoyable feature in "Tomorrow's Love."

The action centers around a young husband who is stubborn and his wife who is none too yielding herself. Taking advantage of a situation that is perfectly innocent in itself, she secures a divorce which does not become final before the end of a year. During this period both find they love each other and there is a mad struggle at the last minute on the part of the wife to outwit a vamp who is trying her best to win the husband.

Mr. Bern has introduced a lot of little situations in the affairs of the young couple that will strike home to many and furnish amusement for the married and single alike. Particularly telling is the contrast between the honeymoon and a year after. There are no sexy scenes, the appeal being centered on realistic little human touches that all through have been treated from a light comedy angle.

The titling of this picture is especially clever. Some of the lines are sophisticated and there are a lot of deft subtle touches that will delight the intelligent patron, but there is plenty of comedy that will appeal to all classes. It is the women in the cast who are the dominating figures here, with the wife aided by her grandmother using all of her feminine cleverness to outwit an equally clever vamp. Women, we believe, will be delighted with these scenes while the men also will enjoy them, even though the husband is really a pawn in the hands of the three ladies.

By having the climax occur at the last minute of the last hour before the decree becomes final, good suspense is introduced. You become absorbed in watching the development not that you are at all in doubt as to the way it will turn out, but in finding out just how the happy ending will be brought about. This is cleverly and satisfactorily done by duplicating a situation which occurred early in the picture, and provides a novel ending.

Agnes Ayres wears some striking gowns and is entirely satisfactory as the young wife, with Pat O'Malley giving a particularly human and realistic portrayal of the stubborn husband. One of the best characterizations in the picture is Ruby Lafayette as the grandmother. She is an unusual screen type, an old lady thoroughly up-to-date in her ideas and language which shows a lot of good common sense and good humor. She makes this a fascinating character. Jane Winton is good as the vamp and Raymond Hatton shines in a bit as a philanderer. His retorts to the wife are sophisticated and amusing.

"Tomorrow's Love" looks like a good box-office bet for all classes, for it will make your patrons laugh, and is rich in human touches.

Cast

Judith Stanley.....Agnes Ayres
Robert Stanley.....Pat O'Malley
Brown.....Raymond Hatton
Bess Carlyle.....Jane Winton
Grandmother.....Ruby Lafayette
Maid.....Dale Fuller

Based on story, "Interlocutory," by Charles Brackett.
Screen play by Howard Higgin.
Directed by Paul Bern.
Length, 5,842 feet.

Story

Judith marries Robert Stanley and for a time they are very happy, but by the end of a year she is irritated with his stubbornness and petty fault finding. An open window causes him to catch a cold but he goes to work in the rain. His car breaks down and an old friend, Bess, a vamp, happens along and takes him to her apartment where she makes him take a hot foot bath and whiskey. Judith discovers he is with Bess and sues for divorce, getting a decree which becomes final in a year. She goes to Europe but soon discovers she still loves Robert, and when his grandmother advises her to hurry home as he will marry Bess, she does so, reaching there just a few minutes before midnight after a wild and exciting trip. Through a ruse of grandma's Judith gets Robert away from Bess and they become reconciled and agree to start all over again.

"A Thief in Paradise"

Samuel Goldwyn Presents the Best Production of His Career and an Achievement for the Industry

Reviewed by Tom Waller

An enthralling story, brilliantly interspersed by a cast tailor-made for the occasion under the guidance of a masterly director, is brought to the screen like a series of Maxfield Parrish pastels—that's George Fitzmaurice's "A Thief in Paradise" for First National. Perfect in every big movement and detail, technically and otherwise, and the most beautiful and artistic thing that director and producer have ever achieved, is the prophecy we make will be the verdict to be rendered by fans of every class witnessing these eight reels of gorgeous entertainment.

One could not be superfluous in the use of superlatives to laud "A Thief in Paradise." It pleased and entertained and delighted this reviewer more than any picture he has ever seen. That is a personal opinion. An analysis of the picture from the multitude of angles necessary to consider in an impartial manner has left us just as enthusiastic that the public will share our personal opinion by an overwhelming majority. Why?

First of all, "A Thief in Paradise" has a new type of story—a type that gets away from familiar trends—keeps you keyed up, guessing, enthralled, and finally well satisfied.

Then it is, of course, the manner in which the story is put over. Every set is a masterpiece in authenticity for the artistic and magnificent. Many could be reproduced, enlarged, framed, and bring much commendation from a conspicuous place on the wall of an art gallery.

As to the cast—the acting of the leads, Doris Kenyon, Ronald Colman, Aileen Pringle, Claude Gillingwater and Alec Francis, and all the others is so sincere in every phase and situation that an audience should be carried away to the extent of believing they are spectators of a first-hand happening in the maelstrom of life.

The story seems to have been written with the idea of conglomerating into one situation all of the ingredients which have proven the best of screen material. Sharks, a fight under water, beach combers on an Oriental isle, fortune hunters, a big city, a palatial home, masqueraders, intrigue, beautiful girls, wonderful romance, pathos, tragedy, truth and happiness are uniquely combined into the smoothest continuity in "A Thief in Paradise."

There is not a single thing we can think or say which would be criticism concurrent with anything except the highest praise for this production and every one associated with it. We can only urge you to get into immediate touch with First National and arrange for the most convenient booking.

"The Dancers"

William Fox Offers Strongly Dramatic and Colorful Adaptation of Play With Sensational Theme

Reviewed by C. S. Sewell

An adaptation of Gerald DuMaurier and Viola Tree's stage play, "The Dancers," an Emmett Flynn production for William Fox, is a sensational and daring picture on the theme covered by the title.

There have been other films that dealt with the dance craze, but we recall none that have carried out the idea to the same extent, for instead of having the heroine rescued before it is too late, this picture shows her as taunting her easy-going sweetheart and giving away in a moment of passion brought on by the madness of dancing and champagne. While this scene has been discreetly handled there is no mistaking the inference and later her own confession to the man she is to marry confirms it.

Effective character contrast is provided in the person of this dance-crazed girl and her childhood sweetheart who beset by temptation from a tropical dancer who tries to win him remains true to her.

The climax of the picture occurs when the hero who has become the owner of a cabaret in the Argentine, inherits wealth and a title and returns to marry the girl. While the crowd is waiting at the church she finds she can't go through with it, and confessing her indiscretion, takes poison and dies. The hero finally returns to his old haunts and finds solace in the sincere love of the other woman.

The settings of the picture are elaborate, the jazz atmosphere is well worked up and the girl's character revealed by novel touches such as scenes showing her arguing her side of the question with her aunt while she lies in bed and operates a phonograph with her feet. Emmett Flynn has finely directed this picture, forcefully bringing out the strongly dramatic points of the story and providing unusually colorful and striking atmosphere for the Argentine scenes. The interest is held and the lesson of what the craze for dancing may lead to is powerfully brought out. Dancing certainly forms a big part of the picture, for in addition to the heroine, the other woman is a dancer and there are several scenes in which Alma Rubens in this role dances the picturesque tangoes, etc., of the latin races with unusual ability.

George O'Brien shows to good advantage as the hero and is decidedly picturesque in the Argentine scenes. Madge Bellamy puts over the idea of the jazz-crazed girl well and forcefully portrays the near-hysterical woman when she realizes what her folly has led to. Alma Rubens gives an unusually fine performance as the Argentine dancer in love with the hero..

The usual lines of building audience sympathy for a character and retaining it are not followed here with the switching of the love of the hero from the jazz girl to the other woman, and despite the fact that Miss Bellamy's role is not one to excite strong sympathy the spectator is liable to be disappointed at her death and wish that as she is sincerely repentent and the hero has forgiven her, that she might be saved.

"The Dancers" is a picture that should appeal more forcibly to the sophisticated class, and those who like themes that deal boldly with life, while well-made and acted and strongly dramatic and colorful its theme precludes its being recommended for a family clientele, even though it teaches a forceful lesson.

Story

Tony and Una are childhood sweethearts and vow they will marry each other when they grow up. Tony goes away and finally becomes the owner of a saloon and dance hall, and although Maxine, one of the girls, falls in love with him and he is attracted to her, the memory of his childhood sweetheart is always before him and he remains true to her. Una grows up as a devotee of jazz and mad parties and forgets Tony. Her life is one continual round of dancing and champagne and she finally teases her admirer, Evan, until he takes advantage of her. Tony's uncle dies and he inherits his wealth and titles and returns to claim Una. Her aunt persuades her to keep secret and she prepares for the wedding, but when Tony tells how he has remained true and always loved her, she confesses she has fallen. Tony forgives her but she has taken poison and dies. Tony finally wanders back to his old place and finds solace in marrying Maxine.

"Fifth Avenue Models"

Mary Philbin and Norman Kerry in Highly Entertaining Universal Picture

Reviewed by Sumner Smith

Ninety-nine exhibitors out of a hundred can play "Fifty Avenue Models," a Universal White List picture presenting Mary Philbin, Norman Kerry and an excellent supporting cast —and they won't go wrong. The attraction is entitled to be called a good box office picture, for it has a gripping story, rising and well-knit action, excellent acting and strikingly artistic backgrounds.

The opening scenes are of a flat in Greenwich Village. Then a Fifth Avenue modiste's shop and salon is shown. Prison scenes follow, and highly effective scenes of a novel cabaret. The last locale is an art salon.

Sven Gade, the director, has not only put the players through their paces with sympathetic understanding of characterization and dramatic values, but he has seen to it that the by now conventional environments in which the action takes place are made somewhat different from routine sets and are distinctly pleasing to the eyes.

This picture is about as technically perfect as any we have seen recently. Contrasting action, particularly comedy scenes in the modiste's shop, are very cleverly interwoven. Incidentally, the story, while highly dramatic, possesses some good comedy touches. Rose Dione has a good bit as the modiste and George B. Williams as a middle-aged gentleman favorably inclined toward feminine pulchritude. And there is a corking fight between two girls in the modiste's shop—a struggle both humorous because of the devastation wrought and pathetic because of its tragic consequences.

Mary Philbin as the daughter and Josef Swickard as the artist unquestionably command attention. Their roles require them to awaken the keenest sympathies of their audiences and they do just that. Norman Kerry appears to better advantage than in some previous pictures, getting more sincerity into his characterization, but he is not on a par with Miss Philbin and Swickard. William Conklin and Rosemary Theby effectively supply motivating touches.

The title does not convey an accurate idea of the human interest story perhaps. "Fifth Avenue Models" will bring the crowds, and if it does they will not be sorry they came. But to reach a class of patron not impressed by this hint of the garish, the theatre had better explain that "Fifth Avenue Models" is not a procession of mannequins but a romance rich in human interest. The worst that can be said about it is that it needs a little more cutting.

Isoel Ludani, beautiful daughter of a talented but unsuccessful artist, is the breadwinner of the family, working in the shop of a fashionable modiste. One day she is forced to act as a mennequin and gains the attention of Francis Doran, an art dealer. As the result of a remark made by one of the manneequins, Isoel attacks the girl furiously and is discharged. Before she reaches home a man from the modiste's shop tells her her father will be arrested unless she pays $150 for the dress ruined in the fight. The father to save the daughter, goes with some crooks to identify a painting they want to steal and he is arrested and sent to Sing Sing. From then on Isoel is placed in many suspicious situations as secretary for Doran, who knows nothing of her father. Doran loves her, but she believes his attentions mean less than marriage until he stands by her when the disgrace suffered by her father is blazoned to the world at a time when great honor is within his grasp, after he is released from jail, and his masterpiece is acclaimed by the critics.

Associated Exhibitors Offer First St. Regis Production with Conway Tearle and Madge Kennedy

Reviewed by C. S. Sewell

With Conway Tearle and Madge Kennedy in the leading roles, Associated Exhibitors are offering "Bad Company," adapted from a magazine story, "The Ultimate Good." This is the first of a series produced by a new company, St. Regis Pictures.

The theme concerns the masquerading of an actress as a thief in order to secure papers that she believes will help her in saving her brother from an adventuress. This leads to a romance in which the hero sacrifices himself by claiming he is the common law husband of this woman, thus preventing the marriage. The happy ending is brought about by the heroine forgiving him when she becomes convinced it was only a youthful indiscretion.

EXHIBITORS' NEWS AND VIEWS

EDITED BY SUMNER SMITH

Two Troy, N. Y., Houses Close; Other Interests May Re-open

Two Troy picture theatres, the American and the King, closed last week through financial difficulties. The houses have been run by Benjamin Apple, a member of the Ilium Amusement Company. The American is located in the business center of the city and is the larger of the two. Following the sudden closing of the houses, litigation was started, including a suit for dispossession and a demand for payment of the January rent, if further occupancy was to be permitted. The company announced that it did not have the money to meet the rent and the future of the theatres is problematical. It is said that other interests are negotiating for the two houses and that both will probably be opened in the near future.

Fred Perry, of the Strand in Watertown, announced last week a reduction in admission prices of 20 to 10 cents, to take effect immediately. Mr. Perry further said that he would continue booking the same high type pictures as in the past, while amateur shows would continue to be held on Monday, Wednesday and Friday nights.

C. W. Loomis is running his house in Grand Gorge on Saturday nights only, charging 10 and 30 cents admission, with 15 and 40 cents for specials. The wide range is due to the fact that the 10 and 15 cent admissions are for the children. Mr. Loomis described his business these days as being sort of nip and tuck proposition, a slump having occurred with the completion of a big constructior job in that vicinity.

The Schine boys, Louis and Meyer, who make their headquarters in Gloversville, have exactly fifty-one picture theatres in their chain at the present time. Or at least that was the number last week. They admitted it. Of course, in five or six days most anything can happen and the chain may now number two or three more.

Low water conditions in the Battenkill River are raising havoc with the paper making industry and shirt shops in Greenwich and, incidentally, with the Star Theatre, a 300-seat house run by Dennis Regan. According to Mr. Regan, the business is not up to last year, and with the factories running only on part time because of low water, there does not seem to be any likelihood of betterment before spring.

Tony Veiller, of the Lincoln in Troy, is all puffed up these days, and he has a perfect right, for didn't two of the big New York dailies write him and request a copy of his talk over the radio the other night? Mr. Veiller spoke upon relation of the drama to radio and the movies, and according to all reports he is receiving many letters and postals congratulating him upon his talk.

Fishing through the ice has a new devotee in Harry Lazarus, owner of the Auditorium, a 650-seat house in Kingston. And speaking of the theatre, Mr. Lazarus remarked last week that while it was not a big house, it was a good one, with the loud pedal on "good," and that he would not trade it for any house in the whole state. Mr. Lazarus is doing much fishing these days and generally manages to bring a good string. He was out one day last week with Judge Scherick and the two returned with several whoppin' big pickerel.

Albany Wise Cracks

At Christmastime, William Shirley, of the Farash Theatres, Inc., of Schenectady, gave all exchange managers handsome fountain pens. Moreover, they write. But now some of the managers are asking Mr. Shirley why he does not use one of the same kind he gave away.

Mrs. A. E. Milligan, who with Mr. Milligan runs the Broadway Theatre in Schuylerville, is a prime favorite with all film salesmen and her invariable greeting is, "Well, who are you with now?"

Sad but true, Walter Roberts, manager of the Troy Theatre, is not only losing his hair but he is acquiring a furrowed brow. All this is not due, however, to theatre worries. It's the result of chess. Mr. Roberts is becoming one of the cleverest chess players in the Collar City and may later on be heard of in a state tournament.

It's a hard-hearted old world, or at least Louis Buettner was inclined to take that viewpoint the other day when he arrived in town from Cohoes, parked his car in one of the business streets and then naturally forgot all about the thirty-minute parking limit. The police, however, were not quite so absent-minded, with the result that Mr. Buettner was later seen on his way to city court where he laid down a five-spot, but with his customary smile teetotally absent.

Six of one and a half dozen of the other, is the way Frank L. Sands, of Pyries, explained business as he was finding it last week. Mr. Sands runs the Union Theatre in Pyrites and the Petaga in Hermon. About four feet of snow fell in Northern New York last week and the storm penned in all residents of Pyrites to his advantage, while in Hermon the storm kept them all out so they couldn't get in from the country. Mr. Sands has been running the Opera House in Russell, but he has just closed this for the winter. The theatre was given to the town by the head of the Knox five and ten cent syndicate.

For a single dime Jake Rosenthal of the Rose in Troy gave "The Covered Wagon" last Saturday, and this week he will present "Find Your Man." Naturally, Mr. Rosenthal is packing his house to the doors.

When someone asked L. H. McAllister of the Rex in Middleburgh how he managed to run three nights a week, furnish a five-piece orchestra and play big pictures, charging 25 cents admission, Mr. McAllister just smiled. Later on, he explained that while Middleburgh may not have a thousand population, he was drawing from a big surrounding territory, with good roads radiating in every direction.

By a vote of 8 to 1, the taxpayers of Lowville decided last week to retain ownership of the village opera house. Ernest J. Wolfe, present lessee of the theatre and likewise operating the Bijou there, had offered $25,000 for the theatre. It is understood that Mr. Wolfe will continue to lease the house.

David H. McLaughlin, of Oriskany Falls, is now running his theatre two nights a week, with a 15 and 25 cent admission, except on Saturday nights when 35 cents prevails. Mr. McLaughlin reports business as being quite satisfactory.

Louis Buettner, of the Cohoes Amusement Company, talking to exhibitors one day last week, handed out the following good advice: "Be careful of the contracts you sign. Be careful of the number of pictures you book. Get a Corona and keep a carbon of your letters to the exchanges."

Leonard Lipowicz, the new member of the New York State Senate, has a 350-seat house in Buffalo. He is the only theatre owner in the New York State Legislature at the present time.

Detroit

Henry S. Koppin has added another link to his rapidly growing chain of theatres in Wayne County. He took over the Highland Park on New Year's Day from Fred Preston, who has operated the house for six years. This makes the seventh theatre that Koppin has purchased in the last five months. Negotiations are also under way that will give him another on Woodward avenue.

Only a small number of Detroit picture houses reported an even break or better on their special New Year's Eve shows. With few exceptions most of them were losing propositions and bad ones at that.

John H. Kunsky is arranging for the presentation of a treadmill horse race on the Capitol Theatre stage in connection with the showing of "A Chorus Lady," the adaptation of the Rose Stahl play, in February.

E. L. Steffens of Redford, a suburb of Detroit, opened the New Bedford Theatre a few days ago and is now enjoying good business. It seats 400 and is a daily change house.

The Capitol celebrated its fourth anniversary last week with the presentation of "Tongues of Flame," together with a ballet act of thirty people from a Detroit cabaret.

Cincinnati

A three-story picture theatre and office building is being considered by Louis Abrams, Cleveland. Tentative plans call for a building 90x150 feet at the corner of Superior avenue and 124th street, at an estimated cost of $125,000.

Among incorporations recently reported from Columbus are: Freeman Avenue Amusement Company, Cincinnati, for $10,000, and Niles Theatre Company, Niles, Ohio, for $10,000.

Manager I. Libson is playing a return engagement of "Peter Pan" at his Strand Theatre and a return showing of "He Who Gets Slapped" at his Family Theatre. Both pictures broke attendance records when previously shown.

Columbus, Ohio, dalies are devoting considerable space to stories and cuts of Real Neth, managing director of the James string of theatres in that city. Some of the stories are a complete resume of his life.

West Virginia

The event of the winter at Morgantown, W. Va., was the reopening of the Strand by the Morgantown Amusement Company, of which George Sallows is general manager. Sallows is the man who took the old Swisher Theatre eleven years ago and after many heart-breaking struggles put it on a paying basis, and who has been the manager of the Strand ever since.

The Morgantown Amusement Company includes the personnel of the Penn-State Amusement Company of Uniontown. Our old friend C. M. McCloskey is one of the big guns in the enterprise, as well as Martin Van Voorhis, son of the owner of the property.

Following is the staff of the theatre: George Sallows, general manager; Roy Bohon, house manager; Fred A. Hiser, house electrician; Arthur Hiser, projection engineer, and Hazel Barthlow, treasurer. Kenneth Woodward is publicity director. One of his innovations is a complete outfit for taking local pictures and throwing them on the screen a few hours after they are taken.

The theatre has been entirely remodeled and redecorated at a cost of $75,000. The interior presents a Moorish Castle effect and is one of the most beautiful interior decorating jobs to be found anywhere.

One of the interesting features of the opening was a welcome address by Howard L. Swisher, the veteran showman who built the theatre in 1904 and who managed it for a long time. In his talk he recounted the theatrical history of Morgantown and told how Al G. Fields, the famous minstrel, had stopped with him on the corner of the lot which was then a cow pasture and which Mr. Swisher had recently bought, and told him that that lot would be the coming site for a theatre. Mr. Swisher followed his advice and the Swisher Theatre was the result.

Admission prices at the Strand are moderate. Matinees, 10 and 25 cents; evenings, 15 and 30 cents. Paramount and First National productions are contracted for. The house also plays Keith vaudeville and road shows.

The orchestra is composed of ten men and F. W. Bower is the director. A pipe organ has been installed. Two pianos, one upright and one grand, complete the musical equipment. All instruments are new.

Woodward will publish a bi-weekly "Movie Fan" in Morgantown, similar to the Fayette County Movie Fan which he has been issuing in Uniontown for more than two years. This is an eight-page house program; page size, eight and a half by eleven inches.

Buffalo, N. Y.

John Gill & Sons of Cleveland have been awarded the general contract for the new $1,500,000 Shea Buffalo Theatre to be erected at 646-648 Main street. Work has begun on the massive structure, which will be six stories in height, include stores and offices and a theatre seating close to 4,000. The theatre will be built of steel and concrete, with terra cotta trim. There will be a great Gothic window over the porte cochere through which at night will shine the light from the great crystal chandeliers in the lobby. Rich hangings will shut out the light in the daytime. There will be a grand marble staircase leading to the mezzanine as well as an escalator. The proscenium opening will be 60 feet wide, 32 feet deep and 38 feet high. Reception and cosmetic rooms and even smoking rooms for the ladies have been provided. It is expected the hous ewill open in the fall of 1926. The biggest pictures only will be shown and there will be a symphony orchestra of 65 pieces. This will make the fourth big theatre to be operated by Michael Shea in Buffalo.

Construction has been going right along on the new Aurora Theatre in East Aurora, N. Y., despite the unusual snowfall. The contractors expect to complete their work early this spring. The house is being built by the Aurora Building Corporation, the officers of which are: Elbert Hubbard, 2nd, president; Irving Price, vice-president, and Cecil M. Jackson, secretary and treasurer. The house will seat 850.

J. H. Michael, chairman of Buffalo Zone, M. P. T. O. of N. Y., has issued a statement cancelling the Movie Ball which was to have been held in Elmwood Music Hall on the night of January 29. Important legislative and business matters that require the full attention of the members is given as the reason for the move. The business meeting called for January 29 at the Hotel Statler was moved up to January 16 at the same place.

Sidney C. Allen is putting the Allen Theatre, Medina, N. Y., into a corporation to be known as the Allen Theatre Corporation. Twenty thousand of the $50,000 capital stock will be sold to small investors.

Some fine exploitation was put over by Manager Vincent R. McFaul of Shea's Hippodrome the past week when he showed "America," which resulted in S. R. O. business. Mr. McFaul succeeded in interesting school officials to the extent that they called up teachers and told them to advise their pupils to see the picture, informing them that arrangements could be made with the Hipp for blocks of seats.

Charlotte, N. C., again shows promise of being the most overseated theatre town in the South with the near approach of completion of present announced building plans. Fire and condemning of buildings by the Safety Council at the present time has Charlottee theatre seats cut down to a reasonable and justifiable point by which there are at the present time enough possible ticket buyers to provide adequate business at the box office for all Charlotte theatres, but with the completion of building operations now under way or announced these vacancies will be more than made up for in additional seatage.

R. D. Craver is rapidly nearing completion with his new Broadway Theatre on South Tryon street, which will seat in the neighborhood of 1,800 and will be devoted exclusively to first-run pictures. It was announced some weeks ago that a very large house would be constructed during 1925 on a lot on North Tryon street, and which would be leased to Famous Players interests for a long term of years. This organization already operates the Imperial and Alhambra as first-run theatres, Otto Haas operating the Ottoway and Ideal theatres and another organization at the present time having taken over a lease on the Strand.

Besides these downtown theatres, all of which are, or will be, located within a radius of three blocks on four diverging streets, there are several neighborhood houses in the industrial section of the city, besides a colored house.

St. Louis

Skouras Brothers have taken out a building permit for their $4,500,000 Ambassador Theatre and office building to be erected at Seventh and Locust streets, St. Louis, Mo. Contracts will be let during the next few weeks. The permit, a special one, was approved by the Board of Public Service and has been sent to the Board of Aldermen for their o. k. This will be given.

This unusual course—the regular permits are issued by the Building Commissioner—was due to the height, 250 feet, as a city ordinance requires that all buildings exceeding 206 feet must occupy an entire city block. The Ambassador will front 164 feet on Seventh street by a depth of 127 feet on both Locust and St. Charles streets. This is half that block. The theatre will occupy the space of seven stories and have seats for more than 4,000. The upper fifteen floors will be devoted to offices, etc. The building will be the tallest in the city.

Booked solid during January, February and March, Charley Goodnight of DeSoto, Mo., has nothing to worry about the next three months but his duties as State Senator from his district. He has gone to Jefferson City to make the legislative falls ring with his oratory and force censorship advocates, etc., to take flight. State Representative John Rees of Wellsville, Mo., will also be on the job at Jefferson City.

A parade of all the school children of the city, headed by the Lions Club and the town's band, was used to put over "Peter Pan" at O. W. McCutcheon's Malone Theatre, Sikeston, Mo., on January 12.

Mrs. I. W. Rodgers of Cairo, Ill., plans to open a new theatre in Carbondale, Ill. She has purchased the building formerly occupied by the Barth Theatre but more recently used for stores and will remodel it into a picture house.

First-run pictures with vaudeville presentation is the new policy of the Columbia Theatre, Sixth and St. Charles streets, St. Louis. The management tried dramatic stock but it failed to take with the downtown audiences. Tom Mix in "The Deadwood Coach" was the picture to open the new policy.

Joe Desberger is showing pictures and vaudeville at his Washington Square Theatre, Quincy, Ill. For a while the house operated on a picture policy alone.

Minneapolis

Folks at Heron Lake, Minn., have their own ideas what a picture theatre should look like. They have served notice on George Golda, manager of the Grand Theatre, that he must improve his house or a community theatre will be started.

A new first-run house was opened in St. Paul last week. It is the New State and is under the management of Oliver A. Rowe and William A. Mustard. This is the second independent first-run house to open there. The Tower Theatre, operated by Friedman Brothers Holding Company, is the other. Finkelstein & Ruben control most of the other houses.

A new $25,000 community theatre will be opened at Bayport, Minn. It will be under the management of A. H. Sackerson.

Finkelstein & Ruben, Twin City theatrical firm, closed a deal this week for the purchase of a second house at Austin, Minn. The first theatre purchased was the State and the latest addition is the Park. W. F. McKallor has been named resident manager of the two theatres.

Kansas City Star Editorial Notes Improvement in Films

In a column editorial the Kansas City Star takes an interesting view of the modern theatrical situation, excerpts of which follow:

"It is the stock-taking season. Why not glance at the theatre and its tendencies? Most of the inland theatres now are devoted to the motion picture, either all or part time, due to the high cost of transportation of legitimate productions of the larger scale. There are both good and bad developments in the theatre recently. One of the encouraging signs is the activity, average intelligence and large degree of success of a goodly number of American producers endeavoring to depict distinctive phases of American life."

Lee D. Balsley, widely known exhibitor in the Kansas City territory, resigned as assistant manager of the Liberty Theatre last week to organize a film company of which he is president, to be known as the Western Pictures Company, with offices at 117 West Seventeenth street, Kansas City. The company will handle only western pictures.

Among the out-of-town exhibitors in the Kansas City market last week were: Joe Egli, Hickory Theatre, St. Joseph, Mo.; F. G. Weary, Farris Theatre, Richmond, Mo.; Glenn Dickinson, Lawrence, Kans.; Charles Sears, Star, Nevada, Mo.; C. M. Pattee, Pattee Theatre, Lawrence, Kans.

Several changes in theatre management in the Kansas City territory occurred in the last week. Jack Gross, formerly manager of the Crane Theatre, Carthage, Mo., has become manager of the Wareham Theatre, Manhattan, Kans. The Colonial Theatre, Horton, Kans., owned by the Hostetter interests, is in the process of being sold, it is said, while the Colonial Theatre, St. Joseph, Mo., owned by the Hostetter-Rencke interests, has been closed but will be reopened soon.

"There is only one reason why there were so few out-of-town exhibitors in town this week," woefully retorted an exchange manager on Kansas City's Movie Row the other day. "You see all that ice on the sidewalks and streets? That's the reason. They're afraid they will 'slip' on something." And he ducked back into his office.

Pittsburgh

H. L. Stahl, who has conducted the Lyric Theatre, Oil City, for nine years, relinquishes this house on April 1, when the theatre will be dismantled and the property improved with a new bank building. Mr. Stahl has purchased the Cameo building in the same town from F. C. McCullough and will take over the business on July 1.

Ray Evans, proprietor of the Grand Theatre, Donora, is a very happy man these days. Mrs. Evans has completely recovered from a long illness and Ray has just purchased a new Packard car. Why shouldn't he be happy?

The Mishler Theatre, Altoona, changed its policy of attractions on January 15. For some time past the policy had been photoplays the first half of the week and burlesque the last half. Now vaudeville and pictures comprise the bills. The show changes twice a week and consists of a feature photoplay and three acts of vaudeville. Mr. Allemon, manager of the Mishler, has booked features from three exchanges for the present—Producers Distributing Corporation, Universal and Vitagraph.

M. Roth, owner of the Merlin Theatre at Duquesne, is branching out and has taken over the two theatres at Swissville, the Colonial and the Washington. Mr. Roth took charge of his newest acquisitions the first of the year.

The bargain hour at the Kearse Theatre in Charleston, W. Va., which permits anyone to enter the theatre between the hours of 1 and 2 p. m. every day for 10 cents, has proven a big draw for the theatre and is credited by showmen as being wise, inasmuch as it insures good crowds for the matinee and makes boosters.

Lester Bush, of the Strand and Grand theatres, Grafton, is planning a new theatre for that town.

Among the out-of-town exhibitors who visited Film Row recently were: Harry Petz, Youngwood; John Dobbins, Wilson; W. Gearhart, Templeton; J. A. Small, Avonmore; Tom Wright, Brownsville; Mike Manos, Greensburg, and B. W. Redfoot of Windber.

C. C. Klutts, prominent Moore Haven, Florida, exhibitor, has been compelled to remain inactive for three months due to floods in his district—but he has continued to compile information from Straight From the Shoulder and says, "It tells the story." Use and send tips for that dependable department.

Seattle Exhibitor Supplants Steam Heat with Electricity

During Seattle's recent cold snap when he had boiler trouble and could not use his furnace, Roy C. Czerny of the Kent Theatre, Kent, Wash., hooked up with the electric company to the extent of borrowing six big electric heating stoves, connected with the company's power wire. These he placed in various parts of the house, making the theatre quite livable. In appreciation of the courtesy, Czerny came out in the local paper with a front-page editorial, thanking the electric company for its co-operation.

John T. Spickett of Juneau, owner of Spickett's Palace, arrived in Seattle the first of the week in charge of four prisoners, one a lunatic and three desperate criminals under long term sentences. Exhibiting pictures ought to seem tame now, John. Mr. and Mrs. Spickett plan to come out in the spring for an extended trip through the states, with Texas as their objective.

W. E. Whisnand, owner of the Orpheum, Snohomish, Wash., has tied up with the local high school in a constructive manner. This is the first time Mr. Whisnand has been approached by the schools for assistance and he is going right down the line for them. He has booked "Barbara Frietchie" for a two-day run and has had 2,000 heralds made up for distribution, explaining that the entire proceeds for these two nights are to go to the high school.

A lone robber seeking to play a return engagement of a successful safe robbery on the Weir Theatre, Aberdeen, Wash., three weeks ago, held up P. H. Pike, cashier, in his office on Sunday night. Instead of holding up his hands Pike grappled with the man. The two battled their way out of the office and down a flight of stairs, the robber firing one shot. Freeing himself from Pike's grasp he fled. More than $5,000, representing the Saturday and Sunday receipts from three Aberdeen houses, in the office at the time, was saved. A similar amount was stolen in the other robbery.

D. and M. Constanti plan to open their old house in Puyallup which has been closed for some time, charging a dime admission.

Mr. and Mrs. Ed Frier of the Star Theatre, Portland, have sold out to Kenneth B. Ames and moved to San Francisco, where they will again locate.

One of the highlights of the week's news is the announcement by J. G. Von Herberg, of Greater Theatres, Inc., that he has booked "The Thief of Bagdad" for his entire circuit at which is said to be the highest price ever paid locally for any feature picture. Opening engagements will be day and date at the Seattle Liberty and Portland Majestic, February 6. A tremendous advertising campaign will be launched.

Manager Robert Bender has upper Second avenue all smelled up with incense this week during the showings of "A Cafe in Cairo." His lobby is truly Egyptian in atmosphere, with a huge sphinx, the big incense urn burning at her feet, and an effective arrangement of Oriental draperies, etc. Excellent business is reported.

Manager C. W. McKee of the Heilig Theatre has installed a parking system which is being given much publicity and is working out satisfactorily. Motorists drive into the theatre's commercial zone and leave their machines, being given identification tags by the doorman. Cars are driven one block to a steam heated garage, to be returned to the theatre when the owner has seen the show. Blanket insurance policies covering machines against loss or damage of every nature while in the care of the theatre provide protection that the motorist does not have when machines are left outside. A nominal charge covering this entire service has been effected by the theatre through its contract with a leading garage company.

About $30,000 damage was done to the Vogue Theatre and its equipment by fire that broke out when an oil stove exploded in the Kelso cigar factory in the building. For a time the entire business district was threatened, as the fire spread rapidly through the frame building. About $20,000 insurance was carried.

The Coliseum is making elaborate plans to celebrate its ninth anniversary in Seattle the week of January 10. Publicity through slides and newspaper announcements, giving interesting facts concerning the theatre's developmet and growth, have given widespread publicity.

"Greed" at Capitol

"Greed," Erich von Stroheim's Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production, will go into the Capitol Theatre, New York, the week of January 18. One week later it will be released nationally.

Los Angeles

Fred Miller, former owner of the California and Miller's Main Street theatres, has signed a 99-year lease for a big lot at Figueroa and Santa Barbara where he plans to build a new theatre. The property consists of 136 feet on Figueroa, 145 feet on Santa Barbara and 146 feet on Fortieth. The ground rental for the 99 years is in excess of $1,250,000. Plans call for a magnificent theatre of approximately 2,000 seats, which will be operated by Fred and Roy Miller, with five large stores and sixteen large offices in the building.

Harry Arthur, general manager of West Coast Theatres, has left for a tour of the East to give the presentations of pictures in other cities the "once-over" and to book about 30 or 40 acts for prologues in the West Coast chain. Arthur left after a general conference with the executive heads of the West Coast organization, including Sol Lesser, M. L. Gore and Adolph Ramish.

Ground has been broken for a two-story theatre building at Melrose and Doheny drive. The project is being financed by a group of financiers headed by Fred Steele. Upon completion, the theatre, which will cost approximately $75,000 and seat 1,000, will be leased to the West Coast Theatres.

W. K. Johnson has been named as the new manager of the Forum. He put over "Smouldering Fires" in a showmanlike manner and it is doing the biggest business in the history of the house, which was opened about seven months ago.

(Includes Selznick)

CAUSE FOR DIVORCE. Just a program picture that went over fairly well. Admission 10-20. Al C. Werner, Royal Theatre, Reading, Pennsylvania.

GOING UP. (5,886 feet). Star, Douglas MacLean. A very entertaining comedy, light, peppy, clean and thrilling. This received more hilarious laughter than any picture. Ran this fall. Universally satisfactory. Tone, fine. Sunday, yes. Town of 3,200. Admission 10-20-30. Charles Lee Hyde, Grand Theatre (500 seats), Pierre, South Dakota.

GOING UP. (5,886 feet). Star, Douglas MacLean. Was voted very enjoyable entertainment and gave universal satisfaction. Fair puller. Admission 10-20. Al C. Werner, Royal Theatre, Reading, Pennsylvania.

NEVER SAY DIE. (6 reels). Star, Douglas MacLean. One succession of audience laughs. A remarkably clever comedy with a lot of oiginal laugh getters. Did not have the drawing power the picture deserved as I have not yet shown either "Going Up" or "The Yankee Consul," but it had undoubtedly prepared the way for good business on these features. Tone good. Sunday, yes. Audience appeal eighty-eight per cent. W. J. Powell, Lonet Theatre, Wellington, Ohio.

WOMAN TO WOMAN. (6,994 feet). Star, Betty Compson. Fair picture. We had bought "Heart of Wetona" but couldn't get it because some other company had taken it over. Tone, fair. Sunday, No. Pretty good audience appeal. Small town class and farmers town of 800. Admission 10-25. Welty & Son, Mid-Way Theatre (500 seats), Hill City, Kansas.

F. B. O.

BELOVED VAGABOND. (6,217 feet). Star cast. A pretty good picture. Very good acting, pleased very well. It doesn't draw very well. Tone, fair. Sunday, yes. Audience appeal, eighty-five per cent. Admission 15-30. R. W. Hines, Hines Theatre, Loyalton, South Dakota.

DESERT SHEIK. Star, Wanda Hawley. This is only a program picture, pretty good scenery, played four nights, bad weather sure is making the business the "bunk." Sunday, yes. Audience appeal, eighty-five per cent. R. W. Hines, Hines Theatre, Loyalton, South Dakota.

NO-GUN MAN. Star, Lefty Flynn. A good action western with lots of good stuff. Flynn is a good actor. Sunday, yes. Good audience. appeal. Working class, city of 14,000. Admission 10-20. G. M. Bertling, Favorite Theatre (187 seats), Piqua, Ohio.

STEPPING LIVELY. (5,317 feet). Star, Richard Talmadge. A good action picture full of stunts but not as good as some of his others. Tone, good. Sunday, no. Audience appeal, fifty per cent. Small town class, town of 250. Admission 10-25. Roy E. Cline, Osage Theatre (250 seats), Osage, Oklahoma.

THUNDERING HOOFS. (5,015) feet). Star, Fred Thomson. A fair Thomson. Have had better ones than this one, but they are all good. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Good audience appeal. Working class, city of 14,000. Admission 10-20. G. M. Bertling, Favorite Theatre (187 seats). Piqua, Ohio.

THUNDERING HOOFS. (5,015 feet). Star, Fred Thomson. I sure would like to meet Fred Thomson in person to congratulate him for making some real honest to goodness money making westerns. This one is a knockout. Tone, good. Not suitable for Sunday. Audience appeal, ninety-five per cent. All classes, in big city. Admission ten cents. Stephen G. Brenner, Eagle Theatre (298 seats), Baltimore, Maryland.

WEST BOUND LIMITED. (5,100 feet). Star cast. Good picture, rather old now, but pleased all who saw it. Tone, okay. Small town class, town of 3,000. Admission 10-30. Star Theatre, Weiser, Idaho.

YANKEE MADNESS. (5,680 feet). Star cast. Nothing much to this. Same old Central America Revolution plot, some shooting and one dance. Well, hardly right for a Sunday school showing. Tone, not extra. Sunday, no. Poor audience appeal. Small town class and farmers, town of 600. Admission 10-20, 10-30. H. W. Batchelder, Galt Theatre (175 seats), Galt, California.

First National

ASHES OF VENGEANCE. (10 reels). Star, Norma Talmadge. Here is one you can step on and people will talk about it. Historical in a way. It went over big. Don't be afraid of it. It's the goods. Tone, French history. Sunday, yes. Good audience appeal. All classes, town of 2,900. Admission 10-25. A. E. Andrews, Opera House (496 seats), Emporium, Pennsylvania.

BORN RICH. (7,511 feet). Star, Bert Lytell. Felt done out of my money on this one. It is absolutely the limit for nothingness. Good bye Lytell, are you crazy? If not, why on earth did you stand for this thing? This show put it through for matinee one time through, and took it off. Got plenty of it. Worst ever. Can't for my life see what any sensible person would sponsor anything as bad as this. Not so bad if there were any adjustment. But none. Just pay for it anyway. A total loss and no comeback. Best class, city of 10,000. Admission 10-20. Ned Pedigo, Pollard Theatre (800 seats), Guthrie, Oklahoma.

BOY OF MINE. (7 reels). Star cast. This is one of the highest examples of what the photoplay should be that the writer has ever seen. It's a gem. Play it and "step on it." Pleased all classes and ages. Tone, fine. Sunday, yes. High audience appeal. All classes, city of 14,000. Admission 10-35. E. W. Collins, Grand and Liberty Theatres (700-500 seats), Jonesboro, Arkansas.

BOY OF MINE. (7 reels). Star, Benny Alexander. Wouldn't want a better picture. Sure pleased our Christmas crowd. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Very strong audience appeal. Small town class and farmers, town of 800. Admission 10-25. Welty & Son, Mid-Way Theatre (500 seats), Hill City, Kansas.

CIRCUS DAYS. (6,000 feet). Star, Jackie Coogan. This one sure is good. This is the last Jackie Coogan produced by First National. He is a good bet for us any time. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Strong audience appeal. Small town class and farmers, town of 800. Admission 10-25. Welty & Son, Mid-Way Theatre (500 seats), Hill City, Kansas.

CIRCUS DAYS. (6 reels). Star, Jackie Coogan. The grown-ups called it fair, but the kids voted it the best ever. Good box office attraction. Admission 10-20. Al. C. Werner, Royal Theatre, Reading, Pennsylvania.

ENCHANTED COTTAGE (7,120 feet), and CYTHERIA (7,400 feet). Star cast. here are two lemons, for me, both rotten and did not please. Had them right together and it sure hurt business. A. Mitchell, Dixie Theatre, Russellville, Kentucky.

FIGHTING BLADE. (8,729 feet). Star, Richard Barthelmess. A colorful production that, however, only appealed to the better classes. Admission 10-20. Al. C. Werner, Royal Theatre, Reading, Pennsylvania.

FLIRTING WITH LOVE. (6,926 feet). Star cast. A real good show, many to tell me that it was good. Colleen Moore and Conway Tearle, both good drawing cards. A. Mitchell, Dixie Theatre, Russellville, Kentucky.

FLOWING GOLD. (8,005 feet). Star, Milton Sills. Showed this on Saturday to a small crowd due to the extreme cold weather but it is a real picture, one that you can boost and not fool them. A. Mitchell, Dixie Theatre, Russellville, Kentucky.

FLOWING GOLD. (8,000 feet). Star, Milton Sills. This caused no undue excitement but it's a wonderful picture. We didn't go after it right. Boost it big. Tone, good. Hardly suitable for Sunday. Good audience appeal. Small town class and farmers, town of 800. Admission 10-25. Welty & Son, Mid-Way Theatre (500 seats), Hill City, Kansas.

FOOLS FIRST. Star cast. A very good picture of its class. Book it if you don't have to buy an interest in the company to get it. Not suitable for Sunday. Fair audience appeal. Family class, city of 65,000. Admission fifteen cents. R. K. Covington, Bijou Theatre (500 seats), Fresno, California.

FOR SALE. (7,840 feet). Star, Claire Windsor. Not much newness to story but made good one day program. Adolphe Menjou good as ever. Tone, fair. Sunday, yes. Fair audience appeal. Family and student class, town of 4,000. Admission 10-25. R. J. Relf, Star Theatre (600 seats), Decorah, Iowa.

GALLOPING FISH. (6 reels). Star, Syd Chaplin. A real comedy, that is much different from anything ever made. Cast good. Tone, okay. Sunday, yes. Audience appeal, very good. Town and country class, town of 1,000. Admission 10-25. C. R. Seff, New Radio Theatre (250 seats), Correctionville, Iowa.

HER TEMPORARY HUSBAND. (6,723 feet). Star cast. Hate to disagree with some of the exhibitors, but this surely is not a good picture. Some of my patrons were disgusted. Tone, fair. Not suitable for Sunday. No audience appeal. Small town class and farmers, town of 800. Admission 10-25. Welty & Son, Mid-Way Theatre (500 seats), Hill City, Kansas.

SECRETS. (8,345 feet). Star, Norma Talmadge. A flawless production. A perfect cast and a story that just compels attention from start to finish. According to my patrons' comments, it is the most satisfactory domestic drama I have ever shown. Was rather dubious of showing this picture on Christmas day account of matinee, but the children all liked it and receipts showed it to be a box office winner. Excellent tone. Sunday, yes. Audience appeal, one hundred per cent. Mixed class, city of 500,000. Admission 10-20. William T. Meeks, Silliman's Murray Theatre (740 seats), Milwaukee, Wisconsin.

WANDERING DAUGHTERS. (5,471 feet). Star cast. No excuse for this picture. Just a waste of time and money. Nothing for the star to work on. Miss De La Motte good. Tone, fair. Sunday, no. No audience appeal. Small town class and farmers, town of 800. Admission 10-25. Welty & Son, Mid-Way Theatre (500 seats), Hill City, Kansas.

WHEN A MAN'S A MAN. (6,190 feet). Star, John Bowers. This is fine. Best drawing card this year for us except the "Covered Wagon." Follows the book pretty well. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Strong audience appeal. Small town class and farmers, town of 800. Admission 10-25. Welty & Son, Mid-Way Theatre (500 seats), Hill City, Kansas.

WHITE LILY. Star cast. Poor picture. People went away in poor spirit. Didn't like it. All classes town of 1,200. Admission 25-50. Palace Theatre, Blackwell, Oklahoma.

WHY MEN LEAVE HOME. (8 reels). Star, Lewis Stone. An excellent picture with a good working title. Bad weather kept the regulars away but those who saw the production were loud in their praise. Good acting, good photography, excellent film, made a nice combination. Tone, fair. Possibly suitable for Sunday. Strong audience appeal. General class, town of 1,000. Admission 10-25, 15-35. H. H. Hedberg, Amuse-U Theatre, Melville, Louisiana.

WITHIN THE LAW. (8,074 feet). Star, Norma Talmadge. Although this picture didn't do much at the box office it was one of the best we ever had. People pleased one hundred per cent. Good tone. Hardly suitable for Sunday. Very good audience appeal. Welty & Son, Mid-Way Theatre, Hill City, Kansas.

WOMAN ON THE JURY. (7,331 feet). Star cast. Pleased about eighty per cent., in my judgment a very good percentage. Tone, okay. Sunday, questionable. Audience appeal, fair to good. Mixed class, town of 3,000. Admission 10-20. Charles Martin, Family Theatre (300 seats), Mt. Morris, New York.

Between Ourselves

A get-together place where we can talk things over

When you boys don't come in I miss you—not only your reports (though I need all of these you can manage to send, for the benefit of our host of friends), but, also, I miss your friendship and your good will.

It's pretty hard, sitting back at a desk, with only cold type to use, to get across to you how interested I am in you all, personally. But it's a fact, nevertheless, and I always welcome your notes, whether they're letter length or just the scribble on the top or back of the report blank, saying, as J. A. McGill does, "Happy New Year, Van and 'Gang,' and more power to you."

Among many delinquents I have missed Dave Seymour—as you have, unquestionably, because of his fair reports and his deep-seated good will. But now he comes in with an explanation. Read it on another page and we can forgive him.

Same way with Hedberg and Johnson, of whose tips you have had many. Their letter is a "hand across the spaces" and helps the fellowship spirit that underlies this dependable tip department.

Come in, often, fellows.

VAN.

Fox

ARIZONA EXPRESS. (6,516 feet). Star, David Butler. One of those rip-snorting melos that makes the fans sit up straight in their seats and cheer the hero when he meets the villains in 'mortal' combat. This is a thriller of the ninth degree. Played Christmas night but can't say whether the picture drew the crowd or the distribution of free prizes. Tone, fair. Sunday, yes. Good audience appeal. General class, town of 1,000. Admission 10-25, 15-35. H. H. Hedberg, Amuse-U Theatre, Melville, Louisiana.

BLIZZARD. (5,890 feet). Star cast. Another foreign piece of junk. Lay it off. There is no use to buy foreign pictures they cannot compete with American made productions. All classes, in big city. Admission ten cents. Stephen G. Brenner, Eagle Theatre (298 seats), Baltimore, Maryland.

DARWIN WAS RIGHT. (4,982 feet). Star cast. Fox tried to make a novelty comedy special but he made a special lemon novelty. People see monkeys in comedies and that's enough. Worth one quarter what I paid for it. Tone, okay. Hardly suitable for any day. Fifty per cent. walked out. Mixed class, town of 3,000. Admission 10-20. Charles Martin, Family Theatre (300 seats), Mt. Morris, New York.

DESERT OUTLAW. Star, Buck Jones. Three days to fair busines. Usually play him two days. This one we stretched to three days but did only a two days business. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Good audience appeal. Mixed classes, city of 35,000. Admission 25-35. C. D. Buss, Strand Theatre, Easton, Pennsylvania.

IF WINTER COMES. (10 reels). Star, Percy Marmont. Film received from another theatre with all wraps loose. Frightful mess and to make matters worse the reel number leaders on three reels were missing and it took over three hours to get the film in shape for night's performance, then, due to faulty patches, torn sprocket holes, etc., we had several interruptions. The picture itself is a wonderful production and Marmont's acting is unsurpassed. Tone, excellent. Sunday, yes. Audience appeal, very strong. General class, town of 1,000. Admission 10-25, 15-35. H. H. Hedberg, Amuse-U Theatre, Melville, Louisiana.

LAST OF THE DUANES. (6,942 feet). Star, Tom Mix. Four days to big business but patrons kicked because the picture was not like the book. Seems Fox has his own idea of how to produce novels. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Good audience appeal. Mixed classes, city of 35,000. Admission 25-35. C. D. Buss, Strand Theatre, Easton, Pennsylvania.

ST. ELMO. (6 reels). Star, John Gilbert. Good picture. Not a big feature but above program schedule. Good tone. Sunday, yes. Good audience appeal. Farmers and merchants, town of 1,650. Mrs. J. B. Travelle, Elite Theatre, Placerville, California.

SHEPHERD KING. (8,500 feet). Star cast. Very elaborate biblical story. Beautiful sets and worth seeing. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Good audience appeal. Farmers and merchants, town of 1,650. Mrs. J. B. Travelle, Elite Theatre, Placerville, California.

SOFT BOILED. (7,054 feet). Star, Tom Mix. Good picture above program. A real feature worth seeing. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Good audience appeal. Farmers and merchants. town of 1,650. Mrs. J. B. Travelle, Elite Theatre, Placerville, California.

VAGABOND TRAIL. (4,302 feet). Star, Buck Jones. Not up to the Jones standard. Good for houses that change daily. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Audience appeal, seventy per cent. All classes, town of 2,800. Admission 15-25. D. W. Strayer, Mt. Joy Theatre (250 seats), Mt. Joy, Pennsylvania.

WESTERN LUCK. (5,020 feet). Star, Buck Jones. Good. Jones will always go over if he's Buck and in a western. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Audience appeal, eighty per cent. Masses, city of 200,000. Admission 10-20. R. M. Kennedy, Royal Theatre (250 seats), Birmingham, Alabama.

Metro-Goldwyn

BANDOLERO. (6,997 feet). Star, Pedro DeCordoba. While this was new players all but one, it's very good but a little too deep for a good many. Some stopped at the box office for explanations which we furnished. Played Saturday night to about half a crowd less than usual. Tone, fair. Sunday, no. Audience appeal, seventy-five per cent. Business and farming class, town of 2,200. Admission 10-25. A. F. Jenkins, Community Theatre, David City, Nebraska.

DON'T DOUBT YOUR HUSBAND. (5,510 feet). Star, Viola Dana. Right here is one of the best little programs ever put out. People simply raved over it. It was a riot of fun. Tone, good. Hardly suitable for Sunday. Strong audience appeal. Small town class and farmers, town of 800. Admission 10-25. Welty & Son, Mid-Way Theatre (500 seats), Hill City, Kansas.

GREEN GODDESS. (9,100 feet). Star, George Arliss. A good picture that did not please any large part of our audience. They neither liked it nor came to see it. Tone, fair. Sunday, yes. Audience appeal, not high. All classes, city of 14,000. Admission 10-35. E. W. Collins, Grand and Liberty Theatre (700-500 seats), Jonesboro, Arkansas.

HALF A DOLLAR BILL. (5,700 feet). Star cast. Two days to poor business. Picture is good and all liked it but the title is against it. Tone, fair. Not suitable for Sunday. Fair audience appeal. Mixed class, city of 35,000. Admission 25-35. C. D. Buss, Strand Theatre (700 seats), Easton, Pennsylvania.

HEART BANDIT. (4,900 feet). Star, Viola Dana. Here is a dandy little picture for any audience, not so good at the box office on account of running too many Dana pictures so close together. Fair audience appeal. Town and rural class, town of 800. Admission 15-30. C. O. Christ, Opera House (250 seats), Elgin, Iowa.

HEART BANDIT. (4,900 feet). Star, Viola Dana. Only a program picture, but you can face them as they go out. We call it very good and can be bought right. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Audience appeal, ninety per cent. Farmers and townpeople, town of 800. Admission 10-25. Firkins and Laws, Crystal Theatre (200 seats), Moravia, Iowa.

HIS HOUR. (6,300 feet). Star, Aileen Pringle. It has class, speed and everything. A trifle peppy but you just tell 'em it is what they need. Did well with it and people liked it. This Aileen Pringle woman is the groceries. Tone, fair. Hardly suitable for Sunday. Very good audience appeal. Society class, city of 10,000. Admission 10-30. Ned Pedigo, Pollard Theatre, Guthrie, Oklahoma.

LITTLE ROBINSON CRUSOE. (6,126 feet). Star, Jackie Coogan. The kids will eat this up and two-thirds of the grownups will be pleased with it which means a good attendance on Saturday or Sunday. Should satisfy anywhere anytime. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Audience appeal, seventy per cent. Mixed class, city of 500,000. Admission 10-20. William T. Meeks, Silliman's Murray Theatre (740 seats), Milwaukee, Wisconsin.

LONG LIVE THE KING. (9,364 feet). Star, Jackie Coogan. Very good but different and not liked as well as his comedy picture, don't appeal to the audience as the other type does. Very poor attendance, but the picture was all there. If they like costume pictures feed it to 'em. Tone, good. Sunday, no. Fair audience appeal. Business and farming class, town of 2,000. Admission 10-25. A. F. Jenkins, Community Theatre, David City, Nebraska.

MADEMOISELLE MIDNIGHT. (6,778 feet). Star, Mae Murray. The fastest Mae Murray picture ever made. Played four days to good business which was helped by giving a sample of "Vauv" at all matinees. Tone, fair. Sunday, yes. Good audience appeal. Mixed class, city of 35,000. Admission 25-35. C. D. Buss, Strand Theatre (700 seats), Easton, Pennsylvania.

MARRIED FLIRTS. (6,765 feet). Star, Pauline Frederick. Mighty good, and everybody said so, not much of a crowd. Tone, fair. Sunday, no. Audience appeal, one hundred per cent. Business and farming class, town of 2,000 . Admission 10-25. A. F. Jenkins, Community Theatre, David City, Nebraska.

NELLIE THE BEAUTIFUL CLOAK MODEL. (7,000 feet). Star, Claire Windsor. A howling melodrama with a popular star to say nothing of Mae Busch, and Ray Griffith who almost ran away with the picture. The double play was the cleverest we ever saw. Give us more. Tone, good. Sunday, no. Audience appeal, one hundred per cent. Business and farming class, town of 2,200. Admission 10-25. A. F. Jenkins, Community Theatre, David City, Nebraska.

OUR HOSPITALITY. (6,220 feet). Star, Buster Keaton. Print rotten. This makes two rotten prints from Metro this week. Picture not all here. It had no ending but we paid regular price for it just the same. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Audience appeal, nothing here. All classes, town of 2,800. Admission 15-25. D. W. Strayer, Mt. Joy Theatre (250 seats), Mt. Joy, Pennsylvania.

RENO. (7 reels). Star, Helene Chadwick. Not much to this one. Played it on a poor night and so did not disappoint many. The story is too complicated to prove interesting. Tone, okay. Sunday, yes. Fair audience appeal. Mixed class, town of 3,000. Admission 20-25. T. L. Barnett, Finn's Theatre (600 seats), Jewett City, Connecticut.

SCARAMOUCHE. (9,600 feet). Star cast. The intelligent patrons thought it wonderful and were lavish in their praise. The others had only a hazy idea as to what it was all about. Was oversold from a box office standpoint. Al. C. Werner, Royal Theatre, Reading, Pennsylvania.

SOCIAL CODE. (5 reels). Star, Viola Dana. Fair but was sent as a substitute. People here like Viola. Edna Flugrath in the picture also. Tone, good. Sunday, no. Audience appeal, pretty fair. Welty & Son, Mid-Way Theatre, Hill City, Kansas.

STRANGERS OF THE NIGHT. (8,000 feet). Star cast. Good but no drawing power and that is what counts. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. No audience appeal. Small town class, town of 250. Admission 10-25. Roy E. Cline, Osage Theatre (200 seats), Osage, Oklahoma.

STRANGERS OF THE NIGHT. (8,000 feet). Star, Matt Moore. A very good and interesting picture for grownups but the fourth and eighth reel was rotten. Print I mean. On the second show I could not even run the last reel. Tone, bad. Sunday, no. Audience appeal, eighty per cent. All classes, town of 2,800. Admission 15-25. D. W. Strayer, Mt. Joy Theatre (250 seats), Mt. Joy, Pennsylvania

SUCCESS. (7,000 feet). Star cast. While quite a few thought this good, the majority didn't rave about it and the result at the box office was below the average. Admission 10-20. Al. C. Werner, Royal Theatre, Reading, Pennsylvania.

THROUGH THE DARK. (7,999 feet). Star, Colleen Moore. Good crook picture but not suitable for Colleen Moore. Sunday, no. Audience appeal seventy-eight per cent. Masses, city of 200,000. Admission 10-20. R. M. Kennedy, Royal Theatre (250 seats), Birmingham, Alabama.

THY NAME IS WOMAN. (9,087 feet). Star, cast. Good. Some were disappointed in the end. Pleased about seventy-five per cent. Admission 10-30. N. Russell, Russell's Theatre, Barnesboro, Pennsylvania.

WOMEN WHO GIVE. (7,500 feet). Star, Renee Adoree. One of the best sea stories I have ever run. Resee Adoree is certainly handsome in this one, at least I thought so. Frank Keenan does some very fine acting. One fine picture. Tone, okay. Sunday, yes. Good audience appeal. Mixed class, town of 3,000. Admission 20-25. T. L. Barnett,

Dave Explains

"It has been no voluntary absence from your department on my part.

"But the manifold duties as manager of this emporium practically make it impossible for me now to make it.

"I will not absent myself permanently, and try to get back some day, but just as things are at present, I wish to make no rash promises.

"In the meantime—all the luck in the world to your department, and best wishes to yourself, and keep up the good work.

"Am not snowed under yet, but we have plenty of the 'feathery stuff'; in fact we average 124 days of real sleighing a year here—that's fairly frigid—yes, sir!" Dave Seymour, Pontiac Theatre Beautiful, Saranac Lake, New York.

Finns Theatre (600 seats), Jewett City, Connecticut.

YOUR FRIEND AND MINE. (5,750 feet). Star cast. Rather slow and considered somewhat below the average. Admission 10-20. Al. C. Werner, Royal Theatre, Reading, Pennsylvania.

Paramount

ALASKAN. (6,738 feet). Star, Thomas Meighan. Went over good for us yesterday. Liked by the majority though many preferred Meighan in a dressier part. Tone, okay. Sunday, yes. Good audience appeal. All classes, city of 14,000. Admission 10-35. E. W. Collins, Grand & Liberty Theatres (700-500 seats), Jonesboro, Arkansas.

ALASKAN. (6,738 feet). Star, Tom Melghan. Good author, gorgeous scenery and popular book. Picture, however, drags in spots; could have done in five reels. However, went big for me. Ran it special and got my money back. Tone good. Sunday, yes. Appeal seventy-five per cent. Draw all classes, town of 6,000. Admission 10-20-30. Frank H. Watton, Park Theatre (600 seats), Lebanon, New Hampshire.

A MAN MUST LIVE. (6,116 feet). Star, Richard Dix. Score another for Richard Dix. This is just the type of role Dix is suited for best. Dix has certainly come to the front since "Manhattan," which was exceptionally good. Tone okay. Sunday, yes. Very good audience appeal. Suburban class, town of 2,000. Admission 10-30. H. Warren Rible, Mayfield Theatre (210 seats), Mayfield, California.

ARGENTINE LOVE. (5,970 feet). Star, Bebe Daniels. Adapted from a story by Ibanez with Bebe Daniels and Ricardo Cortez, this makes an excellent production. Should please the most critical audiences. Plenty of action. Tone okay. Sunday, yes. Very good audience appeal. Suburban class, town of 2,000. Admission 10-30. H. Warren Rible, Mayfield Theatre (210 seats), Mayfield, California.

BEDROOM WINDOW. (4,550 feet). This was voted a good and clever picture and held them tight in their seats to the end. But for some reason or other business was off. Admission 10-20. Al C. Werner, Royal Theatre, Reading, Pennsylvania.

BORDER LEGION. (7,908 feet). Star, Antonio Moreno. Zane Grey's latest romance brought to the screen. This is a very good picture and should go over anywhere where out of doors dramas are liked. Rockliffe Fellowes also in cast. Suburban class, town of 2,000. Admission 10-30. H. Warren Rible, Mayfield Theatre (210 seats), Mayfield, California.

CONFIDENCE MAN. (6,500 feet). Star, Thomas Meighan. Well, Tommy's sure slipping here in this town for us as we did not make expenses with this on nights with favorable weather. Picture is fair program stuff. Good tone, fair appeal; yes for Sunday. Draw better class, town of 4,500. C. A. Anglemire, "Y" Theatre, Nazareth, Pennsylvania.

COVERED WAGON. (9,407 feet). All-star cast. Ran this two nights with a wonderful business, but film was in poor shape due to using same as a road show and never sending in to the house for repairs until all worn out. On this admission was 25-50, which is too much in a small town. They won't sell you the show; afraid the exhibitor is going to make more money than the house. I have to buy many pictures before I can have "The Covered Wagon." Draw town and rural type, town of 800. Usual admission 15-30. C. O. Christ, Opera House (250 seats), Elgin, Iowa.

COVERED WAGON. (9,407 feet). Star cast. Did big business, yet can't say it is such a great picture. Not worth seventy-five cents. Only thing I see great about it is the publicity it has received. There is no doubt about drawing power, yet your patrons will stay away from your theatre because you forced them to pay seventy-five cents to see it. Country and city class, town of 1,800. Admission 10-25, 10-40. G. A. Peterson, Cozy Theatre (502 seats), Hollis, Oklahoma.

FEMALE. (6,167 feet). Star, Betty Compson. This is a better picture than the name would imply. The man who names pictures knows more about it than I do, but he made a mistake in this one. A well read story with a good name and he changes it to something that may mean anything or nothing and as many of them fear it means too much as too little; pa or ma take the family on down to the other house. Charles Lee Hyde, Grand Theatre, Pierre, South Dakota.

FEMALE. (6,167 feet). Star, Betty Compson. A good picture. Pleased about all of them. Bought it right. Liked it and we are very well contented. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Good audience appeal. Society class city of 10,000. Admission 10-30. Ned Pedigo, Pollard Theatre, Guthrie, Oklahoma.

GARDEN OF WEEDS. (6,230 feet). Star, Betty Compson. A James Cruze production. Book it without delay; it is a good box office attraction and a coin getter. A large, pleased patronage was at the Capitol Theatre during its four-day stay. William Noble, Capitol Theatre, Oklahoma City, Oklahoma.

The A-Muse-U's Good-Fellowship Greeting

"Happy New Year, Van, and 'Gang'—Johnson and self, of the A-Muse-U, wish to thank you and all OUR GANG for the tips which have, on more than one occasion, saved us from booking some lemon which would have lowered the standard which we have set for GOOD pictures.

"We wish to thank you and the boys for the many tips which have enabled us to hold this high standard and book really WORTHWHILE productions. May the department continue to grow the coming year as it has done in 1924 under your able management and may the combined efforts of OUR GANG in consistently reporting be the means of demonstrating to the producers that GOOD, CLEAN photoplays are always salable."—H. H. Hedberg, A-Muse-U Theatre, Melville, Louisiana.

HER LOVE STORY. (6,736 feet). Star, Gloria Swanson. No good excuse for this one being produced simply the limit. If you live in Catholic community where all of them are Catholic it might go. But the story is light. The cast outside of Gloria and George Fawcett, we have never heard of before and have been showing pictures for many years. I would say don't play it. Sunday, no. Society class city of 10,000. Admission 10-30. Ned Pedigo, Pollard Theatre, Guthrie, Oklahoma.

HOLLYWOOD. (8,100 feet). Star cast. this was about as poor a picture that was rated and sold as a special as I have ever shown. My patrons surely did roast this one. Town and country class town of 900. Admission 10-25-30. Charles L. Nott, Opera House (300 seats). Sutherland, Iowa.

ICEBOUND. (6,471 feet). Star, Richard Dix. A good show but it is not an audience picture. Very poor attendance, in fact nothing bringe them in just now. The title only had 13 inches to it. A poor print. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Poor audience appeal. Better class town of 4,500. Admission 10-15. C. A. Anglemire, "Y" Theatre (404 seats), Nazareth, Pennsylvania.

LILY OF THE DUST. (6,811 feet). Star, Pola Negri. A really big production, although rather heavy for working class. Suitable for large houses in large cities. Tone, doubtful. Hardly suitable for Sunday. Audience appeal, sixty per cent. Mixed class city of 500,000. Admission 10-20. William T. Meeks, Silliman's Murray Theatre (740 seats), Milwaukee, Wisconsin.

LOCKED DOORS. (6,621 feet). Star, Betty Compson. Had some favorable comments on this. Very good program picture. Pre-holiday business very poor. Length six reels. Probably not suitable for Sunday. Audience appeal generally good. Mixed class, town of 3,000. Admission varies. Capitol Theatre, Asheboro, North Carolina.

MANHATTAN. (6,415 feet). Star, Richard Dix. This, the first starring picture in which Richard Dix has appeared, is fine and here's hoping the rest are as good. Plenty of action. Tone, okay. Sunday, no. Audience appeal, okay. Oil and farm class town of 1,000. Admission 10-25. H. E. Schlichter, Liggett Theatre (600 seats), Madison, Kansas.

MAN WHO FIGHTS ALONE. (6,337 feet) Star, William Farnum. An excellent Farnum picture and an excellent picture to book. Star was good in this one and it will surely please your patrons if shown. William Noble, Capitol Theatre, Oklahoma City, Oklahoma.

MERTON OF THE MOVIES. (7,655 feet). Star, Glenn Hunter. This picture does not seem to please the many who have not read the book or seen the play. It is hard for them to figure what it is all about. Personally I liked it immensely, as did the more discriminating patrons, but they are not in the majority. City of 18,500. Admission 20-40. Ben L. Morris, Temple and Olympic theatres, Bellaire, Ohio.

MERTON OF THE MOVIES. (7,655 feet). Star, Glenn Hunter. Good picture, but paid too much money. Tone, okay. Sunday, yes. Fair audience appeal. Small town and country class town of 3,000. Admission 10-30. Star Theatre, Weiser, Idaho.

MONSIEUR BEAUCAIRE. (9,932 feet). Star, Rudolph Valentino. No good picture for small town. All men folks hate Valentino. Picture was okay. Sunday, yes. Small town class town of 3,000. Admission 10-30. Star Theatre, Weiser, Idaho.

NOBODY'S MONEY. (5,587 feet). Star, Jack Holt. Did not draw for me at all. Had the poorest business on this picture of any I have ever run. Tone, okay. Sunday, yes. Fair audience appeal. Town and rural class town of 800. Admission 15-30. C. O. Christ, Opera House (250 seats), Elgin, Iowa.

NORTH OF 36. (7,908 feet). Star cast. Played this three days before Christmas, which was at a disadvantage and under the circumstances did very well; however, despite the fact that it's another "Wagon" it does not have the pull by a long shot. Mixed class. Joe Hewitt, Strand Theatre, Robinson, Illinois.

NORTH OF 36. (7,508 feet). Star, Jack Holt. Most excellent offering. Should please any audience anywhere; in a class with "The Covered Wagon." Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Good audience appeal. Farmers and merchants town of 1,650 Mrs. J. B. Travelle, Elite Theatre, Placerville, California.

NORTH OF 36. (7,908 feet). Star cast. Here's one that got me some real money. To compare with the "Covered Wagon" is not flattering it. I had many patrons say they liked it better. If you don't make money with this picture it's not the picture's fault. Tone, perfect. Sunday, yes. Audience appeal, A-1. All classes city of 91,000. Admission 40-50. Guy O'Kenimer, Arcade Theatre (1,152 seats), Jacksonville, Florida.

OPEN ALL NIGHT. (6,867 feet). Star cast. All right for what it is, but it aint. No entertainment for small town class. A novelty with nothing but a good cast. Tone, fair. Sunday, doubtful. Very little audience appeal. Family and student class town of of 4,000. Admission 10-25. R. J. Relf, Star Theatre (600 seats), Decorah, Iowa.

SAINTED DEVIL. (8,633 feet). Star, Rudolph Valentino. There is nothing to this but the rental price. Just a lot of posing. Tone, okay. Sunday, yes. No audience appeal. Oil and farm class town of 1,000. Admission 10-25. H. E. Schlichter, Liggett Theatre (600 seats), Madison, Kansas.

SAINTED DEVIL. (8,633 feet). Star, Rudolph Valentino. I blamed my flop on "Beaucaire" to costume, but now after playing Rudy in his own type of picture I am convinced that he is a dead one with me. Drew very poorly and only satisfied a scant few. Mixed class. Joe Hewitt, Strand Theatre, Robinson, Illinois.

SIDE SHOW OF LIFE. (7,511 feet). Star, Ernest Torrence. Not so good for our town. Torrence did not seem to get the picture over. Tone, okay. Sunday, yes. Small town class town of 3,000. Admission 10-30. Star Theatre, Weiser, Idaho.

SIDE SHOW OF LIFE. (7,511 feet). Star, Ernest Torrence. A clown drama with Torrence miscast. He is wonderful in rough and tumble characters, but as a clown, nix. Tone, fair. Sunday, possible. Audience appeal, sixty per cent. Mixed class city of 500,000. Admission 10-20. William T. Meeks, Silliman's Murray Theatre (740 seats), Milwaukee, Wisconsin.

SIDE SHOW OF LIFE. (7,511 feet). Star, Ernest Torrence. Although very good, still I think that they would rather see Torrence in roles similar to the one he played in "The Covered Wagon." Personally I thought it dragged just a bit. Tone okay. Sunday, yes. Good audience appeal. Mixed class, town of 3,000. Admission 20-25. T. L. Barnett, Finn's Theatre (600 seats), Jewett City, Connecticut.

SINNERS IN HEAVEN. (6,881 feet). Star, Richard Dix. Terrible. Terrible. Sure got a razzing on this. And they ask why movies don't pull any more! Tone poor. Sunday, no. Poor audience appeal. Family and student class, town of 4,000. Admission 10-25. R. J. Relf, Star Theatre (600 seats), Decorah, Iowa.

Our good friend C. E. Robinson, of Carmel, Maine, has dropped out of the game for a while. We shall miss his tips.

So shall we miss the good help of H. S. Stansel, Ruleville Theatre, Ruleville, Mississippi. He says he has too little time to make it worth while trying to keep up his good string of tips.

Who's going to volunteer to step into the breach made by the loss of these two good scouts?

Dependable tips are a truly unselfish contribution.

YOU CAN SUPPLY THEM.

SOCIETY SCANDAL. (6,433 feet). Star, Gloria Swanson. Very good is my opinion of this one, although it does not begin to compare with "The Humming Bird." If Gloria is a favorite in your town, play this one up big, because it will please. Tone okay. Sunday, yes. Fine audience appeal. Mixed class, town of 3,000. Admission 20-25. T. L. Barnett, Finn's Theatre (600 seats), Jewett City, Connecticut.

TIGER LOVE. (5,325 feet). Star, Estelle Taylor. Just a good program picture. Good tone, fair appeal; Sunday, yes. Draw farmers and merchants, town of 1,650, widely scattered. Mrs. J. B. Travelle, Elite Theatre, Placerville, California.

TO THE LAST MAN. (6,965 feet). Star cast. I stood them out on this one, Zane Grey. I was surprised the way they flocked in. Tone fine. Sunday, yes. Audience appeal one hundred per cent. Country and city class, town of 1,800. Admission 10-25, 10-40. G. A. Peterson, Cozy Theatre (502 seats), Hollis, Oklahoma.

UNGUARDED WOMEN. (6,051 feet). Star, Bebe Daniels. I don't think that this picture will set the world on fire. Not as good as I thought it would be. Don't get the opinion that it is a poor picture, but, considering the cast, it might have been much better. Tone okay. Sunday, yes. Average audience appeal. Mixed class, town of 3,000. Admission 20-25. T. L. Barnett, Finn's Theatre (600 seats), Jewett City, Connecticut.

WAGES OF VIRTUE. (7,083 feet). Star, Gloria Swanson. A well acted story, with Gloria doing most of the acting. Not enough dress-up stuff to please the ladies. Men in the story are rough, and, as one lady remarked, "who cares to see a lot of 'wops'?" Not so good as most of the former Swansons, but a better drawing card than "Her Love Story." She needs a real story to put her right again, and "Madame Sans Gene" will not be one. City of 18,500. Admission 20-40. Ben L. Morris, Temple and Olympic Theatres, Bellaire, Ohio.

WAGES OF VIRTUE. (7,083 feet). Star, Gloria Swanson. This is absolutely Gloria's worst picture; in my opinion she is entirely out of place in the role. Paramount may have tried to make another "Humming Bird," and if they did they certainly fell short of the mark. Tone questionable. Sunday, no. No audience appeal. Oil field class and farmers, town of 1,000. Admission 10-25. H. E. Schlichter, Liggett Theatre (600 seats), Madison, Kansas.

WANDERER OF THE WASTELAND. (6,700 feet). Star cast. While a number of people thought it a good picture, a still larger number did not like the colored photography and the picture didn't do what it should. Admission 10-20. Al. C. Werner, Royal Theatre, Reading, Pennsylvania.

WANDERER OF THE WASTELAND. (6,700 feet). Star, Jack Holt. A wonderful picture. Magnificent scenery, good story, and the natural color photography gives it, for me, a good exploitation angle. We packed them with this one. All Zane Grey's stories make good specials. Good tone, yes for Sunday, and appeal one hundred per cent. Draw all classes, town of 6,000. Admission 10-20-30. Frank H. Watton, Park Theatre (600 seats), Lebanon, New Hampshire.

Pathe

BATTLING ORIOLES. Star cast. A few more like this one our batting average would be size of a hat and we would be on bench. Stay off, please. Tone, rotten. Not suitable for Sunday. Pleased nobody. Middle and working class town of 26,000. Admission 10-25. Ed C. Curtis, Bijou Theatre (365 seats), Greenville, South Carolina.

CHRONICLES OF AMERICA. I have shown six of the first series of these and will say that before you play them you had better run a series of season tickets or they may not go over, as they did not go over. They are all right but no action in them, so will not please a small town audience. Electric Theatre, Lowry City, Missouri.

GIRL SHY. (7,457 feet). Star, Harold Lloyd. As good a comedy as I ever saw. Fair business; zero weather kept a lot home. This is the best Lloyd yet, and his comedy is clean and original. Book this one if you get it right. I paid plenty for it and will just survive. Fine tone and appeal; yes for Sunday. Draw all classes, town of 6,000. Admission 10-20-30. Frank H. Watton, Park Theatre (600 seats), Lebanon, New Hampshire.

HOT WATER. (5,000 feet). Star, Harold Lloyd. Lloyd's comedies are all good but some are better than others. This happens to be one of his poor ones. Tone okay. Sunday, yes. Fair audience appeal. Oil field class and farmers, town of 1,000. Admission 10-25. H. E. Schlichter, Liggett Theatre (600 seats), Madison, Kansas.

WHY WORRY? (6 reels). Star, Harold Lloyd. If you want a good comedy to make them laugh, play this one. The tramp is a great drawing card in this picture. Fair moral tone, but not for Sunday. Electric Theatre, Lowry City, Missouri.

Principal

DARING YOUTH. Star, Bebe Daniels. Very good light entertainment. Pleased all who saw it. Poor attendance. Tone, good. Sunday, no. Fair audience appeal. Business and farming class town of 2,200. Admission 10-

25. A. F. Jenkins, Community Theatre, David City, Nebraska.

MINE WITH THE IRON DOOR. (7,800 feet). Star cast. A wonderful western with magnificent scenic effects. Customers liked it immensely. We did a good business on it. However, it did not gross as much as Wright's "When a Man's a Man," which played another theatre here about a year ago. "Mine With Iron Door" is a picture that should please any audience, with possible exception of flappers and jelly beans. Tone fine. Sunday, yes. Audience appeal great. City of 250,000. Admission 10-25, 40. Jean Darnell, Capitol Theatre (1,044 seats), Dallas, Texas.

Producers' Dist. Corp.

FLAMING FORTIES. (5,770 feet). Star, Harry Carey. A very good picture of its type. Carey always draws good but had cold spell against me. Tone, okay. Sunday, yes. Good audience apealp. Mixed class town of 3,000. Admission 10-20. Charles Martin, Family Theatre (300 seats), Mt. Morris, New York.

HIS DARKER SELF. (5 reels). Star, Lloyd Hamilton. Fairly good only. Tone, fair. Audience appeal, seventy-five per cent. Middle and working class town of 26,000. Admission 10-25. Ed C. Curdts, Bijou Theatre (365 seats), Greenville, South Carolina.

TIGER THOMPSON. (5,700 feet). Star, Harry Carey. This star getting better and better with each new picture; this has lots of action, comedy and thrills. Book and boost it for houses catering to western trade. Tone, okay. Sunday, no. Audience appeal, eighty-five per cent. All classes in big city. Admission ten cents. Stephen G. Brenner, Eagle Theatre (298 seats), Baltimore, Maryland.

TIGER THOMPSON. (5,700 feet). Star cast. This is a very good picture, plenty of comedy and action. E. C. Dettman, Imperial Theatre, Imperial, Nebraska.

WELCOME STRANGER. (6,618 feet). Star cast. Good entertainment and a fair puller here. It was clean. Let's have more like it. Tone, okay. Sunday, yes. Good audience appeal. Family and student class town of 4,000. Admission 10-25. R. J. Relf, Star Theatre (600 seats), Decorah, Iowa.

WISE VIRGIN. (5,981 feet). Star cast. The picture was enjoyed by all who saw it. You can step on it if you want to, 'twill stand it. John G. Golden, Virginia Theatre, Brightmoor, Michigan.

United Artists

AMERICA. (11 reels). Star cast. A great picture. Worked surrounding towns sixty miles square as I am first to run "America" in this part of state. Used twelve twenty-four sheets, 479 one sheets, 16 11x14, 8,000 heralds. Tied up with American Legion. Had schools turn out for special matinee. Matinee charged fifty cents; nights, seventy-five cents and one dollar, and will say I never worked so hard with a picture in my life, and I felt it well spent. Every man, woman and child should see "America." It's great. I feel I can run it back second run and make money. "Covered Wagon" not in class with "America." I find United Artists fair and square and right with their prices and all prints are in A-1 shape. All exhibitors should book "America." You owe it to your patrons. Sold reserved seats for "America" in advance. Had special orchestra and it helped pull it over in great shape. G. A. Peterson, Cozy Theatre, Hollis, Oklahoma.

LILLIAN RICH

As she appears in a scene from "The Golden Bed," a Paramount release.

ORPHANS OF THE STORM. (12,400 feet). Stars, Gish sisters. Pleased them all. If you have not played this one, do so. You owe it to your patrons. Tone fine. Sunday, yes. Audience appeal one hundred per cent. Country and city class, town of 1,800. Admission 10-25, 10-40. G. A. Peterson, Cozy Theatre (502 seats), Hollis, Oklahoma.

Universal

BEHIND THE CURTAIN. (4,875 feet). Star, Herbert Rawlinson. A good little mystery drama that fared well at the hands of the public. Nothing big but fairly pleasing. Tone, okay. Sunday, yes. Good audience appeal. All classes city of 14,000. Admission 10-35. E. W. Collins, Grand and Liberty Theatres (700-500 seats), Jonesboro, Arkansas.

BREATHLESS MOMENT. (5,556 feet). Star, William Desmond. A dandy comedy-drama with every member of the cast doing excellent work. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Audience appeal, one hundred per cent. Small town class town of 2,517. Admission 10-25. A. L. Middleton, Grand Theatre (500 seats), DeQueen, Arkansas.

DARLING OF NEW YORK. (6,260 feet). Star, Baby Peggy. Very very good. This little star is a great drawing card after your audience have once seen her. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Very strong audience appeal. Small town class and farmers town of 800. Admission 10-25. Welty & Son, Mid-Way Theatre (500 seats), Hill City, Kansas.

EXCITEMENT. (4,912 feet). Star, Laura La Plante. Miss La Plante is simply fine. She is so cute and pretty. One simply can't resist her smile. Picture very entertaining. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Very good audience appeal. Welty & Son, Mid-Way Theatre, Hill City, Kansas.

SPORTING YOUTH. (6,712 feet). Star, Reginad Denny. Can only repeat what others have said—fine. One hundred per cent entertainment, if there ever was such a thing. Good tone. Sunday, yes. Wonderful audience appeal. Small town class and farmers town of 800. Admission 10-25. Welty & Son, Mid-Way Theatre (500 seats), Hill City, Kansas.

STORM. (7,400 feet). Star, House Peters. This is fine feature. Liked by all classes of trade. A money getter. Tone, okay. Sunday, okay. Family appeal. City of 300,000. Jack H. Roth, Liberty Theatre, Kansas City, Missouri.

SUNSET TRAIL. Star, William Desmond. Good talent and acting wasted. Why not put Desmond in western and forget the tramp? Tone, fair. Sunday, no. Audience appeal, seventy-five per cent. R. M. Kennedy, Capitol Theatre, Birmingham, Alabama.

THRILL CHASER. (5,796 feet). Star, Hoot Gibson. A very poor picture. It killed Hoot Gibson here. The title does not suit the picture. Tone, poor. Sunday, no. Rotten audience appeal. Farmers town of 800. Admission 10-25. E. F. Gick, Pastime Theatre (250 seats), Moundridge, Kansas.

THUNDERING DAWN. (6,600 feet). Star, J. Warren Kerrigan. Fair picture, rather draggy in places. The finish was exciting but hard to follow just what it was all about and the hero shows up as rather a weak sister. Small town class and farmers town of 600. Admission 10-20, 10-30. H. W. Batchelder, Galt Theatre (175 seats), Galt, California.

THUNDERING DAWN. (6,600 feet. Star, J. Warren Kerrigan. Very good as a whole; a little too much preliminary before any action. Print in fair shape for Universal. Sunday, no. Good audience appeal. Family class city of 65,000. Admission fifteen cents. R. K. Covington, Bijou Theatre (500 seats), Fresno, California.

TORNADO. (6,375 feet). Star, House Peters. Just tell the world that it is a world beater and you will have it. Biggest, best, most thrilling and altogether pleasing picture we have ever shown. Our people were unanimus in declaring it to be the best picture of the year. It was simply wonderful. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Appeals to every one. Best class city of 10,000. Admission 10-25. Ned Pedigo, Pollard Theatre (800 seats), Guthrie, Oklahoma.

TURMOIL. (7 reels). Star cast. Very good. It holds up interest to the very end. Played to a fair crowd which seemed to enjoy the picture. Tone, okay. Sunday, yes. Average audience appeal. Mixed class town of 3,000. Admission 20-25. T. L. Barnett, Finn's Theatre (600 seats), Jewett City, Connecticut.

TURMOIL. (7 reels). Star cast. Very fine picture that failed to draw on a Friday and Saturday. Acting and cast good. Wonderful story. Tone, good. Good audience appeal. Town and rural class town of 2,500. Admission 10-25. S. H. Rich, Rich Theatre (450 seats), Montpelier, Idaho.

WESTERN WALLOP. Star, Jack Hoxie. A good Hoxie but have had a lot better than this one. But Hoxie is a real drawing card. Sunday, yes. Good audience appeal. Working class city of 14,000. Admission 10-20. G. M. Bertling, Favorite Theatre (187 seats), Piqua, Ohio.

WHISPERED NAME. (5,196 feet). Star cast. A good program picture that will please most any audience. Play it. Tone, fair. Sunday, no. Country and town class. Admission 10-20. W. F. Denny, Electric Theatre (250 seats), Lowry City, Missouri.

WHISPERED NAME. (5,196 feet). Star, Herbert Rawlingson. Another good one from Carl, for all Carl's bull his picture came nearer to being one hundred per cent than any. If he would only let alone the big supers like "Hunchback." Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Audience appeal, ninety per cent. Small town class town of 2,157. Admission 10-25. A. L. Middleton, Grand Theatre (500 seats), DeQueen, Arkansas.

WHITE TIGER. (7,177 feet). Star, Priscilla Dean. A good crook drama that ought to please most any kind of an audience. Good audience appeal. Working class city of 14,000. Admission 10-20. G. M. Bertling, Favorite Theatre (187 seats), Piqua, Ohio.

Vitagraph

BEHOLD THIS WOMAN. (6,425 feet). Star cast. Excellent cast, splendidly costumed and staged, but why can't they get away from the eternal triangle? This story is positively too bold in a place or two. Tone, rotten. Hardly suitable for Sunday. Audience appeal, seventy-five per cent. Small town class town of 2,157. Admission 10-25. A. L. Middleton, Grand Theatre (500 seats), DeQueen, Arkansas.

BELOVED BRUTE. (6,719 feet). Star cast. Plenty of action in this one, and the picture as a whole is a good one. Tone, good. Conservatory class city of 22,000. Admission twenty-five cents. S. J. Adams, Auditorium Theatre (1,100 seats), Concord, New Hampshire.

CAPTAIN BLOOD. (10,600 feet). Star, J. Warren Kerrigan. Played two days to fair business at increased admissions. It is a good costume production, but ti did not draw or please any too well in this town. Tone, good. Audience appeal, fair. Better class town of 4,500. Admission 10-15. C. A. Anglemire, "Y" Theatre (404 seats), Nazareth, Pennsylvania.

CAPTAIN BLOOD. (10,6 0 feet). Star, W. Kerrigan. Extra good. Pleased everybody who saw it. Tone, great. Sunday, yes. Audience appeal, one hundred per cent. Middle and working class town of 26,000. Admission 10-25. Ed. C. Curtis, Bijou Theatre (365 seats), Greenville, South Carolina.

CODE OF THE WILDERNESS. (6 reels). Star cast. A real good entertainment picture of the type that nearly all picture patrons like. Give us more like it. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Audience appeal, one hundred per cent. Small town class town of 2,517. Admisison 10-25. A. L. Middleton, Grand Theatre (500 seats), DeQueen, Arkansas.

ON THE BANKS OF THE WABASH. (7,156 feet). Star cast. This is a real one for small towns. It is worth buying and boosting. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Strong audience appeal. Small town class and farmers town of 800. Admission 10-25. Welty & Son, Mid-Way Theatre (500 seats), Hill City, Kansas.

SILENT VOW. Star, William Duncan. A nice little program picture. "Smashing Barriers" and "Man of Might" suited our audience lots better. Small town class and farmers town of 800. Admission 10-25. Welty & Son, Mid-Way Theatre (500 seats), Hill City, Kansas.

Warner Bros.

BEAU BRUMMEL. (10 reels). Star, John Barrymore. Small town ltt this alone. It is sheer cruelty to let a small exhibitor have this. No appeal at all, but a good picture at that. Tone, pretty good. Welty & Son, Mid-Way Theatre, Hill City, Kansas.

BEAUTIFUL AND DAMNED. Star, Marie Prevost. Good picture, above program standard. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Good audience appeal. Farmers and merchants town of 1,650. Mrs. J. B. Travelle, Elite Theatre, Placerville, California.

BEING RESPECTABLE. (7,500 feet). Star, Monte Blue. Nice little program picture. Admission 10-30. N. Russell, Russell's Theatre, Barnesboro, Pennsylvania.

BRASS. Star, Marie Prevost. This is a very good audience picture. Pretty good box office bet. Tone, fair. Sunday, yes. Strong audience appeal. Small town class and farmers town of 800. Admission 10-25. Welty & Son, Mid-Way Theatre (500 seats), Hill City, Kansas.

GEORGE BEBAN
in Encore's "The Greatest Love of All" released through Associated Exhibitors.

CONDUCTOR 1492. (6,500 feet). Star, Johnny Hines. An excellent comedy type feature that pleased everybody. Our first Warner in two years, and must say that this one was okay, but it did not draw extra good. Tone, good. Good audience appeal. Better class town of 4,500. Admission 10-15. C. A. Anglemire, "Y" Theatre (404 seats), Nazareth, Jennsylvania.

COUNTRY KID. (6,300 feet). Star, Wesley Barry. Not so worse. Some of the boys panned this one, but our patrons were very well pleased with this Warner Classic. Wesley is getting large, but he surely delivered the goods in this one. Played as a Saturday night program picture and pleased one hundred per cent. What more can be desired? Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Strong audience appeal. General class town of 1,000. Admission 10-25, 15-35. H. H. Hedberg, Amuse-U Theatre, Melville, Louisiana.

FIND YOUR MAN. (7,300 feet). Star, Rin Tin Tin (dog). A wonderful dog featured in a wonderful picture with scenes laid in rough lumber country mixing thrills and romance. Get the fans in and they'll tell you its good entertainment. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Audience appeal, ninety per cent. Mixed class city of 500,000. Admision 10-20. William T. Meeks, Sillman's Murray Theatre (740 seats), Milwaukee, Wisconsin.

GOLD DIGGERS. (6,500 feet). Star cast. A humdinger of a comedy, only too long. Nine reels is too long for a comedy. In fact there is considerable straining of situations in their effort to make it long. Tone, fair. Sunday, possible. Audience appeal, ninety per cent. Small town class town of 2,517. Admission 10-25. A. L. Middleton Grand Theatre (500 seats), DeQueen, Arkansas.

HOW TO EDUCATE A WIFE. (6 reels). Star, Marie Prevost. Played two days after "Why Men Leave Home," and all those who had seen the first picture were on hand, with many more. This is an excellent picture that has good exploitation possibilities. Tone, fair. Sunday, yes. Strong audience appeal. General class twon of 1,000. Admission 10-25, 15-35. H. H. Heldberg, Amuse-U Theatre, Melville, Louisiana.

HOW TO EDUCATE A WIFE. (6 rels). Star, Monte Blue. Very light entertainment. Nothing more than a fair program picture. Slow and draggy. Tone, fair. Possibly suitable for Sunday. Fair audience appeal. Family and student class town of 4,000. Admission 10-25. R. J. Relf, Star Theatre (600 seats), Decorah, Iowa.

LITTLE JOHNNY JONES. (6 reels). Star, Johnny Hines. Didn't seem a bad picture and had some favorable comments on it, but in pulling power didn't compare to "Conductor 1492." Admisison 10-20. Al. C. Werner, Royal Theatre, Reading, Pennsylvania.

LOVERS' LANE. (5,100 feet). Star cast. A mighty fine little program picture that was appreciated by all. Fine tone. Suitable for Sunday. Fine audience appeal. Oil and farm class town of 1,000. Admission 10-25. H. E. Schlichter, Liggett Theatre (600 seats), Madison, Kansas.

WHERE THE NORTH BEGINS. (6,200 feet). Star, Rin Tin Tin. Best thing we ever had from Warner's. Sure brought them all in, and that's what counts. Tone, good. Hardly suitable for Sunday. Audience appeal, very strong. Small town class and farmers town of 800. Admission 10-25. Welty & Son, Mid-Way Theatre (500 seats), Hill City, Kansas.

entertaining comedy with enough truth in it to make it interesting and enough slap stick stuff to please your biggest kid. Charles Lee Hyde, Grand Theatre, Pierre, South Dakota.

MIND THE BABY. (Universal). Star, Pal the dog. A good comedy with the dog fighting an alligator to save baby that really creates a desire to jump up and yell. This scene almost creates a panic. Advertise it. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Audience appeal, one hundred per cent. Small town class town of 2,517. Admission 10-25. A. L. Middleton, Grand Theatre (500 seats), DeQueen, Arkansas.

MISFIT. (Educational). Star, Clyde Cook. Do you want your audience to have a good laugh, then don't fail to book this one. Lots of hokum, but, oh boy, what a laugh producer. Two reels. Sunday, yes. All classes town of 2,800. Admission 15-25. D. W. Strayer, Mt. Joy Theatre (250 seats), Mt. Joy, Pennsylvania.

MISFIT. (Educational). Star, Clyde Cook. Just a dandy comedy with more laughs than in ten ordinary comedies. It would make a rattling good show even if you have no feature to run with it. We are strong for this fellow. Best class city of 10,000. Admission 10-20. Ned Pedigo, Pollard Theatre (800 seats), Guthrie, Oklhaoma.

MONKS A LA MODE. (Fox). It is wonderful the way these monkeys are trained. This type of comedy will please in any house, and they sure talk about them. Print fair. Sunday, yes. Audience appeal, eighty-five per cent. All classes in big city. Admission ten cents. Stephen G. Brenner, Eagle Theatre (298 seats), Baltimore, Maryland.

OFF HIS TROLLEY. (Pathe). Star, Charles Chase. Mighty good. Business and farming class town of 2,200. Admission 10-25. A. F. Jenkins, Community Theatre, David City, Nebraska.

OH, MIN. (Universal). Just a fair comedy. Somehow these comedies do not please as they should. Print new. Tone, okay. Sunday, yes. Audience appeal, seventy per cent. All classes in big city. Admission ten cents. Stephen G. Brenner, Eagle Theatre (298 seats), Baltimore, Maryland.

PICKING PEACHES. (Pathe). Star, Harry Langdon. Surely fine. This star is great. Smile Please is good also. Welty & Son, Mid-Way Theatre (500 seats), Hill City, Kansas.

"Bad Company"

but not very much skill has been shown in either the development or the direction. With the exception of the opening scene and the climax there is very little drama and the ending seems rather weak. The picture seems more of narrative than drama and the story is drawn out and lacking in action, although an attempt has been made to strengthen its appeal by a jazz party which includes a risque situation in which a supposedly nude woman dances behind a lighted screen.

The cast is composed of players who are well known, including Madge Kennedy, Bigelow Cooper, Conway Tearle, Lucille Lee Stewart and Charles Emmett Mack, but they appear to be suffering from lack of forceful direction and do not put much pep into their roles. The chorus girls from Earl Carroll's Vanities appear in an attractive scene from that revue.

Altogether, "Bad Company" impresses us as a mediocre program picture.

Length, 5,551 feet.

Story

James Hamilton and his friend, Judge Ewing, aid a poorly dressed girl who apparently faints from exhaustion and are surprised when she holds them up and robs the safe. At a reception one of the guests is Gloria Waring, a musical comedy star, and Hamilton, struck by her likeness to the girl who robbed them, finds part of her costume in her auto and confronts her. She confesses that she adopted this method to obtain her father's will in a desperate effort to prevent the fortune left to her brother from falling into the hands of an adventuress, Teddy. Hamilton, who has fallen in love with Gloria, offers to help her and discovers Teddy is a girl with whom he has had an affair. Just as Teddy and the brother are about to be married, Hamilton prevents it by claiming Teddy is his common law wife. Gloria turns him down and Hamilton starts to go to Europe. Judge Ewing discloses that the fortune has been left to Gloria and explains that Hamilton has sacrificed himself for her sake and that the affair was only a youthful indiscretion. Gloria and Hamilton are reconciled.

"Flashing Spurs"

Custer's Second for F. B. O. is Conventional Type of Out-Door Melodrama With Plenty of Action

Reviewed by C. S. Sewell

As the second of the series of western melodramas produced by Jesse Goldburg starring Bob Custer as a sergeant in the Texas Rangers, F. B. O. is offering "Flashing Spurs," a story dealing with the attempt of a band of criminals to effect a robbery by substituting a girl member of the gang for her twin sister, and the thwarting of this plot through the activity of the hero.

The story follows along familiar melodramatic lines with the villain as the trusted superintendent of the man, a mine owner, who is to be robbed and there is the usual amount of villainous plotting and action including a number of fights, attempts to kill the hero, and an attack on the heroine which is frustrated by the timely arrival of the hero.

The star is given ample opportunities for displaying his prowess as a fighter and there is a thrill scene where he is tied at the base of a cliff which is to be destroyed by dynamite, the explosion occurs but it proves a dud and the hero is saved. The main point of audience appeal is in the abundance of physical action and it will probably prove a fair program offering for audiences who like productions of this kind and are willing to overlook the weakness of the story.

Bob Custer is satisfactory in a regular heman role and Marguerite Clayton appears in the dual roles of the good and bad sister. These two characters are not sharply defined and as a consequence there is confusion as to which is which. Edward Coxen seems lacking in force as the villain.

Story and scenario by William Lester.
Directed by Reeves Eason.
Length, 5,068 feet.

Story

While following a clue, Sergeant Stuart of the Rangers goes to the city and has a fight with two thugs, Frazier and Scarbee, and is overpowered. He makes a getaway by crawling into the window of Rena Holden's room, and is impressed by her. Returning later he finds she has gone and a letter indicates that she is a crook, a member of Clammert's gang, which is planning to rob a miner, John Holden. Stuart goes to the mine, sees Ruth, and believing her to be Rena, denounces her. Clammert's gang captures him and prepare to kill him when the side of a hill is blown up, but the explosion misses fire. Holden and Rena, who is masquerading as Ruth, rescue him and Rena, and Rena, who is Ruth's twin sister, confesses the plot. They arrive at Clammert's shack in time to rescue Ruth from an attack by Clammert, but in the fight Rena is injured. Holden forgives Rena, and when she recovers she agrees to become Mrs. Stuart.

"If I Marry Again"

Good Drama and Heart Interest With Fine Acting and Direction

Reviewed by C. S. Sewell

With a cast of well known players including Anna Q. Nilsson, Hobart Bosworth, Doris Kenyon, Lloyd Hughes, Frank Mayo and Myrtle Steadman, First National is offering "If I Marry Again" based on a story by Gilbert Frankau and directed by John Francis Dillon.

The backbone of the theme is the bitter opposition of a proud and stern father to the wife of his son, a woman whose name is associated with that of a questionable resort. This brings about a number of situations that are strongly dramatic for they are built on the groundwork of true drama, conflict of wills.

The acting of the players is high-class and Mr. Dillon has directed this picture so as to bring out the dramatic values strongly. He has also provided lavish sets in the scenes representing homes and private offices of the wealthy and colorful and effective atmosphere representing the dismal rainy fever-invested tropics. The lighting of the interiors is especially well done.

The theme is interestingly developed but so intense is the sympathy for the girl who turns out to be true blue that the spectator is liable to become impatient with the prolonged unbending attitude of the father-in-law. There are also scenes which could be shortened to advantage especially the long close-ups at the death of the husband.

There is an unusual shifting of sympathy from the young husband who dies, to the father's right-hand man who until the end of the picture has a distinctly subordinate role, and only the suggestion of romance between him and the young widow, though it is this character who furnishes the title. The dominating figures naturally are the father and the son's wife. Hobart Bosworth is sufficiently stern and forceful while Doris Kenyon gives an excellent performance, probably the best of her career in a role requiring not only sincerity, charm and appeal, but considerable emotional work. Frank Mayo is capable as the other chap and Lloyd Hughes is effective as the husband. Anna Nilsson registers strongly in the one scene in which she appears.

With good heart interest, strong drama, excellent acting and direction, this picture should provide a good entertainment for the majority.

Story

Stern, wealthy and jealous of his family name, John Jordon instructs his confidential manager, Jeffrey Wingate, to proceed at once to plantations in the tropics. Jordon's idea is to get his son Charles away from an affair with a woman from Margot's, a place with a shady reputation. Charles marries the girl, however, and old Jordon is furious. During four years stay during which the girl, Jocelyn proves to be true blue, and a son is born Unrelenting, Jordon sends Wingate to bring Charles back but Charles dies of fever. Jocelyn determined to get advantages for her son, returns but Jordon will have nothing to do with her despite the fact she has completely won Wingate over. Accused as a blackmailer, she determines to reopen her mother's place under the name of Jordon, but breaks down and can not go through with it. Wingate who was neglected his wife for business to the extent that she was killed by a fall when she fainted after a stormy interview declares if he marries again it will be a woman whom he makes a part of his life, sharing his joys and sorrows. He finally convinced Jordon that Jocelyn is true blue and he takes her and the boy into his home.

"Locked Doors"

William DeMille's Newest for Paramount Is Dramatic Story of a Wife Who Loves Another Man

Reviewed by C. S. Sewell

For his newest production for Paramount, "Locked Doors," William DeMille has used an original story by Clara Beranger which deals with the plight of a young woman who marries a man several years her senior to provide a comfortable home for her invalid father and then feels the call of youth and falls desperately in love with a young man.

With Miss Beranger's skill as a scenarist and Mr. DeMille's undoubted ability as a director, the result is a story that is strong in human interest, with well-developed sympathy for the young wife, and there are several situations that are strongly dramatic and will hold the interest tensely. Particularly absorbing is the climax where the hero rashly goes to the heroine's room to bid her goodbye and the house catches on fire. Unable to escape without compromising the wife, both remain until the husband breaks in and finds them together. The denouement has been handled without melodrama, for the husband agrees to arrange to give way for his young rival.

While it holds the interest, due to expert craftsmanship and fine acting of the players, somehow this story seems more artificial and built for effect than the usual William De Mille production, as shown in the fire which conveniently starts at the proper moment to bring about the climax, and the broad stretching of coincidence in having the heroine away off in the mountains fall in love with an unknown man who turns out to be a chap who has secured employment in her own husband's office. This, however, provides an extremely effective situation where hero and heroine are thrown together under the watchful eyes of the husband and his sister and endeavor to hide their love.

Neither the role of the hero nor heroine is intensely sympathetic, for she deliberately starts the flirtation with the strange man and allows love to sweep her on where loyalty and honor would have caused her to halt, and certainly the hero shows neither of these characteristics in his pursuit of the man who has always befriended and aided him. This serves, however, to strengthen the idea of the intensity of their love and certainly theirs is pictured as an unusually ardent romance, stronger because of the necessity for attempts at repression. The most sympathetic character in the picture is the husband. One feels that he deserves better than the fate that befalls him, also that his self-sacrifice is more in line with providing the desired romantic ending than as would probably happen in real life.

Betty Compson gives a capable performance as the heroine and Robert Edeson gives an excellent characterization of the husband. Theodore Roberts, who returns to the screen after several months' absence, provides considerable comedy and human interest and the invalid who cheats himself at solitaire and is always trying to get a drink. Theodore Von Eltz seems to be lacking in force as the hero and at times his acting seems forced. Kathlyn Williams is effective in a minor role, while little Elmo Billings supplies some effective human touches as a freckle-faced boy.

While we do not consider this as quite as good as William DeMille's usual productions, we believe that it will provide satisfactory entertainment for a large class of patrons.

Story

Mary, married to an architect, Norman Carter, many years her senior, respects him but does not love him, although he is intensely in love with her. While visiting friends at a lodge in the mountains she strikes up an acquaintance with John Talbot and they fall madly in love with each other. Carter gives Talbot a job in his office and, finding he is in love with a married woman, invites him to his home to give him a chance to forget her. Mary and Talbot pretend they have never met and try to hide their love but it grows mroe intense, until Carter discovers the truth and prepares to send Talbot to Italy. Talbot recklessly goes to Mary's room and while there the house catches on fire. Talbot cannot get out without compromising Mary and she refuses to leave him there. Carter finally breaks into the room and rescues Mary, while Talbot manages to get back to his own room. The next day, realizing he can never win Mary's love, Carter informs them that while Talbot is in Italy he will arrange so that Mary can get her divorce so they will be happy.

"Ports of Call"

Forceful Story of the Regeneration of a Coward Through Love is Edmund Lowe's Latest for Fox

Reviewed by C. S. Sewell

Edmund Lowe's latest starring vehicle for Fox is the story of a chap who after being cast out by his father sinks to the depths of life in the Orient, meets a woman who has also tasted the bitter dregs of life and together they work out their own regeneration.

To this extent it resembles another Fox picture "The Man Who Came Back"; however here the similarity ends, for unlike the hero of that picture who had himself to blame for his downfall through fast living, the hero of "Ports of Call" is cast out because he proves a coward but strong sympathy is developed for him when it is revealed that this is due to pre-natal influence.

While melodramatic, and with the main situation depending on a rather far-fetched coincidence, the story of this picture is entertaining throughout and holds the interest, and there is an especially strong human interest angle in the character of the girl who is willing to sacrifice her own love for the hero when she believes that he still loves a former sweetheart. So strong is the sympathy developed for this woman, despite her checkered past, that there is intense satisfaction when she wins out, although the earlier part of the picture would lead you to believe that it is the other woman who will finally triumph in the romance.

The settings of this picture are colorful and there is good melodrama in the situation where the house in the Philippines is attacked by natives and set on fire, and the natives are finally frightened away when a drunken roustabout in a moment of inspiration blows the charge to make them think the soldiers are coming.

Edmund Lowe has a congenial role and handles it well, and Hazel Keener is satisfactory as his first sweetheart, but the best work in the picture is done by Lilyan Tashman as the woman who brings about the hero's regeneration. She really gives a remarkable portrayal, strong with sincerity and realism, and effectively handling the scenes of restrained emotion.

There is an unusually interesting and well handled poker sequence at the opening which accurately reveals the hero's character when he allows himself to be bluffed out although holding four of a kind. Right after this there is a good fire scene where the hero proves himself a coward in refusing to rescue a little girl. There are also a couple of good fights against odds which are more dramatic for the fact that you know they mean that the hero is finding himself at last.

The title of the picture is hardly representative and gives no idea of the story, simply referring to the places in the Orient to which the hero drifted.

Altogether, this picture has many strong points of box office appeal and we believe will prove a satisfactory attraction for the majority of theatres.
